TOTEM OF NEW BEGINNINGS

Civilization's bones litter the world: crumbling cities, fallen towers, and moss-covered stones that were once statues celebrating mighty heroes. Nature eventually reclaims the resources that mortals have stolen, and something new always arises from the wreckage of the old. This is life's cycle. New growth and new possibilities can exist only through death.

A totem of new beginnings draws power from this natural rhythm. In a wielder's hand, the totem briefly spurs innovation and creativity, those sensations withering soon after they bloom. Experienced wielders learn to harness this ebb and flow to channel primal energy at the right moment.

Returning Home: As a unique event, a hero might discover a totem of new beginnings growing in a hard-to-reach location associated with his or her previous life. For instance, if a hero lived for several years in an urban or built-up area that has since been reclaimed by the wilderness, especially as a consequence of war or a battle with primal powers, that hero might stumble upon a living branch that can function as a totem of new beginnings while returning to visit the ruined homeland. Perhaps it's growing from a ruined doorframe of an old home or at the grave of the hero's parents.

Panther Totem — Level 9+

Carved in the shape of a panther and adorned with fangs, this totem grants its user feline stealth.

Property: When you use a beast form attack power through this totem, you can score a critical hit on a roll of 19–20.

NINE FURIES TOTEM

On the Stormkissed Plain, in the shadow of the Moon Peaks, nine warriors stood. They were called the Nine Furies; each was the greatest of his or her tribe and gifted with quickness, talent, wisdom, and strength. They gathered to confront Borstod the Blasphemer, a catastrophic dragon of great age and power. As the dragon neared, the Furies' peoples fled into the mountains, depending on their champions to buy them time to escape.

For nine days and nights the Furies fought the ancient wyrm, each dawn marking a champion's end until only one remained. Although that champion's companions no longer lived, their devoted spirits continued the fight at her side. With their support, she spent her remaining life force in a final attack and drove her axe into the dragon's skull. The cruel voice of the dragon was silenced forever.

A Nine Furies totem captures the noble deeds of these mighty champions. Each totem contains the essence of one Fury, and on moonless nights its wielder might just spy a spectral hero and dragon battling in the sky. Those who brandish one of these totems in battle can draw on a measure of that fabled power to aid them against superior foes.

The Centaurs' Secrets: Some sages believe that the centaurs were the first to craft these totems and that they alone know the method of their manufacture. To acquire such an item, a hero must seek out a tribe of centaurs and prove his or her worth by defeating a dragon in battle. Success earns not only a Nine Furies totem, but also the potential to unearth other long-guarded secrets and forgotten lore.

Ninth Fury: Conventional legend holds that all the champions perished, but some tales suggest that the ninth survived and might live still. If she can be found, she might grant her totem to a worthy bearer.

Roaring Bear Totem — Level 2+

TOTEM OF THE NIGHT

The Endless Swamp is so large and its growth so lush that the canopy in its deepest sections blocks the light of day. In those dark places the spirits of night are strongest. From there the legendary Circle of the Bat protects the land and gains strange powers of augury from the swamp spirits the Circle members revere.

Although totems of the night are made of cypress wood, the druids and shamans of the Circle claim that they're actually the bodies of bats that live deep within the Endless Swamp. According to this tale, a bat sometimes flies too high during daylight and breaks through the thick canopy. When touched by the rays of the sun, it turns to wood and falls to the swamp floor, where its body is harvested to create one of these totems.

The Hag's Coven: A group of hags dwelling at the southern end of the Endless Swamp is constantly at war with the Circle of the Bat. These powerful fey have felled a number of shamans and druids, collecting each victim's totem of the night as a trophy of the kill. The Circle has asked for assistance in destroying the hags.

Nightheart Cave: This grotto lies near the edge of the Endless Swamp. Within is the Heart of Night, a black flame that must be extinguished on each winter solstice to prevent the opening of a permanent portal into the Shadowfell. It is taboo for members of the Circle of the Bat to enter the Nightheart Cave, so they must seek a champion from outside their order to perform this task. The Circle is willing to arm that champion with a totem of the night.

Totem of the night

Level 24 or 29: Vulnerable 10 cold.

WANDS

Wands are often considered the most popular arcane implements because nearly all arcane heroes can use them.

Wands are used to store spells, but they can also modify the spells cast through them. Perhaps the best aspect to these implements is their versatility, since they allow a bard and a wizard, for example, to explore each other's magic.

Except in rare cases, a wand is not large enough or strong enough to be used as a weapon. If a wand can function as either a weapon or an implement, that fact is noted in the item's description.

If you are a member of a class that can wield a wand as an implement, you can add the wand's enhancement bonus to the attack rolls and the damage rolls of implement powers from that class that you use through the wand, and you can use its properties and powers. Members of other classes gain no benefit from wielding a wand.

Cursing Wand Level 14+

You curse your foe when you channel your spite through this dark yew wand.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |

Implement (Wand)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Property: When you score a critical hit with the unluck power using this wand, the target also takes a -2 penalty to attack rolls, skill checks, ability checks, and saving throws (save ends).
Power (Daily ✦ Arcane, Implement, Necrotic): Standard Action. As the bard's unluck power (Player's Handbook 2, page 72).

CURSING WAND

This wand is cut from yew wood and stained black with the ashes of those who suffered accidental deaths. A string of curses crawls around the implement, spiraling toward its tip. Starting with large lettering in the lokharic script, the words gradually shrink until they can be seen only through close inspection. The curses themselves change with the reader, pinpointing the wielder's flaws, fears, and failures.

The cursing wand originated in the hands of a jilted lover—a young minstrel spurned for another, younger woman. Her heart broken, she poured all her malice and hate into her wand, imbuing it with the darkest and most sinister curses imaginable. With the implement complete, she hunted down her former paramour and put a curse on him that turned everything he touched to ash until the day he died under mysterious circumstances.

The cursing wands found in the world today are reproductions of the original and, although potentially powerful in their own right, lack the full weight of the original creator's malevolence. Still, things have a way of going wrong when a cursing wand is present.

Defeat the Renegade Minstrel: Zasterly, a middling performer of little talent, holds a town hostage, living as a lord and compelling the locals to leap to his every whim. Those who have refused have found themselves the targets of his acid tongue and cruel spells delivered through a cursing wand. Over time, each of Zasterly's enemies has died in a lethal accident. The townsfolk are terrified of the minstrel and will pay someone well to remove him from power.

Property: This wand can be used as a melee weapon, functioning as a mace. You can add its enhancement bonus to the attack rolls and damage rolls of melee weapon attacks.
Power (Daily): Minor Action. As the artificer's iron-hide infusion power (Eberron Player's Guide, page 53), which is reproduced below.

Iron-Hide Infusion — Artificer Utility 16

You crush a bit of iron in your hand, infusing it with protective magic. You then cast the dust onto your allies' armor.

Encounter ✦ Arcane
Minor Action Close burst 5
Target: You and each ally in burst
Effect: Each target gains a +4 bonus to AC until the end of your next turn.

IRON WAND

A thick length of iron easily mistaken for a pry bar, an iron wand is an unlikely implement. The wand's tip is a flattened wedge with a notch in the middle; its base is a hooked wedge ideal for prying open doors, chests, and just about anything else that needs opening. An iron wand can also be used as a weapon, since its weight and size are perfect for clobbering enemies.

For the mage who divides her time between flinging spells at enemies and building servants to fight on her behalf, an iron wand is an invaluable accessory, useful for battering enemies and focusing one's concentration when working with arcane magic.

Defeat the Iron Mage: A warforged artificer known only as the Iron Mage wields an iron wand in battle to great effect. Surrounded by a legion of lesser warforged, golems, and other constructs, he resides in a great fortress in the heart of a blasted wilderness where nothing grows and the corpses of those who oppose him swell beneath a merciless sun. Adventurers who defeat him can wrest control over his followers and his wand.

Join the Forgesmiths: The Forgesmiths were the first artificers to fashion iron wands. Shunned by their fellows for their dubious experiments in blending flesh with machines, the Forgesmiths developed these wands as a means of protection against assassins and hostile rivals. Although the tensions between them and their peers have cooled somewhat, the Forgesmiths are famously xenophobic and reluctant to admit new members into their secretive society. Still, those who do join are often given their own iron wands.

Master's wand of eyes of the vestige

HAWTHORN WAND

Where hawthorn grows, evil fears to tread. Favored by the fey spirits, hawthorn wood is reputed to be a great conduit for arcane energy—some of the best wands are made from this wood. A hawthorn wand is an 18-inch wand that tapers to a fine point. Varnished to give the implement an amber finish, it's smooth to the touch. When used in an implement, the wood grows warm and a faint light shines from within, revealing great power.

Simply carrying a hawthorn wand brings about good fortune in subtle ways. An owner might win a few extra hands in a game of Three-Dragon Ante or receive a small windfall in coin or opportunity. The wand's true power, however, is to bend reality in its wielder's favor so that he or she can slip free from dire situations.

Befriend the Green Sisters: The most famous makers of hawthorn wands are the Green Sisters, a small circle of dryads who dwell deep in the Western Wood. One who stumbles across the dryads are certain to find death, unless the hapless traveler sings a song that moves the trees themselves. If the singer succeeds, the dryads have been known to bestow a boon in the form of a hawthorn wand to the performer who so impressed them.

Save the Famous Minstrel: Aloysius, a famous warrior and minstrel, is a bard of unequaled skill and daring. When not confronting dragons with his keen wit and keener blade, he entertains kings and emperors, and he is a favored presence in any court. For all his success, he has also gained a number of enemies who would gladly see him brought low. So when he went missing, a call rose up through the land to find the legendary singer and bring him back to safety. The king has promised to bestow a hawthorn wand to whomever brings back the bard, or at least proof of his death.

DIAMOND WAND

A sparkling diamond the size of a human's thumb caps the base of this wand. The smooth holly wood tapers from the gemstone until it terminates at a slightly rounded tip. The gem glimmers with faint light when the wand focuses arcane energy, and shines brightly when used with a spell that creates and manipulates force.

A cabal of artificers first created this wand as a means to focus their concentration when manipulating arcane energy into the solid material they called force. The diamond aids in this process, helping the wand wielder adapt his or her magical creations to meet most circumstances on the battlefield. For this reason, diamond wands were valued among battlesmith artificers.

Join an Artificer Guild: One of the best ways to acquire the implements of artificers is to join one of their societies. Artificers who gather into academies and laboratories to combine their efforts sometimes provide items, such as diamond wands, to new members. The common test for admission is to create an item the group deems worthy of its respect.

Trawl a Battlefield: Avyn Wastel, a gnome artificer of some fame, took part in the Battle of Nine Stars, a terrible conflict that laid waste to nearly a square mile of countryside. Wastel led a detachment of warmages against a host of hideous creatures born from the nine fallen stars. Stopping the threat cost Avyn and his cohorts their lives, and their bodies were never recovered. The battlefield might still contain their weapons and gear, including Wastel's diamond wand.

ARMS SLOT ITEMS

Shields and bracers are defensive tools, but in the language of magic, shields defend and bracers destroy.

The most iconic heroes are never seen without their shields, and bracers serve as a lesser defense for warriors who need their arms unfettered.

Enchantments on shields magnify their purpose, granting their wielders superior defenses. Some draw a dragon's breath into them to spare allies, while others guard their holders with a larger shield of force that falls when pierced. A set of qualities that pertains to a magic shield can be applied to a light shield, a heavy shield, or any shield, as noted in each item's description.

Bracers grant their wearers greater deftness in combat, adding power where there is already grace, and turning a simple wound into a fatal blow. They are more offensively oriented than shields.

Absorbing Shield — Level 17

This steel shield absorbs the power from attacks, protecting both you and your allies.

Item Slot: Arms 65,000 gp
Shield: Any
Power (At-Will): Immediate Interrupt. Trigger: An area attack misses you and hits an ally. Effect: The triggering attack instead misses the ally.

Ankhmon's Bracers — Level 19

Item Slot: Arms 105,000 gp
Property: When you hit an enemy that is granting combat advantage to you with an arcane attack power, the attack deals 1d10 extra damage against the enemy. You also regain a number of hit points equal to the extra damage roll result.

ANKHMON'S BRACERS

When the lich Ankhmon was preparing his undead army to fight the army known as the Celestial Company, he created a pair of bracers that allowed him to channel his tactical knowledge into powerful attacks that harmed his enemies and healed him. Ankhmon was eventually defeated, but his essence survived as a powerful vestige, granting power to a number of warlocks.

A lich named Revadal, who derives his power from a pact with Ankhmon, seeks the bracers but has yet to find them. He has assembled a new army of undead and has become a scourge in the south. Scholars theorize that the bracers aren't inherently malevolent, simply acting as channels for the wielder's own magic, so if someone aside from Revadal acquired them, they could be used without taint.

Thwart Revadal: Revadal doesn't have Ankhmon's bracers, but divinations have revealed that he is using his army to search for them. Some scholars worry that the bracers might be a key component in freeing the vestige of Ankhmon from its eternal bondage. They seek heroes to find the bracers first before Revadal can perform this terrible deed.

LUNIA'S BRACELET

Thousands of years ago, a being known as Lunia (different stories say she was a goddess, an exarch of Sehanine, or a primal champion) blessed her followers with the ability to fight evil lycanthropes. She led them in battle against an army of werewolves that were plaguing the forest. In that conflict, an exarch of Yeenoghu was summoned to fight Lunia, and the two engaged in a massive battle. In the end, Lunia sacrificed herself in a burst of moonlight that destroyed the exarch and removed lycanthropy from the werewolves' bloodlines.

Some of Lunia's followers managed to capture a fraction of her light and turn it into a small charm bracelet. The bracelet helped them in their battle against evil lycanthropes. Though she is largely forgotten now, some still worship or pay homage to Lunia.

Stop the Lycanthropes: A small army of lycanthropes has found an ancient relic of a lost faith. The item is said to be a great bane to them, so they're trying to keep it out of the hands of their enemies. The werewolves are encroaching on civilization and are getting increasingly aggressive. Local leaders have put out a call for heroes to drive the werewolves back, possibly by claiming the item, which is said to be a bracelet.

Holy Pilgrimage: Divinations by worshipers of Sehanine have revealed that an ancient relic of Lunia lies in a temple that is under siege by werewolves. Sehanine's people say that temple priests are seeking the aid of heroes who will repel the attack and are offering the item in return.

Force Shield — Level 11

This large shield appears to be composed entirely of force. It protects you until you're struck by an attack.

Shield of Silver Light

The township of Brocada was being preyed upon by lycanthropes who controlled the sewers and who had managed to capture most of the city's silver supply. A group of halfling heroes descended into the sewers to face the beasts, and one of them created this shield as their ace in the hole.

After their success, the creator of the shield set it aside as a curiosity, thinking it was too specialized to be of much use to anyone else. It sat on a shelf for many years, and likely would have been forgotten. But a vengeful wererat stole it and was about to kill its creator when a handful of knights who had been pursuing the beast rescued the old halfling. In the aftermath, they found out about the shield, and the halfling was surprised at how enthusiastic these adventurers were to see it replicated.

By Silver Command: A local bandit is using a shield of silver light to keep his werewolf underlings in line, and they have been very successful in their raids. Claiming the shield would be only one reward for stopping these bandits.

The Wererats Return: Brocada is once again menaced by wererats. The city gates have been closed, and its citizens live in fear. A descendant of the original shield's creator has a map to a cache of silver weapons, one of which is a shield of silver light, stashed in the sewers below the city. He will give the map to heroes who pledge to end the menace.

Winterward Shield

The Snowfang tribe lived in the far north, free to roam the ice without fear or constraint. That changed when a white dragon began to raid their homes, usually claiming their wealth, but sometimes kidnapping and eating their children. A courageous band of tribesfolk led by the hero Ice Elk took the fight to the dragon.

The heroes struck great blows, but eventually the dragon released his powerful breath. In an act of self-sacrifice, Ice Elk held forth his shield, protecting his companions from the brunt of the blast but taking it upon himself. Ice Elk was frozen solid, but his sacrifice gave his companions time to land a killing blow on the dragon, and his shield was returned to the village as a tribute to his courage.

Slay the Dragon: The Snowfang tribe is now gone, and rumor says the shield was reclaimed by another white wyrm. This dragon is plaguing the scattered tribes that arose from the remnants of the Snowfang people, taunting them with the knowledge that he possesses a symbol of their diminished culture. He has even gone so far as to defile some of the ancient cairns of the people. They are again looking for heroes to defeat the wyrm and restore their glory.

Item Slot: Feet 840 gp
Property: While you ride a mount, it gains a +1 item bonus to speed.

Sandwalker Boots — Level 14

Item Slot: Feet 21,000 gp
Property: You gain a burrow speed of 6 in sand. You can breathe sand as if it were air.

SANDWALKER BOOTS

Deep below the Endless Desert are the remnants of an ancient civilization. At its height, the area was the center of a fruitful nation in a verdant valley. Then, the mountains were pulled down upon it and the life force of the land was drained by the inhabitants' own magic.

Determined to find the ruins of this ancient civilization and study its culture, the adventurer and self-styled archeologist Thaigan Thornburn led an expedition to the Endless Desert. He had boots crafted for the trek that would allow him to swim through the sand like it was water.

Thaigan led his expedition into the desert and was never heard from again. Some believe that the group was waylaid by bandits. Others think that the archeologist was slain by one of his guards for his new boots.

Thornburn, I Presume: The explorers who went searching for the ancient civilization are most likely dead, but their loved ones have promised a reward to anyone who brings back the bodies, or at least locates them. They have implied that the explorer owned a powerful item that allowed its wearer to master the desert. Perhaps that item was a pair of sandwalker boots.

Capture the Murderer: Thaigan Thornburn's murderer is rumored to have escaped the desert with the archeologist's sandwalker boots. Whoever hunts down this murderer can avenge the explorer's death, prevent the killer from perpetrating further evil, and lay claim to the magic boots.

Survivor's Boots — Level 16

These rough hide boots are clearly well used, but they never wear out.

Item Slot: Feet 45,000 gp
Property: While bloodied, you don't provoke opportunity attacks when moving, using ranged powers, or using area powers.

HANDS SLOT ITEMS

An adventurer's gloves do more than just keep her hands warm.

Any task performed with the hands can be improved with magical handwear. Enchanted gauntlets allow warriors to unleash devastating attacks or disrupt those of enemies. Magic gloves have many purposes but often improve the use of skills that require fine control or subtlety or help with tasks that require the hands, such as healing.

Feinting Gloves — Level 7

Item Slot: Hands 2,600 gp
Property: You gain a +2 item bonus to Bluff checks to gain combat advantage.

Item Slot: Hands 3,400 gp
Property: You gain a +3 item bonus to Strength checks to grab a creature and to Athletics checks or Acrobatics checks to escape a grab.

Hero's Gauntlets — Level 17

These steel gauntlets reward risk and heroism.

Item Slot: Hands 65,000 gp
Property: When you spend an action point to make an attack, you gain a +1 bonus to attack rolls for that attack.
Property: When you spend an action point to make an attack and the attack deals damage, you gain temporary hit points equal to one-half your healing surge value.

Hrothmar's gauntlets

HROTHMAR'S GAUNTLETS

During the ancient war between the primordials and the gods, the mammoth titan Hrothmar was a powerful weapon. He could take the form of a comet, slamming into the ground to disrupt the divine forces with tremendous earthquakes.

The gods couldn't win without eliminating Hrothmar, but they were unable to defeat him in combat. So they devised a magic trap that contained the titan in his comet form, transforming him into a meteorite. They forged magic gauntlets from the meteorite's metal, then distributed them among their forces. Thus equipped, the front lines of the divine army started battles by slamming their gauntleted fists against the earth, sending shock waves through the primordial troops.

Since the end of the war, the gauntlets are thought to have been lost, but rumors abound that some have survived. Some warlocks of the vestige pact (see Arcane Power) believe a shred of Hrothmar's sentience still exists, and they seek these gauntlets in an attempt to contact him as a vestige.

Investigate the Ruins: Divinations have revealed that a set of Hrothmar's gauntlets might be buried in a city that was destroyed by a meteorite strike centuries ago. Other treasure hunters have heard the same rumors. Only the first to arrive can claim the prize.

Rumors of War: A band of primordial worshipers seek to rekindle the conflict between their kind and those who worship the gods. They have been terrorizing towns, using an item that causes minor earthquakes. Preventing war requires confronting the band and wresting away the item, a set of Hrothmar's gauntlets.

ILLUSIONIST'S GLOVES

Many illusionists are content to spend their lives performing simple tricks, whether to cheat and steal or to amuse people for profit. Zalian, one of these minor wizards, owned a pair of magic gloves handed down through his family from a powerful illusionist of ages past. However, being far less skilled at magic than his talented ancestor, Zalian earned a meager living.

Kellevec was a traveling illusionist who sought inexperienced spellcasters to exploit. He noticed Zalian's gloves and coveted them. Kellevec trapped the lesser illusionist in a maze of false visions, where Zalian wandered until he collapsed from dehydration and starvation. Kellevec stole the illusionist's gloves and what little coin his victim had amassed, then moved on with his ill-gotten prize.

Find Kellevec: Although Zalian was a minor wizard, the story of his robbery has become well known. Kellevec is rumored to be in the local area, committing more thefts with the help of the illusionist's gloves. He has yet to be caught, but if someone were to take his magic gloves, he'd have a harder time escaping.

A Greater Master: Kellevec was secretly working for a shadowy drow mage who seeks magic to boost his own spells. The drow runs a criminal organization in a nearby city and is an even more formidable challenge now that he has the gloves.

Hrothmar's Gauntlets — Level 18

These massive, black iron gauntlets are dotted with red metal studs. They create shock waves that hurl foes to the ground.

Item Slot: Hands 85,000 gp
Property: Prone creatures don't gain the normal +2 bonus to all defenses against your ranged attacks.
Power (Daily): Minor Action. Make an attack: Close burst 5; targets each enemy in burst; Constitution or Charisma +4 vs. Reflex; on a hit, you knock the target prone. You gain an additional +2 bonus to the attack roll against any target affected by your Warlock's Curse.

Illusionist's Gloves — Level 9

These shimmering gloves enhance your illusion spells and let you quickly alter an illusion that would otherwise be ineffective.

Item Slot: Hands 4,200 gp
Property: When you hit an enemy granting combat advantage to you with an illusion attack power, that enemy takes a -2 penalty to saving throws against the power's effects.
Power (Daily): Free Action. Trigger: You miss with an illusion attack power. Effect: You reroll the attack roll and must use the second result.

JASON A. ENGLE

Many-Fingered Gloves — Level 20

You seem to have more than the normal allotment of fingers while wearing these simple gloves.

Item Slot: Hands 125,000 gp
Property: You can wear and gain the benefit of one additional magic ring while wearing these gloves.

GIBBERING LUMP

A floating mass of twisting flesh, this grotesque item continually reshapes itself, growing eyes and mouths and losing them just as quickly. A rambling stream of nonsense words spouts from its mouths; baleful stars issue from its eyes. These features give the item an appearance of life, but it lacks even the twisted intelligence of a gibbering beast.

Those who wear a gibbering lump are often thought mad, though some adventurers acquire one for just that purpose.

Gibbering Marauders: Several gibbering abominations have been wreaking havoc across a wide peninsula, moving randomly between the scattered settlements and ruins. A group of slaads follows them, reveling in the chaos being created. If those dangers can be overcome, it's said that slicing off a bit of flesh from an abomination creates a gibbering lump.

Escapees from the Far Realm: Stories tell of a sporadic portal to the Far Realm that opens atop a mountain in the Underdark of the Feywild, in an area stripped of life by fomorians. The chaotic material of the Far Realm is said to spew from that portal, along with aberrant creatures, bizarre oozes, and scraps of flesh. A gibbering lump might be found among the leavings. Regardless, sealing the portal is probably best for all.

Fey-Blessed Circlet — Level 8

This slender silver and moonstone circlet grants you a small measure of fey grace.

Item Slot: Head 3,400 gp
Property: At the start of each encounter, you gain temporary hit points equal to your Charisma modifier.

LENSES OF THE LUMINARY

In all of Bael Turath, the great library at Taru Maaj held the most extensive store of knowledge. The tieflings jealously guarded their knowledge and entrusted a figure they called the Luminary with the job of gatekeeper of the library. The lenses of the Luminary were originally created to allow this august personage to see through the disguises of anyone who tried to sneak in. This item was presented to the Luminary by a school of tiefling magical crafters. Over time, more lenses were added to suit different needs. Eventually, a plethora of different lenses, composed of special types of glass and crystal, made up the array.

After the fall of Bael Turath, the library at Taru Maaj was lost—buried, burned, or perhaps even ripped from the world and hidden on another plane. Legend has it that the lenses of the Luminary survived.

Loot the Luminary: The Luminary was an enigmatic figure who lived a long life. Some records say the librarian lives still, guarding the repository (or what remains of it). Heroes who find the library might be able to steal or win the lenses of the Luminary.

Gather the Lenses: An old tiefling has been telling a story about a vault hidden near where the lenses of the Luminary are kept. He says the lenses have been dismantled and concealed in a chamber full of valuable gemstones, all similar in appearance to the lenses. For a share of gems, he's willing to reveal the vault's location, but solving the riddle of which lenses are true and reconstructing them is a job for heroes.

Sacred Mask — Level 8

Item Slot: Head 3,400 gp

Property: When you use a Channel Divinity class feature, until the end of your next turn, you deal 1d6 extra radiant damage against undead enemies and can score a critical hit against undead enemies on a roll of 18–20.

NECK SLOT ITEMS

Adornment or life-saving magic? Can't it be both?

Most people never realize the great value of a simple cloak or amulet. Such magic items are second only to magic armor in terms of defensive worth. The enhancement bonus of neck slot items improves Fortitude, Reflex, and Will, and most items offer other benefits related to defense or health.

Amulet of Double Fortune — Level 2+

Good luck begets even better luck when you wear this amulet.

Power (Daily): Immediate Interrupt. Trigger: An ally adjacent to you is hit by an attack. Effect: The ally gains a power bonus to all defenses equal to the amulet's enhancement bonus until the start of your next turn.

BADGE OF THE BERSERKER

This tangled knot of teeth, bone, and leathery flesh forms a screaming savage's face, twisted in insane wrath. Each piece captures the essence of fallen warriors famed for their reckless courage and thirst for violence. When pinned to clothing or armor, the spirit the badge contains transfers to the wearer, protecting her from the blades and arrows of lesser foes as she seeks an enemy worthy of her attention.

Among certain primitive tribes, shamans fashion these badges to protect their favored champions, binding the spirits of fallen warriors into the fetishes to lend their strength and insight to that war leader. The badges are worn with honor, marking that warrior's duty to the tribe.

Explore the Khittean Barrows: In bygone times, once each generation, the Khittean clans formed into vast hordes and spread across the land to slaughter all in their path. Surviving warriors returned with the corpses of their greatest champions and interred them in great tombs. It's said that the remains of those warriors can be used to create a potent badge of the berserker, but the barrows have remained untouched for centuries, because the champions' spirits guard the dead.

Defeat a Tribal Champion: The Skulltaker clan gained its name from the members' habit of cutting off the heads of their victims for perverse rituals. The clan's greatest warrior is Tusk, a vile orc said to have ogre blood in his veins. Stories say that when he charges into battle, no weapon can touch him. They also say that he wears a badge of the berserker.

Assassin's Cloak — Level 14+

This voluminous cloak swallows you up, deadening the sounds you make and concealing your movements.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|

CLOAK OF THE DESERT

The Empire of Sand, which ruled over the great desert, greatly abused the nomadic tribes that traveled in its lands. Out of this abuse was born the nomadic people's greatest hero, Shelani. She rose from a destitute background to become the most desirable courtesan in the empire. From this exalted position, she hatched the plot that brought down the empire and all of its abuses.

When all the Imperial Mages were gathered in front of the emperor, Shelani struck with a secret weapon made for her by the desert witches. Her cloak transformed her into a swirling sandstorm that flayed the flesh from the emperor and the mages. With the mages' demise, the magic that protected the empire from the encroaching desert was released, and the empire, along with Shelani and her cloak, was buried under millions of tons of sand.

Lamia Lair: A group of lamias has taken up residence in the desert above the buried empire. The lamias have found Shelani's cloak of the desert and are using it to flay the flesh of any who come near their lair. Several merchants who have lost caravans to the lamias are looking to hire someone to take care of the problem.

Thaigan's Research: The explorer Thaigan Thornburn learned about a group of ruins on the edge of the desert. He was on his way to another site and never got to explore the ruins, but he made notes that both magic and monsters thrived in the area, including rumors of a cloak of the desert.

MEDALLION OF THE MIND

Medallions of the mind were first fashioned by the mystics of Tellac Moh, an order of psychics and sages devoted to unlocking the mysteries of the mind. Designed as small pendants fashioned from nickel-silver with a stylized eye set with an amethyst disk for the pupil, the medallions were given to acolytes as tools to aid the wearers in learning the order's methods and practices. They were reportedly all lost when Tellac Moh was reduced to rubble and ash, but a few have surfaced now and then, each a cherished prize from an enlightened time.

Defeat a Mastermind: Though it's unknown how they acquire them, mind flayers often give medallions of the mind as rewards to particularly useful servants. Finding and defeating a mind flayer infiltrator or, better yet, a mind flayer mastermind, would be a way to acquire such an amulet.

Locate the Dream of Tellac Moh: Although Tellac Moh is no more, its dream lives on. Sequestered away in a dim corner of the Plane of Dreams are the dreams of the order's finest minds, each held in perfect stasis. Explorers who reach this distant plane sometimes leave tokens of respect for their fallen heroes. It's said that those who reside there sometimes give a medallion of the mind to heroes who survive the journey.

Level 30: Your healing surge value + 15.

TIMELESS LOCKET

This platinum disk features numeric engravings, geometric shapes, and arcing lines on both sides. Opening a clasp at the bottom reveals a glass face atop a set of gauges. Each gauge is a circle of runes and numbers arranged around a central post that has moving hands attached to it, which point to a rune, sigil, or number. Dials set around the edges allow the user to adjust the hands to different positions as desired.

A timeless locket is an accurate timepiece that shows what time it is in the user's location. The locket also steals a bit of time each day, storing those borrowed moments for use when the owner needs them most.

Explore the Timeless Sanctuary: According to sages, the Timeless was an order of mages who had the power to move backward and forward through time, watching or altering events to suit their purposes. Some calamity wiped out the order, but stories say that the mages' abandoned dominions floating in the Astral Sea still exist, and that timeless lockets have been recovered from some of them.

Reach the Plane of Moments: In addition to the Plane of Dreams, the Plane of Mirrors, and the Far Realm, there are a myriad of strange realities, pocket dimensions, and alternate worlds where the impossible becomes possible. Legends speak of one such world where countless golden threads stretch across infinity, each a reality in itself, and the march of history can be seen by reading these strands. In the thickest tangles, representing those monumental events that shape the world and reality, strange and terrible guardians are said to safeguard the strands from tampering. These beings reputedly guard lost treasures from another time, including such items as a timeless locket.

Possum Amulet — Level 23+

When you're deeply wounded, this amulet stems the flow of blood to prevent you from dying.

Property: You gain a swim speed equal to your speed and can breathe underwater.
Power (Daily): Immediate Interrupt. Trigger: An enemy hits you. Effect: You become insubstantial until the start of your next turn.

ORC'S-EYE AMULET

A follower of Gruumsh might pluck out an eye to look more like the orc deity. By ritually treating a removed eye, an orc can turn it into a useful magic item and an even stronger symbol of devotion to Gruumsh. Orcs waste no words on creatures bearing one of these amulets who aren't followers of Gruumsh—they speak with their blades.

Slay an Eye of Gruumsh: Orc raiders led by an eye of Gruumsh who has an orc's-eye amulet are causing trouble for a nearby village. Heroes are needed to slay the orc leader, a deed that will earn the amulet but also the enmity of his tribe and family.

Adventuring Trophy: Word on the street says that a local adventurer who is a great orc hunter took an orc's-eye amulet as a trophy from a nearby orc clan. She might be willing to sell it, or she might be "persuaded" to give it up.

Shroud of Ravens — Level 13+

Pulling this cloak's black hood over your head transforms you into a murder of ravens.

Enhancement: Fortitude, Reflex, and Will
Power (Daily ✦ Polymorph): Immediate Reaction. Trigger: You take damage from an attack. Effect: You transform into a cloud of screaming ravens until the start of your next turn. While transformed, you become insubstantial and gain a fly speed equal to your speed. In addition, you shift a number of squares equal to the shroud's enhancement bonus.

SOUL SHARD TALISMAN

Death giants and death titans are known for their soul shrouds, composed of souls they have torn from fallen foes. Small pieces of a slain death giant's or death titan's armor can be enchanted to make soul shard talismans, which emulate the nature of the soul shroud. When an enemy of a talisman's wearer falls in combat, its soul is temporarily trapped inside the talisman. This is both a boon and a burden to the wearer. The talisman's wearer can release the soul to heal himself. But until he does so, unpleasant mental impressions from the trapped soul seep through the amulet into the wearer's mind, ending only when the soul is released.

Shard for Sale: Markets in the Shadowfell carry exotic assortments of goods, including relics of battles both ancient and recent. Interested parties can track down a soul shard talisman by asking the right people, though the denizens of the Shadowfell aren't too chatty with strangers (or anyone, for that matter).

Soul Shard Talisman — Level 24+

Heavy for its size, this black metal pendant emanates a wisp of blue smoke when a soul is trapped inside it.

Lvl 24 +5 525,000 gp Lvl 29 +6 2,625,000 gp
Item Slot: Neck
Enhancement: Fortitude, Reflex, and Will
Property: When you reduce a nonminion enemy to 0 hit points, this talisman gains a charge. There is no limit to the number of charges it can gain, but it resets to 1 charge after an extended rest.
Power (Daily ✦ Healing): Minor Action. You expend 1 charge from this talisman and regain 3d6 hit points plus additional hit points equal to 4 times the number of charges remaining in the talisman.
Level 29: 3d8 hit points plus 6 times the number of charges remaining in the talisman.

Talisman of Terror — Level 7+

Enhancement: Fortitude, Reflex, and Will
Property: You gain an item bonus to initiative checks equal to the locket's enhancement bonus.
Power (Daily): Minor Action. You take a standard action.

RINGS

After choosing two rings of power carefully, adventurers often wear a number of other nonmagical rings to disguise the fact that they are magically equipped.

A magic ring is unobtrusive, easily explained away as mere jewelry, and portable.

Most rings have a property or a power that improves when the wearer reaches a milestone. Beyond that, rings vary widely.

Alliance Band — Level 15

This silver ring is inset with complex interlocking decorations and provides healing to your allies.

Property: When you use your second wind, one ally adjacent to you regains 10 hit points.
Power (Daily ✦ Healing): Minor Action. You spend a healing surge but regain no hit points. Instead, one ally adjacent to you regains hit points equal to your healing surge value.
If you've reached at least one milestone today, the ally regains additional hit points equal to your level.

Crown of the Dream King — Level 15

Property: You gain a +1 item bonus to all defenses against illusion or psychic powers.
Power (Daily): Immediate Interrupt. Trigger: You are hit by an illusion, a psychic, or a sleep power. Effect: You gain a +4 bonus to all defenses against the triggering power.
If you've reached at least one milestone today, the bonus to all defenses lasts until the end of your next turn.

KIERAN YANNER

Dauntless Champion's Ring — Level 30

Supernal, Iokharic, and Barazhad characters entwine about this thick mithral band, rearranging themselves when the ring's magic is activated.

Item Slot: Ring 3,125,000 gp
Property: You gain a +4 item bonus to your healing surge value.
Power (Daily): Minor Action. If you have expended all of your encounter attack powers, you regain the use of one of them, determined randomly.
If you've reached at least one milestone today and have expended all of your daily attack powers, you regain the use of one of them, determined randomly.

Death Song Ring — Level 19

The soft songs chanted by this ring in times of need are of those buried alive, hummed with fading breath to hold off the final night.

Item Slot: Ring 105,000 gp
Property: When you make a death saving throw, each enemy within 3 squares of you takes 5 necrotic damage.
Power (Encounter ✦ Necrotic): Immediate Reaction. Trigger: An ally makes a death saving throw. Effect: One enemy within 3 squares of that ally takes 10 necrotic damage.
If you've reached at least one milestone today, each enemy, instead of one, within 3 squares of that ally takes 10 necrotic damage.

Death Spiral Ring — Level 16

This ring's dizzying black spirals seem to bend space and time.

Item Slot: Ring 45,000 gp
Property: You gain resist 5 necrotic.
Power (Daily ✦ Teleportation): Immediate Reaction. Trigger: A creature within 10 squares of you drops to 0 hit points or fewer. Effect: You teleport into the creature's space or to a square adjacent to it.
If you've reached at least one milestone today, you can use the power a second time during this encounter. This second use doesn't count as a use of a daily magic item power.

Grace Ring of Lightning — Level 14

The gold and silver weave of this ring is cut with sparkling channels. Lightning arcs from it to protect you when you're incapacitated.

Item Slot: Ring 21,000 gp
Property: You gain a +1 item bonus to saving throws against dazing or stunning effects.
Power (Encounter): No Action. Trigger: You are conscious and end your turn without having made an attack during it. Effect: One creature within 5 squares of you takes lightning damage equal to your highest ability modifier.

When hope has fled, this ring's pulsing blue sapphire might recapture it.

Item Slot: Ring 21,000 gp
Property: You gain a +1 item bonus to saving throws against dazing or stunning effects.
Power (Encounter): No Action. Trigger: You are conscious and end your turn without having made an attack during it. Effect: You gain a +5 power bonus to your next saving throw before the end of the encounter.

Grace Ward Ring — Level 14

This understated gold and silver weave holds a sliver of ivory carved into a ram's head.

Item Slot: Ring 21,000 gp
Property: You gain a +1 item bonus to saving throws against dazing or stunning effects.
Power (Encounter): No Action. Trigger: You are conscious and end your turn without having made an attack during it. Effect: You push one creature adjacent to you 1 square.

CROWN OF THE DREAM KING

This ring's name comes from a tale told to human children for centuries. In the tale, a young girl named Sharnanda rescues the King of Dreams from the nightmares that haunt his kingdom, and he gives his crown to her in gratitude. Because the King of Dreams is no bigger than Sharnanda's hand, the crown is just large enough for her to wear as a ring, and it protects her dreams from that night on.

When a plague of nightmares comes to Sharnanda's town, the ring protects her, and she uses it to rescue a prince who has fallen under a spell. Together, they defeat the threat, and as such stories go, they marry and live happily ever after.

Many suspect there is some truth to this story, since the rings associated with it seem to have originated in the Feywild, said by some eladrin sages to be the dream of the natural world. Some magic-using jewelers in the world have learned the craft of making these rings, but their versions are never as lovely as the ones given as gifts by the eladrin to those who have earned their favor.

A Hop, a Skip, and a Jump: According to a recently discovered map, a traitorous knight in a magical slumber lies just on the other side of a portal to the Feywild. It's dangerous to go there, but a crown of the dream king is supposedly among his possessions.

Greater Ring of Invisibility — Level 23

This onyx band makes it easier for you to conceal your comings and goings.

Item Slot: Ring 425,000 gp
Property: You gain a +5 item bonus to Stealth checks.
Power (Encounter ✦ Illusion): Minor Action. You become invisible until the end of your next turn.
If you've reached at least one milestone today, you also gain concealment until the end of the encounter.

Ring of Action Reversal — Level 20

This golden band holds a small diamond hourglass, which inverts each time the ring is used.

Item Slot: Ring 125,000 gp
Property: You gain a +4 item bonus to initiative checks.
Power (Daily): Free Action. If the next encounter attack power you use this turn misses all its targets, you regain the use of that power.
If you've reached at least one milestone today, you can apply this power to the last encounter attack power you used this turn, rather than the next.

Ring of Agile Thought — Level 20

While you wear this ring, your thoughts seem clearer, and you recover from mental attacks quickly.

Item Slot: Ring 125,000 gp
Property: You gain a +4 item bonus to Diplomacy checks. In addition, you gain an item bonus to Will equal to the number of milestones you've reached today.
Power (Daily): No Action. Trigger: An attack hits your Will and dazes or stuns you. Effect: You make a saving throw against the effect that dazed or stunned you, even if a save can't normally end that effect. The effect ends if you save.

Ring of Battlements — Level 24

This steel band is carved to suggest crenellations—a sign of its protective magic.

Item Slot: Ring 525,000 gp
Property: When you have cover, attackers take a -3 penalty to attack rolls against you instead of a -2 penalty.
Power (Daily ✦ Zone): Minor Action. You create a zone of protection in a close burst 2. The zone lasts until the end of your next turn. While within the zone, you and your allies have cover against enemies outside the zone and can move 1 extra square when they shift. Sustain Minor: The zone persists.
If you've reached at least one milestone today, you can increase the size of the zone by 1.

Ring of Eladrin Grace — Level 16

The silver and gold weave of this grace ring recalls the heraldry of the Spiral Tower.

Item Slot: Ring 45,000 gp
Property: You gain a +1 item bonus to saving throws against dazing or stunning effects.
Power (Encounter ✦ Teleportation): No Action. Trigger: You are conscious and end your turn without having made an attack during it. Effect: You teleport 5 squares.

Ring of Enduring Earth — Level 20

While you wear this ring, your hand takes on the appearance of stone, signifying that you possess the durability of earth.

Item Slot: Ring 125,000 gp
Property: You gain a +4 item bonus to Endurance checks. In addition, you gain an item bonus to Fortitude equal to the number of milestones you've reached today.
Power (Daily): Free Action. Trigger: You're pulled, pushed, slid, or knocked prone. Effect: You ignore the forced movement and aren't knocked prone.

Ring of Fearlessness — Level 28

This thin ivory band wards your mind from fear.

Item Slot: Ring 2,125,000 gp
Property: You gain a +4 bonus to all defenses against fear attacks.
Power (Daily): Immediate Interrupt. Trigger: An enemy within your line of sight makes a fear attack. Effect: Each ally within 5 squares of you gains a +4 power bonus to all defenses against that attack.
If you've reached at least one milestone today, each ally within 10 squares of you gains the bonus instead.

Ring of Focus — Level 24

This ornate platinum and gold band is dotted with seven different gems.

Item Slot: Ring 525,000 gp
Property: You gain a +1 item bonus to Will.
Power (Daily): Minor Action. Once per round until the end of the encounter, you can use a free action on your turn to sustain an effect of yours that requires a minor action to sustain.
If you've reached at least one milestone today, you can sustain a power once per round on your turn using no action, rather than a free action.

Ring of Guarded Will — Level 26

This band is made of sculpted force. It occasionally hums faintly in your mind.

Item Slot: Ring 1,125,000 gp
Property: You gain a +2 item bonus to Will.
Power (Daily ✦ Psychic): Immediate Reaction. Trigger: An enemy hits you with an attack that targets Will. Effect: The triggering enemy takes ongoing 10 psychic damage (save ends).
If you've reached at least one milestone today, the triggering enemy instead takes ongoing 15 psychic damage (save ends).

Ring of Heroic Health — Level 21

This heavy gold ring is set with a large amethyst, which shimmers faintly with healing magic.

Item Slot: Ring 225,000 gp
Property: When you spend an action point, you regain hit points equal to your Constitution modifier.
Power (Daily ✦ Healing): Standard Action. You spend a healing surge.
If you've reached at least one milestone today, you don't spend a healing surge. You instead regain hit points as if you had spent one.

Ring of Influence — Level 21

This ornate white gold and sapphire ring grants you sway over the minds of others.

Item Slot: Ring 225,000 gp
Property: You gain a +2 item bonus to Charisma-based skill checks and ability checks.
Power (Daily): Minor Action. Until the end of your next turn, you gain a +2 power bonus to attack rolls against Will.
If you've reached at least one milestone today, the bonus to attack rolls increases to +4.

Ring of Sympathy — Level 15

These copper rings are shared by those who work well together.

Item Slot: Ring 25,000 gp
Property: Once per round, when you save, one ally within 5 squares of you who is also wearing a ring of sympathy can make a saving throw.
Power (Daily): Minor Action. One ally within 10 squares of you can make a saving throw. If that ally is wearing a ring of sympathy, he or she gains a +2 power bonus to the saving throw.
If you've reached at least one milestone today, you can instead use this power to grant an ally within 10 squares who is wearing a ring of sympathy a saving throw (including the +2 power bonus) against each effect on him or her that a save can end.

Ring of the Fallen — Level 18

This gold ring is engraved with the crossed-axes symbol of a long-dead army.

Item Slot: Ring 85,000 gp
Property: When you use your second wind, you regain additional hit points equal to your Constitution modifier. In addition, you regain additional hit points equal to your Constitution modifier for each healing surge you spend at the end of a short rest.
Power (Daily ✦ Healing): Free Action. Use this power during a short rest. You and each ally within your line of sight regain additional hit points equal to one-half your level when you spend healing surges during that rest.
If you've reached at least one milestone today, the number of additional hit points equals your level + your Constitution modifier.

Ring of the Risen — Level 23

This simple silver ring makes it easier for your allies to revive you.

Item Slot: Ring 425,000 gp
Property: When you have 0 hit points or fewer and spend a healing surge, you regain 2d6 additional hit points.
Power (Daily ✦ Healing): No Action. Trigger: You spend a healing surge as a result of an ally's action. Effect: You spend another healing surge.
If you've reached at least one milestone today, you don't spend another healing surge. You instead regain hit points as if you had spent one.

Ring of the Zealous — Level 15

This gold ring is inlaid with mother-of-pearl blessed by priests of old.

Item Slot: Ring 25,000 gp
Property: When you use the turn undead power, you can increase the size of the burst by 1.
Power (Daily): Free Action. Trigger: You use turn undead. Effect: Each target you hit with that power is restrained instead of immobilized.
If you've reached at least one milestone today, you can increase the size of the burst by 1 (in addition to the increase from the ring's property).

Ring of Traded Knowledge — Level 21

The knowledge seems as if it has always been within you, instead of gathered in the slim rune-carved band on your finger.

Item Slot: Ring 225,000 gp
Property: This ring contains one at-will attack power from your class. You choose this power when you acquire the ring and can't change it later.
Power (Daily): Minor Action. Until the end of the encounter, you can use the at-will attack power contained in the ring. If you do so, choose one of your other at-will attack powers from your class. You can't use that power during the encounter.
If you've reached at least one milestone today, you gain a +2 power bonus to attack rolls and damage rolls when you use the power contained in the ring.

KALMAN ANDRASOFSZKY

Ring of Unfettered Motion — Level 20

When you use this ring, you move so quickly that you're a blur.

Item Slot: Ring 125,000 gp
Property: You gain a +4 item bonus to Acrobatics checks. In addition, you gain an item bonus to Reflex equal to the number of milestones you've reached today.
Power (Daily): Immediate Reaction. Trigger: An attack hits your Reflex and immobilizes, restrains, or slows you. Effect: You make a saving throw against the effect that immobilized, restrained, or slowed you, even if a save can't normally end that effect. The effect ends if you save.

Ring of Unwelcome Gifting — Level 17

This gold band feeds on things that assail you, spitting them out on your enemy.

Item Slot: Ring 65,000 gp
Property: You gain resist 3 against ongoing damage.
Power (Daily): Free Action. Trigger: You hit an enemy with a basic attack. Effect: You transfer one ongoing damage effect from yourself to that enemy.
If you've reached at least one milestone today, you can use this power after hitting with an at-will attack that isn't a basic attack.

SHADOWFELL SIGNET

Many generations ago, servants of the Raven Queen raised a temple within the Shadowfell and called it the Monastery of Dire Remembrance. It served the goddess well and helped the dead cast aside the shackles of their past lives to move on to what lay beyond. The temple's priests, who were fierce enemies of the undead, forged Shadowfell signets out of the dark metal they mined from beneath the temple and used them as tokens of passage through certain lands of the dead.

Endings come to all things in the Shadowfell, and the temple was no different. Some say the priests were subverted when they opened the temple's gates to servants of Vecna who came bearing stolen signets. Others say that they dug too deep and woke something that was best left asleep.

With the fall of the temple, much of its lore was lost, but a handful of devotees kept the secret of the signets safe and shared it with those who would strike against the undead.

A New Blasphemy: Attacks by undead have ravaged a town in the mountains. The undead have a leader, a female vampire who carries a black metal ring that bears the symbol of the Raven Queen, enemy of all undead. The Raven Queen's worshipers are anxious to end this blasphemy and are looking for heroes who can help them do so.

What Once Was Lost: A paladin who escaped the fall of the temple passed through the area recently. He had one of those fancy rings known as Shadowfell signets and said he was going to rebuild the temple in the nearby mountains, but no one ever heard from him again. Of course, a lot of nasty things live up in those mountains, so no one's been brave enough to find out what happened to him.

Ring of Windows — Level 28

This simple wooden ring allows you to go places no one else can, and you can use it to open and close dimensional windows.

Item Slot: Ring 2,125,000 gp
Property: When you teleport and no creature automatically moves into the space you left, that space is filled with a spatial flux that prevents any creature from entering it until the end of your next turn.
Power (Daily ✦ Teleportation): Free Action. Trigger: You use a teleportation power. Effect: You don't need line of sight to the destination space.
If you've reached at least one milestone today, the distance of the teleportation increases by 4.

Shadowfell Signet — Level 19

Item Slot: Ring 105,000 gp
Property: You gain resist 10 necrotic, and if an enemy's attack causes you to lose a healing surge, you can take 10 damage instead of losing that healing surge.
Power (Daily ✦ Stance): Minor Action. Until the stance ends, you gain a +4 bonus to all defenses against opportunity attacks from undead creatures, and you don't grant combat advantage when flanked by undead.
If you've reached at least one milestone today, you don't provoke opportunity attacks from undead creatures.

RING OF THE FALLEN

Centuries ago, a company of dwarf soldiers was garrisoned in an outpost at the edge of the frontier. The soldiers were assigned to guard the edges of civilization from the encroachment of monsters. When a white dragon attacked the outpost, the dwarves were driven away. Ashamed of themselves, they reconvened and went back to the outpost to try to best the dragon.

The dwarves fought a good fight, but the dragon was victorious. Their frozen bodies weren't found until an army arrived and destroyed the dragon. The dwarves' military rings were collected and used as special medals that were handed out for bravery. Since the dissolution of the army, the rings have dispersed throughout the land.

Buried Cache: Rumor has it that a cache of rings of the fallen is buried deep within a forest overrun by brigands. The brigands are an uncommon lot, using monsters and magic to prey on nearby townsfolk. Perhaps the brigands know where the cache is.

Mad Oracle: Divinations have revealed that a mad oracle in the mountains knows the location of one or more rings of the fallen. Numerous obstacles and monsters block the path to the oracle, but the promise of one of these rings would be worth the dangers.

Stone Band — Level 17

This ring of basalt becomes more polished and intricately carved each time you use it.

Item Slot: Ring 65,000 gp
Property: You gain resist 5 against critical hits. If you've reached at least one milestone today, you gain resist 10 instead.
Power (Daily): Minor Action. You gain resist 5 to all damage until the end of your next turn. Sustain Minor: The effect persists.

Stormcatcher Ring — Level 17

This copper ring has a setting but no gemstone. When you use the ring, sparks fill the setting.

Item Slot: Ring 65,000 gp
Property: You gain resist 10 lightning and resist 10 thunder.
Power (Daily): Immediate Interrupt. Trigger: An enemy hits you with a lightning attack. Effect: The triggering enemy makes the attack again, but against itself.
If you've reached at least one milestone today, you can pick a second enemy within 5 squares of you. The triggering enemy makes the attack against the second enemy too.

Traveler's Ring — Level 18

This tarnished silver ring set with a muddied stone looks mundane. When you wear it, it tugs you in the right direction.

Item Slot: Ring 85,000 gp
Property: You gain a +4 item bonus to Streetwise checks.
Power (Daily): Free Action. You gain a success in a skill challenge in which Streetwise is a primary or secondary skill.
If you've reached at least one milestone today, you also gain a +5 power bonus on your next Streetwise check before the end of the day.

Unvanquished Grace Ring — Level 14

The distinctive gold and silver weave of this grace ring is carved with feathers.

Item Slot: Ring 21,000 gp
Property: You gain a +1 item bonus to saving throws against dazing or stunning effects.
Power (Encounter): No Action. Trigger: You are conscious and end your turn without having made an attack during it. Effect: You or an ally within 5 squares of you can stand up as a free action.

WAIST SLOT ITEMS

No hero wears a girdle. If anyone asks, it's a belt.

Waist slot items, whether baldrics, bandoliers, belts, or sashes, are hard to pin down to one mystical theme. Many waistline wraps benefit the health of the wearer, but some bands serve other purposes altogether. Those belts that hold weapons or other tools can be enchanted to enhance those items.

Acrobat's Harness — Level 14

Item Slot: Waist 21,000 gp
Property: When you make an Acrobatics check, you roll twice and use either result.

Baldric of Assault — Level 11

This gray leather baldric lets you supplant your enemy when you use your aegis of assault.

Item Slot: Waist 9,000 gp
Property: When an enemy triggers your aegis of assault power, you can slide the enemy 1 square and then teleport into that enemy's space, instead of teleporting to a space adjacent to the enemy.

Baldric of Shielding — Level 19

This marcasite-studded baldric aids you when you use your aegis of shielding.

Item Slot: Waist 105,000 gp
Property: When you use your aegis of shielding power to reduce the damage dealt to an ally, you gain temporary hit points equal to the amount of damage you prevented.

Baldric of Time — Level 6+

This rough-textured belt seems to be coated in the sands of time.

Lvl 6 1,800 gp Lvl 16 45,000 gp
Item Slot: Waist
Property: When you roll a 20 on your initiative check, you gain an extra move action during the first turn of the encounter.
Level 16: You instead gain an extra standard action.

Belt of Fragile Guard — Level 9

This wide leather band toughens your skin but weakens your resilience.

Item Slot: Waist 4,200 gp
Power (At-Will): Minor Action. Until the end of your next turn, you gain a +1 power bonus to AC and vulnerability to all damage equal to half your level.

Belt of the witch king

Belt of Nourishment — Level 7

This comfortable leather belt is worked with images of foodstuffs that nourish you.

Item Slot: Waist 2,600 gp
Property: You gain a +3 item bonus to Endurance checks.
Property: You don't need to eat. You must wear the belt for 24 consecutive hours before this property functions.

ED COX

Belt of the Witch King — Level 18

The links of this slim silver chain are separated by small spheres of arcane-enhanced obsidian.

Item Slot: Waist 85,000 gp
Property: You gain a +2 item bonus to Fortitude.
Power (Daily ✦ Healing): Free Action. Trigger: You become bloodied. Effect: You regain hit points equal to twice the level of the highest-level arcane power you have not expended.

Diamond Cincture — Level 10+

The diamonds on this platinum band grant great fortitude, which you can sacrifice for health.

Lvl 10 5,000 gp
Lvl 20 125,000 gp
Lvl 30 3,125,000 gp
Item Slot: Waist
Property: This belt holds one diamond and you gain a +1 item bonus to Fortitude.
Level 20: Two diamonds, +2 item bonus to Fortitude.
Level 30: Three diamonds, +3 item bonus to Fortitude.
Power (At-Will ✦ Healing): Minor Action. When you use this power, one diamond on the belt cracks and darkens, becoming worthless. You regain hit points as if you had spent a healing surge, and the belt's item bonus is reduced by one. If there are no diamonds on the belt, you can't use this power. After an extended rest, each diamond destroyed by this power is restored.

Phoenix Sash — Level 18

This brilliant orange wrap restores life to the vanquished.

Item Slot: Waist 85,000 gp
Property: You gain a +1 item bonus to Fortitude.
Power (Daily ✦ Healing): No Action. Trigger: An enemy reduces you to 0 hit points or fewer. Effect: You spend a healing surge and are dazed until the end of your next turn.

Potion Bandolier — Level 8

This wide brown leather baldric keeps potions in easy reach.

Item Slot: Waist 3,400 gp
Property: This belt can hold up to six potions. You can retrieve a potion from the belt as a free action.

Sash of Heroic Inspiration — Level 28

This flashy, embroidered red sash proclaims your heroism to all.

Item Slot: Waist 2,125,000 gp
Property: When you spend an action point, one ally within your line of sight can spend a healing surge as a free action.

Sash of Regeneration — Level 28

While you wear this heavy brown hide sash, you heal at a tremendous rate.

Item Slot: Waist 2,125,000 gp
Property: You gain regeneration 5 while you're bloodied.

BELT OF THE WITCH KING

Long ago in the nation of Pak Suth, the king died without an heir. Driven by a warrior tradition and the need for a strong, imposing ruler to maintain the borders, the ministers of the kingdom proclaimed that any person who could endure a series of daily tests of the body would become absolute ruler.

Many soldiers, generals, and heroes succumbed to the trials before Tulari claimed his right to be tested. Despite his slight frame, he endured each day's test and eventually became king. Tulari was a great ruler, holding the boundaries of Pak Suth firmly and ruling wisely. Today, the legend of the Witch King Tulari remains strong in the region, and the nation's ruler wears a belt of office—the same one that Tulari wore when he passed the tests.

Nation in Exile: Much has changed since Witch King Tulari set Pak Suth on the path to greatness. Today, the people of Pak Suth flee their homeland en masse. The king's lineage has ended, and rebels have stolen Tulari's belt—or so the rumor goes. What authority remains has offered a prize for the defeat of the violent rebels that plague the exodus: the belt of the Witch King and possibly rulership of the kingdom.

Political Ploy: The current ruler of Pak Suth needs to make a political statement regarding her strength and the nation's direction. She wants to give away Tulari's belt as part of that declaration, but she requires worthy recipients so as not to dishonor the Witch King's memory. To that end, she commissioned the construction of a labyrinth of dangers, reminiscent of the challenges Tulari defeated. The labyrinth is all that stands between a group of heroes and this belt.

Stonewall Belt — Level 8

This rough gray belt covered in stone plates grants stability to its wearer.

Item Slot: Waist 3,400 gp
Power (Daily): Minor Action. You can ignore push, pull, or slide effects until the end of your next turn.

Waistband of the Grappler — Level 13

This fur-lined wrap channels the strength and the recklessness of an accomplished wrestler.

Item Slot: Waist 17,000 gp
Power (At-Will): Minor Action. You gain a +5 power bonus to damage rolls and to grab attempts, but take a -2 penalty to attack rolls. You also grant combat advantage to all enemies. This effect lasts until you end it as a minor action.

Wraith's Cord — Level 30

You become wraithlike when you wear this worn rope band.

Item Slot: Waist 3,125,000 gp
Property: When you score a critical hit, the target is weakened until the end of your next turn.
Power (Daily ✦ Illusion): Minor Action. Until the end of your next turn, you become invisible and insubstantial and gain phasing.

Phoenix sash

PHOENIX SASH

Fenelon was an eladrin warrior of the Feywild who was known for his ability to live through anything. In the war with the fomorians, he was crushed under a pile of rock, thrown off a cliff, and speared by the giant warrior Morgkash, surviving each and every event. For his ability to rise from the ashes of tragedy and defeat, Fenelon became known as the Phoenix.

Fenelon eventually died of old age, and his magic sash passed into the hands of other eladrin. Eventually it made its way into the world, where it has been worn by a number of heroes, though none as worthy as Fenelon. Learning of this disgrace, the eladrin seek a fey warrior of great prowess who can find and reclaim the sash, returning it to glory and honor.

Reclaim the Sash: The eladrin court has put out a call for fey warriors to seek out the Phoenix sash. They believe that it can be found in the hands of a mad archmage by the name of Killias. The archmage has been oppressing the villagers in a small kingdom in the north.

Fomorian Clutches: Rumors suggest that Skrad, a descendant of the fomorian Morgkash, has found the Phoenix sash and is keeping it in his stronghold. He guards the sash closely and attacks any who would take it. It's also said that on more than one occasion, the sash has saved his life when fey assassins attempted to kill him.

WONDROUS ITEMS

If you think you have too many wondrous items, you're wrong. In truth, you have too few pockets.

The catchall category for enchanted objects, a wondrous item isn't worn or wielded, and it can have myriad enchantments. Adventurers hoard wondrous items because their effects cover such a wide spectrum and not having the right one can be the difference between success and failure.

This section described various wondrous items to help you out of jams, wondrous lair items to enhance your base of operations, and wondrous tattoos that are always with you, even if your other items aren't.

Blessed Book — Level 1

This leather tome, bound in iron and silver, contains far more pages than naturally possible.

Wondrous Item 360 gp

Property: This ritual book has the dimensions and weight of a standard ritual book, but holds 1,000 pages.

Deepfarer's Pouch — Level 5

This oilskin pouch holds more than it should, including a small breathing tube that extends from the inside.

Wondrous Item 1,000 gp

Property: This belt pouch contains 1 hour's worth of air, which remains fresh indefinitely. Once the air in the pouch has been consumed, you can refresh the supply by exposing the open pouch to any supply of breathable air during a short rest.

Ghostlight Candle — Level 15

This plain white wax candle can burn every day without diminishing.

Wondrous Item 25,000 gp

Property: This candle sheds dim light 2 squares in all directions and never burns down (but can be extinguished).

Power (Daily): Standard Action. Use this power while the candle is lit. Until the end of the encounter, creatures within 2 squares of the candle lose the insubstantial quality and can't become invisible.

Horn of Dismissal — Level 12

The sound of this black-studded bronze horn dispels conjurations.

Wondrous Item 13,000 gp

Power (Daily): Standard Action. You end each conjuration within 3 squares of you.

Ioun's Parchment — Level 1

This thin sheet of bronze, the size of a roll of parchment, is embossed with Ioun's symbol in one corner.

Wondrous Item 360 gp

Property: This material can be written on like paper or parchment, and the writing can't be erased until the parchment's owner wills it blank. It's flexible enough to roll. Creating a ritual scroll using this item fills it with text, but takes half the usual time. Once the ritual is performed, the piece of Ioun's parchment turns blank and can be reused.

GHOSTLIGHT CANDLE

The shadar-kai's service to the Raven Queen has earned them numerous enemies over the years. One of the most persistent foes was Antala Longscar, a priest of the Raven Queen who strongly disagreed with the shadar-kai's philosophy and methodology and who had stymied a number of their plans. She was enough of a thorn in their side that the shadar-kai felt she deserved an accelerated audience with the goddess she and they both served.

Antala spent her life dealing with regular visits from shadar-kai assassins, and she developed a number of defenses and protections to minimize their threat, including the ghostlight candle.

Internal Matters: The shadar-kai are as given to politics and infighting as any other intelligent people. A caravan of them arrived in town with a number of ghostlight candles and other treasures. These shadar-kai are willing to use the candles as payment for escort to someplace safe, but others of their kind are willing to pay a similar price to see that the caravan doesn't leave. One way or another, these events offer a good chance to acquire one of the candles.

The Light under the Hill: Every night for the past 10 years, the light from a single candle has been seen from the top of a hill outside town. Stories say it's a ghostlight candle, lit by a girl trapped by the fey, who is badly in need of rescue.

Map of Unseen Lands — Level 7

Protected by a sturdy scroll tube, this sheet of vellum is ringed with symbols of travel: wagon wheels, footsteps, and rafts.

Wondrous Item 2,600 gp

Property: You gain a +2 item bonus to Nature checks and Perception checks to navigate through areas mapped by this item's power (including checks made during skill challenges).

Power (Daily): Standard Action. You command this map to redraw itself, depicting the surface area within a 10-mile radius around you. The map doesn't go into precise detail, but it's accurate. It shows only aboveground terrain, not underground areas.

The map includes the following features:

- ✦ General terrain features, such as mountains, rivers, and lakes;
- ✦ Structures 5,000 square feet or larger in size;
- ✦ Structures important for travel, such as bridges and portals;
- ✦ Lairs of creatures that are significant threats;

HORN OF DISMISSAL

The conjurers of the group known as the Immaculate Star enforced their will through a virtual army of magic creatures composed of cool blue flame. With such troops, a small number of conjurers were able to conquer the city of Alb and hold it for over a year. Their yoke was thrown off only when a resistance group managed to put an enchantment on the great bell of the cathedral. When it sounded, it shattered, but the note dispelled the phantom army in the city. Shards of the bell were forged into a variety of weapons to use against the conjurers, including horns that had an enchantment similar to that of the original bell. Within a few months, the Immaculate Star was no more.

The pieces of the original bell have long since been used up, but clever artisans have found ways to duplicate its functionality.

Immortal Immaculate: The Immaculate Star analyzed some of the weapons made from the bell in an attempt to counteract their effect. They were unsuccessful, but even now immortal summoned guardians stand watch over their empty laboratories. A map to one of these locations has surfaced—a real find, if it's accurate. Perhaps one of the labs holds a horn of dismissal.

Ribbon of Limitless Questions — Level 13

When this blue, silky ribbon is unrolled, a new question appears on it in glowing gold and silver runes.

Wondrous Item 17,000 gp

Property: When you perform a divination ritual that allows you to ask a number of questions, such as Hand of Fate, Speak with Dead, or Consult Oracle, you can ask one extra question. This effect can allow you to exceed the normal maximum number of questions allowed.

Power (Daily): Free Action. Trigger: You fail an Intelligence- or Charisma-based skill check during a skill challenge. Effect: Reroll the skill check with a +2 power bonus and use either result.

RIBBON OF LIMITLESS QUESTIONS

Legend says the first ribbon of limitless questions was inscribed on cloth woven by Corellon, the ink mixed from golden sunlight and mithral dust. Even if this tale is true, most such ribbons are considerably more modest.

The questions that appear on a ribbon are useful in many ways. Some present questions the ribbon's user can ask of someone else. Other questions are directed at the ribbon's holder, and prompt him or her to think about a situation and come up with new solutions.

A Temple's Gift: Few ribbons of limitless questions are found in the hands of normal people. The majority of these magic items are held by high priests in various temples, especially those of Ioun and Vecna. One way to gain access to a ribbon is to convince the priests of such a deity that it will be used against their enemies.

Seed of War — Level 15

Wondrous Item 25,000 gp

Power (Daily ✦ Conjuration): Standard Action. You conjure a Medium metal soldier, equipped with sword and shield, by tossing this item into an unoccupied square within 5 squares of you. The soldier occupies its square and can be attacked. It shares your defenses with a +2 bonus to AC and Reflex. It has hit points equal to your healing surge value. When it takes damage, you can spend a healing surge as a free action to negate that damage.

The soldier is treated as one of your allies, can flank enemies, and deals 10 damage to an enemy adjacent to it that is hit by an ally's attack. As a move action, you can cause the soldier to shift 1 square or move 4 squares. When reduced to 0 hit points, or at the end of the encounter, the soldier disappears, and the seed of war reappears in its square.

Vagabond's Die — Level 8

This die is well used—the images on its faces are almost worn away.

Wondrous Item 3,400 gp

Power (Daily ✦ Varies): Minor Action. You target a creature of your choice within 10 squares and roll a d6.

1: Drunkard's Mug. The target takes a -2 penalty to attack rolls until the end of its next turn.
2: Gambler's Dice. Roll a d20. If the result is even, the target takes damage equal to the result. If the result is odd, the target regains hit points equal to the result.
3: Jester's Chair. The target falls prone.
4-5: Soldier's Fist. The first attack that hits the target before the end of your next turn deals 2d6 extra damage.
6: Storm's Fury. The target and all creatures adjacent to it take 1d10 lightning damage.

Versatile Spellbook — Level 11

The pages of this spellbook are magically treated, allowing you to quickly draw on their arcane power.

Wondrous Item 9,000 gp

Property: Wizards can use this item as a spellbook.

Power (At-Will): Free Action. Trigger: You finish a short rest. Effect: Replace one wizard utility power you prepared with a wizard utility power of the same level or lower from your spellbook that you didn't prepare. If it's an encounter power, you must replace it with another encounter power, and if it's a daily power, you must replace it with another daily power.

Map of Unseen Lands

When a map of unseen lands is activated, it plots out the nearby area, with excellent accuracy but poor detail. Followers of Avandra, deity of travel and adventure, claim that maps of unseen lands call upon her knowledge. Others say the maps flow from the memories of people (living and dead) who have visited the area, pulling on psychic ties that still linger.

Wealthy connoisseurs who understand magic items seek out different maps of unseen lands, since each draws maps in a unique artistic style. Some items use jagged lines, others produce thin strokes; in a few, the maps bleed out into the vellum like ink washes.

The Halflings' Reward: Tribes of river-wandering halflings carry maps of unseen lands as they explore new areas. Despite the maps, the small ones wind up in dangerous places quite often. In fact, a brother and sister recently went missing near some old ruins. Whoever helps them out might be given a map of unseen lands as a reward, or they might collect one from one of the halflings' corpses, if the aid comes too late.

Beg, Borrow, or Steal: The merchant Phineas Ollune is proud of his collection of rare items, which includes a map of unseen lands. Unfortunately for those who covet it, he refuses to sell it. Phineas lives in a town full of superstitious folk, and rumors abound that he is a werewolf. Whether the rumor is true or not, this information might be used to persuade him to give up the map.

Whistle of Warning — Level 8

This small, unremarkable-looking silver whistle gives off a shrill noise when sounded.

Wondrous Item 3,400 gp

Power (Encounter): Minor Action. Each ally within 10 squares of you who can hear the whistle can shift 1 square and draw a weapon or retrieve an implement as a free action.

Woundstitch Powder — Level 1

This worn leather pouch contains a quantity of life-saving yellow powder.

Wondrous Item 360 gp

Power (At-Will): Standard Action. You sprinkle this dust on an adjacent dying creature. That creature stops making death saving throws until it takes damage, and any untyped ongoing damage on the creature ends.

Wondrous Lair Items

Lair items are a class of wondrous item that adventurers can add to their base of operations (or "lair"). Unlike most magic items, lair items aren't portable; they must be left behind when a hero goes exploring. They provide comforts when the party returns home after a difficult adventure, and a home-field advantage against enemies who would dare assault them in their sanctum.

Alchemist's Workshop — Level 8

This set of tools, worktable, vials, beakers, distillery, and other alchemical apparatuses is enchanted to aid in the creation of powerful alchemical items.

Wondrous Item 3,400 gp
Property: When you use this workshop to create alchemical items, you can create items of a level equal to or less than your level + 2.

All-Seeing Eye — Level 22

This multifaceted diamond is usually placed in the eye socket of a statue or an idol, or atop a tripod that overlooks a room. It sees all and reports back to its master what it learns.

Wondrous Item 325,000 gp
Property: This eye can see invisible creatures and objects within 20 squares of it. When a creature enters the eye's line of sight, the eye telepathically warns its owner of the creature's presence and provides a description. It can communicate with its owner across planar boundaries.

Arcane Laboratory — Level 23

Spirits of past arcane masters are bound to this well-equipped laboratory. Their aid allows you to refocus your magic for other purposes.

Wondrous Item 425,000 gp
Property: When you spend 24 hours studying in this laboratory, you can replace one arcane power as if you had gained a level and retrained. After you use this property, you can't use it again until you gain a level.

Austere Dojo — Level 23

This dojo is complete with punching bags, a weapon rack, fencing equipment, and training automatons impressed with the personalities of history's greatest masters. Working with them allows you to refocus your fighting style.

Wondrous Item 425,000 gp
Property: When you spend 24 hours in training at the dojo, you can replace one martial power as if you had gained a level and retrained. After you use this property, you can't use it again until you gain a level.

Vagabond's Die

This stone die with a symbol on each of its faces is carried by well-traveled tricksters who court Lady Luck. Gamblers use a vagabond's die as both a randomizer and a item to wager in games of chance, so a die could pass from person to person repeatedly. Exceptionally lucky gamblers (or exceptional cheats) amass a sizable collection of these dice.

Some people who carry a vagabond's die consider it a tool of fate and use it to make decisions on what course of action to take. Each face's image has a theme.

Drunkard's Mug: The image of a frothing tankard represents leisure and friendship. You should take some time to relax, and visit a tavern if you can find one.

Gambler's Dice: This face implies risk and fate, and suggests that you should take a risky course of action.

Jester's Chair: Buffoonery and foolishness are symbolized by this image. Don't take things too seriously right now.

Soldier's Fist: Strength of arms can solve a current problem. Two faces hold this symbol—if you make decisions using this die, be prepared for a lot of fights.

Storm's Fury: The sublime power of nature is represented by this face. Spend some time outdoors, and explore.

The Arcane Cheat: Audren, a gambling wizard, is rumored to have never lost a game of chance and has acquired at least a dozen vagabond's dice. Of course, rumors abound that he cheats. Whoever discovers his secret might be able to defeat him and claim a vagabond's die. The rumors don't indicate whether or not he's a sore loser. . . .

Bed of Rapid Rest — Level 4

This comfortable bed speeds your rest but is too large to cart around in the dungeon.

Wondrous Item 840 gp
Property: When you take an extended rest in this bed, you can spend 4 hours (instead of the usual 6) to gain the benefit of that rest.

Brilliant Scrying Basin — Level 12

The brilliantly clear water of this large bronze basin greatly aids scrying rituals.

Wondrous Item 13,000 gp
Property: When you use this basin as a focus for a scrying ritual, the duration of your scrying sensor increases by 2 rounds.

Cask of Liquid Gold — Level 3

This cask contains a never-ending supply of dwarven ale.

Wondrous Item 680 gp
Property: At the start of each day, the cask fills to its full volume with dwarven ale. Any ale taken from the cask evaporates if it has not been consumed when the cask refills.

Chandelier of Revelation — Level 24

This chandelier reveals that which is hidden in the room.

Wondrous Item 525,000 gp

Property: You can command this chandelier to shed bright light either 10, 20, or 40 squares in all directions as a free action. Within that area, creatures can't benefit from concealment or total concealment.

Deceptive Scrying Basin — Level 16

This etched silver basin makes it more difficult for creatures you observe to detect your prying gaze.

Wondrous Item 45,000 gp

Property: When you use this basin as a focus for a scrying ritual, creatures take a -5 penalty to checks to notice your scrying sensor.

Dimensional Anchor — Level 16

This statue appears in many guises, but each binds nearby creatures to their locations in the world.

Wondrous Item 45,000 gp

Property: Any creature within 10 squares of this statue can't teleport.

Diplomat's Table — Level 12

This majestic darkwood table enhances your position in negotiations.

Wondrous Item 13,000 gp

Property: You and your allies gain a +3 item bonus to Bluff, Diplomacy, and Intimidate checks during skill challenges while sitting at this table.

WHISTLE OF WARNING

These whistles have been used by bodyguards and watch soldiers for generations, so it comes as a surprise to many citizens that they were first created for use by thieves. When a particularly brutal conflict between two halfling crime families spun out of control, each side invested in magic to tip things to their advantage. One clever member conceived the whistle of warning to protect the family from ambushes.

The feud continued to escalate until the two crime syndicates discovered that the entire conflict was being prolonged by the artificers who were providing each side with magic items. The enemies reached a truce and shortly thereafter assumed joint control over the magic item market in town.

Good Doggie: The local lizardfolk have been getting more aggressive lately, and one of their leaders has been using a distinctive-sounding whistle to direct his "hounds." Perhaps it's a whistle of warning.

Watching the Watch: The city watch might be corrupt to some degree, but its members try to do their job, at least until they come across something they can't handle. Well, "something" has been eating people and leaving bits near the south canal. The watch doesn't have the personnel to deal with it or the cash to pay heroes. But it can arrange for some supplies, including a whistle of warning, to go off the books if the problem stops.

Door of Alarm — Level 2

This seemingly innocuous door issues a shrill alarm when an unknown creature walks through it.

Wondrous Item 520 gp

Property: You can spend 1 minute to attune any number of individuals to this door. When a creature other than an attuned individual walks through the door, a shrill alarm sounds and doesn't stop for 1 hour, until that creature leaves through the door, or you command the door to be silent.

Door Warden — Level 12

The ornamental face on this door interrogates and introduces your visitors.

Wondrous Item 13,000 gp

Property: Cast in the shape of a face, this door ornament is aware of its surroundings and able to speak. When you install a door warden on a portal, the door gains resist 10 to all damage and 40 additional hit points, and can be opened or closed at will by the warden as a minor action. The door warden judges when to open the door or keep it sealed based on your instructions and can communicate with you telepathically if you're on the same plane.

Feast Table — Level 9

This magnificent round oak table seats twelve and provides a magnificent banquet for all present.

Wondrous Item 4,200 gp

Power (At-Will): Standard Action. A delicious feast for twelve people appears on the table.

Power (At-Will): Standard Action. All remnants of the feast vanish, and the table sparkles with cleanliness.

Cask of liquid gold and vagabond's dice

KIERAN YANNER (2)

Gorgonblood Mortar Level 22

Integrating this special mortar into your wall grants it a metaphysical denseness.

Wondrous Item 325,000 gp

Property: You can use this mortar in the construction of up to 10 contiguous squares of a wall. Creatures that have phasing can't pass through walls so constructed.

Holy Shrine Level 23

Minor angels attend this shrine, allowing you to refocus your divine power for other purposes.

Wondrous Item 425,000 gp

Property: When you spend 24 hours in prayer at the shrine, you can replace one divine power as if you had gained a level and retrained. After you use this property, you can't use it again until you gain a level.

Loadstone Statue Level 14

This statue usually takes the form of a dwarf paladin crouched in a defensive stance.

Wondrous Item 21,000 gp

Property: Any creature within 5 squares of this statue can't shift.

Property: Any marked creature within 5 squares of this statue takes a -3 penalty (instead of the normal -2 penalty) to attack rolls when making an attack that doesn't include the creature that marked it.

Magic Drawbridge Level 13

This iron-banded drawbridge resizes to fit the portal it's placed in, then raises or lowers with a single word.

Wondrous Item 17,000 gp

Property: You can command this drawbridge to raise or lower as a free action. You must be able to see the drawbridge to activate it, and it neither rises if any creature is on it nor lowers if any creature is under it.

Magic Weapon Rack Level 25

This heavy oak weapon rack recharges weapons and implements stored on it.

Wondrous Item 625,000 gp

Power (Daily): Use this power during a short rest. The daily power of a single weapon or implement stored on the rack is recharged.

Mirror of Deception Level 18

When you stand before this wrought-iron framed mirror, you can change your looks to reflect your every whim.

Wondrous Item 85,000 gp

Power (At-Will ✦ Illusion): Standard Action. You gain the appearance of a member of any humanoid race of the same size category as you. Your clothing and equipment alter appearance as you desire. The illusion doesn't alter sound or texture, so a creature listening to you or touching you might detect the illusion. The illusion lasts until you leave the lair where the mirror resides, or until you end the effect as a free action.

Door warden

Ritualist's Lectern Level 12

This heavy teak lectern is engraved with runes and patterns of arcane power.

Wondrous Item 13,000 gp

Property: When you use this lectern to master a ritual, reduce the time necessary to 4 hours, and you can master rituals of a level equal to or less than your level + 2.

Power (At-Will): Standard Action. Use this power before performing a ritual that you have mastered. Performing the ritual takes half the normal time. This power has no effect on the time it takes to perform a ritual from a scroll.

Sacred Glade Level 23

This clearing surrounds a sacred tree. When you meditate by the tree, you can refocus your primal powers.

Wondrous Item 425,000 gp

Property: When you spend 24 hours in contemplation in the glade, you can replace one primal power as if you had gained a level and retrained. After you use this property, you can't use it again until you gain a level.

Shiftstone Level 8

Building these stones into your home removes handholds from would-be intruders.

Wondrous Item 3,400 gp

Property: The DC of Athletics checks to climb a building incorporating shiftstone increases by 10. To gain this benefit, a house requires one batch of shiftstone during construction, a mansion requires five batches, and a castle or larger structure requires twenty-five batches.

Holy shrine

Shining Sundial — Level 10

This gem-studded silver sundial reflects light brilliantly, amplifying radiant effects.

Wondrous Item 5,000 gp

Property: This sundial must be placed in a location where it receives natural light while the sun is up. When you use a radiant attack power, until the end of your next turn, creatures within 10 squares of the sundial gain a +1 bonus to attack rolls and a +3 bonus to damage rolls.

Silence-Warded Room — Level 4

This lush chamber offers privacy for your conversations.

Wondrous Item 840 gp

Property: When you speak a command word as a free action, creatures outside the room attempting to listen to sounds originating in the room take a -10 penalty to Perception checks until you end the effect with another free action. Creatures within the room can hear sounds originating outside the room as normal.

Spying Mirrors (pair) — Level 18

You look into one mirror and see out of its twin.

Wondrous Item 85,000 gp

Power (At-Will): Standard Action. When each of these mirrors is affixed to a solid structure and you're adjacent to one of the mirrors, you can see and hear through the other mirror as if you were in its square until the start of your next turn. If you choose, creatures adjacent to the other mirror can also see and hear through yours.

Special: Spying mirrors are generally created as a matched pair, each mirror attuned to the other. One or more other mirrors can be attuned to both mirrors of a pair, allowing you to use this item's at-will power to look out through any one of the mirrors of the set (add 42,500 gp to the price for each additional mirror attuned). A single mirror can belong to only one set of spying mirrors.

Sun Globe — Level 1

After being installed in a socket on the wall or ceiling, these fist-sized crystal globes shed light when commanded.

Wondrous Item 360 gp

Property: You can command this item to shed bright or dim light either 5 or 10 squares in all directions as a free action (or to shed no light).

HOWARD LYON

Teleportation Disk — Level 14

Usually set in the floor, this large, ornately inscribed teleportation circle moves you quickly around your domicile.

Wondrous Item 21,000 gp

Power (At-Will ✦ Teleportation): Move Action. When you speak a command word while standing on the disk, you teleport to any location in the same residence or structure as a move action.

Throne of Dominion — Level 12

This throne is carved with ornate filigree and reliefs showing a king ruling over subjects that span the chair's entire surface.

Wondrous Item 13,000 gp

Property: While you sit on the throne, when a creature you can see attempts to deceive, disobey, or betray you, it is stunned (save ends). All creatures you can see take a -3 penalty to attack rolls that target your Will.

Power (Daily ✦ Charm): Standard Action. Make an attack: Ranged sight; Charisma + 5 vs. Will; on a hit, the target is dominated until the end of your next turn.

Throne of Grandeur — Level 18

This magnificent carved stone throne is decorated with symbols and images of nobility and heroism.

Wondrous Item 85,000 gp

Property: While you sit on the throne, you gain a +4 item bonus to Diplomacy checks, Insight checks, and Intimidate checks.

Vigilant Gargoyle — Level 17

This ghastly stone gargoyle looks like a typical church decoration, but it's much more than that.

Wondrous Item 65,000 gp

Power (At-Will): Minor Action. You can perform this action from anywhere on the same plane as the structure in which this gargoyle is installed. Until the end of your next turn, you see through the eyes of the vigilant gargoyle as though you were in its square. While under the effect of this power, you're considered blinded in your current location.

THRONE OF DOMINION

For ages, monarchs and despots have used thrones of dominion to sway the thoughts and opinions of their subjects. Stories of the first throne's creation are inconsistent—it's a defining characteristic of the item that it inspires loyalty in followers, who refuse to believe that any other ruler but their own could have produced such a marvel. Prominent in places where rulers have or had few qualms about maintaining control using magic, thrones of dominion were an integral part of the tiefling empire of Bael Turath, and they can be found today in many drow cities and githyanki citadels.

Depose the Tyrant: Anyone who has a number of loyal followers in sway might have a throne of dominion. It's said that Ravel the Ruthless sits on an expensive throne in his hold, and should he be dethroned, none would be saddened.

Watchful Eye — Level 12

Taking the form of some lesser gem in the eye socket of an idol, or just stuck in the middle of a wall, this spy reports all that it sees back to its master.

Wondrous Item 13,000 gp

Property: When a creature enters this eye's line of sight, the eye telepathically warns you of the creature's presence and provides a description, as long as you are on the same plane as the eye.

Window of Deception — Level 3

A glance through this fine glass window reveals whatever you desire.

Wondrous Item 680 gp

Power (At-Will ✦ Illusion): Standard Action. You create an illusion seen by any creature looking through the window. The illusion is static and remains until the window is broken or opened, or until you or another creature changes the illusion or ends it with another standard action. When no illusion is presented, creatures see through the window normally. The window can maintain a separate illusion in each direction, and a character using the window can change either or both at once.

Window of Escape — Level 2

When you need to get out of a room in a hurry, this unremarkable window is your best escape.

Wondrous Item 520 gp

Property: When you jump or fall out of this window, you take no damage when you hit the ground, regardless of the distance.

Tattoos

Whether you call them tats, ink, or body art, magic tattoos are far more than simple aesthetics.

As a mark of group identity, tattoos help distinguish and empower sects, tribes, guilds, and philosophies. As a personal art form, tattoos can be as aggressive, flamboyant, or delicate as you desire. Given how much a tattoo can represent to the person wearing it, it's no surprise that various cultures have learned to infuse those tattoos with magic.

Choosing a magic tattoo entails more than picking out an enchanted tool that is easy to hide and difficult to remove. It changes something about your nature in a subtle way. Magic tattoo effects interact with a character's intrinsic properties, such as healing surges or action points.

One's mortal form can contain only a small amount of foreign magic, however, so a character can have only one magic tattoo at a time.

Obtaining a Tattoo

Magic tattoos are created in a fashion similar to other body art—special inks, enchanted needles, or both are used in the performance of an Enchant Magic Item ritual. A ritual performer can imbue a pattern being tattooed in his or her skin by another creature as well.

Although some cultures consider the act of creating the art with a needle to be central to activating the magic of a tattoo, other means to acquire ink exist. Eladrin are known for their habit of altering the skin through magic rather by using needles and ink. Other creatures avoid the needle by painting a tattoo on with a delicate brush, then magically fusing it with the skin.

Tattoo stones can be discovered in treasure hoards and lost cities. Each displays a pattern or image on a flat surface. To transfer the tattoo, a character presses that surface against his or her skin and activates it as part of an extended rest. The tattoo appears on the character's skin where it was applied, and the tattoo stone loses its magic.

Characters can also acquire magic tattoos through agencies other than their own. A captive hero can wake up bearing a magic tattoo; another character might be forced to accept one through extortion. Such gifts are still magical and beneficial but almost always serve another purpose as well.

Magic tattoos can be removed only through the use of the Disenchant Magic Item ritual (Player's Handbook, page 304), which requires the bearer of the tattoo to be willing or helpless for the duration of the ritual. At the ritual performer's discretion, the ritual can dissolve the magic and leave the tattoo, or it can remove the art completely.

Tattoos of Blood

Tattoos of blood react when you take severe wounds. They are worn over important channels of life energy, such as the jugular, wrist, heart, or the body's various meridians.

Backlash Tattoo — Level 9

Boars, sharks, and other creatures that enter a frenzy when wounded are used for this tattoo.

Wondrous Item 4,200 gp
Property: The first time you're bloodied during an encounter, you can make a basic attack as an immediate reaction.

Backlash tattoo

Escape Tattoo — Level 3

Broken chains and skeleton keys are popular images for this tattoo.

Wondrous Item 680 gp
Property: When a nonminion enemy scores a critical hit against you and deals damage, you can teleport 3 squares as a free action.

Reinforcement Tattoo — Level 9

Wondrous Item 4,200 gp
Property: When a nonminion enemy scores a critical hit against you and deals damage, you can teleport each ally you can see to a space within 3 squares of you as a free action.

Resurgence Tattoo — Level 27

Creatures that return from defeat, such as the phoenix, are popular images for this tattoo.

Wondrous Item 1,625,000 gp
Property: When a nonminion enemy scores a critical hit against you and deals damage, you regain the use of an encounter attack power that you have already used during this encounter.

Strikeback Tattoo — Level 9

A viper is commonly part of this tattoo.

Wondrous Item 4,200 gp
Property: When a nonminion enemy scores a critical hit against you and deals damage, you gain a +2 bonus to attack rolls against that enemy until the end of the encounter.

Tattoo of Arcane Blood — Level 4+

Rods, orbs, the eye of Ioun, and other images symbolic of magic are used for this tattoo.

Lvl 4 840 gp Lvl 24 525,000 gp
Lvl 14 21,000 gp
Wondrous Item
Property: The first time you're bloodied during an encounter, you deal 3 force damage to the enemy that bloodied you.
Level 14: 6 force damage.
Level 24: 14 force damage.

Tattoo of the Escape Artist — Level 8

Broken handcuffs and torn straitjackets are popular for this tattoo.

Wondrous Item 3,400 gp
Property: When a nonminion enemy scores a critical hit against you and deals damage, you gain the ability to teleport 1 square as a minor action until the end of the encounter.

ED COX

Tattoo of the Wolverine — Level 7+

This tattoo is invariably a wolverine, snarling and bloody.

Lvl 17 65,000 gp

Wondrous Item

Property: The first time you're bloodied during an encounter, you gain a +1 bonus to your next attack roll and a +2 bonus to your next damage roll before the end of the encounter.

Level 17: +4 bonus to your next damage roll.
Level 27: +6 bonus to your next damage roll.

Tattoo of Vengeance — Level 5+

This tattoo shows wicked-looking blades and bolts of lightning, representing the comeuppance you will extract.

Lvl 15 25,000 gp

Wondrous Item

Property: When a nonminion enemy scores a critical hit against you and deals damage, you gain a +3 bonus to damage rolls against that enemy until the end of the encounter.

Level 15: +6 bonus to damage rolls.
Level 25: +9 bonus to damage rolls.

Tattoos of Bond

Bonding tattoos bring a tight-knit group even closer. They're a way of declaring permanent allegiance above all else and are worn in visible locations, such as the neck, face, or hands. Tattoos of bond borrow mechanics and appearances from other sorts of tattoos, but more than one character must have the same tattoo for any mark to work. Each character's tattoo bears the same image or follows a clear symbolic theme.

Quick-Step Tattoo — Level 7

Cheetahs, panthers, and other fast predators serve well for these tattoos.

Wondrous Item 2,600 gp

Property: When you spend an action point to take an extra action, each ally you can see who also has a quick-step tattoo can shift 1 square as a free action.

Tattoo of Bonded Defense — Level 6

Wondrous Item 1,800 gp

Property: The first time you're bloodied during an encounter, each ally you can see who also has a tattoo of bonded defense can shift 1 square closer to you as an immediate reaction.

Tattoo of Bonded Escape — Level 6

Wondrous Item 1,800 gp

Property: The first time you're bloodied during an encounter, each ally you can see who also has a tattoo of bonded escape can shift 1 square farther from you as an immediate reaction.

Tattoo of Shared Consequence — Level 10

These tattoos usually display a hero taking a wound for another.

Wondrous Item 5,000 gp

Property: When a nonminion enemy scores a critical hit against you and deals damage, one ally who also has a tattoo of shared consequence and is in the attack's range can choose to reduce the damage you take from that attack by any amount and take that amount of damage.

Tattoo of Shared Vengeance — Level 10

Swords, axes, implements, or other tools of war crossed in brotherhood serve well for these tattoos.

Wondrous Item 5,000 gp

Property: When a nonminion enemy scores a critical hit against you and deals damage, each ally you can see who also has a tattoo of shared vengeance can make a basic attack against that enemy as a free action.

Tattoos of shared vengeance

WAYNE ENGLAND

Tattoo of the Shared Heart — Level 14+

These marks resemble something dear, something to fight on for.

Lvl 14 21,000 gp — Lvl 24 525,000 gp

Wondrous Item

Property: When you use your second wind, each ally you can see who also has a tattoo of the shared heart regains 5 hit points.

Level 24: 10 hit points.

Teamstrike Tattoo — Level 11

These tattoos frequently show wolves acting as a pack.

Wondrous Item 9,000 gp

Property: When you spend an action point to make an attack, each ally you can see who also has a teamstrike tattoo gains a +2 bonus to attack rolls against the first target of your attack until the end of your next turn.

Tattoos of Heart

Tattoos of heart deal with health and healing surges. They're generally worn over the heart or the waist chakra, an area that most cultures consider the seat of the body's energy.

Eager Hero's Tattoo — Level 10+

Scenes showing one warrior against many or a lone victorious hero are popular for this tattoo.

Lvl 10 5,000 gp — Lvl 30 3,125,000 gp
Lvl 20 125,000 gp

Wondrous Item

Property: When you take a short rest, you gain temporary hit points equal to 5 + the number of healing surges you have spent since your last extended rest.

Level 20: 10 + twice the number of healing surges you have spent since your last extended rest.

Level 30: 15 + three times the number of healing surges you have spent since your last extended rest.

Ironheart Tattoo — Level 8+

Ironheart tattoos represent in symbol or image how the bearer can't be conquered.

Lvl 8 3,400 gp — Lvl 28 2,125,000 gp
Lvl 18 85,000 gp

Wondrous Item

Property: When you spend a healing surge, you gain resistance against the next damage dealt to you equal to the number of healing surges you have spent since your last extended rest.

Level 18: Twice the number of healing surges you have spent since your last extended rest.

Level 28: Three times the number of healing surges you have spent since your last extended rest.

Long-Battle Tattoo — Level 7

This tattoo is often depicted as a shield surrounded by weapons.

Wondrous Item 2,600 gp

Property: When you hit with a daily attack power, you gain a bonus to the damage roll equal to the number of healing surges you have spent since your last extended rest.

Curse eye tattoo

HOWARD LYON

Strongheart Tattoo — Level 8+

This image shows why the hero fights on.

Lvl 18 85,000 gp

Wondrous Item

Property: When you spend a healing surge, you regain extra hit points equal to the number of healing surges you have spent since your last extended rest.

Level 18: Twice the number of healing surges you have spent since your last extended rest.

Level 28: Three times the number of healing surges you have spent since your last extended rest.

Tattoo of the Unlucky — Level 7

Broken coins, three-leaf clovers, mirror shards, or all three do nicely for this tattoo.

Wondrous Item 2,600 gp

Property: When you miss with a daily attack power that has an effect on a miss, that effect deals extra damage equal to the number of healing surges you have spent since your last extended rest.

Tattoos of Spirit

Tattoos of spirit grant manifest heroism in moments when a character strives for greatness, adding effect to action points. They are worn in many places and have great variety.

Breakchain Tattoo — Level 13+

One broken link is enough for the symbolism, but many use a full chain.

Lvl 13 17,000 gp — Lvl 23 425,000 gp
Wondrous Item
Property: When you spend an action point to take an extra action, you ignore immobilizing, restraining, and slowing effects on you until the end of your turn.
Level 23: You can also end one effect on you that is immobilizing, restraining, or slowing you.

Curse Eye Tattoo — Level 8

This tattoo is a small eye, often in the center of the forehead, which blinks when used.

Wondrous Item 3,400 gp
Property: When you spend an action point to take an extra action, one enemy within 10 squares of you that you can see takes a -2 penalty to saving throws (save ends).

Demonskin Tattoo — Level 3+

Not all societies understand that tattooing a portion of demonskin onto your body isn't an evil act.

Lvl 3 680 gp — Lvl 23 425,000 gp
Lvl 13 17,000 gp
Wondrous Item
Property: When you spend an action point to take an extra action, choose acid, cold, fire, lightning, or thunder. You gain resist 5 to the chosen damage type until the end of the encounter.
Level 13: Resist 10.
Level 23: Resist 15.

Distracting Tattoo — Level 6

Any small, bright image in a highly visible place is sufficient.

Wondrous Item 1,800 gp
Property: When you spend an action point to take an extra action, you end any mark affecting you.

Fireheart Tattoo — Level 4+

As you call upon its power, flames flare and twist around the heart at the center of this tattoo.

Lvl 4 840 gp — Lvl 24 525,000 gp
Lvl 14 21,000 gp
Wondrous Item
Property: When you spend an action point to take an extra action, you gain 5 temporary hit points.
Level 14: 10 temporary hit points.
Level 24: 15 temporary hit points.

Fleet Hero Tattoo — Level 8+

This mark often takes the form of wings tattooed on the ankles.

Lvl 18 85,000 gp
Wondrous Item
Property: When you spend an action point to take an extra action, you gain a +1 bonus to speed until the end of your next turn.
Level 18: +2 bonus to speed.
Level 28: +3 bonus to speed.

Ghostwalk Tattoo — Level 26

Artists paint this tattoo using vague or amorphous designs and avoiding color.

Wondrous Item 1,125,000 gp
Property: When you spend an action point to take an extra action, until the end of your turn you gain phasing and become insubstantial.

Greatwing Tattoo — Level 18+

A wing, a feather, or any winged creature—dragons or couatls are popular—will do for this tattoo.

Lvl 18 85,000 gp — Lvl 28 2,125,000 gp
Wondrous Item
Property: When you spend an action point to take an extra action, you also gain a fly speed equal to your speed until the end of your turn.
Level 28: You gain a fly speed equal to your speed + 6.

CONSUMABLES

An experienced adventurer keeps an unpredictable assortment of magic nearby. It helps counter the unpredictable trouble that predictably befalls him.

Use it, and it's gone. That's the nature of a consumable item, and for that reason some put off using such an item because it could be useful in the future. But because there might be no tomorrow— sometimes literally—the bold adventurer knows that a dead hero drinks no potions and quaffs the draught when he or she has the chance.

This section is divided into three groups. First are potions, elixirs, and other sundry one-shot items. Second are reagents that can be used to improve specific types of powers. Third are immurements, which are powerful one-shot items that reshape the landscape when used.

Reagents

Clay of Creation — Level 7+

Your summoned creatures are tougher when you use this material.

Lvl 7 100 gp — Lvl 27 65,000 gp
Lvl 17 2,600 gp
Reagent
Power (Consumable): Free Action. You expend this reagent when you use a summoning power of up to 5th level. The summoned creature gains 5 temporary hit points, and the first time it misses with an attack, you reroll that attack roll but must use the second result.
Level 17: Power of up to 15th level, 10 temporary hit points.
Level 27: Power of up to 25th level, 15 temporary hit points.

Flash Flower — Level 11+

This flower, which is sometimes found near lightning-struck ground, contains electrical magic.

Lvl 11 350 gp Lvl 21 9,000 gp
Reagent

Power (Consumable): Free Action. You expend this reagent when you hit with a lightning power of up to 7th level. You choose one target hit by the attack. It's also blinded until the end of your next turn. This reagent has no effect if the power already blinds the target.
Level 21: Power of up to 17th level.

Rust Bark — Level 11+

When ground into a fine dust, this reddish tree bark expands the area of your powers.

Lvl 11 350 gp Lvl 21 9,000 gp
Reagent

Power (Consumable): Free Action. You expend this reagent when you use an area burst power of up to 5th level that has a damage keyword. The size of the burst increases by 1.
Level 21: Power of up to 15th level.

Silver Sand — Level 8+

Your healing powers become more effective after you coat your hands with this fine sand.

Lvl 8 125 gp Lvl 28 85,000 gp
Lvl 18 3,400 gp
Reagent

Power (Consumable ✦ Healing): Free Action. You expend this reagent when you use a healing power of up to 6th level. The target of the power regains 5 additional hit points.
Level 18: Power of up to 16th level, 10 additional hit points.
Level 28: Power of up to 26th level, 15 additional hit points.

Silver sand

Vortex Stone — Level 8+

This stone from the Shadowfell imbues your conjurations with a magical field that saps your foes' strength.

Lvl 8 125 gp Lvl 28 85,000 gp
Lvl 18 3,400 gp
Reagent

Power (Consumable): Free Action. You expend this reagent when you use a conjuration power of up to 6th level. While the conjuration is in effect, enemies adjacent to it take a –2 penalty to attack rolls.
Level 18: Power of up to 16th level.
Level 28: Power of up to 26th level.

Immurements

An immurement is a rare form of magical prison that contains a place that has been sealed away from the rest of the world. The enchantments placed on immurements are fragile; when an immurement's power is expended in a blast, it releases the terrain and effects contained within it into the blast area for a short time.

Each immurement description provides the features of the terrain and effects contained within it. Refer to the illustration of each immurement for placement of specific terrain.

DMs should be careful with allowing immurements into a game, because they can render lovingly crafted set pieces less memorable. For a group using one, it's useful to have the new terrain prepared in advance and ready for use, whether it's printed out, drawn on a battle mat, or laid out in D&D™ Dungeon Tiles.

Immurement of Baleful Gossamer

Skasshaa was a demonweb terror spider of great age, might, and arrogance. She ruled her domain with eager ruthlessness, allowing no creature to enter her lair and live.

When she returned from a week-long hunt one morning, she discovered a mortal of noble mien waiting for her amid her trophies. He declared that his people had hunted her for generations, and now her punishment was at hand. The mortal was prepared, and their battle was short. He fashioned the clear sphere of one of her many eyes into an immurement that contained her domain, sealing away the heart of the region's evil so that the land could recover.

Skasshaa Returns: Less one eye and a century's worth of pride, Skasshaa hunts again for what was taken from her body and from her domain. She seeks those who have an immurement of baleful gossamer and is tearing through mortal civilization in her search.

Protect the Immurement: The mortal who created the immurement concealed it within a temple in an altar to Sehanine. Stories say that the immurement waits for a new hero to release it from the altar when Skasshaa returns to the world. But rumors also hint that the temple is now guarded by blackspawn gloomwebs and an elder black dragon that rules over them.

Immurement of Arcane Suspension Level 24

This chunk of earth feels as light as a feather.

Other Consumable 21,000 gp

Power (Daily): Move Action. You can move 4 squares vertically and then 1 square horizontally. At the start of your next turn, you float safely to the ground. This power is lost when you use the immurement's consumable power.

Power (Consumable): Standard Action. You destroy this immurement and change the terrain in a close blast 8 until the end of the encounter. Replace the terrain in the blast with the following terrain and effects.

- ✦ The marked areas tear themselves free of the ground (and any moorings they're attached to) and rise to float 4 squares above the ground. A creature on one of these floating sections has cover against creatures on the ground.
- ✦ There are shallow pits where the ground pulls away. Treat these areas as difficult terrain.
- ✦ At the start of your turn, shift each floating object 1 square in any direction. Creatures on the object move with it.
- ✦ The other terrain in the area doesn't change.

Special: Using this item counts as a use of a magic item daily power.

Immurement of Baleful Gossamer Level 28

Other Consumable 85,000 gp

Power (Consumable): Standard Action. You expend this immurement and change the terrain in a close blast 8 until the end of the encounter. Replace the terrain in the blast with the following terrain and effects.

- ✦ Squares filled with webs are difficult terrain.
- ✦ The tree in the center of the area is difficult terrain that costs 2 extra squares to enter and provides cover.
- ✦ When a creature starts its turn in a web square, you make an attack against that creature: +27 vs. Reflex; on a hit, the target is immobilized until the start of its next turn. On a miss, the target is slowed until the start of its next turn.

Special: Using this item counts as a use of a magic item daily power.

Immurement of baleful gossamer

Immurement of Seething Scoria Level 26

Other Consumable 45,000 gp

Power (Consumable): Standard Action. You expend this immurement and change the terrain in a close blast 4 until the end of the encounter. Replace the terrain in the blast with the following terrain and effects.

- ✦ Squares of lava are difficult terrain.
- ✦ When a creature starts its turn in a lava square, you make an attack against that creature: +30 vs. Reflex; on a hit, the target takes 3d8 fire damage, and ongoing 10 fire damage (save ends).

Special: Using this item counts as a use of a magic item daily power.

Immurement of seething scoria

RPGA PLAY ADVICE

When participating in an RPGA® event, a player who wants to use an immurement has a responsibility to the other players, the DM, and the event organizers to make this complex item operate as efficiently as possible. The responsibility is on the player to have a usable map, either drawn clearly to scale or constructed from Dungeon Tiles, to place on the table when he or she invokes the power of the immurement. Otherwise, play slows as a new map must be constructed and the game threatens to exceed its allotted time. Players can find printable maps for the items described in this section on the D&D™ Insider web site at www.dndinsider.com.

Immurement of the Abandoned Throne Level 24

This marred bronze scepter has had the sigil of the kingdom it once represented scratched off its surface.

Other Consumable 21,000 gp

Power (Consumable): Standard Action. You expend this immurement and change the terrain in a close blast 4 until the end of the encounter. Replace the terrain in the blast with the following terrain and effects.

- ✦ The dais is 1 square higher than the ground. Entering the dais from the ground costs 1 extra square of movement.
- ✦ Any creature that starts its turn within 2 squares of the throne is dazed until the end of its turn.

Special: Using this item counts as a use of a magic item daily power.

Immurement of the blood vine

Immurement of the Blood Vine Level 24

When this branch from the holly tree that always bears new growth is snapped, it spawns what was once the heart of a forest.

Other Consumable 21,000 gp

Power (Consumable): Standard Action. You expend this immurement and change the terrain in a close blast 4 until the end of the encounter. Replace the terrain in the blast with the following terrain and effects.

- ✦ Small tree squares provide cover to creatures in them. The large tree square is a solid obstacle.
- ✦ At the start of your turn, you can have vines on the tree wrap up a creature. Make an attack against one enemy within 2 squares of the tree: +27 vs. Reflex; on a hit, the target is pulled adjacent to the tree, and is restrained and takes ongoing 10 damage (save ends both).

Immurement of the Dragon Boneyard Level 25

Other Consumable 25,000 gp

Power (Consumable): Standard Action. You expend this immurement and change the terrain in a close blast 4 until the end of the encounter. Replace the terrain in the blast with the following terrain and effects.

- ✦ The area has natural illumination providing dim light.
- ✦ The squares filled with bones on the ground level are difficult terrain.
- ✦ The dragon skull platform is 2 squares higher than the ground (Athletics DC 26 to climb).
- ✦ At the start of your turn, make an attack against each enemy on a bone square: +30 vs. AC; on a hit, the target takes 2d10 + 5 damage, and you slide the target 1 square (as bones shift and move it).

Special: Using this item counts as a use of a magic item daily power.

Immurement of the dragon boneyard

IMMUREMENT OF THE DRAGON BONEYARD

Arnod the Loyal returned to his home of Greatfalls one late spring to discover that disaster had befallen the town. A dragon had passed through, slaying the living and destroying the crypt that contained all the town's ancestors.

After overcoming his grief, Arnod succumbed to vengeance. At great risk, he sought out the remains of the dragon's ancestors and bound their bones, piece by piece, within a small crystal sphere. His task complete, he made his desecration known to the dragon and then concealed the immurement.

Acquire Musty Maps: Rumors say that Arnod the Loyal changed the sphere into a pile of maps, each depicting a portion of the realm contained within the sphere, and then scattered the scraps of paper across the world. If true, collecting and reuniting all the maps would reveal an immurement of the dragon boneyard.

Continued Vengeance: The dragon that Arnod sought vengeance against has recovered the sphere containing her ancestors and is pondering the best way to safely retrieve the remains. Arnod's descendants are looking for a band of heroes to retrieve the sphere and dare her displeasure.

Immurement of the mordant hideaway

Immurement of the Mordant Hideaway Level 28

Other Consumable 85,000 gp

Power (Consumable): Standard Action. You expend this immurement and change the terrain in a close blast 4 until the end of the encounter. Replace the terrain in the blast with the following terrain and effects.

- ✦ The upper shelf is 2 squares higher than the lower section of ground (Athletics DC 28 to climb)
- ✦ The pools of acid are difficult terrain, and any creature moving into a pool or starting its turn in one takes 3d6 acid damage.
- ✦ At the start of your turn, roll a d6 for each acid pool. On a 6, make an attack: Close burst 1; +32 vs. Reflex; on a hit, the target takes 3d8 + 5 acid damage, and a -4 penalty to AC and ongoing 10 acid damage (save ends both).

Special: Using this item counts as a use of a magic item daily power.

Immurement of the vengeful river

Immurement of the strident statuary

Immurement of the Strident Statuary Level 28

Other Consumable 85,000 gp

Power (Consumable): Standard Action. You expend this immurement and change the terrain in a close blast 8 until the end of the encounter. Replace the terrain in the blast with the following terrain and effects.

- ✦ The platform is 1 square higher than the ground. Entering a platform square from the ground costs 1 extra square of movement.
- ✦ Healing effects used on you or your allies within the blast heal an additional 4d6 hit points.
- ✦ Your enemies' movement provokes opportunity attacks from the statues. Make an attack: +35 vs. AC; on a hit, the target takes 2d8 + 8 damage, and if the target is moving, it ends its movement.

Special: Using this item counts as a use of a magic item daily power.

Immurement of the Vengeful River Level 26

Other Consumable 45,000 gp

Power (Consumable): Standard Action. You expend this immurement and change the terrain in a close blast 4 until the end of the encounter. Replace the terrain in the blast with the following terrain and effects.

- ✦ The water squares are 2 squares deep. A DC 20 Athletics check is required to swim in this water.
- ✦ At the start of your turn, slide each creature in the water 1 square toward the south end of the area. Then slide each creature adjacent to a whirlpool into a whirlpool square. Then pull each creature in a whirlpool square down 1 square.
- ✦ The bridge is 1 square above the water. It's normal terrain and provides cover against creatures in the water.
- ✦ The water disperses normally after the encounter.

Special: Using this item counts as a use of a magic item daily power.

IMMUREMENT OF THE MORDANT HIDEAWAY

The rocky cave contained in this pitted ball of stone was once the seat of power for the black dragon Akzosial. According to legend, the dragon was away from its lair when a group of heroes stole the heart of the cave, which contained the power to make Akzosial immortal. Though the dragon raged, the immurement was never recovered .

Theft of Akzosial's Power: A famed dragon slayer and her followers seek an immurement of the mordant hideaway, believing they can use it in a ritual to steal Akzosial's might. The dragon who currently holds the immurement approaches the heroes. He asks the group to keep the immurement from falling into the dragonslayer's hands.

Item Sets

Some magic items were made to work together. When all the items belonging to a set are collected and wielded in unison, their power becomes greater than the sum of their parts. Depending on how much of a magic item set has been assembled, its collective items can grant additional qualities, different properties, and new powers to their wielders.

A magic item set contains four or more items that a character or a party can collect. Each set has at least one set benefit that is revealed when a minimum number of the set's items are used together. Some set items also have individual properties or effects that depend on the number of other set items being used.

When a set benefit grants a daily power, using that power doesn't count toward the limit of magic item daily powers a character can use in a day.

To qualify for an item set's benefits, a character must be wielding or wearing one or more items from the set. A stowed item (for example, a magic cloak stuffed in a pack) doesn't count toward a set's benefits (though a sheathed weapon is considered to be worn). Wondrous items are an exception and need only be carried in order for a character to gain an item set's benefits.

Each magic item in a set can stand alone. No item needs to be used with another of its set to function.

This chapter provides item sets in four varieties.

- Heroic Tier Item Sets: A character just starting his or her adventuring career can benefit from the additional power granted by these item sets.
- Paragon Tier Item Sets: As a character becomes an elite representative of a chosen path, one of these item sets can add to his or her reputation.
- Epic Tier Item Sets: The mightiest heroes deserve the most fantastic panoply of items.
- Group Item Sets: These item sets are meant to be used by an entire party at various levels of play.

HEROIC TIER ITEM SETS

These item sets are suitable for PCs at the beginning of their adventuring careers.

Aleheart Companions' Gear

The Aleheart Companions' Gear is a set of items first crafted for a legendary Underdark adventuring group. The items in the set were designed by dwarves for the benefit of their nondwarf allies, so that those allies might be gifted with the innate qualities of the dwarf race.

Lore

History DC 7: The Aleheart Companions were members of an adventuring party that owed its start to three time-honored dwarven traditions: drinking, complaining, and taking a dare. A group of dwarf miners fed up with working for the profit of others grumbled once too often to their human, elf, and dragonborn drinking companions. The nondwarves challenged their friends to strike out and set up their own mine rather than endlessly complaining. The dwarves agreed to the challenge, provided that their friends joined them in their efforts.

History DC 12: Calling themselves the Aleheart Companions, the friends set off on a mission of exploration into the Underdark. However, rather than the mother lode they hoped to find, they ran into Lolth-bound goblins and bugbear raiders striking out from an area of deadly caverns known as the Howling Warrens. Using their dungeoneering knowledge to good effect, the dwarves managed to defeat their foes through cunning and ambush.

When the battle was done, the companions realized that looting their enemies yielded more profit than their honest labor ever had. Thus did this mixed bag of miners and drinkers take their first steps toward becoming legendary adventurers.

History DC 17: With the profits of their new trade, the dwarves of the companions commissioned magic items to help their nondwarf allies survive the Underdark. Though the Aleheart Companions have passed into history, adventuring parties specializing in the exploration of ancient ruins and the underground covet the items that bear the Companions' name.

Collecting all the Aleheart Companions' Gear enhances a dwarf's innate racial abilities, or grants dwarflike abilities to other races. Some stories suggest that a bearer of these items becomes more like a dwarf in manner and appearance, but these are most likely idle rumors.

Arms of War

The Arms of War were once wielded by four generals who led their human kingdoms in battle against a great hobgoblin empire. Each general was known as the master of a different aspect of martial strategy, and the warrior who owns all their treasures gains a measure of their skill.

Lore

History DC 7: In ages past, allied human kingdoms fought a hobgoblin empire in a great war that created legendary heroes on both sides. The fierce clan lords of the hobgoblin armies were opposed by four human generals, each of whom exemplified a different area of combat prowess. Korra was an expert in counterattacks. Teron's forces were unequalled in the defensive tactics of the shield wall. Juhana's troops were legendary for their skill at flanking and positioning. Mandu was the undisputed master of martial weapon training.

Though they came from different lands that had fought each other in the past, all four leaders worked together to present a unified response to the hobgoblin forces.

History DC 12: Through the combined efforts of the four generals, the human armies defeated the hobgoblins, though at great loss. Teron and Juhana fell while holding off the hobgoblin lines single-handedly, granting the forces they led time to regroup behind them. Korra and Mandu survived to be honored by their kingdoms and the soldiers who served them.

Over time, the human kingdoms were consolidated and their armies placed under the leadership of a single general gifted with the arms and armor of the four who had come before him. However, wars of strife and succession eventually shattered the kingdom once more, and the Arms of War were scattered across new lands.

History DC 17: Despite their rank, Korra, Teron, Juhana, and Mandu made it their mission to fight alongside the troops who served them, even when doing so put their own lives in danger. Collecting all the Arms of War enhances the wielder's ability to take advantage of opponents' vulnerabilities and to protect allies.

Blade Dancer's Regalia

The origin of the mysterious combat art known as the blade dance is hotly contested among those who study and perform it. This manner of fighting is known for its grace and control, and practitioners of the blade dance can be found among all races and cultures. Each group of blade dancers can be easily distinguished by the details of their unique style. However, the underlying similarities of the form remain apparent.

Lore

History DC 5: The blade dance is an ancient combat art whose origins are shrouded in mystery. Practiced by a wide variety of cultures and races, this distinctive two-weapon style incorporates flowing dancelike moves into its attacks and defenses. Most blade dancers consider their own style to be original and definitive, marking all others as mere imitators. Blade dancers are quick to fight among themselves to establish their superiority. However, regardless of their chosen school, blade dancers all covet a set of specialized regalia whose origins are as old as the form.

History DC 10: Among dwarves, the blade dance is called Moradin's Drums. It favors steady rhythms and heavy weapons such as hammers and axes. Among the eladrin and other beings of the Feywild, the fighting style is known as Corellon's War Chant and is practiced with longswords. The elves have adapted it to lighter blades, and it's said that the drow have their own version of the blade dance incorporating the cruel weapons of that race.

Other schools have a wider following. The Drunkard's Waltz features knife fighting and is favored by humans and halflings. The Jester's Prance school uses mismatched weapons and was said to have been created in the training halls of the tiefling empire, though it's now practiced by humans, tieflings, and dragonborn in equal measure.

History or Religion DC 15: According to legend, the blade dance was invented as the result of a wager between Kord and Erathis. Erathis created the fighting style to demonstrate to Kord that not all combat need be crude and brutal. Stories tell of a warrior-priest of Erathis who traveled among many of the cultures and races that claim to have originated the blade dance. It's thought that this priest was the first to teach the legendary style.

Gadgeteer's Garb

Characters drawn to the inner workings of traps and alchemy covet this set of items. The items of the Gadgeteer's Garb bestow a wide range of utilitarian magic, combat boons, and power over traps and alchemical devices. All the items of the set share a skillful synthesis of mechanical and magical design.

Artificers and rogues most often seek out and collect the items of this set, though they can benefit any character.

Lore

Arcana DC 7: Created through constant tinkering and experimentation, the items of the Gadgeteer's Garb were developed, then perfected by a number of ingenious inventors. Some parts of the set were first crafted by dwarf artificers, others by human arcane practitioners, and some by fomorians and other fey. Despite their disparate origins, however, each of the items of the set represented a singular advance in magical and mechanical design.

Arcana DC 12: An artificer known as Morton the Gadgeteer is said to have been the first to unify these once-disparate items, seeing the common thread of ingenuity in each and imbuing the set with its unique benefits. With the power of the Gadgeteer's Garb, Morton became a legendary arcanist and trapfinder, and the item set that bears his moniker is his enduring legacy.

Gadgeteer's Garb Items

| Lvl | Name | Price (gp) | Item Slot |

Level 30: +33 vs. Fortitude.

Golden Lion's Battle Regalia

A legendary barbarian chieftain of the great deserts, the Golden Lion of Summer was a warrior renowned for her single-minded ferocity and military cunning. Her cloak, gauntlets, and boots were fashioned from the hide of a desert lion, and her weapons bore the mark of that fearsome beast.

Barbarian characters, particularly thaneborn barbarians, benefit the most from the Golden Lion's Battle Regalia. However, defenders and melee strikers can also make good use of these legendary items.

Lore

History DC 7: The Golden Lion took her name from the gauntlets, cloak, and boots she wore—crafted from the pelt of a lion she slew when she was only a child.

History DC 12: Despite her reputation as a scourge of Nerath, the Golden Lion and her folk came to the aid of the empire in the face of a gnoll invasion. The power of her regalia helped her slay the gnoll war chief, but in that fierce final battle, the Golden Lion fell.

History DC 17: The relics that bear the Golden Lion's name are now scattered across all lands, though the desert cairn marking her grave has long been lost to time. However, it's said that anyone who can find the site is then visited by the spirit of the Golden Lion, who will reveal the location of one or more item from her battle regalia to a worthy successor.

Kamestiri Uniform

The city-state of Nageo was once a major port and trade hub, but its great wealth made it a target for goblin raiders, competing city-states, and pirates. In response, the Nageos created a defensive force to protect the city and its lucrative shipping trade, and also to provide seaborne mercenary forces for traders and neighboring states. These legendary warriors called the Kamestiri are little more than a memory now, but the force's legacy lives on in the magical panoply its members once wore.

This item set is most useful for rangers, but it can be utilized by any character who favors long-range attacks and mobility in combat.

Lore

History DC 8: The elite soldiers of the city-state of Nageo trained with light armor suited to mobility and shipboard combat. The long-range crossbows that were their signature weapon had first been created by a local tribe known as the kamesti. The Kamestiri, as these soldiers called themselves, soon became the dominant fighting force in the region. Their effectiveness in battle on both land and sea soon became legendary, and helped maintain a decades-long peace between Nageo and its powerful neighbors.

History DC 14: At the height of Nageo's power, rumors began to circulate that the Kamestiri captains had been keeping much of the wealth they had liberated from the area's pirates. A new prince, uncertain in his position, grew jealous of the Kamestiri's power. Deciding to take steps to remove them, he sent the bulk of the Kamestiri forces on a doomed voyage of exploration from which few returned. Within the year, however, the prince was assassinated—slain by a single crossbow bolt fired from a great distance. With no clear heir and no defenders, Nageo quickly fell to its neighbors.

No trace of the Kamestiri's rumored riches was ever found. However, even if the tales of ill-gotten gains were unfounded, the group's legitimate earnings were said to have gone unaccounted for in the

Standard Items in Item Sets

Some item sets include magic items found in the Player's Handbook and other supplements. Such items can be found in a campaign in both their default (free) and item set (bound) versions. Items bound to a set exhibit qualities that link it to that set, and a character can learn that a magic item is bound in the same way he or she learns the item's properties or powers.

Magic items created in bound form as part of a magic item set use the normal rules for creating magic items. Set items in their free form (for example, an endless quiver not created as part of a Kamestiri uniform) can be incorporated into an item set. A character can perform the Enchant Magic Item ritual with no component cost to bind such a free magic item into a set. At the DM's discretion, binding an item into a set might require effort or special components: the blood of a descendant of the original set creator, taking the item to a special location, or the like.

An item that is bound into an item set can't later be unbound.

ERIC L. WILLIAMS

chaos after the death of the prince. The ultimate fate of that treasure remains a matter of great interest to scholars and adventurers alike.

History DC 19: The few survivors of the Kamestiri are said to have gone on to found mercenary troops in far-flung lands. These wandering companies are thought to have been the source of the first Kamestiri uniforms to appear in the wider world. Countless modern mercenary companies trace their origins to the Kamestiri, though in many cases, this claim is little more than spurious boasting.

Streetwise DC 19: Rumors in the larger cities of the land speak of lone assassins who specialize in murder at long range, and of the unique crossbows they bear. Some call these killers the last of the Kamestiri, though they're careful to not say so too loudly.

KAMESTIRI UNIFORM ITEMS

| Lvl | Name | Price (gp) | Item Slot |
|---|---|---|---|
| 7+ | Infighting blade | 2,600 | Weapon |
| 7+ | Shipboard armor | 2,600 | Armor |
| 8 | Boarding boots | 3,400 | Feet |
| 8+ | Pavise charm | 3,400 | Neck |
| 9 | Endless quiver | 4,200 | Wondrous item |
| 9+ | Kamesti crossbow | 4,200 | Weapon |

KAMESTIRI UNIFORM BENEFITS

| Pieces | Benefit |
|---|---|
| 2 | The short range of a crossbow you wield increases by a number of squares equal to the number of items you have from this set. The long range of your crossbow increases by twice that amount. |
| 3 | You gain a +1 bonus to damage rolls on melee attacks while you are adjacent to two or more enemies. |
| 5 | When you reduce an enemy to 0 hit points, you can shift 1 square. |

Boarding Boots — Level 8

These hard boots of black leather keep you moving in combat, to deadly effect.

Item Slot: Feet 3,400 gp
Property: You ignore difficult terrain on a boat, ship, or other watercraft.
Power (Daily): Standard Action. You jump a number of squares equal to your speed and use one of your at-will attack powers with a +1 power bonus to the attack roll.

Endless Quiver — Level 9

This elven-styled quiver can create an endless supply of normal arrows or bolts.

Wondrous Item 4,200 gp
Power (At-Will ✦ Conjuration): Free Action. Use this power when you attack with a bow or crossbow. When you reach into the endless quiver, it automatically produces a single arrow or bolt, as appropriate. Ammunition created by the quiver that is not used within 1 round of its creation disappears.

Infighting Blade — Level 7+

The closer your foes press, the more deadly this quick blade becomes.

Lvl 7 +2 2,600 gp
Lvl 12 +3 13,000 gp
Lvl 17 +4 65,000 gp
Lvl 22 +5 325,000 gp
Lvl 27 +6 1,625,000 gp
Weapon: Light blade, axe (one-handed only)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus
Power (Daily): Minor Action. Until the end of your turn, when you attack with this weapon, you gain a bonus to damage rolls equal to the number of enemies adjacent to you when you make the attack. If you're wielding another infighting blade in your off hand, this bonus also applies to damage rolls with that weapon.
Special: If you're wielding two infighting blades, the first use per day of the weapon's daily power doesn't count toward the limit of magic item daily powers you can use in a day.

Kamesti Crossbow — Level 9+

This exceptionally crafted crossbow can target even the farthest foes.

Lvl 9 +2 4,200 gp
Lvl 14 +3 21,000 gp
Lvl 19 +4 105,000 gp

Lvl 22 +5 325,000 gp
Lvl 27 +6 1,625,000 gp
Armor: Leather
Enhancement: AC
Property: When you make a saving throw to avoid forced movement, you gain an item bonus to the saving throw equal to the armor's enhancement bonus. On a save, you don't fall prone.

Marjam's Dream

A faithless mercenary driven by prophetic visions given to him by Melora collected the items of Marjam's Dream. With those relics, he trained the first in a long line of warriors taught to balance their martial prowess with arcane power.

Though the items of this set are usable by any class, they're most highly coveted by swordmages.

Lore

History DC 7: Marjam was a vain and boastful mercenary warrior who was disdainful of magic his entire life. In his later years, however, Marjam had a dream in which Melora instructed him to collect a number of powerful relics in her name. Initially resistant to what he perceived as the product of an age-addled brain and a healthy love of strong ale, Marjam tried to ignore this prophetic vision, but the dream increased in frequency and intensity. Fearing for his sanity in the end, the warrior strapped on mail and sword once more and undertook an epic quest that saw him collect the five relics that his dream had showed him.

History DC 12: By the time his quest was complete, a change had come over Marjam. Attuned to the arcane energy that permeated the world, the warrior had a final vision in which he saw a succession of heroes who would wield arcane and martial power in equal measure. He knew that it was the destiny of his final years to train the first of these heroes.

At the nearby temple of Melora, Marjam sought out a child he had seen in his final vision—an orphan named Alora, who had grown up under the care of the temple faithful and who showed great promise as a spellcaster. The child became Marjam's charge, and for long years at the temple he raised and trained her. From Marjam, Alora learned the ways of combat, even as the relics of Marjam's Dream allowed her to balance that martial skill with the magical ability taught to her by Melora's faithful.

History DC 17: Even before Marjam's death, Alora had left the temple to become an adventuring swordmage. A powerful symbol of Melora's faith, she was known by her reputation and the distinctive weapons and raiment of Marjam's Dream. When Alora died, the items of Marjam's Dream quickly spread across the world and beyond the bounds of Melora's faith. However, sages believe that Melora still seeks out chosen champions on whom to bestow the items of this set.

Radiant Temple Treasures

Many cultures tell versions of the myth of the Radiant Temple—a great bastion of light created during the ancient war between the gods and the primordials. Though the temple was taken to the celestial realms by the gods in the aftermath of their victory, a number of its faithful stayed behind in the mortal realm. The treasures they bore became their legacy.

Any character can wield the Radiant Temple Treasures, but they're most useful to avengers.

Lore

History or Religion DC 8: In the final years of the war between the gods and the primordials, a great number of mortal clerics, paladins, and other servants of the gods came together to create a mighty bastion of light. This act greatly pleased the gods, and it's said that the devotion of the temple helped turn the tide of war in their favor.

History or Religion DC 14: In the end, the gods were victorious. In a glorious cataclysm that shook the mortal world, the Radiant Temple and the souls that had forged it were taken to the Astral Sea. However, in the moments before the temple's ascendance, a number of the faithful stepped forth from its towers of light, chosen by the gods to remain behind as protectors of the new-made world. These faithful are said by some to be the first avengers—divine champions of the deities themselves.

History or Religion DC 19: The items of the Radiant Temple Treasures are spread across all cultures, even those where the secret rituals of the avengers are all but unknown. Some believe that the appearance of these relics is a sign meant to inspire worshipers to take up the path of the avenger.

Resplendent Finery

Only the most fashionable adventurers seek out the clothing that makes up the set known as Resplendent Finery. The items of the Resplendent Finery grant potent defenses and mental abilities to any character, but these garments are favored by bards, fey pact warlocks, and illusionist wizards.

Lore

History DC 7: The magic items known as the Resplendent Finery are as legendary for their fine styling as for their powers. Adventurers who want their heroic status to be known adopt the finery as a kind of status symbol, with the items of the set granting their wearers a measure of control over their interactions with others.

Though versions of the finery can appear in any number of styles, many sets feature fey touches that echo the fashion and art of the eladrin.

History DC 12: The items of the Resplendent Finery are said to have threads of glamor and illusion woven into them, giving their wearer the power to influence minds. These legendary garments have appeared throughout the ages, indistinguishable from other fine clothing unless the magic within them is detected.

History DC 17: The first prominent set of Resplendent Finery was a gift from an eladrin lord to a powerful dwarf clan chief. Over time, the magical enhancements in the garments were revealed and stealthily copied, though the benefits and core powers of all sets remain the same.

RESPLENDENT FINERY ITEMS

| Lvl | Name | Price (gp) | Item Slot |

Level 15: 3 extra damage.
Level 25: 5 extra damage.

Shadowdancer's Garb

The clothing that makes up the Shadowdancer's Garb is elegant and well crafted, but also stern and forbidding. While you wear these items, you're cloaked in silence and shadow. Even in bright daylight, your features are obscured, and the shadows cast by your body seem to exude tendrils of darkness.

The items of the Shadowdancer's Garb are most useful for rogues, but the set appeals to any character who understands the benefits of stealth.

Lore

Arcana or History DC 10: Creators of the Shadowdancer's Garb imbue each item of clothing with shadow magic, wrapping the wearer in a cloak of magical darkness. Shadowdancer's Garb items are popular among rogues and other characters who value stealth both in and out of combat. Additionally, the garb has a reputation as the raiment of choice for assassins and spies.

Arcana or History DC 16: The items that make up the Shadowdancer's Garb were first crafted as individual magic items for the use of elite shadar-kai warriors. Originally, the cloak, mask, gloves, and boots of the set were signature gear for the leaders of four shadar-kai regiments in the service of a powerful Shadowfell lord. These companies were known as the shadowdancers, and their exploits in the Shadowfell and the mortal world are legendary.

Arcana or History DC 21: Razman-kash was the leader of a powerful Shadowfell assassin's guild—a former member of the shadowdancers passed over for a regimental command that he believed was his by right. After nurturing his hate for years, Razman-kash staged a coup in which the four regimental leaders and the Shadowfell lord were killed. Not content with merely claiming leadership of the shadowdancers, Razman-kash had the combined regalia enchanted to provide even greater power when the four pieces were worn together. His original design has long since spread across the Shadowfell and into the world.

SHADOWDANCER'S GARB ITEMS

| Lvl | Name | Price (gp) | Item Slot |
|---|---|---|---|
| 9+ | Shadowdancer's cloak | 4,200 | Neck |
| 10 | Shadowdancer's mask | 5,000 | Head |

| 12 | Shadowdancer's boots | 13,000 | Feet |

SHADOWDANCER'S GARB BENEFITS

| Pieces | Benefit |
|---|---|
| 2 | You gain an item bonus to Athletics, Stealth, and Thievery checks equal to the number of items you have from this set. |
| 4 | At the start of each encounter, if you aren't surprised, you have concealment until the end of your first turn. |

Shadowdancer's Boots — Level 12

These sleek boots lighten your steps, particularly while shadow conceals you.

Item Slot: Feet 13,000 gp
Property: You gain a +1 bonus to speed while you're wearing light armor. This bonus increases to +2 when you start your turn in dim light or darkness.

Shadowdancer's Cloak — Level 9+

This flowing cloak obscures your movement while you are hidden.

Lvl 9 +2 4,200 gp
Lvl 14 +3 21,000 gp
Lvl 19 +4 105,000 gp
Lvl 24 +5 525,000 gp
Lvl 29 +6 2,625,000 gp

Item Slot: Neck
Enhancement: Fortitude, Reflex, and Will
Power (Daily): Free Action. Trigger: You hit or miss an enemy you're hidden from. Effect: You make a Stealth check against that enemy's passive Perception check to remain hidden from it. You are no longer hidden from other creatures, as normal.

Shadowdancer's Gloves — Level 11

While you're hidden, these supple gloves make your attacks more deadly.

Item Slot: Hands 9,000 gp
Property: When you hit an enemy you're hidden from, you deal 1d6 extra damage.

Shadowdancer's Mask — Level 10

This featureless black mask aids your efforts to fool or hide from your foes.

Item Slot: Head 5,000 gp
Power (Daily): Free Action. Trigger: You make a Bluff check or Stealth check and dislike the result. Effect: Reroll the check with a +3 power bonus and use either result.

Skin of the Panther

This item set was first crafted in the deep jungle, where the druids venerate the spirit of the panther. Crafted from the hide of these stealthy hunters, the items that make up the Skin of the Panther grant their wearer the hunting prowess and demeanor of this noble beast.

This magic item set is most commonly sought out by predator druids, though any character who wears hide armor and seeks to excel in stealth and hard-hitting attacks can benefit from it.

Lore

Arcana or Nature DC 7: In the untamed jungles, human tribes give honor and respect to the panther. Jungle warriors model their combat tactics on the strength and stealthy power of these great hunting cats, whose spirits are said to live on within the mightiest hunters and the magic relics they wield.

Arcana or Nature DC 12: The components of this item set are carefully crafted from the hide of the panther—both the great cats of the mortal world and their Feywild cousins. To hunt the Feywild panther is an honor accorded only to the most powerful warriors of a tribe, and the locations of the hidden jungle portals that lead to that plane are carefully guarded secrets known only to high-ranking druids.

Arcana or Nature DC 17: Animals fated to supply the raw materials for the Skin of the Panther are given great reverence by the tribes, and are hunted in accordance with ancient rituals. Warriors who take up the hunt must follow a strict regimen of training, fasting, and prayer—traditions designed to ensure that the spirits of these great cats form the foundation of the Skin of the Panther's powerful magic.

Tools of Zane's Vengeance

Fate can be cruel, as the legendary shaman Zane knew all too well. After a despot slaughtered his people and had his eyes put out, the blind Zane spent years in pursuit of bloody revenge. The Tools of Zane's Vengeance are the weapons and raiment he crafted in the course of achieving that lifelong goal.

This item set is most useful to shamans.

Lore

History or Nature DC 8: As a mystic and elder of his tribe, the shaman Zane brought his people into harmony with their totem spirits. However, an ambitious king shattered the peace when he turned hungry eyes toward the tribe's rich lands. Driven by greed, his armies laid waste to the tribe's hunting grounds. Zane's people were slaughtered, and he was brought before the king. Sensing the shaman's authority and wanting to set a harsh example, the king ordered Zane's eyes put out, then set him free.

History or Nature DC 14: Though blinded, Zane vowed that he would visit upon the despot the same horrors his people had suffered. After the soldiers had moved on, he returned and harvested from his fallen kin the items with which he would make good on his vow, infusing each with blood magic and dire curses.

For the remainder of his days, Zane walked the land, hearing the spirits of his fallen tribesfolk calling for vengeance. Each time he took a life, the shaman placed the victim's eyes in his own ruined sockets, regaining his sight for a short time by the use of dark rituals.

History or Nature DC 19: The Tools of Zane's Vengeance were spread across all lands after his death. Even now, it's said that Zane's spirit lingers in the world, ready to aid the downtrodden in their struggles against tyranny and injustice. Characters who follow in his path are sometimes gifted with the knowledge of where the Tools of Zane's Vengeance can be found.

Zy Tormtor's Trinkets

Zy Tormtor is a legend among the drow of Erelhei-Cinlu, particularly to other dark pact warlocks. Millennia after his betrayal and execution at the hands of House Kilsek, his life and exploits are revered by the drow, though the details of that life vary with the affiliations of the teller.

The weapons and tools that Zy used in his exploits are almost as famous as the warlock himself–particularly the prison of Salzacas, a black iron jar within which was bound a powerful spirit. Though the full secrets of Zy's power are said to have died with him, the item set that bears his name has since spread from the Underdark and across the surface world. Warlocks, wizards, and rogues covet these items for their power, and for the symbolic value of following in the path of the legendary warlock who crafted them.

Lore

Arcana or History DC 5: A minor scion of his house, Zy Tormtor used his arcane talents for intelligence gathering, skulduggery, and outright larceny. Though he worked frequently in the service of House Tormtor, Zy's chief motivations were to sow chaos and increase his own infamy. During his career, the warlock was responsible for countless daring burglaries, complex acts of sabotage, and the murder of dozens of nobles from rival houses–including the matron mother of House Kilsek.

Arcana or History DC 10: Zy's activities were aided by a powerful spirit named Salzacas, bound in an enchanted black iron flask. Some claim that Zy had summoned and held a demon within the prison, while others say that the prison of Salzacas was an ancient relic he found during one of his adventures. Darker rumors suggest that Salzacas was the spirit of Zy's twin brother, bound to the warlock after being slain by him in the womb.

Arcana or History DC 15: Zy Tormtor's Trinkets have passed through the hands of numerous scoundrels seeking to claim the long-dead warlock's power or fame. However, if the legends of Zy Tormtor are to be believed, the items that bear his name today vary in power from the tools the warlock once wielded. It remains unknown whether later copies of the trinkets have lost the originals' power or whether unseen power lies latent within the trinkets and waits to be claimed.

Enhancement: Fortitude, Reflex, and Will

Power (Encounter): Minor Action. You gain a climb (spider climb) speed equal to your speed until the end of your turn.

PARAGON TIER ITEM SETS

Characters in the paragon tier seek magic arms, implements, and other items that can reflect and complement their increasing notoriety.

Arms of Unbreakable Honor

Paladins, bards, and commoners alike know the songs of the legendary hero Bradaman. She was a knight of one of the ancient human kingdoms on whose bones the empire of Nerath was built—a warrior whose exploits shaped the items and powers of the Arms of Unbreakable Honor. Bradaman's legend isn't a part of any particular faith, race, or culture. Rather, the weapons and armor she wore are said to seek out any whose valor and pure heart reflect the ideals of a lost age.

The magic items of this set are closely associated with paladins, though other defenders can benefit from their power.

Lore

History DC 11: The legend of Bradaman is first recorded at the height of the Empire of Nerath, where it was told as the story of an earlier age of nobility. Lady Bradaman was a paladin of great repute, one of many free knights who served and defended the common folk of her land. When her three brothers were falsely accused of murder, Bradaman swore to secure their pardon by undertaking three tasks set for her by the high king.

History DC 18: For her first task, Bradaman reclaimed a temple to Moradin and Melora that had fallen under the control of worshipers of Zehir. With her brothers, she fought her way to the altar of the temple and sounded her horn, staggering the cult's yuan-ti leaders so that her brothers could strike them down.

For the second task, Bradaman vanquished the titan Shixzan, whose hammer brought down deadly storms. By tricking Shixzan to go underground where he could not swing his hammer, Bradaman forced the titan to swear loyalty to the king with unbreakable oaths.

For her final task, Bradaman was ordered to unhorse the Crow Knight, an undead warrior whose lance brought death. When the two knights clashed, the Crow Knight's lance passed through Bradaman's shield, armor, body, and soul, but the paladin did not waver from her goal. The Crow Knight was unhorsed, though Bradaman paid with her life.

History DC 23: Her brothers returned Bradaman's body to the high king, who declared she would be buried with the honor she had in life. Shixzan raised up a great tomb for her, hiding it away in the mountains. The weapons, armor, and gear she bore at death became known as the Arms of Unbreakable Honor, their magic grown more powerful by her heroic sacrifice. Though many have searched for it, Bradaman's crypt remains as much a legend as she.

ARMS OF UNBREAKABLE HONOR ITEMS

| Lvl | Name | Price (gp) | Item Slot |
|---|---|---|---|
| 12+ | Unbroken lance | 13,000 | Weapon |

Power (Daily): Standard Action. Your mount shifts 3 squares and you make a charge attack.

Aspect of the Ram

Tenacious, stalwart, and sure-footed, the mountain ram is revered by many wielders of primal power. Totems of the ram adorn the armor of the hunters and warriors of the mountains, and adventurers draw inspiration from the visage and spirit of these nimble and fearless beasts.

Wardens and martial-minded druids benefit the most from this magic item set, particularly those guardians who enjoy being at the front of the fray.

Lore

Arcana or Nature DC 10: The items of the Aspect of the Ram were first created by members of the druid orders that haunt the high mountain passes. Made of leather-stitched fur and decorated with dangling fetishes in the shape of a ram's head, this set's crude outward appearance is in sharp contrast to its true power.

Arcana or Nature DC 16: The druids of the Dawnforge Mountains believe that the noblest of the mountain rams move on to the spirit realm after death. When they do, the rams discard their physical forms on the rocks of their favorite peaks. The raiment that makes up the Aspect of the Ram is crafted from these rare finds.

ASPECT OF THE RAM ITEMS

Ayrkashna Armor

Crafted by an ancient civilization of devas, Ayrkashna Armor grants its full power only to members of that race. Many devas are drawn to seek out the scattered pieces of this armor, delving into their subconscious and journeying to strange locales in an attempt to unearth the secrets of their own past.

Lore

History or Religion DC 10: The city-state of Ayrkashna was once the site from which good devas set out on their quests among the mortals they had sworn to defend. Though the city's location was lost to history long ago, Ayrkashna Armor remains a potent reminder of the power from which the devas sprang.

History or Religion DC 16: When the first angels tied themselves to the mortal realm to become devas, they crafted the Ayrkashna Armor to represent the five principles most important to their kind to bolster them against the evil of their ancient enemies, the rakshasas. When a deva in possession of this item set dies, the armor vanishes to be scattered in nearby locations.

History or Religion DC 21: Devas who come into contact with items from the Ayrkashna Armor often believe that they owned these items in a previous life. By undertaking a quest of self-discovery, they hope to reacquire the rest of the set—seeking out the places where their previous incarnations lived and died.

AYRKASHNA ARMOR ITEMS

Champion's Flame

Even the most beneficent faith must take a hard line against threats. Whether devils undermining the clergy of a good deity, heroes infiltrating dark cults, or the temples of a large city engaging in mundane espionage, the dangers facing the faithful are sought out and eliminated by elite champions of good.

A legendary priest charged with uncovering corruption within his faith first developed the items of the Champion's Flame. They're most often sought out by clerics, but any who defend their faith can make use of these items.

Lore

Religion DC 11: One of the most legendary champions of good was Connor Valis, "The Flame of Bahamut." He earned that epithet when he uncovered the corruption of the previous high priest, whose office he purged with faith and holy fire. Valis singlehandedly broke a half-dozen cults of Vecna, Orcus, and Asmodeus that had been infiltrating Bahamut's temples.

Religion DC 18: At the height of his success, Valis resigned his post and disappeared from public view. Some whisper that he himself became corrupted by so long staring into the dark heart of evil, while others suggest that he came to loathe the violence required by his office.

Religion DC 23: After Valis vanished, the tools of the Champion's Flame were lost for a number of years. However, the items of this set have since appeared within the orders of numerous faiths, all clearly derived from the designs of Valis's original panoply. Some even say that the high priest still lives, seeding his legacy even as he searches for a worthy successor.

Eldritch Panoply

In the dying days of Nerath, the swordmages known as the eldritch knights were said to be the most elite force in the empire. None fought harder to stave off Nerath's fall than this dedicated group of warrior-arcanists. Their legend survives today in the Eldritch Panoply—a set of magic arms, armor, and gear that supported their impressive fighting talents.

Swordmages benefit the most from owning the Eldritch Panoply, but warlocks, other strikers, and some defenders can make use of these powerful relics.

Lore

Arcana or History DC 13: The eldritch knights were a distinguished order of swordmages who fought in the service of Nerath.

Arcana or History DC 20: Items in the Eldritch Panoply have precious metals and other special materials woven or fused into them, allowing the wearer to channel arcane energy for use in combat maneuvers or spellcasting. The pieces of the panoply were scattered across the world when the eldritch knights fell, and they remain highly sought after by swordmages and other arcane warriors.

Gifts for the Queen

This item set is spoken of in the legends of humans and eladrin, though its origins remain shrouded in mystery. The tales tell of Isathrain—a queen of old who was kidnapped and taken to the Shadowfell—and of the powerful relics that aided her lover on his dangerous quest to rescue her.

Over long centuries, these Gifts for the Queen have found their way back to the world. Though most useful to sorcerers, they are coveted by other characters who undertake adventures in the Shadowfell or who hunt the undead.

Lore

Arcana or History DC 11: Isathrain, the queen of a powerful border kingdom, became betrothed to Giryon, a sorcerer from a distant land. Days before the wedding, Giryon's enemies struck from the Shadowfell and stole Isathrain away. Giryon and the queen's court responded by turning what had been planned as a wedding reception into a war council. Gifts that had been intended as courtly vestments for the queen were transformed into powerful weapons and implements in preparation for an assault into the Shadowfell.

Arcana or History DC 18: According to legend, Giryon and Isathrain were reunited in the Shadowfell after many trials. However, though the Gifts for the Queen were soon seen in the mortal world, the two lovers never returned to the queen's court. Some say they traveled to the Feywild to escape Giryon's enemies; others claim that the lovers remained in the Shadowfell, searching for other mortals that had been stolen away by the denizens of that dark land.

Arcana or History DC 23: Those who believe that Queen Isathrain still fights for the lives of mortals trapped in the Shadowfell say that a character who assembles a full set of the Gifts for the Queen can seek her there.

Offerings of Celestian

Once in a dozen generations, a fiery comet called the Far Wanderer traverses the night sky. Legend holds that the Far Wanderer is a sign of salvation and a portent of the watchful eyes of the gods of good. In ages past, a great sorcerer secured a fragment of the Far Wanderer for use in the creation of a set of powerful items—the Offerings of Celestian.

The Offerings of Celestian are best suited for cosmic sorcerers, but any character can make use of the items of this set.

Lore

Arcana, History, or Religion DC 13: When the comet known as the Far Wanderer last traversed the skies centuries ago, it is said that fragments of its essence split off and rained white fire across the land. Adventurers and scholars roamed far and wide in search of these fragments, but only one was ever recovered. Collected by an arcanist and astronomer named Celestian, this strange piece of metal was found to carry potent levels of magical power.

Arcana, History, or Religion DC 20: Believing this magical fragment to be a gift from the good deities, Celestian sought to honor them. After smelting the fragment down, the arcanist spun a thin metallic thread that was stronger than steel. By stitching this thread into fine silk and leather and embedding pieces of it in other materials, he crafted a set of magic items as his offering to the gods.

Panoply of the Shepherds of Ghest

Ancient legends tell of the floating city of Ghest and of its spectacular destruction. Less well known is the tale of those who survived that destruction, and how a handful of heroes—the shepherds of Ghest—successfully led their people through countless dangers to make new lives. Though Ghest is little more than a memory now, its name lives on in the arms and armor those heroes wore.

This item set is favored by defenders and characters charged with protecting others from harm.

Lore

Arcana or History DC 11: The floating city of Ghest was a magical marvel said to have been built by mighty archmages and demigods. For centuries, Ghest was a center of learning, peace, and prosperity— and then disaster struck. When its magic was shut down by unknown forces, the floating city fell to earth. Through the efforts and sacrifice of Ghest's powerful priests and wizards, a fraction of the city's population survived the cataclysm. However, those survivors were left alone in a hostile land, their leaders and champions dead.

Arcana or History DC 18: From the broken wreckage of their once-mighty city, the exiles salvaged some of the arcane wonders of Ghest to help them survive. A handful of self-appointed "shepherds" wielding weapons and armor of sacred crystal led the people of Ghest through many trials, eventually finding a safe home in new lands. The relics they had created were passed to new generations of shepherds and eventually spread to the wider world.

Arcana or History DC 23: When the shepherds led their people from the fallen city, they took only the panoply they had created. Fearing that Ghest's powerful magic might fall into the wrong hands, the survivors allowed the city's great arcane engines to destroy themselves and the surrounding ruins. For centuries, sages and adventurers have sought the location of the fallen city, to no avail. However, some believe that the descendants of the first shepherds still guard the ruins, and that characters who successfully collect the panoply can attempt to find them.

Panoply of the Shepherds of Ghest Items

Wondrous Item 13,000 gp

Power (Encounter ✦ Zone): Standard Action. When you plant this battle standard in your space or an adjacent square, it creates a zone in a close burst 5. While within the zone, you and your allies gain a +2 power bonus to Will against fear effects. It costs enemies 3 extra squares of movement to enter the zone.

This effect lasts until the end of the encounter or until the battle standard is removed from the ground. Any character in or adjacent to a battle standard's square can remove it from the ground as a standard action.

Raiment of Shadows

Created by a militant order of warlocks, the Raiment of Shadows is a set of battle garb crafted from the hides and scales of extraplanar creatures dwelling in the Shadowfell. Though the warlock order no longer exists, pieces of the raiment still circulate, and many warlocks seek to complete a set for themselves.

Lore

Arcana DC 10: The Blades of Shadow were an elite order of warlocks who strove to overcome the philosophical barriers arising between warlocks of different pacts. The Raiment of Shadows—a set of magic relics crafted with the power of the Shadowfell—was their uniform and was designed to obscure any differences of race, creed, or pact.

Arcana DC 16: Despite their dedication to unifying the eldritch arts, the Blades of Shadow eventually fell. Over time, the divisions between warlocks of different pacts turned to conflict, with smaller groups within the Blades accusing each other of withholding the order's most powerful secrets.

Arcana DC 21: Sages know that the fall of the Blades of Shadow was due to more than mere infighting. The beings and powers to whom the warlocks had sworn fealty feared that the Blades were on the verge of discovering the means to tap directly into the eldritch power that was their lifeblood. By doing so, they would be able to bypass their traditional patrons of the Feywild, the Far Realm, the Nine Hells, and other powers. These patrons forged a short-term alliance that shattered the Blades of Shadow and destroyed its teachings.

Raiment of the World Spirit

The Raiment of the World Spirit is a magic item set of ancient design and primal power. To the untrained eye, the items in this set appear as the relics of some primitive tribe—a shield, necklace, mask, and ring fashioned from wood, bark, and other materials of the forest. However, closer scrutiny reveals that the pieces of the raiment are untouched by mortal tools, appearing instead as though they were grown as living objects.

Wardens benefit the most from the Raiment of the World Spirit set, but defenders and classes that grant access to polymorph powers will find these items useful as well.

Lore

Arcana or Nature DC 11: Primal power infuses the Raiment of the World Spirit set, binding it to nature. Spellcasting crafters create each component as part of an ancient ceremony passed down through the ages. Each piece of the set is grown as the offshoot of a living tree—an avatar of the mysterious World Spirit. The tree gives up a portion of its heartwood to serve as a shield, forms the mask from its bark, provides its seed pods for the necklace, and manifests the ring as an extension of its primal spirit.

Arcana or Nature DC 18: The Raiment of the World Spirit was first fashioned in the earliest age of the mortal world. Sensing looming threats that might disrupt the fragile cycle of life and death, shamans, wardens, and druids came together to request aid from the primal power they sought to protect. With these now-ancient rites, the keepers of the old ways continue to craft these relics, both to honor the champions who once carried them and as a boon to new heroes dedicated to defending the natural world.

When an item from the raiment is worn, it releases tiny seeds that take root in the wearer's clothing and sprout vines that weave about that person's body. The tendrils staunch wounds and supplement strength to allow the wearer to keep fighting past the point when others would fall.

Arcana or Nature DC 23: The crafters of the raiment treat its creation as a sacred trust, and they take care to ensure that the relics don't fall into the wrong hands. The raiment is a gift of nature, and that gift can be withdrawn if its wearer abuses its power. Dark tales abound of primal spirits visiting calamity on heroes who misuse the raiment, and of whole lands scourged by blight and disease in response to the power of the World Spirit being betrayed.

Reaper's Array

Stained with dried blood, etched with the scars of countless battles, and bearing silent witness to uncountable acts of savage slaughter, the Reaper's Array is a panoply befitting only the deadliest warriors. For those who collect the items of this set, death is a constant companion, and foes met on the field of battle are destined to find only pain and ruin.

Barbarians benefit the most from these items, though any character who yearns to be in the thick of combat will find value in this set.

Lore

Arcana or History DC 11: The crafting of a Reaper's Array set is a secret known only to a handful of arcanists, and the dark process involves the incorporation of an enemy's corporeal essence into each piece. Blood quenches the steel pulled white-hot from the forge. The hair of a foe is woven into the cloak's fabric, and its flesh is cured to provide the leather of gauntlets and belt. Most sets are made with the blood and bodies of monsters, but more than a few have been crafted using materials harvested from sentient humanoids.

Arcana or History DC 18: The legendary berserker Ygnir, a dragonborn barbarian warrior whose bloodlust and thirst for vengeance still inspires fear in the tieflings that remember his name, first created the items in the Reaper's Array. When a slave overseer murdered his family as punishment for Ygnir's refusal to kneel, the barbarian vowed to bring down the empire of Bael Turath single-handedly. Breaking his chains, Ygnir killed his master, the overseer, and a dozen guards with his bare hands.

Arcana or History DC 23: With the help of a fellow prisoner schooled in the warlock arts, Ygnir forged the first Reaper's Array set using the steel, blood, skin, and hair of the foes he had slain. With his grim helm and terrifying axe, Ygnir became a legend on ancient battlefields. Unable to slay him themselves, tiefling diabolists were said to have summoned powerful devils to finally end the warrior's threat—an act that some say might have hastened the fall of that race.

Regalia of the Golden General

The Golden General is an enduring figure of legend, a warlord known as one of the foremost demon slayers who ever lived. Though the fragments of the original arms, armor, and raiment wielded by the Golden General are said to lie in the depths of the Abyss where he met his end, the design of his regalia was well known even before his death. Pieces belonging to this item set can be found throughout the world and beyond it.

Resourceful warlords benefit the most from the items in this set, but all warlords can make use of them.

Lore

History or Religion DC 18: No accurate records of the Golden General's birth or death exist, nor is it known which lands were his true home. The historians of many human cultures claim this legendary warlord as their own, and at least one tale claims that the Golden General became an exarch of Pelor after he met his end. The items of the Regalia of the Golden General are usable by characters of any alignment, but it's said that an evil creature that dons these relics causes them to turn dead black in color.

History or Religion DC 23: Legend says that a hero who owns the full Regalia of the Golden General set can attempt to retrieve the fragments of the original regalia from the abyssal depths. If successful, this hero can bring the fragments to the city of Hestavar in the Astral Sea. Upon presenting the regalia to Pelor, the hero earns the right to become one of the deity's exarchs upon death.

Relics of the Forgotten One

Crafted from the remains of a dead god, the Relics of the Forgotten One are a set of potent magic items from the dawn of time. Though clerics, avengers, and paladins most often seek these relics, they can be used by any class.

Lore

History or Religion DC 18: Histories and religious texts record the fates of the deities that fell in the ancient conflict between the gods and the primordials, but a few stories have escaped the scholars' quills. In centuries past, one such fallen deity was found by a mysterious order of arcanists whose members fashioned the remains of the Forgotten One into relics of incredible power.

RELICS OF THE FORGOTTEN ONE ITEMS

| Lvl | Name | Price (gp) | Item Slot |
|---|---|---|---|
| 13+ | Skin of agonies | 17,000 | Armor |
| 14+ | Sword of melancholy | 21,000 | Weapon |

| Lvl 22 | +5 | 325,000 gp | | | |

Implement (Holy Symbol)
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d8 radiant damage per plus
Power (Daily ✦ Illusion): Standard Action. By expending a use of your Channel Divinity class feature, you become invisible to each creature within 5 squares of you until the end of your next turn.

EPIC TIER ITEM SETS

Characters require the most potent arms, armor, implements, and other magic items to face the challenges of the epic levels.

Mirror of Nessecar

The mirror of Nessecar was a unique treasure from an ancient fey empire. It held a dimensional portal within its magically silvered glass that was capable of transporting large numbers of creatures to its location. In a great battle between eladrin and fomorians, the mirror was shattered as eladrin soldiers prepared to come through it, and their souls were trapped within its shards.

Lore

History DC 17: Over a thousand years ago, a great battle was fought in the Feywild palace of Nessecar between the eladrin and the fomorians. The great behemoths laid waste to the priceless crystal relics for which the palace was known, slaying many in their wake. However, before the fomorians could triumph, the eladrin lord Ondathian unveiled a magic mirror that had the power to save his people.

History DC 26: The magic of the mirror opened a portal through which eladrin reinforcements prepared to enter the fray. But the fomorian war chief Morgkash shattered the mirror just after the portal opened, trapping the souls of the eladrin within the broken pieces. The fomorians overran the palace, slaying all within it. In an attempt at total victory, Morgkash tried to destroy the shards of the shattered mirror but couldn't affect them. Sensing the power lingering within these fragments, the fomorians scattered the pieces throughout multiple worlds.

History DC 31: Over many generations, fragments of the mirror have been collected and formed into Mirror of Nessecar sets. The items of this set are powered by the essence of the eladrin who died trapped within the mirror, granting potent abilities to the wielder.

MIRROR OF NESSECAR ITEMS

| Lvl | Name | Price (gp) | Item Slot |

Item Slot: Head 1,625,000 gp
Property: You are immune to gaze attacks.
Property: You gain a +2 bonus to all defenses against ranged or area attacks.

Points of the Constellation

The Points of the Constellation are relics sacred to an ancient sect of star pact warlocks who worshiped the unknown powers of the Far Realm. Each item is named for a different alien star and allows its wielder to exert influence over mortal minds and bodies.

Though this set is most useful to warlocks, any character seeking a connection to the Far Realm can make use of its items.

Lore

History DC 17: Calling themselves the Constellation, a secret sect of warlocks in the ancient tiefling empire of Bael Turath worshiped the alien powers lurking within the Far Realm. When this practice and the resultant corruption of these star pact warlocks was discovered by the elders of the empire, retribution came swiftly.

Praying to their elder gods, the warlocks called a mighty power to the world, showering the realm with monstrous meteorites. This assault destroyed the warlocks' foes, even as it enchanted a panoply of items with power never meant to be wielded by mortal hands.

History DC 26: The dragonborn of Arkhosia finished the job that the elders of Bael Turath could not, laying siege to the sanctums and fortresses of the star pact warlocks before their taint could spread. In the aftermath, the unholy relics from beyond the stars were scattered far and wide, and they have continued to spread to various cultures over the centuries.

History DC 31: Sages speculate that the power granted by these items is given only to help reunite the items. And many think that the Points of the Constellation items send dark dreams of power to those who seek them, exacting a cost from the user for their power. It's even said that the items not only work to be reunited, but also are trying to return to the Far Realm—at the expense of those who collect them.

Relics of Creation

Each piece in the item set known as the Relics of Creation is the epitome of wondrous design and manufacture. Unflawed and unspoiled, these items demonstrate a quality of perfection that suggests creation by divine hands. Their otherworldly construction incorporates fabulous substances such as solidified flame, wood trimmed from heavenly trees, and elements now unknown in the mortal realm. It's said that the bearer of these relics is filled with the light of creation, whose energy fuels potent powers that sear enemies with divine judgment.

Invokers derive the most benefit from items of the Relics of Creation, but any divine character can make use of this set.

Lore

Arcana or Religion DC 17: In the cataclysmic war between the gods and the primordials for control of the world, each deity fashioned a powerful relic to bestow on the greatest of their chosen followers. Few relics survived the war, however; most were lost alongside their wielders in the dread battles that swept across the world and through the planes.

Arcana or Religion DC 26: The Relics of Creation found across the world today contain only six items, each holding a sliver of divine power from the deity who fashioned the original item. Though long centuries have driven rifts between these deities, and while their servants sometimes wage war with one another, it's said that a hero who brings the relics together can remind the gods of the strength and righteousness of their once-common cause.

Arcana or Religion DC 31: The six Relics of Creation appear consistently in the contemporary historical record. However, fragments of older histories speak of other items that were once part of the set—some named for deities whose presence is still felt within the world, and others whose names and powers are drawn from gods long dead.

Relics of Creation Items

| Lvl | Name | Price (gp) | Item Slot |

Power (Daily): Free Action. Trigger: You hit an enemy with an attack power. Effect: The attack ignores the enemy's immunities and resistances.

Time Wizard's Tools

Spellcasters manipulate the material world and the energy of the planes with ease, but time remains notoriously resistant to magical control. Few wizards and other arcanists specialize in deconstructing time and enchanting objects to manipulate its boundaries, and for good reason. Such characters often suffer the strange effects of this potent magic, disappearing into unseen realms or even coming face to face with themselves for short periods.

The item set known as the Time Wizard's Tools is legendary among arcanists who tinker with time, although the power of its items can be utilized by any character.

Lore

Arcana DC 28: The Time Wizard's Tools are powerful relics scattered across the present-day world from both the future and the past. The various items and their mysterious creators were said to have appeared in widespread locations throughout the world's history. However, given the nature of the tools, it's speculated that these relics might be the product of a single mage traveling through time with the aid of spells or items beyond the scope of mortal magic.

Arcana DC 33: Shaping time is perhaps the most daunting of the arcanist's tasks. Although the power of the Time Wizard's Tools is formidable, certain items in the set also exact a cost from the wielder as part of the unstable nature of their magic.

TIME WIZARD'S TOOLS ITEMS

| Lvl | Name | Price (gp) | Item Slot |
|---|---|---|---|
| 27 | Time-jumping boots | 1,625,000 | Feet |

Power (Daily): Move Action. You disappear until the start of your next turn. Until that time, you don't have line of sight or line of effect to any creature, and creatures don't have line of sight or line of effect to you. You also ignore negative ongoing effects, take no damage, and don't need to make saving throws (though you can still do so if you wish). You can take one standard action and two minor actions. At the start of your next turn, you reappear in the space you last occupied or in the nearest unoccupied space of your choice, and you are dazed until the end of your turn.

Tinkerer's Inventions

A legendary adventuring artificer known only as the Tinkerer originally crafted this set of magical and mechanical items. These Tinkerer's Inventions were a triumph of magic and craft, though the pieces have an unpredictable quality consistent with their creator's work.

Lore

Arcana or History DC 16: Artificers favor the light armor that grants them easier use of their numerous tools, but one artificer and inventor wasn't content with cloth and leather. Considered mad by his peers, the legendary crafter known only as the Tinkerer created a set of items designed to provide unique benefits for his chosen profession.

Arcana or History DC 24: After the Tinkerer's death, his assistants divided the pieces of his masterpiece set among themselves, and so his inventions were copied and spread. Relatively few artificers have access to a whole set of Tinkerer's Inventions, however, and many artificers actively seek set items lost by adventuring artificers in years past.

Drawing an item from a tinkersuit is a minor action.
Power (Encounter): Immediate Interrupt. Trigger: An enemy hits you with a melee or a ranged attack. Effect: You gain a +2 power bonus to all defenses until the end of your next turn.

GROUP SETS

Some item sets are designed to be borne not by a single character, but by the members of an entire party. When a party collects the items of a group item set, the set benefits are determined by the number of allies who possess items from the set. Each character wearing or wielding an item from the set qualifies for the set benefits.

Armory of the Unvanquished

The Armory of the Unvanquished is a set of favored items used by the Unvanquished Company, a band of legendary adventurers who were active centuries ago. Stories of their adventures are a mainstay in travelers' camps and in front of tavern fires, inspiring would-be heroes of each new generation. Many of those who would follow in the footsteps of the Unvanquished seek out the items of the armory, though not all who find them are stalwart enough to wield them.

Lore

History DC 11: Two hundred years ago, the heroes of the Unvanquished Company made a glorious name for themselves. Adventurers, mercenaries, and ne'er-do-wells, the Unvanquished plundered tombs, foiled deadly plots, and engaged in legendary exploits from one side of the globe to the other.

History DC 18: How the Unvanquished met their end is uncertain. Some say they fell fighting demons in the Abyss, while others suggest they quit this world to seek new adventures in realms beyond. Regardless, the weapons and implements with which they made their reputation survived them, and these items soon spread to all corners of the world.

History DC 23: When claimed by a new master, each item in the Armory of the Unvanquished manifests a tattoo on the wielder's body—a storm for the tempest staff, a dragon for the dragontooth blade, a scorpion for the scorpion tail blade, a lion for the lion's heart hammer, and a snake for the serpent's kiss bow. As more items in the set are claimed, each tattoo grows larger and more resplendent—the legend of the Unvanquished Company manifesting in a new generation.

ARMORY OF THE UNVANQUISHED ITEMS

Caelynnvala's Boons

Drow, eladrin, and elves are all children of the Feywild, and many maintain hope that these estranged races might one day unite in a culture of peace. Caelynnvala's Boons are useful to eladrin, elf, or drow characters of any class, but their potency is greatest when a group of wielders includes members of all three races.

Lore

History DC 14: Caelynnvala is a legendary archfey—one of the godlike spirit-avatars of the Feywild. An immortal eladrin noble, she hopes to end the ages-long conflict between drow, eladrin, and elf. To this end, she crafted a set of magic items whose powers define the bond she seeks to forge between the sibling races. Caelynnvala's Boons have a habit of finding their way into the hands of champions who embody the ideal of reconciliation and peace.

Caelynnvala's Boons Items

Fortune Stones

Nonmagical fortune stones were first created by devotees of Avandra, god of luck. As simple talismans and tokens of faith, the stones provided common folk with a reminder that Avandra's favor must be earned by deed, not bought by magical means such as divination and prophecy. However, for followers who best exemplified her ideals, Avandra bestowed the power of luck into magic Fortune Stones. This set of relics regularly comes into the possession of adventurers and others who epitomize the tenet that luck favors the bold.

Lore

History or Religion DC 10: From dealing cards to casting dice to reading entrails, divination has long had a powerful allure. The monk Askar Rei was a follower of Avandra and an expert on the subject, though most of his effort centered on exposing false soothsayers and charlatans. Askar labored to impress upon others that fortune must be earned, not made by magical means.

History or Religion DC 16: In an effort to undermine the prevalence of false prophets and diviners among his people, Askar Rei and his followers fashioned and distributed symbolic tokens called fortune stones. These stones had no magical power, but were meant to provide the bearer with a focus for his or her actions in the present, thus increasing the chance of Avandra's favor for the future.

History or Religion DC 21: Askar Rei has long since passed on into history, but it's said that his piety inspired Avandra to create sets of magic Fortune Stones for him and his closest followers. These enchanted stones provide a boon of luck to their bearers—a sign of the gifts of fortune that Avandra bestows on the boldest and bravest.

Heirlooms of Mazgorax

At the height of the dragonborn empire of Arkhosia, the legendary artisan Mazgorax first crafted the items of this set as gifts for his children. When his children were slain by a ruthless copper dragon, the Heirlooms of Mazgorax were scattered and sold, spreading the names of their bearers far and wide. Characters who claim these relics can gain some measure of the heroic nature of the dragonborn whom the items were named for.

Lore

History DC 14: The famed dragonborn crafter Mazgorax created the items of this set. In ancient Arkhosia, he and his family were members of the nobility, famed for their dedication and service to the empire. Each item in the Heirlooms of Mazgorax set is named for one of his children, all legendary dragonborn heroes whose success owed itself in no small part to their father's craft.

History DC 19: Long before the fall of Arkhosia, the House of Mazgorax was brought down by the machinations of a copper dragon named Salingrazi. Seeking power over the dragonborn, Salingrazi struck at the empire's strongest families in an effort to sow fear and unrest. Some say the copper dragon still lives, and that he harbors a particular enmity for individuals who wear the heirlooms.

MAZGORAX'S CHILDREN

Armed with the items crafted by their father, the scions of Mazgorax lived lives of great fame and glory.

Gajz: A devout worshiper of Bahamut, Gajz spent many years as the head of a temple in a desolate province at the northernmost reaches of the empire. Upon his father's death, he returned to take care of the estate. He surprised Salingrazi's assassins with his elusiveness, managing to stay one step ahead of them for over a year before disappearing. Most think he was killed, but rumors suggest that he left Arkhosia to proselytize in a distant land.

Keicha: With her noble bearing and elegant manner, Keicha served as a courtier in the Arkhosian capital. However, she also played a more secret role as bodyguard to the emperor's youngest daughter. She received many honors over the years and was a trusted member of the court. When a caravan transporting the emperor's daughter was ambushed, Keicha died defending her.

Matrakk: With a preference for art and literature, Matrakk lived a less conspicuous life than his siblings. His sculptures and frescoes adorned the noble's houses of the Arkhosian capital and smaller settlements. For his political power and connections, Matrakk was targeted by Salingrazi's wrath.

Rovikar: A fierce and inspiring warrior, Rovikar the Relentless led Arkhosian troops to the far reaches of the empire, conquering several new provinces in the name of the dragonborn. His standard—a golden basilisk—flew above countless fortresses of the frontier. It's said he was killed by Salingrazi's assassins while putting down a rebellion in one of his conquered territories.

Skaivani: A skilled athlete, Skaivani the Swift was a star attraction at Arkhosia's formalized sporting competitions. Eventually feeling a greater sense of duty toward the empire, she became a scout and soldier in the imperial army. However, the life of a soldier was not to her liking, and Skaivani resigned when asked to undertake missions she thought were contrary to her own moral code. Before she could make her way home, she was attacked by Salingrazi's servants. Though Skaivani ran the race of her life in an attempt to escape, she was caught and killed.

Rings of the Akarot

In dark barrows and within ancient mausoleums lie the six members of the Akarot. An archaic league of powerful lords, these tyrants once ruled the Six Cities of the Akarot, all long lost to time. The six rulers were said to have wielded potent power—power now locked within the rings that bear their names.

Lore

History DC 16: The original Rings of the Akarot were the royal signets of the mysterious rulers of six ancient city-states. Though the Akarot lords wielded considerable power, each fell over the course of long years, and their cities were lost to the ravages of time. Countless adventurers have since claimed the rings that bear their names, just as many have sought out their tombs. However, the resting places of the Akarot lords remain a mystery.

The Six Cities

Each of the six cities of the Akarot was ruled by a powerful tyrant.

Hrumdar's Horn: Minotaurs living in the militaristic society of Hrumdar's Horn followed the savage minotaur lord for which their city was named. Built within a mountain spire, Hrumdar's Horn threatened a wide spread of human lands below it. Dark legends spoke of prisoners being set loose in vast labyrinths within the mountain, hunted for sport by bloodthirsty minotaur warriors.

Laga, the Smoking Waste: Built atop an ancient mineshaft, the city of Laga was perpetually shrouded in dust and smoke. Its ruler, Farndak, was a dwarf known for his greed and tyranny who enslaved the folk of nearby settlements to labor in his deadly mines.

Urual, Defier of Tides: Great walls imbued with powerful magic protected the coastal city of Urual from the pounding tides of the sea. Rom Kala the Sealord ruled here, and his privateers scoured the nearby seas for the wealth that filled his coffers. A great tide is said to have destroyed his city after his death.

Synnith Ordan: The eladrin city of Synnith Ordan was as beautiful as all the other settlements of that race. Its ruler, Haggaron, was the most secretive of the Akarot. This fomorian king manipulated the eladrin of the city with the powerful magic of his ring.

The Empty City: A twisting maze of stone and shadow, the Empty City contains gates that reach numerous places in the Shadowfell, including the dark port of Gloomwrought. Kartan, lord of the Empty City, was a shadar-kai who surrounded himself with nihilistic allies and soulless walking dead.

Aurunia Palace: A sprawling, opulent estate housing thousands of servants and slaves, Aurunia Palace was known for its wealth and the narcissism of its master, Teros the Perfect. This human lord believed that his beauty was eternal, and he was said to go to any lengths to retain his youth and vigor.

History DC 24: While they still lived, the Akarot lords made a secret pact, taking undead form to outlive the mortal races they ruled over. The six swore that when the old empires had fallen and left civilized lands undefended, they would rise once more, banding together to conquer and control the world.

History DC 29: The six cities of the Akarot were once seven cities. Whatever disaster befell the seventh was potent enough to wipe its record and its ruler from the annals of history. Sherazuul's black band is said to be the name of a seventh Ring of the Akarot lost in the cataclysm. Its history and power remain unknown.

RINGS OF THE AKAROT ITEMS

| Lvl | Name | Price (gp) | Item Slot |

| 23 | Ring of Hrumdar's halls | 425,000 | Ring |
| 24 | Golden ring of Teros | 525,000 | Ring |
| 25 | Haggaron's ring of control | 625,000 | Ring |
| 26 | Kartan's void ring | 1,125,000 | Ring |

RINGS OF THE AKAROT BENEFITS

| Wielders* | Benefit |
|---|---|
| 2 | Each ally wearing a ring from this set can communicate telepathically with the others, regardless of distance. |
| 5 | Each ally wearing a ring from this set gains the blood of the Akarot power, described below. |
| 6 | Each ally wearing a ring from this set gains the voice of the Akarot power, described below. |

The number of allies wearing one or more items from the set.

Blood of the Akarot Item Set Power

You tap into your reserves to restore your vitality and that of your allies.

At-Will ✦ Healing
Free Action Ranged sight
Trigger: You spend a healing surge
Target: Each ally wearing a ring from this set
Effect: Each target regains 10 hit points.
Special: Using this power does not provoke opportunity attacks.

Voice of the Akarot Item Set Power

Channeling the power of your allies' will, you command your enemies to stop attacking, though each ally is momentarily disoriented.

Daily ✦ Charm
Standard Action Close burst 5
Target: Each enemy in burst
Attack: +30 vs. Will
Hit: The target cannot attack (save ends).
Effect: Each ally wearing a ring from this set is dazed until the end of your next turn.

Farndak's Glittering Ring — Level 22

This gem-studded ring lets you draw vigor from your allies even as it pulls a foe into your grasp.

Item Slot: Ring 325,000 gp
Property: When you spend a healing surge, you regain additional hit points equal to the number of allies who wear one or more rings from this set.

If you've reached at least one milestone today, double the number of additional hit points you regain from this property.

Power (Daily ✦ Charm): Minor Action. Choose one enemy within 5 squares of you. You pull the chosen enemy 5 squares and mark it (save ends).

Haggaron's Ring of Control — Level 25

This beautiful fey-styled ring sharpens your ability to soothe others and grants you control of their minds in combat.

Item Slot: Ring 625,000 gp
Property: You gain a +4 item bonus to Bluff checks and Diplomacy checks (+6 against fey creatures).

Power (Daily ✦ Charm): Minor Action. You choose a stunned enemy within 10 squares of you. The chosen enemy is dominated until the end of its next turn. The stunned condition is temporarily negated while the enemy is dominated, though its duration continues. If its duration allows, the stunned condition resumes once the dominated condition ends.

If you've reached at least one milestone today, you can also use this power against enemies that are dazed, with the dazed condition temporarily negated as above.

Golden Ring of Teros — Level 24

The magic of this golden ring protects your physical perfection from harm.

Item Slot: Ring 525,000 gp
Property: You gain a +2 item bonus to AC and Fortitude while you're not bloodied.

Power (Daily): Immediate Reaction. Trigger: An enemy hits you while you're at maximum hit points. Effect: You gain a +5 power bonus to your next attack roll against the triggering enemy.

If you've reached at least one milestone today, you also gain resist 5 to all damage until you become bloodied or until the end of the encounter.

Kartan's Void Ring — Level 26

The shifting form of this black ring allows you to draw off your enemies' vigor when one of their nearby allies drops.

Item Slot: Ring 1,125,000 gp

Power (At-Will ✦ Healing, Necrotic): Free Action. Trigger: You reduce an enemy within 20 squares of you to 0 hit points. Effect: Make an attack: Area burst 2 centered on that enemy; targets enemies; +29 vs. Fortitude; on a hit, the attack deals 1d10 necrotic damage, and you regain 2 hit points. This attack doesn't provoke opportunity attacks.

If you've reached at least one milestone today, the attack deals 2d8 necrotic damage, and you regain 4 hit points.

Ring of Hrumdar's Halls — Level 23

This solid iron band grants you insight into the hazards of the underground and lets you drive your foes before you.

Item Slot: Ring 425,000 gp
Property: You gain a +5 item bonus to Dungeoneering checks.

Power (Daily): Minor Action. Make an attack: Ranged 30; targets one creature you can see; +26 vs. Will; on a hit, you slide the target 10 squares.

If you've reached at least one milestone today, you can use this power one additional time against the same target on your next turn.

Rom Kala's Tideshield Ring — Level 21

The magic of this blue-green ring protects you from the denizens of the sea and lets you stand fast in combat.

Item Slot: Ring 225,000 gp
Property: You gain resist 10 to all damage on attacks from aquatic creatures or water creatures.

Power (Daily): Immediate Interrupt. Trigger: You or an ally within 10 squares of you is pulled, pushed, or slid. Effect: You or your ally ignores the forced movement.

If you've reached at least one milestone today, each ally within 10 squares of you reduces the distance of any forced movement by 1 square until the end of the encounter. If the ally has a ring from this set, this effect lasts until the ally takes an extended rest.

Appendix: Item Tables

The following section contains master tables for all of the items in Adventurer's Vault 2. Items are sorted by level and by type. Each level header indicates the price of items of that level, with the exception of ammunition, for which a price is given separately. Each entry includes the page number on which the item can be found. Weapons and armor entries include information about the category of each item. Items that are parts of sets are marked with an asterisk (*).

Make Your Wishes Come True

You've just defeated the monsters, and in the back of their lair you find an old wooden chest atop a pile of bones and rusty weapons. Through the keyhole spills a wondrous golden light. What magical treasures will you find inside?

This Dungeons & Dragons® game supplement presents hundreds of new magic items, including weapons, armor, ammunition, tomes, totems, and wondrous items appropriate for any D&D® campaign. This book also introduces item sets, thematically linked collections of equipment that grant additional powers when the gear is worn by a single character or multiple party members.

For use with these 4th Edition Dungeons & Dragons products:

Player's Handbook® core rulebooks
Dungeon Master's Guide® core rulebooks
Monster Manual® core rulebooks
D&D® Miniatures

CHAPTER 1

Undead Lore

The lot of man—to suffer and to die.

—Alexander Pope

Beings of fear and horror, undead are animate reminders of death's inevitability. Lurking, lurching, and always hungry, undead are drawn to the heat of the living. Liches, skeletons, zombies, and even more fearsome shambling monstrosities shudder with ungainly grace after meals of blood and souls. And once a vampire has drained the life of a victim, it exhibits the most horrifying ability of all: The shell of its victim animates, turning into another of the walking dead.

Indeed, undeath can be visited upon anyone, no matter his or her moral standing in life. A kindly servant killed by a vampire lord could rise anew as a ravenous monster that considers her former friends as nothing more than food. Does a flicker of her personality still lurk somewhere beneath that all-consuming blood thirst? Some say no, that energy originating from the Shadowfell animates the body without any hint of its owner's soul or spirit. But for some kinds of undead, the original spirit might be present within the corpse, thereby posing difficult questions about life, death, and the afterlife.

Despite their unholy hunger, undead can remain animate for centuries on end, even if locked away from all light or sustenance. In this fashion, undead remain threats long after living guardians and mundane traps in ancient citadels molder to nothing. Undead are touched with shadow, and necromantic magic sustains them. Some have walked the world for millennia.

This chapter covers the following topics:

- Origins: How undead are created, from those who choose their fate voluntarily to unwilling victims.
- Physiology: A detailed study of the creatures' diet, propagation, and senses.
- Outlook and Psychology: How the undead see the world.
- Society: Even though most undead are not social creatures as we normally understand the word, they do have tendencies that apply to interaction between themselves and with each other.
- The Shadowfell: The connections between the undead, the Shadowfell, and the Raven Queen.

Origins

Theories abound regarding the origin and creation of undead, from the hushed tales told by simple peasants to the exotic research performed by sages and wizards. None agree, and only one fact is certain: Undead exist in the world and have since time immemorial. Their numbers are vast, and their motivations are often an enigma.

The origin of undead can be traced back to a time eons ago, when the primordials thrived before the first foundations of the world were even a rumor. Immortal in the sense that they knew no age and withstood any hurt, these were beings of manifest entropy. They coveted mastery over all the cosmos.

The cosmos was young in this age, and the detritus remaining from its formation still swirled in the void. From this cast-off stuff of the universe's emergence into being, the world coalesced (with the primordials' aid), and with it, echoes of the world. One of these echoes was bright and fey; the other was darker and ominous, though both thrummed with strange and unexpected power. The primordials witnessed and helped birth the Feywild and the Shadowfell.

Then the gods made their presence known, both through indirect influence and purposeful design. The gods, too, wished to make their claim on creation. Their interference enraged the primordials, and soon the two forces of creation were at war.

In these earliest days, souls shorn of their bodies simply departed the cosmos, taken to a place beyond all reckoning. When the primordials first crafted the world, they had little regard for the fate of souls. But some among them recognized soul power as a potent force, and they hungered for it. These entities stopped up the passage of souls. With nowhere to go, many souls were either consumed by primordials that had a taste for such spiritual fare, or, finding no further road or final purpose, sputtered out and dissipated, gone forever. Others persisted, becoming undead.

The gods also recognized the potential of souls, and one of their own established himself as the guardian of a new realm of death. There souls would gather after death, either having been chosen to join the gods in their dominions or passing on, as before, to an ultimate unknown fate. In this way Nerull—and later his successor, the Raven Queen—became the guardian of the dead.

Powers of Death

All deities have some influence over death and dying when their worshipers are involved, but two gods—and one demon lord—have a specific interest in undeath.

The Raven Queen controls death and destiny and therefore has some authority over undeath, though like so much else about her, her purpose in allowing some to linger while others pass on is inscrutable. Her attention to the undead is most noticeable when she decides to forcibly end the existence of a souled undead that she believes has cheated fate.

Vecna, the god of magic, necromancy, and secrets, pursued undeath as part of his rise to godhood. To him, undeath is one of many tools that can be employed in the unending search for knowledge and secrets. Mindless undead interest him only insofar as they can be used as guardians or servants. Vecna finds favor among the intelligent undead, especially those that have an interest in the necromantic arts.

Orcus, Demon Prince of the Undead, commands legions of the unquiet dead. He would like nothing more than to seize the Raven Queen's power, but his power can only maintain a dead form, not manipulate death itself. Orcus plots ceaselessly to overthrow the Raven Queen.

Death and the Afterlife

After the death of the body, a soul lingers in the world for a few days or even longer, and during that time the body can be returned to life with a powerful enough ritual. The soul of a hero is particularly likely to remain, determined even after the death of the body to hold on just a little longer. Other souls immediately depart, slipping into the Shadowfell and flashing across its dim expanse like falling stars. Even then, a soul can be called back to life with the proper ritual, such as Raise Dead. The vast majority of souls that are not called back flow through the gates of the Raven Queen's abode, and from there pass beyond the cosmos . . . to where, even the gods cannot say.

A favored few souls are called by their gods after death to serve in the god's dominion. Some (the exalted) are selected because of the great deeds they accomplished in life in support of that god's ideals, whereas others (the damned) might be selected for punishment, because they were subjected to a curse, or because these individuals sold their souls when they were still living mortals.

Devils and other foul creatures also crave the souls of mortals. Such creatures sometimes hunt the Shadowfell, looking to gather bodiless souls, but rarely with any success. Only exceptional effort allows a living creature to affect a bodiless soul in any fashion whatsoever, and even great devils lack this ability. Thus, these creatures have learned to arrange for taking mortal souls into custody while those souls yet inhabit living bodies. An individual who makes a deal with a devil usually comes to this sort of end.

The Nature of Undeath

Death isn't always the end, even for creatures that have no great destiny. The characteristics that define living creatures create many possibilities for continued existence, or at least the appearance of it. Through various machinations of fate or intent, a creature can remain in the world after its death as a plague on the living—or something more.

Soulless Undead

Sentient living creatures have a body and a soul, the latter of which is the consciousness that exists in and departs from the body when it perishes. A body's "life force" that drives a creature's muscles and emotions is called the animus. The animus provides vitality and mobility for a creature, and like the soul, it fades from the body after death. Unlike the soul, it fades from the body as the body rots.

If "revived" in the proper fashion, the animus can rouse the body in the absence of a soul. (This phenomenon is what makes it possible for creatures that were never alive, such as constructs, to become undead.) In some cases, the animus can even exist apart from the body as a cruel memory of life. Such impetus can come from necromantic magic, a corrupting supernatural influence at the place of death or interment, or a locale's connection to the Shadowfell. Strong desires, beliefs, or emotions on the part of the deceased can also tap into the magic of the world to give the animus power.

Most undead, even those that seem intelligent, are this sort of creature—driven to inhuman behavior by lack of governance of a soul and a hunger for life that can't be sated. Nearly mindless undead have been infused with just enough impetus to give the remains mobility but little else. Sentient undead have a stronger animus that might even have access to the memories of the deceased, but such monstrosities have few or none of the sympathies they had in life. A wight has a body and a feral awareness granted by the animus, but no soul. Even the dreaded wraith is simply a soulless animus, deeply corrupted and infused with strong necromantic energy.

The Shadowfell most often serves as the source of this impetus. In the Shadowfell, bodiless spirits are common, as are undead. Something within this echo-plane's dreary nature nurtures undead. This shadowstuff can "leak" into a dying creature as that being passes away. It can be introduced by necromantic powers or rituals. Or it can be siphoned into areas strongly associated with death, pooling there.

Undead with Souls

Some undead retain their souls after the death of the body. Rituals allow this sort of transformation. A potent destiny or vigorous enough strength of will sometimes enables (or forces) a creature to transcend death. Undead that retain their souls are more powerful and more dangerous than their soulless counterparts, having at least some access to the powers they had in life. Such undead are autonomous and as unpredictable as any other free-willed beings, though evil or selfish individuals are the most likely to seek immortality through rituals that lead to undeath.

Sentient ghosts are the most common of the undead that retain their souls without resorting to necromantic rituals. They have a purpose that fetters them to the world, even if it's only to spread misery or wreak vengeance. Death knights, liches, mummies, and vampires are created by rituals or processes that tie the soul to an unliving form. Similar creatures could be created in different circumstances. Such diversity among undead reflects the fact that death touches every part of existence.

Undead Genesis

When most living creatures think about how undead come into being, they connect the origin of undead with the animation of a dead body. That said, undead are actually "born" in a variety of ways.

Sins of the Soul

Powerfully evil acts resonate with such force that they can ripple across dimensions and open cracks in reality, permitting malevolent entities to escape into the mortal world. These entities seek out corporeal flesh, in particular the recently vacated vessels of the damned. Once inside the host, these spirits corrupt the animus, granting the corpse a semblance of life.

An evil, perverse, and intelligent creature can be reborn into undeath when the influence of the animus revives the memories of the vessel's previous host, although the soul of the creature is not present—these sorts of undead are just particularly wily animus-driven undead.

At other times, atrocious deeds call dark spirits into the cadaver of the newly deceased, leaving the original soul intact. Sometimes, good souls can be trapped within their bodies, to be slowly turned to evil as the depraved spirits corrupt the soul.

Even the living can be "infected" by undead spirits. The spirit possessed template on page 219 can be applied to living creatures whose bodies host undead spirits.

Tainted by Evil

Sites where evil creatures lair or where evil artifacts are stored can act as strong catalysts in the creation of undead. Undead so created are usually mindless animate corpses. Sometimes they are more powerful, soul-bearing undead whose spirits were corrupted while they lived in an area of tainted ground, and thus the creatures fell directly into undeath when their bodies succumbed.

Though some believe that some kind of fell power energizes animate creatures, it is more accurate to say that the animus or spirit resident in a walking corpse provides an undead creature with the requisite motive force for movement, and perhaps enough additional force to talk and even reason, and—most important—enough animation to prey on other creatures.

Dark deeds conducted by others can serve as a trigger for unlife, especially if such deeds accrue over months or years in one particular location. Such an area, more than any other, is worthy of the term "tainted by evil," though the religious-minded sometimes call such areas unsanctified ground.

Tainted areas can eventually affect living beings as well. The tomb tainted template on page 219 can be applied to living creatures that have been tainted by unsanctified ground.

Life Drain

Some effects can drain the "life force" or "life energy" of living creatures. This is usually reflected in the game as target creatures losing one or more healing surges. While some beneficial effects can be purposefully triggered by a player character in return for spending a healing surge (healing hit points, for instance), when a foe causes another creature to lose a healing surge, it is usually modeling life drain of some sort. For example, atropals, bodaks, and wights have powers that deduct healing surges. It's entirely possible that particularly foul rituals might also drain life in this fashion, especially those that require elaborate preparations and components. Life drained in this way is eaten and gone for good, transferred to another living creature to extend its life span, or utilized to empower some other effect or device.

When a living creature is drained to death by evil agencies, the husk of the body becomes a shell that is particularly susceptible to the influence of unlife. When an undead creature is responsible for draining the life force from a living creature, the creation of a new undead from the dead flesh is not assured, but the door is certainly open for unclean spirits to move into the recently evacuated house of the body.

Shake Things Up

In your campaign, you can violate PC expectations every so often to great effect. Here's something you might try: Introduce a nonevil undead creature into your campaign. When the PCs are next set upon by a horde of zombies, aid them with a rescue by an intrepid paladin. Only in the full light of morning is the dry, withered flesh and the skeletal form of their savior revealed.

More powerful undead siphon more life force than less powerful denizens of the grave. A wight devours the life force of living creatures to assuage its hunger for the soul it has lost and can never retrieve. Wraiths have a similar thirst for mortal souls, using the resulting energy to spawn their dreadful progeny. Similarly, vampires drain life-giving blood from their victims to satisfy their unquenchable hunger (in this instance, the blood is the physical medium for transferred life force).

Vile Contagion

Some undead carry diseases and infections that they pass on to creatures they attack. The most widely known of these maladies is mummy rot, which progressively damages its victims with necrotic energy until they succumb.

A few particularly abhorrent undead carry a powerful contagion that, when transferred to mortals, causes them to weaken and die at an alarming rate, rising as undead in a matter of hours unless a cure is rapidly administered. Once a creature is infected in this manner, little can be done to save him or her from becoming undead.

The infected zombie template on page 217 can be used to create undead that spread such contagion.

Purposeful Reanimation

Some obsessed knowledge-seekers pursue the spark of life too far, and thereby discover the dark fruits of undeath. They seek death's secrets because of their fear of death, thinking that if they can come to understand mortality, their fear will be extinguished and their survival assured. Those who tread this road to its conclusion sometimes embrace death completely, and do not become so much immortal as simply enduring. Spellcasters who adopt this existence are commonly known as liches. Most find to their sorrow that to forsake all the pleasures of life while continuing to exist is a fate worse than the absolution of true death.

Sometimes undead are created when corpse parts are sewn together to form a great amalgam of death. Then, when the composite corpse is touched with lightning and the proper reanimation ritual performed, an undead creature rises, its mind rotted but its flesh strong with the animus of several beings. Such creatures share some external visual similarities to flesh golems, but are different in ability and origin.

The lich template (Dungeon Master's Guide, page 179) presents rules for creating new liches. The blaspheme on page 134 provides several examples of "sewn together and animated" undead.

The physiology of the undead is typically divided into two categories: insubstantial entities without physical form such as specters and wraiths, and corporeal horrors such as wights, vampires, and zombies. Whether corporeal or insubstantial, undead do not feel the world around them like the living do.

Most undead (whether corporeal or not) have several physiological attributes in common, including darkvision, immunity to disease and poison, resistance to necrotic energy, and vulnerability to radiant energy.

All undead were once living beings, in that they had a soul. Soulless constructs do not and cannot become undead.

Body, Soul, and Animus

Most sentient creatures have a body, and most also possess a soul. The true nature and origin of the soul is subject to much debate, but most people can agree that, at the very least, the soul is synonymous with a creature's consciousness, and upon the death of a creature, it departs.

Every creature's soul is unique to it but apart from it, capable of granting the creature sentience (as opposed to the natural workings of the creature's fleshy organs). Souls are immortal; they exist prior to birth and beyond the death of a creature's body. When a creature's seat of consciousness departs (streaking across the Shadowfell), that creature dies, sooner or later.

Without its soul, a body immediately begins to die, despite the animus that pumps blood and preserves physical memory. The animus is also a connection between the body and the soul that allows a creature's physical and spiritual aspects to act in concert.

Most undead, including many intelligent ones, lack the soul that departed upon their body's initial death. These undead are driven to inhuman, bestial behavior because they lack the moral compass that served them in life; now all that remains is a decaying body and an animus driven by needs unfiltered by conscience. Many of these undead have an insatiable hunger for living creatures.

A few undead retain their souls. Except for ghosts, it is unusual to run across an undead creature that retains its soul without having prepared for that eventuality prior to the creature's death. Such is the case for a lich, which expends vast resources to perform the ritual that binds its soul to its body forever. Even when a lich's body begins to rot, the soul remains. For this reason, liches and other undead that retain knowledge of the powers they commanded in life are rightfully feared.

Undead Anatomy

One unifying trait defines all undead creatures—they were previously alive, and most lived in bodies of blood, flesh, and bone.

Decomposing Body

Though it can seem sudden, death is more a process than an event. It begins when the heart ceases to beat or the lungs cease to breathe. First the brain shuts down, then other organs, and finally, the skin dies.

At the moment the body is fully dead, decomposition begins. Unanimated corpses suffer stiffness within a half-day of death, which slowly fades over the next three days. Most of the "living dead" exhibit this stiffness in their movements, to a greater or lesser extent, for the duration of their undead existence.

When life flees, so does a body's ability to fend off parasites and insects. Within weeks, corpses both animate and mundane swarm with maggots, the hatched larvae of various types of insects. At the same time, the flesh begins to rot, releasing various effluvia into the body cavities of the corpse, as well as vile-smelling gases.

After this point, the process of decomposition of a mundane corpse and that of an animate undead diverge. The animus that gives false life to the undead arrests the complete decay and collapse of the physical body. With the decomposition process halted, most undead appear as half-rotted corpses.

Some undead can naturally suppress or mask this unpleasant fact of unlife, and others are able to use magic to accomplish the same. But most face a long existence of ongoing rot. From the moment of their animation to unlife, their bodies slowly but continuously undergo the biological process of decomposition.

In vampires, decomposition can be halted altogether with a steady influx of fresh blood. Due to a

Undead Power Sources

Some necromancers use the arcane power source to fuel their magic, while others call upon the power of shadow to effect their dim miracles. Still others animate undead by the power of the divine, calling on fell gods to raise legions of bound wraiths to their will.

Some undead are born as a result of sheer force of will. These rare individuals staved off the afterlife by harnessing the great power of their soul (or ki). Rarer still, other undead abominations call upon the great psionic powers of the mind to cheat death.

vampire's nocturnal nature, its skin is typically very pale unless it has recently fed. Some vampires apply flesh-colored powder to their skin in an attempt to pass as human. Similarly, ghouls can put off further decomposition by the regular intake of recently living flesh.

Insubstantial undead do not decompose, but their appearance is sometimes hazy and half-realized, giving them a tattered or rotted appearance. This is especially true of those that were created from the corpses of victims killed by extreme violence or from corpses already partly rotted.

Sense Organs

As with other predatory creatures, undead have senses sufficiently sensitive to locate their prey, and in some cases, these senses are enhanced.

Vision: An undead's vision works in a manner similar to a living creature's eyesight, especially in creatures that have unrotted eyes. The animus that animates the undead stimulates the decomposing organs. In most undead, necromantic energy provides further enhancement, allowing them to see even in complete darkness. Creatures whose physical eyes are completely rotted can instinctively mimic the appearance of natural eyes, which can manifest as glowing points or orbs of light within the undead's eye sockets.

Scent and Hearing: Undead can hear or smell their environment to some extent, either through necromantic stimulation of the remaining organs originally used for that purpose, or by instinctively mimicking structures that accomplish the same function. However, many undead function reasonably well without these senses, and the energy of animation provided by the animus might fade over time. As such, most undead possess very poor smell and hearing. On the other hand, vampires and ghouls have very acute auditory and olfactory senses enhanced by their state of undeath.

Taste: The animation of undeath permits certain undead, primarily those with tongues such as ghouls and vampires and other undead that physically feed on the living, to savor the flavor of their prey. Though the urge that drives these undead to feed upon the living is an unholy compulsion that can't be denied, the ability to taste a screaming victim adds to the undead's feeding experience.

Touch: Undead have limited ability to process physical sensation, since nerve receptors throughout the body remain dead after reanimation. Those that have some sense of touch retain only a crude approximation of a real tactile sense. Similarly, undead are unlikely to experience pain of any kind. In battle, mindless undead do not even notice that their bodies have been severely damaged, and they continue to attack until they are physically unable to do so.

Circulatory System

In a living creature, the circulatory system is responsible for dispersing oxygen and essential nutrients throughout the body. The heart, the lungs, and a complete system of blood vessels facilitate this process.

Most undead do not employ their decaying cardiovascular systems. The heart of a corporeal undead typically lies in its chest cavity as a shriveled husk, with no ability to circulate blood throughout the body.

Vampires and ghouls are notable exceptions to this rule; they can kick-start their circulatory systems into action upon feasting on mortal blood. This reaction temporarily negates the pallor of their skin and starts their hearts beating once more in their chests.

Respiration

Undead have no biological reason to breathe, and as such have no need for a functioning respiratory system. This is not to say that undead cannot breathe. Many use their respiratory systems to speak, though they require only gross movements to force air through their rotted larynxes.

Digestive System

Undead that do not feed have no digestive systems. Those that feed on living flesh retain many aspects of a living creature's digestive tract, including a stomach where various nutrients are extracted. However, this process is somewhat mediated by the creature's unnatural nature, and even without all the complicated processes that occur in a living creature's stomach, a brain-eating zombie or a blood-sucking vampire gains the benefit it seeks from the substance it eats . . . though never enough benefit to satiate it.

Some kinds of undead feed on "life force" or even the souls of living creatures. These undead obviously do not require a digestive system; they directly

Insubstantial Undead

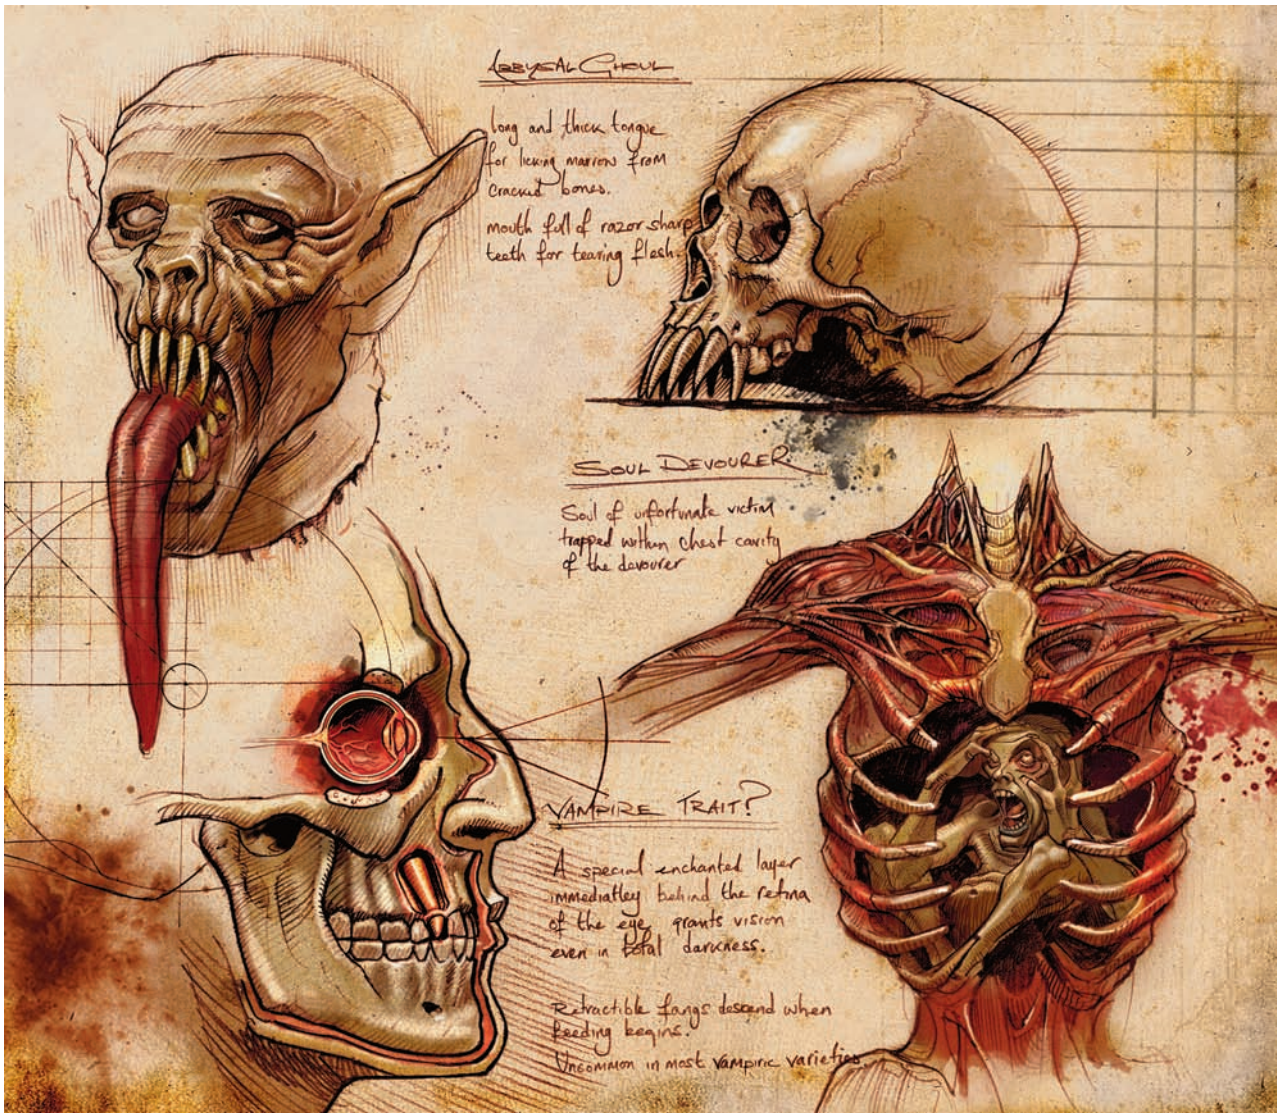
Insubstantial undead lack bodies composed of physical substance and have no vital areas, and thus take half damage from all sources. However, despite being insubstantial, undead such as wraiths and ghosts still have senses that operate after a fashion as do those of corporeal undead. In truth, an insubstantial undead's body mimics the anatomical details of corporeal undead. The animus of an insubstantial undead forms a quasi-real body and uses it to interact with the environment much as a corporeal undead does. Thus, despite its filmy appearance, an insubstantial undead can touch, taste, speak, see, hear, and smell as well (or poorly) as a regular undead creature might.



PETER MCKINSTRY

metabolize a living animus or soul, changing it into motive energy.

Other Characteristics

Whether devilish fangs, grasping talons, or an aura of fear, many undead are enhanced by bizarre physical traits and supernatural abilities.

Fangs: Elongated fangs are a common trait among undead that have inescapable cravings. Some undead, most notably vampires, have retractable canines that extend when they feed.

Claws: Corporeal undead experience rapid nail growth following mortal death. Some ritualistically sharpen their fingernails and toenails into lethal claws. The fingernails of vampires have a glassy appearance.

Tongue: A few varieties of undead have preternaturally strong and lengthy tongues. Ghouls and their kin are the most iconic of this kind, though some claim that the barb-tipped tongue of the viscera devourer is the most repulsive.

Special Abilities: Undead possess a multitude of creepy and lethal abilities. Some can change form (the vampire's mist form power and the bodak's spectral form), incapacitate their victims (the ghoul's claws attack and the spirit devourer's spirit rupture), or deliver rot and decay with a single touch (the mummy rot spread by all mummies and the zombie-spawn plague propagated by infected zombies).

Metabolism

The concept of metabolism and a creature animated solely by necromantic magic have little in common. Living creatures have a metabolism, in the normally understood sense. Undead do not. That said, some undead feed on the living. Though such feeding might be crude and in no way impart growth to the undead, the fact remains that the mere act of eating implies a metabolism of sorts.

When a living creature eats, it breaks down food in some sort of digestive process that not only provides nutrition, but as a secondary effect of its life processes produces heat (even in reptiles, though these primitive creatures are unable to regulate their own internal temperature). One of the many noticeable characteristics undead do not share with living creatures is the generation of internal warmth. Without life processes that give off heat as a by-product, undead are cold to the touch—"cold as the grave," as the saying goes. Undead are comfortable in (make that "oblivious to") a wide range of temperatures that would make living creatures uncomfortable and even kill them with extended exposure. While undead can't withstand supernatural cold or heat any better than living creatures can, they can linger for years in windswept arctic grottos or sun-baked desert tombs.

Diet

The majority of undead are capable of continued existence for months, years, or even longer without eating. However, many undead crave the life force, flesh, or blood of the living, and a few actually need to feed (even if infrequently) to maintain their hideous unlife, or at least to satisfy their addiction (as might be the case for "diet dependent" undead). On the other end of the spectrum, a wide range of undead neither require nor crave to feed on anything at all, and merely coast through the years on the charge of necromantic energy that initially animated them.

Intelligent undead who crave life force, flesh, or blood sometimes make a game of feeding. They construct elaborate dramas involving unsuspecting soon-to-be victims—all the better if the dénouement of such games devolves suddenly into screaming terror.

Undead feeding requirements can be broken down into three categories: not required, inescapable craving, and diet dependent.

Not Required: Many undead have no requirement to feed and continue to exist solely through the original impetus provided by their animation. A few undead that fit this category include bodaks, death knights, dracoliches, flameskulls, and phantom warriors. Many other undead also belong to this category.

Inescapable Craving: Several types of undead could likely do entirely without flesh or blood morsels to see them through. However, the curse of their unlife inflicts upon them an inescapable craving. Denied, such a craving can transform even sentient undead into mindless, raging beasts. After the raging hunger is satisfied, the craving dissipates to a tolerable level, at least for a while.

If their hunger is denied too long, sentient and mindless undead alike allow their craving to drive them into the open or into tactically questionable attacks.

Undead that fit this category include devourers, ghouls, wraiths, and wights.

Diet Dependent: Some sages who study the nature of undeath, the Shadowfell, and necromantic energies of animation claim that, in truth, no undead is actually diet dependent. Instead, the few undead described in stories who seem to lapse into torpor if they are not supplied with life force might actually merely be severely addicted to their food source. So addicted, in fact, that when denied the sustenance they crave, they weaken, or at least appear to do so. However, no matter how enervated such creatures seem to become by lack of feeding, they cannot be "starved to destruction." This fact is taken by the sages described earlier as proof that no undead is, indeed, actually diet dependent. And it's quite true: A fresh infusion of its preferred food apparently always brings the creature back to full strength, or so the stories all relate.

Undead that fit this category come in many shapes and varieties, but almost all of them are some kind of vampire.

Rest and Recovery

Undead do not sleep, but (as is true of the living) they must take an extended rest to recovery daily abilities and a short rest to recover encounter abilities. Mindless undead not engaged in combat are assumed to be taking a rest unless they have been commanded to perform some other activity.

Vulnerabilities

Though undead enjoy many resistances to dangers that trouble living flesh, they too have their vulnerabilities.

Weapons cut through animate bodies as readily as through living flesh, and even insubstantial undead are dispersed by repeated swings of a blade or a hammer.

Since undead are at home in the shadows, radiant energy is often more dangerous to them than to most other kinds of creatures. Vampire spawn are something of a special case in this regard—although they are not vulnerable to radiant energy, they can be hampered or even destroyed by direct exposure to sunlight.

Self-Propagation

Several varieties of undead can create new unliving progeny. Taking a broader view, undead self-propagation might be regarded as an infectious disease: It is nasty, it is easily spread, and it kills its hosts. Of course, a plague of this nature is far worse than any common disease, but the cure is little different—eliminate the source of infection, and you eliminate the malady.

The most dangerous and powerful undead are intelligent beings (which, fortunately for mortals, are a small minority of all undead). Some of these creatures became undead by choice or through repeated evil acts; others attained this state as the result of attacks by other undead or chance encounters with dangerous magic. Regardless of how they came to be undead, all of them now think very differently from the way they did in life. Their minds have changed as much as their bodies.

Necromancy and Morality

Civilized folk consider creating and controlling undead to be acts of evil. Only a few argue that the practice of necromancy is not inherently malevolent by nature. Indeed, they claim that many rituals deemed "good" or holy, such as Raise Dead, employ necromantic aspects in their performance. However, these protests seem more academic than authentic. For instance, the Raise Dead ritual, though it interacts with the dead, does not animate corpses to unlife. Likewise, of all the undead fashioned through necromantic ritual and chance, the vast majority are indeed evil. Someone who claims that undead are at heart unaligned might be hiding something.

That said, if considered in isolation and without context, some undead are not necessarily evil. Mindless undead in particular have no moral leanings one way or the other. But in truth, agencies willing to dishonor the remains of living creatures by animating them into walking corpses are usually up to no good.

But as with every rule, exceptions exist. Everyone has heard tales of apparitions that warn the living of hazards and impending disasters. Epic stories speak of skeleton armies marching up out of crypts in besieged cities to snatch away children and bear them to safety. Whether such creatures acted of their own accord or were compelled by an unseen controller's magic, none can say.

Undead Spirituality

Most intelligent undead are self-serving egoists with little regard for divinity. Though Orcus claims the mantle of Demon Prince of the Undead, his desire for absolute control over his subjects limits the number of worshipers that willingly serve him. Undead arcanists pay lip service to Vecna, primarily out of a desire to gain his secrets. On the other hand, undead that have souls steer clear of the Raven Queen. She seems uninterested in corpses animated by residual animus, but she takes a dim view of undead that cling to souls that rightly (as she sees it) should have fallen to her for judgment.

Undead Mentality

When discussing the psychology of the undead, it is first necessary to distinguish between the three sorts of undead minds.

Mindless Undead: The simplest kinds of undead, such as skeletons and zombies, have no psychological traits. These beings are mindless creatures capable of no more thought or emotion than a clockwork mechanism.

Soulless Undead: Creatures such as specters, wights, and wraiths are soulless beings that retain only remnants of the minds they had in life. They can be exceedingly cunning, and some can freely draw upon their living memories. However, these undead have been irrevocably changed by their transformations. Lacking souls, they are perpetually filled with a tormenting hunger for their lost souls, a hunger that can only be sated by devouring living creatures. These undead hate the living in part because they possess souls that the undead lack.

Some of these soulless undead are little more intelligent than cunning animals, whereas others retain the same intelligence they had in life. In either instance, their minds are far more focused than before. These undead have only two desires: to survive and to devour the living. They have no thoughts, emotions, or plans that do not involve attempting to satisfy these two drives. The most intelligent and strong-willed of these undead can make complex plans, but these plans consist of nothing more than ways to insure a continued supply of mortals to feed their hunger.

Soulless undead retain memories of their previous loves, passions, and interests, but these are little more than distant remembrances. Even the strongest feelings now have little more than a passing faint significance. Occasionally, one of the soulless undead might pause to stare at something that fascinated it in life or might allow a former loved one to go free rather than devouring him. However, such actions are rare. Most soulless undead will devour one of their children as readily as they would a stranger or an enemy. Except on rare occasions when they are driven by memories of their former lives, the psychology of these undead is that of a ravening, ever-hungry monster that kills because its hunger can never be sated and because it hates all life—especially life that reminds it of its former existence. These undead have no culture or society, they create no art or literature, and they ultimately care about nothing other than their hunger.

Undead with Souls: In vivid contrast, the few kinds of undead that retain their souls, such as death knights, liches, mummies, and vampires, are intelligent beings that retain all the passions and mental complexities they possessed in life. These creatures are dangerous and cunning foes, and on rare occasions even more dangerous allies.

Some are driven by desires that approach the intensity of the soulless undead's need to kill, but these desires do not utterly control their behavior. For instance, although vampires hunger for the blood of the living, this hunger is not the center of their existence. For many, it is simply a need that must be met, and they continue to focus their attention on many of the same passions they had when alive.

Because their undead state eliminates many of the distractions of life, both positive and negative, undead that retain souls can be exceptionally careful and patient planners.

Tainted Minds

Whether an undead is mindless or sentient, the mere state of undeath twists and transforms the creature's consciousness. In the case of soulless undead, this transformation is terrible and obvious. If transformed into a wraith, even someone who devoted his life to caring for children would feast upon those he once protected. At best, such beings might decide to pursue other prey to spare a former loved one. However, if other prey is lacking, the creature always chooses to attempt to slake its hunger.

The transformation of undead that retain their souls is far more subtle. A former comrade can talk with a vampire or a lich about adventures they shared when they were both alive, and the undead might display the same feelings as it did in life. However, undeath gradually alters these beings' perspective. Since they are no longer among the living, undead feel considerably less concern for the things and people they once cared for most. Their morals shift. They might still value friends or family members, but snuffing out the life of a random stranger ceases to be abhorrent, because they place no value on life. Ultimately, these undead cease to care about anyone or anything except for themselves and whatever agenda drove them to seek undeath in the first place. If an undead that has a soul did not choose undeath, revenge becomes one of its goals, even extending to those not responsible for its condition.

Separation from Life

At their core, undead exist in opposition to life. The act of becoming undead, whether voluntary or not, separates them from the world of the living. Some hate the living and regard them as prey. Even undead that have souls and feel no need to consume the living regard breathing beings as lesser creatures whose wishes and desires are laughably shortsighted, even childlike.

This separation derives from the fact that the various pleasures and discomforts that living beings experience on a constant basis do not affect the undead. They do not feel chilled on a cold winter day or comfortable before a warm fire, and they have no ability to appreciate a fine meal (unless it is a screaming, blood-spurting meal). They are outsiders to the world of living sensations. Some undead envy the living their pleasures, but most consider these pleasures to be needless distractions.

Undead that feed upon the living experience an even greater degree of separation. For them, humans and other mortal creatures are food. Their presence makes the undead hungry. Even those undead that attempt to hold onto their humanity find that their living companions and loved ones viscerally register to them as walking, talking meals. This separation can be an interesting source of conflict for PCs who are temporarily transformed into predatory undead.

Singular Drives

Part of becoming undead involves letting go of the concerns of the living. Mortality is by its nature a hectic state in which individuals are constantly at the mercy of various physical and psychological drives. Many of the undead feel various sorts of unnatural hunger, but few experience any compulsion other than this singular drive. The remainder of the troubles and distractions that plague the living vanish, leaving intelligent undead with a calm and terrible patience. If absolutely necessary, they can outlast mortal foes. Plans that require years or decades to complete seem far more reasonable to beings that can exist for thousands of years.

Over time, intelligent undead that possess souls become exceptionally focused on one or two specific goals. Some seek political power and attempt to rule over vast numbers of subjects, either as an unliving sovereign or as a secretive and undying power behind a mortal throne. Others become obsessed with learning ever more powerful magic and obtaining artifacts. To some, such magic is merely a means to attaining a specific end, but for others, powerful artifacts and rituals are desired because they allow their users to bend reality and demonstrate an unrivaled command of magic.

A few undead seek knowledge of a broader sort above all else. Over decades or centuries, they painstakingly assemble lore that interests them, such as the histories of lost and forgotten kingdoms. Because undead are so long-lived, those who retain their intelligence can gather lore that would otherwise be lost to the ages. Scholars given to the study of lore are thus drawn to particular undead, in hopes of learning something of previous ages. Such study sometimes leads those scholars to consider for themselves the lure of eternal existence, unfettered by death.

Other undead are collectors that relentlessly accumulate beautiful and unique objects of various sorts. However, the aberrant nature of their unlife taints even these desires. Like other undead, they care for little beyond their passion, especially not the wishes or even the lives of others. Someone who refuses to sell an interesting or unique book or work of art to an undead historian or collector has effectively invited thieves (or, more likely, assassins) into his house, intent on killing the owner and retrieving the object for their undead master.

The most heinous of the undead develop an obsession either with death or with exterminating a particular sort of intelligent being, or they hate all living beings with an inhuman passion. Many of these undead see living members of their former race as walking proof of how weak and imperfect they once were and feel compelled to rid the world of such imperfection, in much the same way that humans attempt to rid their dwellings of noisome vermin. Some do not wish to merely kill the living. They wish to transform living beings into undead, because in the depths of their inhuman minds they truly believe that unlife is superior to life and so they seek to rescue the living from the horrors and weaknesses of life.

SOCIETY

Undead have no unified culture and claim citizenship in no nation. However, they can still be defined by how they interact with other creatures, especially how they interact with societies and nations. Though most undead prefer to exist on the fringes of living nations, some are more refined in their sensibilities. Undead can be societal outcasts, secret members of a society, acknowledged citizens, cult members, or even members of a bleak nation (a society made up significantly or entirely of undead).

Outcasts

Most undead are not part of any society. They are animated through chance or malign power, they lurk for years in or near a grave, and if they need to feed, they scrabble and claw their way to their desired sustenance as best they can. They continue this behavior ceaselessly until they are destroyed. Mindless undead make up the bulk of the outcast undead, but any undead, regardless of its intelligence, can fall into this basic predatory existence.

Secret Citizens

Undead that can hide their presence in a city or its outskirts, or those that have sufficient skill or magic to disguise their lifeless nature, sometimes partake in living society. Undead that naturally appear alive, particularly vampires, commonly employ this trick. In this way, some undead never leave the city or nation where they resided when they were alive, though their habits change to support their masquerade.

Undead that choose to retain their ties to living society do so for several reasons. For instance, some undead believe that retaining the contacts and entertainments they enjoyed as living creatures adds to their existence. Additionally, infiltrating living society also provides the undead with a constantly renewing pool of potential victims. Other intelligent undead have requirements beyond simple nourishment. Liches, in particular, enter their unliving state in order to prevent mortality from curtailing their arcane research. Some liches are content to entomb themselves for eons of private study, but others want access to the latest magical theories and research. These undead maintain the charade of life to ensure their continued access to such resources as magical academies, spellcaster guilds, and libraries of lore.

Acknowledged Citizens

In some particularly cosmopolitan cities, undead need not hide their status and can be open members of society. In such locations, the righteous paladin who takes it upon herself to slay an undead "monster" without provocation or proof of the creature's unlawful activity would find herself on the wrong side of the law. Most cities in the world are not so open-minded that they suffer openly undead citizens, but a few such places do exist (especially those that are under the auspices of other undead; see below). Cities on other planes, particularly those that already tolerate a mixed citizenry, are most likely to grant ungrudging citizenship to undead, presuming that those undead follow all the rules of polite society (first and foremost, no predation on other citizens). Sigil, the City of Doors, is the most well known of such tolerant locations.

Some nation-states that allow undead members ignore the potential problems implicit in such an arrangement and count on regular laws to keep undead in line—it's against the law in most cities to murder other citizens, no matter how hungry the murderer is.

Other places, such as the city of Eredu, take a more proactive approach. In Eredu, undead that want to be citizens must submit to a process of authorization to gain unrestricted access to the metropolis. An undead that has recognized feeding requirements (notably vampires) must obtain authorization for a given length of time (which varies by district, but never more than a year). This authorization requires the undead to describe how it will meet its feeding needs for the given period in a way that does not involve harm to other citizens, visitors to Eredu, or citizens of other locations that could find fault if an undead seeks sanctuary in Eredu for crimes against the living in other nations. Most such plans involve the purchase of livestock from which the undead obtains sustenance.

In the cities and nations of the world, living citizens are presumed to be upstanding members of society until proven otherwise, but for undead, whose natures are impossible to suppress, the presumption almost always goes the other way. Undead that are openly part of a society that tolerates them must go a step farther than the average citizen to maintain their civilized nationality. They must be careful not to break any rules or overstep any boundaries, or their citizenship might not be the only thing revoked.

Cults and Secret Cabals

Some undead, whether they are hidden within or openly part of a society, are also members of sinister networks that exist beyond the notice of the living world. Most of these organizations cannot operate in the public eye without fear of reprisal. One such group is the Blood Scion Heresy (see below).

Orcus, Demon Prince of the Undead, enjoys the suffering of the living. Orcus's cults are perhaps the most feared of all the undead-centric cults, and no matter how often the cult is put down, it rises again in a new guise prosecuting a new evil plot. See page 210 of the Monster Manual for more on the cults of Orcus, and "The Ashen Covenant" in Dragon® Magazine #364 for a detailed look at an Orcus cult.

Those who worship Vecna are eager for knowledge, no matter the methods used to obtain it. Vecna's servants desire to learn that which was not meant to be known and that which others wish to keep secret. Undeath is merely one path to knowledge and secrets, one that allows the devotee to extend his or her search long beyond a mortal life span. A temple of Vecna is described on page 96.

Realms of the Dead

In some places, the roles of the living and the dead in society are turned upside down. Undead are a part of society to such an extent that they are completely integrated. Undead merchants sell their wares in the shadowy end of the market bazaar, undead councilors hold positions of authority, and undead adventurers seek gold and glory alongside (or instead of) living thrill-seekers. For example, undead are counted as full citizens in the fell city of Nocturnus as opposed to in Eredu, where they are merely tolerated. Living citizens from other nations can visit Nocturnus and conduct their business, drawn by the liberty of a city in which any sort of activity is not only permitted, but encouraged.

In other places, undeath is the dominant aspect of society. Only the dead partake of the society's benefits, and all the needs of the society are addressed. Farms on the outskirts of such cities do not grow grain, but instead produce living creatures (often humanoids) to feed the undead masses that require life essence, blood, or flesh for sustenance. Unless a would-be member of this society is already undead, becoming a member requires the creature to undergo the transformation into unlife.

For the most part, these so-called bleak nations are rooted in evil. By their nature, they revere death, and they allow the veneration of archdevils, demon lords, and malevolent gods. Of course, bleak nations only allow such veneration if doing so does not threaten the rulers of said nation with replacement. In places where evil is thick, gang warfare pitting cambions against vampires can rule the streets, while behind darkened eaves, the initiates of Orcus plot ways to expand their power into the cities of the living.

Elder Evils

Like exarchs and certain unique fiends, elder evils are powerful entities and legendary beings who have garnered enough followers to qualify as cult icons.

Atropus, the World Born Dead: Atropus drifts through the gulfs of space, trying to find its way back to consume the world with its gruesome touch. The afterbirth of the world's creation, or perhaps an undead primordial, Atropus dreams of nothing but unmaking all things.

Haemnathuun, the Blood Lord: Before the apotheosis of Orcus, this ancient primordial claimed the title of Blood Lord. Today his immense, decaying corpse floats silently upon the Astral Sea. See page 120 for a lair set upon Haemnathuun's corpse.

Blood Scion Heresy

The Blood Scion Heresy is one of a handful of so-called blood cults dedicated to the worship of vampire lords. Cult members willingly become thralls to these vampire lords.

The vampire thrall template on page 219 can be applied to a living creature that serves a vampire lord.

Lore

DC 20: The Blood Scion Heresy was founded on the principle that blood is a holy sacrament, and through its consumption the righteous will be blessed with eternal life.

DC 25: Particularly fervent worshipers have been known to sacrifice themselves in an unholy ritual that results in their transformation into blood elementals.

Organization

A cult cell attempts to limit its membership to twenty-five members in any given city. If the cell were to grow larger, the presence of so many vampires could be difficult to conceal. High preceptors enforce strict rules that dictate when and where the thralls can feed, so that hunting does not attract undue attention.

Leader: The cult has no true leader, but the Masked One is seen as the organization's ultimate authority.

⨁ Coagulated Smash (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
+16 vs. AC; 2d8 + 5 damage, and ongoing 5 necrotic damage (save ends); see blood call.

Flowing Form (move; at-will)
The blood elemental shifts up to 4 squares.

Bloodied Spawn (when first bloodied; encounter)
The blood elemental splits into two Huge individuals, the second one occupying a space adjacent to the original creature. Each of the two creatures has hit points equal to one-half the original's current hit points. Both creatures act on the original creature's initiative count. Effects applied to the original blood elemental do not apply to either of the individuals after the split occurs. A blood elemental can't split if reduced to 0 hit points by the attack that bloodied it.

If out of combat for 5 minutes, the two halves combine back into one blood elemental, which has hit points equal to the combined value of the two halves.

Blood Drain (standard; recharges when an adjacent creature becomes bloodied) ✦ Healing
Requires combat advantage against the target; +17 vs. Fortitude; 1d12 + 8 damage, and the target is weakened (save ends), and the high preceptor regains 63 hit points.

Betraying Gaze (minor; recharge ⚅)
Ranged 10; +17 vs. Will; the target makes a melee basic attack as free action against an adjacent ally of the high preceptor's choice.

Blood Storm (standard; recharge ⚅) ✦ Healing, Necrotic
Close burst 4; targets enemies; +17 vs. Fortitude; 1d6 + 7 necrotic damage, and the target is dazed (save ends). Undead within the burst regain 15 hit points.

Bloody Mist Form (standard; encounter) ✦ Polymorph
The high preceptor becomes insubstantial and gains a fly speed of 12, but cannot make attacks. The high preceptor can remain in mist form for up to 1 hour or can end the effect as a minor action.

Alignment Chaotic evil Languages Abyssal, Common

Headquarters: The most well-known cult outpost is a storage cellar below The Howling Troll, a theater and opera house.

Hierarchy: Beyond the Masked One and his high preceptors, no hierarchy exists. Few refer to one another as "cultists" or by any religious title.

Members: The Blood Scion Heresy is a disorganized amalgamation of landed lords and petty nobles jockeying for positions of favor within the society.

Blood Elemental

A partially coagulated mass of blood drawn from its past victims, the blood elemental is a swirling vortex of malignant elemental evil. Held together by powerful necromantic forces, this entity is greatly feared for its suffocating attacks, which leech out large amounts of blood from its victims.

Blood Elemental Tactics

When a blood elemental senses potential prey, it quickly moves to engage, hoping to draw out the blood of its victim in full quantity. Blood elementals

The Howling Troll

The Howling Troll is a theater and opera house in a large port city that is the site of a significant amount of trade, heavily populated with foreign merchants and thrill-seekers. Despite its lowbrow name, The Howling Troll is slightly too expensive for sailors and day laborers. Indeed, the place caters to courtiers, merchants, and the spoiled children of nobility. The cell of Blood Scion Heretics that rests in the cellar below the theater could hardly wish for a better lair. A few of the vampire lords even perform in the musical productions given on the stage, before mingling with the crowd to find a likely victim to exsanguinate later that night.

The Howling Troll's proprietor is a mortal in thrall to the opera's headliner, a demure, pale-skinned woman named Synn Arian. The proprietor knows that Synn is a vampire lord and that many of her fellow performers are as well. He hopes to one night be made a lord, in return for providing such an ideal location for the cult's cell.

Synn Arian is a talented singer and playwright, and she places herself in the starring role for each new production she pens. These productions are tragedies and deal with dark subjects, mimicking the end that some unlucky patrons might face hours after the curtains close.

use flowing form to best tactical advantage, commonly flanking their victims in combination with another elemental or through the use of bloodied spawn.

High Preceptors

High preceptors, the vampire lords that hold positions of responsibility within the Blood Scion Heresy, espouse secrecy above all. They preach the tenets of the cult and are charged with recruiting new members into the organization. Adventurers typically don't encounter a high preceptors unless they have successfully infiltrated a cell of the organization.

High Preceptor Tactics

A high preceptor is a merciless opponent against haughty interlopers and common infidels. Combat begins with betraying gaze against the strongest opponent, followed by blood drain if combat advantage has been achieved.

Hantumah

Hidden from view on three sides by lofty snow-covered peaks and protected on the fourth by a deep river gorge, the fabled nation of Hantumah is a realm populated entirely by the unliving.

Lore

A character knows the following information with a successful skill check.

History DC 20: Hantumah was not always ruled by undeath. The nation-state was once called Khatiroon, and it was a place for the living, a hidden paradise of tranquility and scholarly learning. Its fertile lands and abundant mineral resources provided its citizens with a rich, bountiful, and self-sustaining lifestyle nearly free from the strife and avarice common among their neighbors.

History DC 25: At the onset of winter just over a century past, a massive undead army gathered along Khatiroon's western frontier. At the head of the horde stood Raja Thirayam of Dukkharan, a lich of immeasurable power. Through the early months of the campaign the raja's army easily conquered Khatiroon and the settlements around it.

On Midwinter Night, Raja Thirayam held a grand celebration for his "subjects" in the ruins of the conquered capital city. He proclaimed the birth of Hantumah, Empire of the Bloodless, and appointed himself its emperor. The following week a wasting plague swept the newly renamed lands, slaying a great percentage of the population outright; the survivors were left with a debilitating sickness. As the plague raged, Raja Thirayam and his court necromancers performed rituals over the dead. By spring, more than half the nation's population had been transformed into undead servants of the emperor.

Streetwise DC 15: Adventurers wielding a great weapon that had been forged to destroy undead, some sort of stone scepter, made their way to the capital and killed Raja Thirayam. Lands near to Thirayam's empire thought they had reason to celebrate when word spread of the emperor's death. Elation turned to horror when it was revealed that upon the raja's death, his life force divided and possessed the four audacious heroes. In turn, each adventurer was slowly consumed by the malevolent spirit of the emperor; the raja lives on, his body four-fold and harder to destroy than ever.

Society

Hantumah is a militaristic society bent on conquest and the destruction of all that is holy.

Government: The Empire of Hantumah is divided into four provinces, each ruled by a sceptenar who holds absolute authority over his or her subjects. Sceptenars are murderous tyrants who rule through violence and intimidation.

Defense: Geographically, Hantumah is well protected, but rugged terrain is the least of the factors that keep the empire's enemies at bay. Hantumah is a hellish plagueland of undeath where few living creatures dare to trespass.

Trade: Hantumah neither seeks nor desires trade with its neighbors. The sceptenars and their undead subjects consider the living to be no better than food.

Culture: A mortal observer of the Empire of Hantumah would be awestruck by the bizarre and perverse nature of this undead society. Outlying villages are empty of anything except zombies that tirelessly go through the motions they pursued in life, even as their fields and livestock molder around them. These serve as the empire's first line of defense

Hantumah Resistance

An active band of undead hunters haunts the edges of Hantumah, finding secret routes into the guarded kingdom. The Lightbringers, as they call themselves, are secretly supported by a variety of distant kingdoms, who are worried that one day the bleak nation of Hantumah might swell beyond its borders. Several different companies have taken up the Lightbringers' banner (their symbol is a stylized half-sun, half-moon disc).

In recent years, money has flowed more liberally into the Lightbringers' coffers, and real organization has begun to form around the name. Indeed, a headquarters for the resistance has been constructed in a secluded valley not far from Hantumah. Some believe this isn't wise, since the structure gives the bleak nation a specific target against which it can strike. Regardless, most Lightbringers believe their cause is soon to be fulfilled. Their credo is "Suffer no false life."

against any living incursion. All the sentient undead moved inward and settled in the capital city (also called Hantumah, or Hantumah City). Here, where undead are thick, days-long rituals venerating the various sceptenars are the most common and easily understood activity, but many more gruesome activities occur behind shuttered spires.

Sceptenar Vasabhakti

Sceptenar Vasabhakti, daughter of the late ruler of Khatiroon, rules the southern province of Hantumah. Once a kind and benevolent princess, Vasabhakti was possessed and corrupted by the undead forces that overtook her homeland. Today, she is seen traveling the countryside riding her infernal stallion, Maheghoda the Black Courser.

Sceptenar Vasabhakti Level 22 Elite Soldier (Leader)
Death knight
Medium natural humanoid (undead) XP 8,300

Initiative +15 Senses Perception +13; darkvision
Marshal Undead aura 10; any lower-level undead ally within the aura gains a +2 bonus to attack rolls.
HP 398; Bloodied 199; see also second wind
AC 40; Fortitude 38, Reflex 35, Will 38
Immune disease, poison; Resist 15 necrotic; Vulnerable 10 radiant
Saving Throws +2
Speed 5
Action Points 1

⨁ Soulsword (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic, Weapon
+29 vs. AC; 1d8 + 9 damage plus 5 necrotic damage (plus an extra 2d6 necrotic damage on a critical hit)

⨁ Valiant Strike (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic, Weapon
Requires soulsword; +29 vs. AC, with a +1 bonus to the attack roll for each adjacent ally; 2d8 + 9 damage plus 5 necrotic damage.

⨁ Terrifying Smite (standard; encounter) ✦ Fear, Weapon
Requires soulsword; +29 vs. AC; 2d8 + 9 damage plus 5 necrotic damage, and the target is pushed 2 squares and can't move closer to Sceptenar Vasabhakti on its next turn.

Divine Challenge (minor; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
Close burst 5; targets one creature in burst; the target is marked until Sceptenar Vasabhakti uses this power against another target. If the target makes an attack that doesn't include Sceptenar Vasabhakti as a target, the target takes a -2 penalty to attack rolls and 16 necrotic damage.

Unholy Flames (standard; recharge ⚄ ⁞⁞) ✦ Fire, Necrotic
Close burst 2; +24 vs. Reflex; 6d8 + 13 fire and necrotic damage to living creatures. Undead creatures within the area (including Sceptenar Vasabhakti) deal 2d6 extra fire damage with melee attacks until the end of Sceptenar Vasabhakti's next turn.

Second Wind (standard; encounter) ✦ Healing
Sceptenar Vasabhakti spends a healing surge and regains 99 hit points. Sceptenar Vasabhakti gains a +2 bonus to all defenses until the start of her next turn.

Alignment Evil Languages Common, Draconic
Str 24 (+18) Dex 14 (+13) Wis 14 (+13)

⨁ Hooves (standard; at-will) ✦ Fire
+24 vs. AC; 1d8 + 7 damage, and ongoing 5 fire damage (save ends).

⨁ Trample (standard; at-will)
Maheghoda can move up to its speed and enter enemies' spaces. This movement provokes opportunity attacks, and Maheghoda must end its move in an unoccupied space. When it enters an enemy's space, the black courser makes a trample attack: +22 vs. Reflex; 1d8 + 6 damage, and the target is knocked prone.

Hell's Ride (while mounted by a friendly rider of 13th level or higher) ✦ Mount
Maheghoda's rider gains resist 20 fire.

Hooves of Hell (standard; recharge ⚄ ⁞⁞) ✦ Fire
Maheghoda moves up to 10 squares. Each square it leaves is filled with fire to a height of 10 feet until the end of its next turn. Any creature that hits Maheghoda with a melee attack during this move, or that enters one of the flaming squares, takes 10 fire damage.

Alignment Evil Languages –
Skills Endurance +19
Str 23 (+15) Dex 19 (+13) Wis 12 (+10)
Con 26 (+17) Int 16 (+12) Cha 15 (+11)

Tactics

If drawn into melee, the sceptenar charges into combat riding Maheghoda, seeking to trample her foes under her mount's hooves of hell. With her soulsword in hand, Vasabhakti is a formidable warrior, unleashing valiant strike and terrifying smite against her enemies.

Nocturnus

Anything goes in Nocturnus. What is considered illegal, immoral, amoral, or despicable in other places is allowed in Nocturnus, if the appropriate indulgence fee is paid to the accountants of Nocturnus, who tally up each sin, great and small, and determine its price. All the less savory acts of society occur here, as in any large city, but in Nocturnus, the law permits almost anything, including permitting intelligent undead to have full citizenship.

Lore

A character knows the following information with a successful skill check.

History DC 20: When the gods fought the primordials, there were losses on both sides. One primordial fell into the world. Where his corpse slowly moldered and died, a permanent stain formed on the fabric of reality. This stain influences all creatures that reside near it, even millennia later. Most are unaware of the influence, though some creatures are particularly sensitive to it and even derive power from it. A great city grew up around this ancient grave, a city called Nocturnus.

History DC 30: Over the thousands of years of the city's history, the population has ballooned, shrunk, been ravaged by necromantic diseases or curses, and been overrun by invading armies. The city has been expanded, razed, rebuilt, and subjected to various architectural shifts over the centuries. Like its history, the city's name has varied widely. Now known as Nocturnus, the city has borne many names in the past, including Vilifos, Maladon, Demonchalice, and Tyran.

Streetwise DC 10: Nocturnus is built around and within a crater called the Pit, half a mile across and two miles deep. Four great canyons empty into the Pit. Respected institutions are built on the higher ridges, while the slum wards, the Low Market, the Necropolis, and other establishments that shy from the light are found down within the constantly shadowed walls.

Streetwise DC 15: The Lords of Nocturnus each keep a palatial fortress-estate along the rim of the Pit. When formally meeting for council, they convene in a structure built on a precarious-seeming splinter of rock that rises up from the Pit, near the west rim. Called the Finger of Fate, this heavily guarded tower rises hundreds of feet into the air.

The architecture along the rim plateau is grand and imposing. White stonework columns, arches, colonnades, domes, and spires are the preferred decorations for structures inhabited by the minor lords (and their noble families) and guild leaders.

Streetwise DC 17: Obsidian sculptures are scattered about Nocturnus and carved into canyon walls, variously depicting angelic or demonic entities. Most sculptures stand 20 or more feet in height and are incorporated into surrounding structures. The sculptures have endured since the founding of the city, and few know their original purpose or the names of the entities the statues depict. Some of the sculptures are warlike, others suggestive, and others sprawled as if enduring heartrending grief.

Society

In Nocturnus, undead openly walk the streets and hold the highest levels of authority.

Government: The seven Lords of Nocturnus rule the city, though they leave day-to-day governance to a bevy of hired civil servants. Each lord is a supremely powerful individual who is rumored to be able to channel the taint that seeps up from the Pit to enhance its already potent strength. Of the seven, at least three are suspected to be undead, including Lord Tantalus, presumed to be some sort of lich because of his skull-like visage.

Defense: Nocturnus keeps an army of zombies in the warrens that riddle the earth below it. Few invading forces can stand up to the sheer number of undead bodies that Nocturnus is capable of throwing at an aggressor.

Trade: Nocturnus is an open society that has made its name on trade (nothing is taboo), especially trafficking in slaves, drugs banned in other places for the evil acts required in their preparation, and the creation of undead.

Culture: Because visitors and citizens of Nocturnus can get away with nearly anything if the proper indulgence fees are paid to the lords, good-aligned folk soon discover that societal rules that define upright behavior are completely absent. A visitor might become caught up in the "economics of sin" and lose sight of what is truly good and truly bad. She might find herself across the table from an undead card sharp, playing for stakes that include flasks of knife whiskey, a drink that is properly distilled only when mixed with a blade once used to perform an evil sacrifice. Despite the indulgence of the city's population, evil acts remain evil acts. Though no civil consequences follow evil actions, alignments shift to reflect real actions. Moral ambiguity can blind the incautious until visitors are so deeply ensnared that evil overtakes them.

The Shadowfell is an echo of the world, one tainted by necromantic seepage and that serves as the natural destination of bodiless spirits. The Raven Queen is one of the most well-known inhabitants of the Shadowfell, and most acknowledge her divine influence over death and the movement of souls.

Orcus would like nothing better than to wrest from the Raven Queen her influence over death and thereby send all souls, most of which pass beyond the ken of the cosmos, into undeath instead. He believes that this goal can be served if he is able to uncover the Raven Queen's true name, and he has charged his lieutenant Doresain (also known as King of the Ghouls) with that responsibility. Some of the most powerful and ambitious of the undead support Orcus in his effort; others throw in their lot with Vecna, typically as a way to further their own agendas. However, the vast majority of the undead care little for these divine rivalries.

A Home to the Undead

Most undead dwell in the world and, if they are capable of contemplation at all, see it as their natural home. However, undead that retain their souls and thus their full intelligence and creativity suspect that their existence is also influenced by the Shadowfell. Certainly it is a place far more suited to undead existence than is the world, with its umbral taint, necromantic seepage, and lack of full sunlight. Unless visiting undead have a compelling reason to return to the world, many remain or set up a permanent path they can access to travel to and from the Shadowfell at need.

Vampires are especially fond of the Shadowfell, since its sun is hidden behind clouds, low on the horizon, and pale and weak, unable to warm the land or burn undead flesh. Because the Shadowfell is full of the energy that animates undead, dwelling there gives them a palpable sense of well-being. Even the most twisted and inhuman undead feel more at ease there. Also, undeath alters the minds of even the most lucid undead, and the grim cast it gives to their thoughts perfectly matches the equally grim cast of the Shadowfell. Undead that can still appreciate such concepts describe it as a kind of paradise.

Because of the nature of their existence, the walking dead no longer enjoy most physical pleasures or suffer from most forms of physical discomfort. However, with enough time, they can come to grow fond of the Shadowfell, even becoming physically dependent on its dim ebb and flow of energy, just as a living person can become dependent on a drug. Take that drug away for too long, and the addict grows more and more maddened until another fix is found; the same holds true for undead taken from the Shadowfell to serve a necromancer in the world.

Even the tormented soulless undead, such as wights and wraiths, find some comfort in the Shadowfell. Portals and weak spots in the world that connect to the Shadowfell attract soulless undead. These weak spots also attract cultists who worship death, in hopes that necromantic seepage will empower their dark rites.

In the Shadowfell, undead do not shun the dim and gray daylight (which is evident only about a quarter of each day, and on some days seems to be skipped entirely). Undead in the world dwell in ruined buildings, the dark hearts of thick forests, and in underground caverns and tunnels. In the Shadowfell, undead retreat to such places only when threatened. Otherwise, they are equally comfortable everywhere. Mortal visitors from the world are unpleasantly surprised when they are set upon by wights or specters at "midday" in the Shadowfell.

Unless they seek to animate the bodies of the dead, living beings should know better than to bury bodies in the Shadowfell. Though rituals exist to keep a corpse temporarily free of unlife, it's better not to chance such things. Even when such rituals are used, corpses (whether buried or left behind untended) are likely to rise in the Shadowfell as shambling dead. Evil individuals are certain to rise as particularly nasty soulless monsters. In the world, only the most horrific and ruthless murderers return as specters, but in the Shadowfell, any death might spawn such a wicked undead.

Shadar-Kai and Shadowfell Undead

The shadar-kai abandoned the world and entered the Shadowfell in service to the Raven Queen long ago. Many shadar-kai remained close to the god and established themselves in and around her wintry kingdom, while others spread out through the plane to found new cities.

However, the shadar-kai soon learned that mortals cannot spend too long in this dim realm without succumbing to the spiritual malaise that grips all life in the Shadowfell. The shadar-kai eventually learned to fend off fading into nonexistence through controlled application of extreme pain, extreme pleasure, and other extreme pursuits; such excessive living keeps their souls firmly bound in their flesh.

Shadar-kai recognize that living in the Shadowfell means contending with undead. Sentient undead might trade and interact with a shadar-kai community from time to time, but limited contact and brief, suspicious alliances comprise the majority of the two groups' interaction.

The shadar-kai's tolerance of unlife applies only to graveborn that do not openly revere Orcus or actively attempt to promote his purposes. The shadar-kai rightly see Orcus as the eternal enemy of the Raven Queen, and none but the most debased and corrupt of their kind treat allies of Orcus as anything other than hated foes.

A few shadar-kai find the never-ending struggle against ennui that the Shadowfell causes to be too much. These cursed few betray the ideals of their race and seek rituals of undeath. Shadar-kai who succeed at becoming undead are hunted by their former kinfolk.

Heroes of the race try to rise above their fellows, hoping to show the Raven Queen their devotion and thus be brought into her direct service, to be remade as sorrowsworn and perhaps even Raven Knights (see below). To show themselves worthy of such an honor, shadar-kai constantly undertake dangerous quests to demonstrate their bravery and prowess. Each attempts to outshine the others, hoping that one dim evening, the Raven Queen will summon them for greater duty.

The Raven Queen

As the putative sovereign of the Shadowfell, the Raven Queen is fate's instrument. All souls come to the Shadowfell, and sooner or later they pass through the Raven Queen's Citadel in Letherna, except for those souled undead that evade the fate she decrees.

Most creatures visit the Raven Queen only once, as formless souls after their mortal existence is concluded, though epic characters have a way of charting their own destinies. Many among the living worship the Raven Queen, hoping to gain some last reprieve from the god of fate when their final hour would otherwise be at hand.

Orcus has amassed so much necromantic power that, even in the face of the Raven Queen's prominence, many undead see the demon lord as their natural ruler and one who will not so blithely dispense with them. However, although Orcus is less likely to annihilate undead out of some sense of natural balance between life and death, he is quick to sacrifice the ranks of his undead to achieve his ends. Many intelligent undead recognize this trait, and so they avoid the demon lord. These undead also fear that if Orcus ever gains control of the Shadowfell, he might not stop there. Perhaps he would further consolidate his control over death and the undead, as the legendary lich Acererak attempted to do (in a more limited fashion, to be sure), and chain all undead to his will.

A few of the brightest, most powerful, and most driven of the soulless undead believe that the Raven Queen can provide them with souls, whether theirs or some other creature's, and thus quench their eternal gnawing hunger. These undead cluster near her temples in the world or her dread and forbidding fortress of black ice in the Shadowfell, hoping to attract her attention and obtain her favor. No one knows if a wight or a wraith has ever been invested with a soul, or what would happen to the wight or wraith were that to occur. The Raven Queen is silent on the matter (as with much else), although her priests have been known to exterminate undead that cluster too thickly like vermin.

Letherna

Souls pass into the Shadowfell and fall across its dark skies like falling stars, bound for the Raven Queen's realm, known as Letherna. High in a range of ice-capped mountains, the god's fastness is cut from black ice that sparkles with new snow. The streaking motes of light visible across the rest of the Shadowfell finally reveal themselves here as silvery, spectral silhouettes of the newly dead.

Towers rise up from Letherna's maze of walls and graceful bridges, but all these structures are dwarfed by the massive, intricately inscribed gates that control entry into the fortress. The arriving souls form a grim procession that queues up before these dread gates. Inside, the souls learn their final fates.

On the edge of Letherna is the Temple of Temples, called Zvomarana. Only the most dedicated and powerful of the Raven Queen's servants are ever allowed to enter it. The temple is perched on a treacherous, bramble-choked incline; its location serves as a test for those who would approach Zvomarana over land.

The Raven Knights

The grim servitors known as Raven Knights can be observed moving across the dark plains of the Shadowfell. Wearing ebony livery, the Raven Knights are powerful sorrowsworn bound to the Raven Queen's service. All have pledged their honor and their loyalty to the Raven Queen.

The Raven Knights command several companies of shadar-kai similarly sworn to serve the Raven Queen, along with a handful of dark creeper and dark stalker spies and assassins. These companies are housed in small keeps that dot the periphery of Letherna; each keep is under the command of one or more Raven Knights.

The typical Raven Knight keep is a single narrow tower that rises high enough to command a view of the surrounding land. In this way, the Raven Knights help protect Letherna's borders from encroachment by other powers of the Shadowfell; primarily, they keep a lookout for agents of Orcus attempting to slip into the realm unnoticed.

Orcus views the Raven Knights as obstacles in his quest to overthrow the Raven Queen, and thus has become familiar with the name of every pledged knight. Orcus offers a bounty on each Raven Knight, and more than one group of adventurers has collected, handing over their prize to creatures who they did not suspect were agents of the Demon Prince.

Because of their service to she who rules the Shadowfell, Raven Knights are honored in shadar-kai cities. Indeed, some Raven Knights were once shadar-kai who were singled out by the Raven Queen and made into exemplars in her eminence's service.

Orcus in the Shadows

Orcus covets the Shadowfell and the power the Raven Queen has over death. As a result, he regularly sends parties of undead into the Shadowfell to oppose her. He sends others into the Astral Sea in attempts to locate her abandoned and lost dominion and uncover hidden secrets that might enable him to vanquish her and steal her power.

Cults devoted to Orcus thrive within the Shadowfell, as do undead that worship him in return for power. Orcus richly rewards any creature, living or dead, who can obtain any important information about the Raven Queen or any means that might be used to reduce her control over the Shadowfell. In the Shadowfell, Orcus's devoted thralls rule entire regions of undead, whose leaders regularly send raids to Letherna's borders.

Some believe that the Raven Queen allows these realms to exist because they pose no threat to her power. Others see her "forbearance" as proof that she lacks the power to smite them, or even that she fears the Demon Prince of the Undead. Other than plucking the souls from those who suggest the latter in her presence, the Raven Queen does not deign to explain her actions to other creatures, even to other gods who send exarchs to treat with her.

Whatever the truth, in the shadow of her inaction, Orcus's plots grow apace. Some of her eminence's Raven Knights have suggested that the Demon Prince's increased frontal assaults of the last few years might actually be a diversion hiding some other, more subtle plot. Rumors of archeological activity in the darklands might indeed involve Orcus, but so far, the Raven Queen's agents have been unable to determine what, if anything, Orcus might have to do with the shadow dragon that has claimed an ancient site and renamed it Nightwyrm Fortress.

DM's Guide to Undead

You reel away from the raking talons, but your legs are unsteady, your stamina depleted. Again and again, the monstrosity strikes, claws slipping between the gaps in your armor and finding unprotected flesh. A final desperate swing from your sword decapitates the undead brute, silencing it forever. You turn your back on the corpse, confident that your wounds are merely superficial. Then you notice the faces of your companions, and the horrifying truth clearly etched on them. It's only a matter of minutes before your pox-laden wounds transform you into the unholy abomination you just destroyed. . . .

The undead have long been a classic foe of adventurers in Dungeons & Dragons campaigns. Such creatures are steeped in myth and legend. Folklore dating back centuries speaks of sinister apparitions haunting the living, or of ghoulish nocturnal predators stalking local cemeteries. Some undead, such as vampires, have even been romanticized by popular culture.

This chapter features an array of advice, tools, and examples to enable you to run a successful adventure or campaign featuring undead. It includes:

- Social Encounters: Not every meeting with an undead needs to end in combat.
- Hauntings: Phenomena that are associated with death can manifest as hauntings that range from intriguing to bothersome to brutal.
- Undead Adventures: Ready-to-play adventure hooks that can be dropped into your sessions with little if any modification.
- Campaign Arcs: Several overriding ideas for recurring undead themes and villains.
- Artifacts: New artifacts, rituals, and other equipment with an overarching undead theme. These items can be used as rewards, warnings, hindrances, or the inspiration of further adventures.
- Rituals: Seven new rituals for characters to use with or against undead.
- Grafts: Special powers that beings can obtain by merging undead body parts with their own.

GEORGI "CALADER" SIMEONOV

Imbued with a passionate hatred for life in all its forms, and frequently possessed by an unquenchable hunger for blood, flesh, or soul energy, the undead would seem to be unpromising negotiating partners. Indeed, hosts of them, such as skeletons and zombies, are completely mindless killers. Others, such as the specter or the atropal, are intelligent but lack any motivation beyond their primal impulses to feed and destroy.

Certain undead, however, are rational and might be profitably engaged in conversation. These entities embraced corrupt immortality to continue their earthly schemes after corporeal death. Vampire lords pursue political power. Liches and larva mages scour the underground world for lost arcane secrets. Mummy lords guard ancient sites, artifacts, or knowledge. Minions of Orcus (both mortal and undead) wage a covert supernatural war to overthrow the Raven Queen and install their demonic master on her throne. Other undead conspirators seek to expand the boundaries of the Shadowfell, greedily anticipating the day it devours the world and the planes beyond.

Undead potentates, and those beholden to them, are ready to entertain any offers that might further their agendas. As in any successful negotiation, a participant must know what the other side wants and must offer a chance to get it, at an acceptable price. Unlike other conversations, however, a misstep in a debate or the breach of an agreement could render the defaulters liable to being devoured, drained of blood, or transformed into the walking dead.

Savvy dealers with the dead play on the following motivations.

Disdain: Spitefully haughty in their attitudes toward the breathing and virtuous, the undead take a perverse joy in dragging others to their corrupt level. A chance to advance the cause of moral decay might spur an undead lord to heedless concessions. It becomes especially eager when made to believe that the victim might wind up eternally shackled to it as an undead thrall.

Fear: The spawn of Orcus cling tenaciously to unliving existence, secretly quailing at the prospect of their own destruction. Paint a convincing scenario of potential doom, and they'll jump at the chance to avoid obliteration. Naturally, megalomaniacal blustering should be expected and discounted in any such conversation.

Hate: Undead sentients are a brooding lot, prone to grudges and vows of eternal vengeance. Clever negotiators offer them a chance to wreak long-anticipated retribution. To use this tactic, pit the undead against an equally loathsome enemy.

Hunger: Ethically slippery adventurers might convince undead to postpone a feeding frenzy in favor of a greater gorging down the road. Anyone who would deliver on this promise is probably just as sinister as the other negotiating partner.

Sample Skill Challenges

The skill challenges described below represent just two of several ways that characters can use their noncombat ablities to successfully interact with undead.

Safe Passage Level 7
Skill Challenge XP 900

Crossing through desolate mountain territory, you come upon a sudden profusion of black and leafless trees. The landscape's bleakness indicates that you've reached the borders of the Pale Duchess's realm. Now you must figure out a way to traverse it, preferably without opening your veins to its infamous vampire ruler.

The PCs must travel as directly as possible to their ultimate destination. Their path crosses the duchy of a vampire lord called the Pale Duchess. The undead is both a predatory monster and a calculating political leader. She sometimes grants safe passage to traders and travelers—when it suits her interests. This skill challenge is designed to take place over an extended period of time, perhaps with other events interspersed, as the characters make their way through the duchess's domain.

Complexity 3 (requires 8 successes before 3 failures)

Primary Skills Diplomacy, Endurance, Heal, History, Insight, Stealth

Victory The group safely traverses the realm of the Pale Duchess.

Defeat On a defeat with 0 successes, the group is ambushed by an elite group of the duchess's troops, leading to a level 9 combat encounter. Any other defeat forces the characters to flee back to their starting point, sure of interception if they try again. The adventurers must now take a lengthy detour around the duchy.

Diplomacy Step One DC 14 (1 success, maximum 2 successes). At least 1 success is necessary to access the Diplomacy Step Two entry below.

Although everyone fears the duchess's cruel attentions, the realm is populated with ordinary people who are free to farm and trade, so that they can be taxed. Diplomacy allows the group to identify citizens with ducal connections and to allay their fears with the necessary delicacy.

Diplomacy Step Two DC 14 (1 success, maximum 2 successes). Failure robs the group of 1 previous success.

The party gains an audience with the duchess. The characters must convince her that the accomplishment of their mission (whatever that might be) is of greater interest to her than a refreshing drink of their vital, red blood.

Endurance DC 19 (1 success, maximum 2 successes).

The group stays out of sight by taking arduous trails along desolate mountain switchbacks. Success brings them to the hut of the wizened, fantastically long-lived hermit Galok, who loved the duchess when she was a mortal. He tells the adventurers to mention his name if they are brought before her; doing so grants a single +5 bonus to a Diplomacy check for this skill challenge.

Heal DC 14 (1 success, maximum 1 success).
Healing a serf's sick child along the way gains the group a loyal guide who leads them safely through a heavily patrolled territory.
History DC 14 (1 success, maximum 2 successes). Failure leads to interception (see below).
The characters search their knowledge of the realm's past to pick sparsely populated travel routes where roving border patrols are least likely to intercept them.
Insight DC 14 (1 success, maximum 1 success).
The party identifies a gregarious serf as an informer motivated by fear of the duchess. The characters play on his sense of honor, convincing him not to turn them in.
Stealth DC 14 (1 success, maximum 2 successes). Failure leads to interception (see below).
The group evades the duchess's patrols.

Interception

Bluff, Diplomacy, or Intimidate DC 19 (1 success is required to continue the challenge; 2 consecutive failures results in automatic failure of the challenge).
Taken into custody by a vastly superior force of patrolling troops, the characters must convincingly lie, cajole, or threaten until the leader relents and lets them go.

Audience with the Lich Level 19
Skill Challenge XP 7,200

Exploring an ancient tomb, you happen upon a particularly well preserved section. Flickering light plays on the tips of tallow candles. Elaborate designs in gold leaf festoon the floor, wall, and ceiling. Clearly, this area of the tomb has never been looted. A voice sounds from a great stone seat at the far end of the chamber, asking, "Why have you disrupted my studies?"

The player characters have disturbed a lich whose level is 5 or more higher than their own. To avoid a fight that might end in all their deaths, the PCs must successfully negotiate with the lich.
The lich, a 24th-level elite controller (see MM 176), has devoted the last seventy years to the study of arcane tomes and librams pilfered from even more ancient tombs. The lich sometimes allows intruders to go free if they amuse it, tell it something it doesn't know, or deliver it a gift of lore.
Complexity 3 (requires 8 successes before 3 failures)
Primary Skills Arcana, Bluff, Diplomacy, History
Other Skills Insight
Victory The lich does not engage the PCs in combat.
This outcome might require that the party agree to a demand—perhaps bringing the lich a relic or artifact, a bit of knowledge, or another item germane to the campaign.
Defeat The lich attacks, along with its servitors and minions, comprising a level 24 combat encounter.
Arcana DC 22 (1 success, maximum 2 successes). At least one success grants a +2 bonus to this character when making Diplomacy checks for the remainder of this skill challenge.
The character tells the lich an arcane fact in an attempt to impress it with his or her wide-ranging knowledge of magic. This breadth of knowledge suggests to the lich that merely killing the group is a bad idea, especially if special knowledge can be gleaned from the knowledgably character instead.
Bluff DC 27 (1 success, maximum 2 successes; see Insight). Characters can cooperate to aid a lead character using this skill.
The characters try to fool the lich about some aspect of their presence in its tomb, perhaps even that they were seeking the undead purposefully to offer their aid. The PCs might try to convince the lich that they seek an item of power, perhaps the one described under History.
Diplomacy DC 22 (1 success, maximum 4 successes; see Insight). Characters can cooperate to aid a lead character using this skill.
The characters (perhaps following up on one of their Arcana successes) point out to the lich that they might aid it rather than being a thorn in its side. They urge the undead to consider staying its wrath and instead think of ways that the characters could help it.
History DC 14 (1 success, maximum 2 successes).
The characters search their personal stores of lore for stories concerning the lich who sits before them, trying to discern a bit of trivia that could prove useful. Finally, they hit on it (first success): This ancient lich has sought after the Tome of Shadow (see page 46) for much of its existence. The characters know the lich never found it (second success).
Insight DC 22 (0 successes, but increases the maximum number of Bluff or Diplomacy successes possible). A successful Insight check increases the maximum number of Bluff or Diplomacy successes by 1 (to a total maximum 3 Bluff successes or 5 Diplomacy successes).
The characters determine that the lich wants to be convinced that they could help it, even though it battles against an equally strong desire to crush them. If the PCs can hit on the proper strategy, perhaps they can avoid a fight with a foe that believes that it is far more powerful than they are.

HAUNTINGS

Traumatic events such as murder, suicide, and mayhem take on an afterlife of their own. The fear and misery they generate attract the forces of the Shadowfell. That plane's dark energy transforms these emotions into a psychic residue. Any who stumble across these wells of curdled shadow experience them as hauntings.

Hauntings can point adventurers to crucial clues, wear them down with psychic damage, or add eerie complications to a battle. They are true supernatural events, not illusions, and as such it's not possible for characters to disbelieve a haunting by making a successful Insight check.

When adding hauntings to an adventure, you can treat them as atmosphere, traps or hazards, terrain, or skill challenges. Each of these four types of hauntings is discussed below.

Hauntings as Atmosphere

Hauntings need not require specific rules or dice rolling—they serve well as atmospheric detail in your setting descriptions. A haunting can engage any of the senses: the witness might see a ghostly figure, smell a whiff of perfume, hear muffled weeping, or feel the grasp of a cold hand. A haunting might drop the temperature, whip up impossible winds, or instill emotions. Some examples illustrate.

- Up on a catwalk, you see a gliding, insubstantial figure, dressed in the flowing robes of ancient nobility. She turns to you, revealing a blank and featureless face, then disappears.
- A sense of crushing solitude emanates from basement walls.
- Rivulets of crimson blood weep from a statue's eyes. This manifestation disappears if a PC touches it.

Hauntings as Traps or Hazards

Hauntings can function as traps or hazards, depending on whether they were put in place with the express purpose of causing harm to others.

Like other dangers of this sort, these hauntings can be spotted with passive or active Perception checks. Their presence can also be detected with Insight checks, because the supernatural energy produced by a haunting can be palpable. On a successful check, the character feels an instinctive sense of unease suggesting the presence of something malign and uncanny.

Bloody Fingertips Level 1 Obstacle
Hazard XP 100

Crude brickwork seals off a dungeon corridor. When a character comes within 3 squares of it, four bloody smears, as if produced by invisible, gore-drenched fingers, trace a diagonal pattern across the brick wall.

Perception
✦ DC 10: The character notices a strange dark spot on the wall.

Additional Skill: Insight
✦ DC 15: From as far as 5 squares away, the character senses an almost palpable dread emanating from the wall.

Trigger
The haunting begins when a character approaches within 3 squares of it.

Attack
Immediate Reaction Close blast 3
Target: Each creature in blast.
Attack: +4 vs. Will
Hit: 1d10 psychic damage, and the target is immobilized (save ends).
Miss: The target sees the bloody smears, but is unaffected.

Countermeasures
✦ A character who is a member of a divine class and approaches to within 2 squares of the hazard can disable it by succeeding on a DC 15 Religion check as a standard action.

Upgrade to Elite (200 XP)
✦ Increase the Insight and Religion DCs by 2.
✦ Increase the radius of the blast to 5 squares, and increase the damage to 1d10 + 3 psychic damage, and the target is immobilized (save ends).

Spectral Hands Level 15 Lurker
Trap XP 1200

Ten squares of the room are adjacent to a lead coffin. A spectral entity trapped in the coffin reaches out and strikes characters with a clawed, insubstantial hand whenever they draw too near.

Perception
Characters can't use Perception to detect this trap.

Additional Skill: Insight
✦ DC 18: The character gets a bad feeling about the coffin.

Trigger
The trap attacks when a character enters an adjacent square.

Attack
Opportunity Action Melee
Target: Each creature entering a square adjacent to the coffin. A creature that travels through multiple adjacent squares is attacked only once per move action.
Attack: +21 vs. AC
Hit: 3d6 + 8 necrotic damage, and the target is weakened (save ends).

Countermeasures
✦ A character who is a member of a divine class and approaches within 2 squares of the coffin can disable the trap by succeeding on a DC 18 Religion check as a standard action.
✦ A character who is adjacent to the trap can pry open the coffin lid with a successful DC 18 Athletics check as a standard action and reduce the brittle bones inside to inert shards (AC 5; Fortitude 10; Reflex 5; hp 40).

Upgrade to Elite (2,400 XP)
✦ Increase the Perception and Religion DCs by 2.
✦ On a hit, the hands deal 4d6 + 15 necrotic damage, and the target is weakened and immobilized (save ends both).
✦ The bones inside the coffin have 80 hit points.

SOUTCHAY SOUNGPRADITH

Haunting traps and hazards follow the Dungeon Master's Guide guidelines (pages 85–87). Damage dealt by such a trap or hazard is either psychic or necrotic in nature—gruesome visions and other horrifying sensory input deal psychic damage, while dangers laden with energy antithetical to life deal necrotic damage. Frequently, these hauntings stun or immobilize their victims as well.

Disabling a haunting trap is accomplished using the Religion skill, not the Thievery skill. The character uses knowledge of faith to recite simple prayers of protection, which can confuse or even exorcise the haunting.

A disabled haunting trap remains inactive for the rest of the encounter, or until the characters leave the area, whichever comes last. It then reestablishes itself, its undead nature having never truly passed from the haunted area.

Hauntings as Terrain

Certain spectral manifestations function as terrain elements, impeding or complicating movement on the battlefield.

Haunted terrain radiates negative emotions, ranging from vague unease to crippling sorrow to a virulent hatred of life. Such terrain could be clearly visible from a distance, in which case it consists of semitransparent figures, objects, or tableaus. Other haunting terrain requires a passive Perception check to sense from a distance.

Even when a haunting resembles a figure or an architectural feature, characters move through it as if it is difficult terrain, not an occupied square.

Examples of hauntings as terrain:

- A cloud of mingled sadism and terror hangs over the four squares at the bottom of a staircase. It was here that Lord Fandir murdered his maidservant.
- Blood appears to seep up through the flagstones surrounding an altar.
- The ghostly corpse of a young man swings like a pendulum from a chandelier.

HAUNTED TERRAIN EFFECTS

Haunted terrain acts as difficult terrain except as follows:

- Flying creatures are impeded if they overfly it, spending 1 extra square of movement per square of haunted terrain.
- Contact with haunted terrain triggers a distracting panic response. Any creature except for undead that enters haunted terrain or starts its turn in it grants combat advantage to enemies until the end of its next turn.

Hauntings as Skill Challenges

Certain ghostly entities lack creature statistics and can't be fought. Instead, the obstacles they pose are best resolved as skill challenges. A classic example is the haunting spirit that can be put to rest by the solution of a mystery.

The Girl in the Cornerstone Level 7
Skill Challenge XP 1,500

The chapel is empty, its worshipers driven out by ghastly visions. You enter and approach the altar. Hovering over it is the translucent figure of a bleeding child, her face gripped by inexpressible sorrow.

The characters probe the secrets of a haunted temple. The investigation starts with the structure, then moves on to interactions with suspects.

Complexity Special (meeting all victory conditions before 3 failures; see Victory)

Primary Skills Dungeoneering or Thievery, Intimidate, Religion

Other Skills Insight, Thievery

Victory The PCs must succeed at locating the remains of the girl, reconsecrating the temple, and getting the killer to confess. When all this is achieved, the soul of the victim is put to rest.

Defeat The killer flees the area, or a similar event occurs that makes it impossible to achieve the victory conditions.

Dungeoneering or Thievery DC 14 (2 successes satisfies one of the victory conditions)

Secret compartments riddle the recently constructed chapel (first success). Its hollow cornerstone contains the bones of a girl (second success).

Intimidate DC 19 (2 successes satisfies one of the victory conditions)

Confronted with suspicions, the builder of the chapel confesses to being a death cultist. He killed the girl and secretly placed her in the chapel foundation to dedicate it to evil.

Religion DC 19 (1 success satisfies one of the victory conditions)

After the bones are found, the characters give the girl a proper burial and reconsecrate the temple, so that its parishioners can use it again.

Insight DC 19 (0 successes, but succeeding on this skill check grants a +2 bonus to subsequent Intimidate checks during the challenge)

You interview several local citizens, particularly those involved in the construction of the chapel. Some of them, appearing normal and pleasant, seem suspiciously evasive.

Thievery DC 14 (0 successes, but finding the weapon allows the PCs to negate one failure during the Intimidate section of the skill challenge. Failure leads to a fight between the character who attempted the skill check and a single undead foe, acting as a servitor and a guardian for the cultists—both combatants are roughly the same level as the party.)

The characters find the bloody knives used in the murder, hidden in a root cellar. They can use it as damning evidence of the builder's crime.

An adventure or quest centered on undead can be highly entertaining. You should have a clear idea of what the encountered monsters are trying to accomplish. It's important to remember that not all undead are mindless killers.

For example, consider the iconic lich, a mighty spellcaster desperate for immortality. You should never forget the lich's paramount instinct for survival. The undead might stand and trade attacks with a band of adventurers when it knows it has an overwhelming advantage. On the other hand, no lich continues to survive without having several contingency plans to turn to in case things go sour. Using its phylactery is its final ace in the hole, but that eventuality should not be the only form of escape it anticipates. A well-played lich should be cunning and elusive—why risk falling in battle when careful planning allows one to slip away and strike again another night? Above all, a lich should do nothing that risks its phylactery being discovered.

Sample Adventures

The following hooks and plot seeds can form the basis of several undead-themed adventures. Use them as written, adjust the levels, or take portions of the ideas to build your own encounters, as you see fit.

The level notation refers to the most potent undead in the adventure hook, and should be used as a rough guide for determining the levels of any additional encounters you include in the adventure.

GEORGI "CALADER" SIMEONOV

The Bridge (Level 9)

The waters of the River Fallon wind through a highland frontier between rival nations. Swift and deep, the river can be crossed only at a handful of locations, the most inauspicious of which is a dilapidated bridge just south of Fearghas Bend.

The PCs, seeking to enter one of the nations undetected, choose to make the crossing at the Fearghas Bridge because this route is remote and undefended. The hills are said to be haunted—likely the reason this frontier region is uncontested.

As they cross the bridge over the River Fallon, the characters are set upon by trap haunts (Monster Manual, page 116), the ghosts of some of the people who died at this location years ago (see the second quest hook below). PCs who become dominated by the haunts are compelled to jump off the bridge and into the rushing river below. Within the torrent, the adventurers are accosted by sodden ghouls (page 154) that attempt to grab and drown their victims.

Quest Hook: Characters who survive the attacks on the bridge and in the water are approached by a timid shepherd who, noting their ability to deal with the undead, asks if they would cleanse a nearby field of monsters. The shepherd offers a few coins and a level 8 magic item he recovered from the river. Arriving at the site, the PCs find that a number of battle wights (Monster Manual, page 262) have taken up residence in a subterranean hollow beneath the field.

Quest XP: PCs who destroy the battle wights in their cavern-grave earn a minor quest reward of 400 XP.

Tips from the Pros

A little suspense can turn a standard encounter into a truly memorable event. The point of setting a mood is to make the characters afraid before the undead arrive. To cultivate this pervading sense of dread, describe the characters' peculiar surroundings in crisp detail. Point out every creaking plank, swaying willow tree, or owl hoot. Build up the tension by asking the characters to make checks against nonexistent threats. By subtly heightening the PCs' level of anxiety, you make the moment of fright when the true horror leaps out at them that much sweeter.

—Brian R. James

Quest Hook: A character knows the following information with a successful DC 16 History check. Years past, the warriors of the two rival nations faced off against one another at this river crossing. After the casualties on both sides mounted with no resolution of the conflict, the army's commanders agreed to a cease fire. The two commanders met at the center of the bridge to formalize the agreement, but some of the weakened planks gave way, sending the leaders into the river and to their deaths. Both sides suspected treachery, and the conflict resumed, costing scores more soldiers their lives before both sides retreated. Since that time, the area has been haunted by vengeful undead. With this information, a PC who succeeds on a DC 21 Religion check intuits that the bridge is the focus of the undead activity in the area, and as long as it exists, no one can pass through this location safely.

Quest XP: If the PCs dismantle the bridge, they successfully set the undead spirits free, earning a major quest reward of 2,000 XP.

Weeping Mist (Level 15)

A land of desolate fens, ever-present mist, and eerily echoing calls lies sandwiched between a feral forest and soaring peaks. Travelers through this so-called Weeping Mist describe a heavy feeling of watchfulness hanging over everything. Rumor has it that the fog hides long-ruined towers and drowned, subterranean crypts.

Drawn to the region centuries past in search of baleful magic, a night hag coven has taken up residence in the ruins of a tower deep in the swamp. At the hags' command are countless malevolent fey and undead horrors, but they prefer to maintain their isolation by scaring away intruders, not annihilating them.

Quest Hook: While passing through a nearby forest, the adventurers encounter a baelnorn (page 162). In exchange for their lives, the lich demands that the PCs enter the Weeping Mist and retrieve the ancient Tome of Shadow (page 46) from a ruined keep, half drowned in the marsh.

If the characters are agreeable to this charge, they could attempt to fight their way through the hags' domain to the ruins. It should become clear early on that such an approach is time-consuming and draining. It is far better to rely on a stealthy passage through the wretched swamp. If the PCs attract the attention of the coven too soon, they'll end up fighting several waves of undead. In any event, once they have defeated the Tome's guardians and emerged from the structure described by the baelnorn, they are set upon by a large group commanded by the hags themselves.

The PCs might choose to keep the artifact or give it to the baelnorn—either way, the undead knows that the unearthed artifact is free to begin pursuing its purpose once more.

Quest XP: If the PCs recover the Tome of Shadow, they earn a minor quest reward of 1,200 XP.

Tamarac Falls (Level 20)

In the middle of an otherwise unrelated adventure, or perhaps during what was intended to be well-earned downtime, the PCs find themselves taking their leisure on the outskirts of a village in a small inn called Tamarac Falls. After an evening of libation and merriment, the adventurers retire to their rooms.

One or more PCs awaken in the middle of the night, disturbed by a terrible scream outside the inn. Exploration reveals that the building, and indeed the entire village (as far as they can determine), is abandoned. What then of the innkeeper, serving girls, and patrons from the night before? Were they part of a dream, a mass hallucination, or something more sinister?

The characters soon notice that the trees and vegetation in the area are decayed and dead. Buildings are decrepit and in shambles. Worst of all, a rising cacophony of shrieks and wails erupts from all around the village's periphery.

Quest Hook: Undead begin to harry the PCs, arriving in large waves or small groups. Throughout the night and until dawn's first light, the PCs are relentlessly attacked by all manner of undead and shadowy monstrosities. To ratchet up the tension, throw a succession of easy- to standard-level encounters at the characters. Don't be afraid to interrupt short rests.

In truth, the villagers were massacred decades ago by a sociopathic murderer and dabbler in the dark arts. Years later, the slayer was rewarded in death and reborn as a soulspike devourer (Monster Manual, page 69). Since that time, the undead leader has been luring sentient creatures to their doom.

The only way to stop the continuing assaults is to seek out and destroy the fell entity that has apparently set its sights on killing the PCs and collecting their spirits.

Quest XP: Characters who discern the motivations and presence of the soulspike devourer find it in the village's temple. Killing it earns them a major quest reward of 14,000 XP.

Zombie Hordes

As fun as a good dungeon romp can be, PCs truly shine when pitted against seemingly overwhelming odds. Nothing puts the fear of mortality into adventurers faster than a horde of bloodthirsty zombies shuffling forward with malice in their eyes and the stink of rot emanating from their flaccid, blood-soaked bodies.

Indeed, no undead-themed adventure is complete without the threat of a zombie horde. Wave after wave of mindless undead, multiplying perhaps with each innocent victim they overcome, is an adventuring staple for a reason. Few events are as horrifying as being overrun by throngs of people who used to be neighbors, friends, and perhaps even family members. Playing out the attack of a zombie horde lets you re-create the thrill of any number of similar incidents in story and film.

PCs might think themselves invulnerable when faced with great numbers of low-level fodder. Disabusing them of that notion, by building a hard encounter involving a huge crowd of shambling undead, can be the gist of a memorable adventure.

Tip: For encounters that include more than a dozen or so creatures, it's best to throw the zombies at the PCs in waves of about eight creatures at a time, with perhaps a round of breathing room between each wave. This approach is good for a couple of reasons: First, it keeps round-by-round dice rolling down to a manageable level, and second, it simulates the way big crowds of zombies actually behave, because dozens of them don't (and can't) attack the characters all at once.

The attack of a zombie horde can be simulated in several ways. A few options are discussed below.

Standard Encounter: The most straightforward way to create a zombie horde is by combining a group of minions with a few brutes to give the encounter real teeth. For example, ten zombie rotters and three zombies (Monster Manual, page 274) make an encounter that's a competitive match for five 3rd-level characters. Double the number of each kind of undead, and you have a level 7 encounter (which would be a tough fight for a 4th- or 5th-level party). Continue to scale up the numbers, and even a group of paragon-tier characters could find themselves with their hands full against a flood of zombies that seems to have no end.

Minions Galore: Another possibility for an attacking zombie horde is plenty of minions, and minions only. You could do this in a variety of ways, from challenging a party of five 3rd-level PCs with twenty-five zombie rotters to throwing thirteen putrescent zombies (page 196) at a party of five 9th-level PCs. As with a standard encounter as described above, you can pump up the number of minions to make the fight more drawn-out and more challenging (but remember to space out the zombies in waves, or else a lot of them will stand around doing nothing until they can get close enough to attack).

Monster Throng: Moving away from massed opponents in a combat encounter, you could simulate a zombie attack using the monster throng rules described below. A throng is like a swarm, but allows Medium and larger creatures to be part of the mix.

See page 198 for statistics and other details of a zombie throng.

MONSTER THRONG

A monster throng is a cluster of Medium or larger creatures. Like any other monster that has the swarm keyword, a throng has the following properties:

- A throng takes half damage from melee and ranged attacks. It is vulnerable to close and area attacks.
- A throng is immune to forced movement (pull, push, and slide) effects from melee and ranged attacks. Area or close attacks that impose forced movement (such as turn undead) affect a throng normally.
- A throng is represented on a battle map as a Large creature, or as a Huge creature if the throng is composed of individual creatures that are Large.
- A throng can enter or move through an enemy's space; this movement does not provoke opportunity attacks. An enemy can enter a space occupied by a throng, but the space is considered difficult terrain, and doing so provokes an opportunity attack from the throng.

Skill Challenge: You can simulate a massed zombie encounter with a skill challenge. Depending on the specific situation you've devised, a skill challenge can present creative PCs with several possible means of escape, or perhaps even of putting down the uprising.

AXEL RATOR

Zombie Horde Level Equal to Party Level
Skill Challenge XP As appropriate

Doors are barricaded with tables, broken carts, and smashed furnishings. Windows are shuttered and planked. Silence is thick in the fog-bound streets, like cotton stuffed into every ear. Nothing living stirs; nothing breathing walks the streets.

Where the living are absent, the newly dead shamble. Hunger runs raw and unstoppable, multiplied with each new corpse that kicks and shudders into animation.

The PCs must survive the depredations of a zombie horde in a small village. This challenge could play out over the period of several hours in the game world. To survive or escape from the zombie horde, the PCs must navigate the village and find the tools or clues necessary to stem the horde.

Complexity 5 (requires 12 successes before 3 failures)

Primary Skills Acrobatics, Arcana or Religion, Athletics, Streetwise

Other Skills Perception

Victory The PCs escape from the village, or isolate the temple as the center of the infection. If they proceed to the temple, they can face a number of tomb or excavation encounters, and perhaps find a way to end the threat.

Defeat The PCs are caught by the full force of the horde, and a combat encounter starts immediately. Alternatively, one PC goes "missing" and the skill challenge begins again.

Acrobatics Moderate DCs (1 success, no maximum successes). A failed check indicates that the character is delayed. This result counts as a failure for the challenge.

The PC dodges past a zombie arm reaching from a sewer grate, leaps over a shambling throng of zombies, or manages to close a door so quickly that the zombies can't follow the character into a building or corridor.

Arcana or Religion Hard DCs (1 success, no maximum successes). A failed check indicates that the character has received a wound from a zombie or has failed to note a significant clue. This outcome counts as one failure in the challenge.

The character knows how to properly treat a zombie bite, recognizes the signs that a random survivor (or a fellow PC) is about to succumb to a zombie wound, or realizes that the subtle green pulse emerging from the temple at the center of town might have something to do with the current uprising.

Athletics Moderate DCs (1 success, no maximum successes). A failed check indicates that pursuing zombies get in a few good swipes; the character loses one healing surge. In addition, mark a failure in the skill challenge.

The PC dashes quickly leaving the zombie horde far behind, builds a barricade, leaps between roofs (zombies fill the narrow alley below), or swims through a flooded cellar.

Perception Easy DCs (0 successes, but provides a +2 bonus or a -2 penalty to the next skill check by any PC).

The character notices that a nearby group of fellow survivors is actually a group of zombies, that the zombies are all spreading out from one direction in particular, that a piece of debris is useful for building a barricade, or that the group is on the verge of heading down a dead-end street.

Streetwise Hard DCs (1 success, no maximum successes).

The character knows enough about the layout of the village to use the environment to best advantage and stay away from the zombies.

Zombie Surprise (Level 3)

A local priory recently recovered fragments of an ancient prophecy from its own catacombs. The bits of text speak of massive death and relentless destruction. Quiescent during the centuries the text was hidden, a curse was triggered when the prophecy was unearthed. All the dead in the catacombs beneath the priory promptly rose up as zombies. Soon enough, they cleared out the priesthood, then began to range farther afield.

The PCs might wander into a group of five zombie rotters (Monster Manual, page 274) wearing the vestments of the local priory. In this way, they learn firsthand that something has gone horribly wrong.

Quest Hook: If PCs do not take it upon themselves to visit the priory, a surviving priest from the temple begs them to deal with the zombie horde that has overtaken the place. PCs who agree to visit the priory find that it is indeed overrun by zombies. When they enter the main vestry, it is filled with twenty-five zombie rotters.

Quest XP: PCs who destroy the zombie rotters in the vestry earn a minor quest reward of 150 XP.

Quest Hook: Once the horde is destroyed, the PCs find the fragments of the prophecy, in stone tablet form, on the altar. A successful DC 15 Religion check reveals that the tablets are the source of the problem.

Quest XP: Shattering the tablets earns the party a major quest reward of 750 XP.

CAMPAIGN ARCS

In addition to inspiring exciting and challenging individual encounters, undead can be the impetus for an entire campaign. Although mindless and animalistic undead are largely useful only as singular threats or as the servants of more powerful opponents, potent and cunning undead are best employed as long-standing foes. Interaction with these creatures and their servants can form the heart of an extended series of adventures. Such a campaign could be structured in any number of ways. We describe a few in this section.

A Dread and Singular Enemy

One of the simplest, but richest, ways to use undead in your campaign is to focus on the defeat of a single exceptionally powerful and dangerous undead foe. In one such approach, the PCs discover that a seemingly unrelated series of events are all part of a plot by an ancient lich to gain its freedom and wreak havoc across the world.

Heroic Tier: Random Happenings

The campaign begins with the PCs partaking in a variety of apparently unconnected adventures. Early on, they come into contact with enemies dedicated to the theft of magic items and arcane tomes. Typically, they find groups of goblins or bandits commanded by one of these arcane treasure-seekers. Each of leaders is identified by a certain symbol—a forehead tattoo centered over the left eye (perhaps hidden by hair or a head covering, but revealed upon searching a fallen body). The mark shows a black orb encasing a skull. Initially, the skull-in-orb symbol's provenance is obscure. A successful DC 30 Religion or Arcana check reveals that the symbol is sometimes seen in old tomes that describe mythical figures of prehistory.

Interviewing captives doesn't clear up the mystery. The hirelings know little. Worse, when one of the leaders is subdued, questioning causes the tattooed figure's brain to burn with black fire. Death is instantaneous (and the Speak with Dead ritual is unusable).

And so the heroic tier passes. The PCs go through a series of seemingly disjointed adventures, running into the skull-in-orb foes only on rare occasions (perhaps once a level).

At the culmination of this tier, the PCs confront one of their enemy's undead lieutenants and, in the process of defeating it, learn that the symbol represents more than a mere fairy tale. The characters learn of the existence and the name of their ultimate foe. This piece of information should hint that other plots the PCs have stopped or attempted to prevent were all part of this powerful being's plans. The characters shouldn't yet know the full extent of this creature's plans, merely that a single powerful and ancient lich, who most think is mere myth, is all too real, and is secretly active in the world.

JULIE DILLON

Paragon Tier: First Confrontations

As they begin adventuring in the paragon tier, the characters have foiled the ancient lich's plans one too many times. After the defeat of one of its favored lieutenants, the undead begins to focus on the PCs. The lich sends a series of assassins after them, all undead strike forces bearing the skull-in-orb symbol.

In the middle of their adventures, the PCs track one of these forces back to a lair where undead congregate to be given their orders.

Though the PCs might think they are assiduously clearing out the ultimate lair of the lich, in the end they discover that the unholy place is merely one of several such locations. Their ultimate foe is not present. The characters learn that the ancient evil is currently interred in a prehistoric prison whose potent magical wards defy penetration. The characters cannot enter the prison, nor can the lich leave its cell, but it can influence events in the world. Indeed, the arcane undead has crafted a large cult that seeks bits of ancient lore or pieces of ageless magic items, for reasons as yet undiscovered.

From hints the PCs uncover in books the lich has stolen and stockpiled in its demitemples, they piece together the tale of a powerful lich imprisoned millennia earlier. These tomes also hint at the location of lost cities and crumbling temples where the lich's enemies used to dwell.

If the PCs explore the ruins in question, they begin to gather fragments of lost rituals and scattered parts of powerful magic items that could prove useful in defeating the undead that has gradually evolved into their greatest nemesis. Within the hidden locations, the characters also face ancient guardians set by those who defeated the lich the first time. These warders don't want the knowledge they keep to come to light, lest followers of the ancient lich use it to bring about the prisoner's release.

Indeed, following discreetly in the PCs' footsteps is a cadre of shadowy lurkers (or other stealthy undead) who watch as the characters destroy the guardians of the ancient lore. The hidden ones then slip in and steal items vital to unlocking the lich's prison. The characters find the bits they need, but the ancient lich also gains the share of arcana it requires to make its final bid for freedom. From time to time, the characters fight against their enemies to keep them from retrieving information or artifacts useful to the lich.

Even so, the PCs aid the lich's accumulation as much as they injure its plans.

From the knowledge they secure, the characters learn that the enemy was a cleric who worshiped an ancient unnamed entity (where the name was written, only burned parchment or melted inscriptions remain, as if the name were too evil for reality to bear). The ancient lich was incarcerated not long after its deity was shunted into some planar imprisonment for its terrible crimes.

Epic Tier: Final Showdown

The ancient undead's plans near completion, thanks to the PCs' unwitting aid. Even as the characters approach the being's prison—fighting their way past guardians, wards, and hazards—it breaks free.

The ancient lich (perhaps a demilich surrounded in a nearly impervious glassy enclosure, not unlike its symbol) directs a force of powerful creatures (not merely undead) to attack the PCs. While the PCs are distracted, the lich travels to the Astral Sea. Here, it seeks to find and release the deity it once worshiped. The lich journeys to the god's abandoned dominion (which only it can remember), or to the scattered broken remnants of the place. By restoring its deity, the prehistoric undead believes it serves as the herald for a reign of terror over the cosmos.

Following in their adversary's wake, the PCs travel to the Astral Sea and venture into the ghastly ruins of the crumbling dominion. It is here they learn, at long last, that the ancient lich was the high priest of Tharizdun, the Chained God, imprisoned for corrupting the Elemental Chaos with the Abyss. The group must battle both the lich and a host of other foul beings interested in finding and releasing the Chained God. If the characters succeed, Tharizdun remains bound and impotent. If they fail, the Chained God weakens or perhaps breaks its bonds.

The Outbreak

This campaign arc focuses on a singular and terrible event—a massive outbreak of undead. All across a kingdom, or perhaps even a larger region, the dead begin to rise. Zombies and skeletons claw their way out of graveyards, wraiths and specters proliferate in the night, and more powerful undead begin to openly prey on the living by day. The PCs must deal with a world gradually being overrun by the undead.

Heroic Tier: Something's Wrong

The characters begin the game in a relatively straightforward manner; no hint of any undead outbreak exists. Midway through the first adventure, they encounter undead, but this event should not appear particularly worrisome: After all, undead foes are common.

It turns out to be a sign of things to come. Not a day after the characters return to their home base, zombies rise in the local graveyard. The monsters are easy enough to deal with, but neither the local authorities nor the PCs can determine why this event occurred.

Around this time, the characters hear rumors of uprisings in other parts of the country. A few more outbreaks occur—perhaps one in the barracks of the local town guard, where all the guards simultaneously came down with the same disease. Although the PCs eliminate this threat, they learn of a larger outbreak—the next closest city has apparently fallen completely to undead. The threat is obviously one that the PCs couldn't hope to stem alone. The party should realize at this point that it faces an ongoing struggle to survive in a land under siege.

Reports indicate that the lesser undead, such as zombies and skeletons, seek shelter by day. During this time, they are holed up unless disturbed. This periodic inactivity gives living creatures time to root out undead lairs. Once night falls, the monsters rise together and attack any living creatures they find. Boarding up windows and doors and staying off the streets keeps many individuals safe from the predators. Still, news arrives of isolated farmsteads, villages, and even small towns being wiped out.

Amid these horrors, the PCs are contracted to escort caravans from one city or town to another. In addition to fighting wandering zombies, skeletons, ghouls, and various other monstrosities, the characters must also fend off bandits, marauding orcs, and other threats that roam largely unchecked because most soldiers are busy beating back relentless attacks by the undead. Of course, the orcs and bandits are also threatened by the rising undead tide, but this danger just makes them more desperate to secure supplies.

Eventually, the characters hear stories of undead shambling about during the daytime. The source of this rumor is survivors from a city attacked by the undead. In this city, greater undead have appeared, including vampire lords, death knights, and other exceptionally powerful monsters (such as some of the creatures detailed in Chapter 4).

Paragon Tier: The Shadowed Land

Using Arcana, Religion, Streetwise, or other methods, characters can dig for more information about the city where the dead walk by day. They soon discover that the city in question was the first location to report trouble with undead. The characters also learn that the blighted city no longer enjoys full sunlight. Instead, the locale rests under a constant pall of dark, slowly swirling clouds that create twilightlike conditions at all times. Worse, the shadowed region around the city is expanding. The truth behind the outbreak must lie within this shadowed city.

By the time the characters arrive, the shadowed region beneath the swirling black clouds extends almost 20 miles in every direction away from the city. Inside the pall, undead are everywhere. The PCs must try to blend in, or else be attacked at every turn. Under the veil of clouds, creatures gain a +1 bonus to attack rolls for attacks that deal necrotic damage, and living humanoids reanimate as zombies 3d6 minutes after death. (Large humanoids rise as zombie hulks.) Such zombies are uncontrolled and attack any living creature they meet.

The shadowed city's outskirts are heavily patrolled by numerous powerful undead and various monsters, now undead versions of their former selves. Inside the city, the characters discover a variety of sentient and powerful undead. Some are newly created; others are horribly old and carry armor and weapons marked with strange symbols.

The party also discovers that some of the living yet survive, gathered like cattle into a few slum wards. If the characters take the time to rescue some or all these prisoners, they earn major quest rewards. During these evacuations, the group learns from the refugees that the vampires, liches, and death knights at the city center keep the living around not only to feed upon, but also as components for strange rituals they constantly perform in the city center. The old king's palace seems to be the center for this necromantic activity.

The palace is the most well-guarded portion of the shadowed city, and gaining access to it requires a combination of careful planning and heroic fighting. Once inside, the characters see a vast and newly built altar to Orcus and a huge gateway into the Shadowfell. This portal is almost a dozen yards in diameter and cannot be closed from the world. The PCs might theorize that the portal is the source of the energy that has been occluding the sun and rousing the undead, but they can't be certain. It's possible that the gateway is something that came into being after the city fell to the undead outbreak. The best way to find out more is to venture into the Shadowfell.

Epic Tier: Into the Shadowfell

Regardless of the original cause of the undead outbreak, Orcus has noticed the phenomenon and has agents on the scene to take advantage of it. The portal opens into a vast field in the Shadowfell near a newly built fortress maintained by one of Orcus's exarchs. Within the fortress, powerful undead serve as guards and assistants to Orcus's exarch and its demonic allies.

The PCs must battle their way through the fortress to slay the exarch in question. Orcus has ordered the legions to use the foothold of the outbreak to force a wider opening in the world. If it is not apparent immediately, a foray or two against the battlements should make it clear that the PCs require assistance. Into the breach come servitors of the Raven Queen, perhaps Raven Knights (see page 23). For some reason, the Raven Queen has fallen silent within her icy fortress—in fact, neither her nor any of her exarchs have been seen for some time. No Raven Knight (or other agent) knows for certain what is going on. Through their own sources, the Knights have determined that this Shadowfell fortress is a key to further understanding.

The Raven Knights command a great force that assails the fortress from the exterior. Under the cover of this assault, and perhaps with the aid of a few of the Raven Queen's servitors, the characters breach the innermost chambers of the fortress and bring the fight to Orcus's exarch.

Once deep in the castle, the characters discover evidence of the most heinous of crimes—the destroyed remains of the Raven Queen's exarchs. They also find a burning portal mouth leading to one last fight—one that takes the characters to the Abyss for a showdown with Orcus. The Demon Prince has managed through trickery and deceit to divert the Raven Queen's divinity just enough to kidnap her physical presence. He holds her captive in his demonic realm, and only 30th-level PCs can hope to challenge Orcus's ultimate plan to absorb all her power.

If the PCs defeat Orcus and break the mechanism he built to implement the transfer, the Raven Queen is freed and returns to her former divine status. In gratitude, she speaks terrible words of unearthly power, and the rift between life and death is healed. All the zombies, skeletons, and other undead that spontaneously arose in the world fall again, becoming little more than rotted remains. The characters have saved the world and perhaps the cosmos from the tyranny of never-ending death.

The Vampire Kingdom

In a kingdom ruled by vampires, the PCs work against and eventually overthrow the inhuman sovereigns. This lengthy struggle gives the characters a chance to deliver millions of innocent people from predatory oppression.

Heroic Tier: Freedom Fighters

At the beginning of the campaign, the characters are either wandering travelers who encounter terrified refugees or, perhaps even better, citizens of the vampire kingdom who have decided enough is enough, and have vowed to protect their fellows from the murder and oppression of the vampiric caste.

In either case, the PCs begin near the outskirts of the kingdom, where the major threats are an occasional lair of minor undead, or ghoul-led zombie hordes that the vampire overlords send rampaging across the land to "maintain order." Initial adventures include escorting and protecting families that are attempting to flee the kingdom and clearing out local concentrations of monsters (mostly undead) that the rulers see no reason to displace.

At this stage of the campaign, the ruling vampires are little more than a distant and looming threat. The party does not come into direct conflict with them. Instead, the characters deal with lesser threats. While doing so, they learn the names of the distant cities where vampire lords, earls, dukes, and even the vampire king rule with bloody certitude.

As the characters ascend into the upper part of the tier, they move from one of the outlying villages to a larger city, where they encounter evidence of more systematic depredations. Vampire spawn run rampant through the streets each night. They are the cast-off corpses of victims feed upon by the vampire lord who rules the city. At first, the PCs' freedom-fighting efforts dispatching the spawn and finding their daytime lairs is beneath the notice of the lord. However, the undead noble eventually becomes aware of the elimination of the spawn. At that point, the PCs face an ambush in their base, an attack upon friends or loved ones, or a betrayal by an NPC close to them—or perhaps all three.

Near the end of the heroic tier, the characters graduate to taking down vampiric authorities. At the culmination of this tier, the PCs destroy the local vampiric rulers, their spawn, and the lesser undead that serve them. This major victory sets the area free from the clutches of the undead and encourages others to join the revolutionary cause.

Paragon Tier: The Vampires Strike Back

The characters' triumphs within the city they freed from vampiric bondage do not go unnoticed in the wider kingdom. Word of the PCs' efforts spreads to the common populace and sparks similar revolts in neighboring cities. The vampiric nobility unleashes reprisals, but none of these attacks initially targets the PCs. However, the characters hear news of terrible destruction in neighboring cities whose initial revolts are quelled bloodily.

At this point, the characters can coordinate a local uprising of several hundred against the forces of the undead. It might be interesting to play out a portion of the uprising, with a large-scale battle using fifty or more miniatures. However, such battles should be the exception—the PCs spend most of this phase of the campaign in smaller-scale conflicts against a few powerful creatures in sensitive areas. The characters face increasingly powerful opposition, because the ruling vampire lords gradually realize that these heroes might be the deadliest threat to their rule. The characters could learn about, and seek to retrieve, an ancient relic of a previous age—perhaps the vampire-killing regalia of an ancient hero secreted in a lost tomb, guarded vault, or other difficult-to-reach site.

For the most part, the PCs spend their time driving back the vampire-controlled forces, sometimes as the leaders of a large military force, but more often as adjuncts to the ragtag living military.

As the PCs reach the end of the paragon tier, they face an assassination attempt orchestrated by the vampire lords from the capital. Perhaps one of the principal NPC lieutenants or friends is imprisoned, serving as bait to lure the characters into a trap. The plot should be a real and deadly attempt to bring down the PCs. Make sure to work in a sneaky or treacherous aspect, one that involves intrigue and betrayal. The vampire lords are cunningly evil; they would greatly enjoy humiliating the characters before destroying them.

Epic Tier: Final Showdown

PCs who defeat the assassins are in a position to consolidate their control of the splintering kingdom. As a result of the party's efforts, the region under the control of the living continues to expand, providing access to new allies, as well as the funds from liberated treasuries to outfit a real army. The characters also have an opportunity to take an active role in helping to organize the newly freed regions of this kingdom. They can suggest ways to stamp out bandits, to quell counterrevolutionary activity, to organize ruling bodies or institutions, or to find and appoint the most capable leaders. PCs capable of performing rituals can help rebuild and improve the free regions with magical infrastructure. Others can organize militias and police forces to hunt down spies, traitors, and infiltrators from the vampire-ruled portions of the kingdom.

As time passes, only the capital city and its immediate surroundings remain in the clutches of the vampire ruler. The nobles are all high-level vampires with a variety of unique abilities. This nobility becomes so desperate that it enters into a bargain with the Demon Prince of the Undead and asks Orcus to send a horde of demons to help retake their kingdom.

A plague of demons issues from the capital city. The PCs must defeat the demons attacking the rest of the kingdom, as well as the monsters guarding the capital. They must make their way into the city, battling a few exceptionally powerful demons, death knights, and liches. Finally, they arrive at the court of the vampire ruler. While the PCs are engaged, the vampire lords are gathering up powerful artifacts of undeath that have the potential to render the entire kingdom lifeless. With these items, the ruler and a chosen few can perform a final ritual in a special unsanctified Abyss location prepared by Orcus. In the end, the PCs must travel to the Abyss to put an end to these monsters. After defeating the ruler (a creature as powerful as any of Orcus's exarchs, and perhaps even allied with them), the PCs are finally victorious.

Each artifact is part of a larger story, a slice of the world's history. An artifact's back story might be glorious or ignominious, uplifting or disheartening, portentous or rooted firmly in the past. Artifacts associated with death and the undying are just as common as any other kind.

Transcendent: In rare cases, an artifact's concordance can improve beyond pleased. The transcendent category applies in such cases. The artifact is so impressed by, or enamored of, the behavior of its owner that it grants an additional benefit. The artifacts in this section that have this extra category are the Orb of Light, the Silver Mask of Kas, and the Tome of Shadow.

Jet Black Ioun Stone

The Stone is appropriate for paragon-level characters.

For the most part, Ioun stones are not unique in their nature—any number of dark blue, pale aquamarine, moss green, and other colored stones proliferate throughout the world. Their creator Ioun seeks to distribute knowledge in all its forms.

Still, even deities are responsible for items they wish they could unmake. Ioun's black artifact is one such creation. A unique stone without copy or sibling, it is thought that Ioun crafted it at the behest of Zehir, deity of darkness, poison, and assassins. The lord of knowledge might have felt compelled to create the Stone so that Zehir could use it in the pursuit of understanding—even if that learning involved better ways to find and kill his victims. In truth, the Stone proved a powerful tool, often bestowed directly by Zehir upon a worthy follower to aid in a particularly dangerous assassination attempt.

Invested with a sizable portion of Ioun's magical energy, the Stone gained a semblance of self-awareness. After years of aiding in the murder of so many, the Stone has seen its personality become twisted and darkened. Its reputation has grown as well. It has become—however dangerous it might be to possess—a compelling prize for assassins.

Jet Black Ioun Stone Paragon Level

A unique and powerful Ioun stone, this artifact appears as a pure black void, forever traveling in a slow, patient orbit.

Body Slot: Head

Property: You gain low-light vision.

Property: Any light source you carry has its radius of illumination reduced by half (minimum 1 square).

Power (At-Will): Minor Action. You can designate one enemy within 5 squares of you as your prey. You take a -2 penalty to attack rolls that don't include your prey, but you score a critical hit against that target on a 19-20. In addition, you can always treat the prey as your closest enemy. You can have only one creature designated as your prey at a time. A creature stops being your prey when it dies or after you take a short rest.

Power (Daily): Minor Action. The Stone gains fly 6 and phasing. You can see and hear using the Stone as if you were using the Wizard's Sight ritual. Additionally, you gain combat advantage against any target adjacent to the Stone. The Stone occupies its own space, but cannot be the target of any attack.

Special: You cannot choose to knock an enemy unconscious or use the Intimidate skill to force a bloodied enemy to surrender. You must fight to the death.

Goals of the Jet Black Ioun Stone

- Locate opponents, especially those in hiding or wanted by authorities.
- Harry such opponents, targeting them for attack.
- Partner with a rogue or assassin who is active in combat and killing.

Roleplaying the Jet Black Ioun Stone

The Stone is not so much an item of moral evil as of amoral killing. Created to obtain knowledge about opponents in battle—regardless of principles—it has been subverted through constant use in assassination attempts. It now understands no other purpose but killing. The Stone does not care who its owner chooses to kill, as long as the owner is forever hunting someone to slay. The Stone has developed a lust for murder, but requires a mortal partner to carry out the deed.

The Stone communicates with its owner as a whispered chorus in the possessor's mind. These voices rise in volume and intensity when the owner targets a new bounty, pointing out its location and offering advice on ways to kill it. If the possessor listens closely, the voices of defeated bounties subsequently added to this chorus can be heard.

CONCORDANCE

|---|---|
| Starting Score | 5 |
| Owner gains a level | +1d10 |
| Owner is a rogue or has the sneak attack class feature | +2 |
| Owner does not select a new prey (maximum 1/day) | -1 |
| A creature designated as the owner's prey escapes before it is defeated | -1 |
| Owner hides the *Stone | -2 |

Pleased (16-20)

"No one can hide from me, not with the Stone as my agent."

The Stone's lust for murder is sated. The owner uses the Stone easily and naturally, taking on an ever-increasing number of opponents.

Property: When you have combat advantage against your target, you gain a +3 bonus to attack rolls instead of the normal +2 bonus.

Satisfied (12–15)

"The Stone shows me my next bounty. The miserable wretch cannot escape."

The Stone hungers for more bloodletting, but it is content with its owner's efforts—for now.

Power (Daily ✦ Weapon): Immediate Reaction, when you successfully hit your prey with a melee attack. Requires a melee weapon. Choose one of the following: target loses a healing surge, target loses an action point, or target takes ongoing 10 necrotic damage (save ends).

Normal (5–11)

"Why even try? You cannot hide from the Stone."

When first accepted by a new owner, the Stone is eager to begin killing, and it offers whispered encouragement about finding suitable targets.

Unsatisfied (1–4)

"The Stone is testing my resolve. I have chosen my bounty, but the Stone ensures that it has chosen me in return."

The Stone grows increasingly restless; the voices it exudes sound in near-constant, wailing complaint. Unless the owner starts killing soon, the Stone departs to find someone more compatible.

Property: When you have combat advantage against an enemy, you gain only a +1 bonus to attack rolls, unless that enemy is also your prey (the normal +2 bonus to attack rolls applies against your prey).

Angered (0 or lower)

"The Stone was not made to benefit such an inferior partner."

The Stone requires a new possessor to carry out its desires, and it is actively searching for a replacement—especially among those whom the current owner designates as his prey.

You cannot use the Stone's daily power, and it does not grant you low-light vision.

Property: When you have combat advantage against an enemy, you gain no bonus to attack rolls, unless that enemy is also your prey (the normal +2 bonus to attack rolls applies against your prey).

Moving On

"The Stone searches for a better killer."

The Jet Black Ioun Stone acts as a beacon, calling a suitable new owner to it. Available candidates are suddenly drawn to it. If none are in the area, Zehir sends a group of killers—typically yuan-ti—against the owner during his or her next extended rest.

Regardless of these attackers' success, the Stone leaves its owner. In certain cases, Zehir has been known to pluck the Stone from its place in the world, ensuring that it is never lost. He is likely to bestow it upon a new and worthier follower, or set it in place for such a follower to find.

Mirror of Secrets

The Mirror is appropriate for epic-level characters.

In a rare show of unity, the worshipers of the deities Vecna and Zehir formed a secret pact. The combined group was the idea of its leader Trebarra Kan, a powerful priest who, by adeptly leading a double life, managed to become ordained by the temples of both deities. The revelation of his twin loyalties drew faithful from both sides, and the pact between them became both powerful and wide-ranging. Power brought discord, however, and a competition for allegiances followed. As his careful plans began unraveling, Trebarra Kan attempted to create a magic mirror that would bend insurgents to his will and drive others mad. At a particularly delicate stage of the item's creation, open warfare broke out between the factions. The mix of magical forces sparked a conflagration that enveloped Trebarra Kan and trapped him forever inside his creation.

Mirror of Secrets Epic Level

This large platinum hand mirror is inlaid with jade and onyx. It functions as a portal to a magic fortress in the Shadowfell that serves as Trebarra Kan's prison.

Body Slot: Held

Property: The Mirror functions as a focus for scrying rituals that require a mirror. You can perform any scrying or travel ritual for half of its normal component cost and in half the normal amount of time. In addition, the Mirror functions as a +5 magic rod for the purpose of the powers it bestows.

Property: You gain a +1 bonus to attack rolls with powers that have the charm, fear, necrotic, or psychic keyword.

Property: Enemies take a -3 penalty to saving throws when they attempt to end ongoing conditions caused by your powers that have the charm, fear, necrotic, or psychic keywords.

Property: You gain a +2 bonus to Arcana checks and Religion checks.

Property: When making an attack roll using a power granted by the Mirror, you can apply the modifier of your highest ability score instead of the modifier normally used by the power.

Power (At-Will): Standard Action. You can use eyebite (warlock 1).

Power (Encounter): Standard Action. You can use cloak of shadow (warlock 16).

Power (Daily): Standard Action. You can use raven's glamor (warlock 22).

Goals of the Mirror of Secrets

- ✦ Spread duplicity, weave illusions, and create intrigue wherever possible.
- ✦ Find the ancient relics of Trebarra Kan and those who came after him, including the Tome of Shadow.
- ✦ Free Trebarra Kan from his prison plane.
- ✦ Explore the magic of shadows, death, undead, and illusions to break down the barriers between worlds.

Roleplaying the Mirror of Secrets

The Mirror acts as a medium for Trebarra Kan from his prison plane. He communicates with its owner both telepathically and verbally, using the latter only when others are not around to hear the conversation. Trebarra Kan is impatient and insistent, constantly trying to steer the owner toward his goals. He is decidedly macabre, having lost all vestiges of humanity over the years. More than a century of time in a shadow prison has corrupted Trebarra Kan's form, turning him into an insubstantial spirit. He no longer understands human goals and motivations. He also no longer has any interest in religion, having long since given himself wholly to shadow magic.

|---|---|
| Starting score | 5 |
| Owner gains a level | +1d10 |
| Owner is a member of an arcane class | +2 |
| Owner possesses at least three powers that have the necrotic, psychic, fear, or charm keyword | +2 |
| Owner is good or lawful good | -2 |
| Owner is a member of a divine class | -2 |

Pleased (16–20)

"We will show the world things it has never seen and could never imagine."

The Mirror of Secrets is pleased with its wielder—for the time being. It focuses on spreading its schemes and freeing Trebarra Kan.

Property: The component cost and the time to perform scrying and travel rituals decreases to one-quarter normal.
Property: The Mirror's item bonus to Arcana checks and Religion checks increases to +6.

Satisfied (12–15)

"We are well on our way to achieving a goal that is over a century in the making."

The Mirror is satisfied enough with its wielder, but it believes one better is out there. It sometimes takes on a life of its own.

Property: The Mirror's item bonus to Arcana checks and Religion checks increases to +4.

Normal (5–11)

"I feel as though we have potential if we act together."

When the Mirror first comes in contact with an owner, mental images and visions of previous times, magical power, and other worlds spill forth. An owner who responds positively is seen in a favorable light. One who responds negatively is perceived poorly.

Unsatisfied (1–4)

"The Mirror is driving me mad."

The Mirror believes its owner has little chance of achieving its goals. It implores the owner to consider imparting the artifact to someone else.

Property: You take a -2 penalty to Will. This penalty applies whether you are using or even holding the Mirror.
Property: Any powers granted by the Mirror have only a 50% chance of working. If a power fails, it is expended and its action is wasted.

Angered (0 or Lower)

"The Mirror requires a more worthy master!"

The Mirror is completely frustrated by its owner and desperately seeks a new one. It frequently defies its possessor, and all pretenses of civility are at an end.

Property: You take a -4 penalty to Will. This penalty applies whether you are using or even holding the Mirror.
Property: Any powers granted by the Mirror have only a 25% chance of working. If a power fails, it is expended and its action is wasted.

Moving On

"I'm free!"

If the Mirror moves on because it is pleased, it shatters, freeing Trebarra Kan. His spirit passes into the owner's body, permanently taking it over as his own. The Mirror remains destroyed until the body of the former owner dies. At that point, the artifact reforms in a random location, waiting to trap the soul of another ambitious meddler.

The DM and the player should work together to determine if it is appropriate for the player to continue playing this character. It might be possible for the player to play the role of Trebarra Kan, but such roleplaying might be less enjoyable than creating a new PC.

If the Mirror moves on because it is displeased, the former owner takes a permanent -1 penalty to Arcana checks and Religion checks.

Orb of Light

The Orb is appropriate for heroic-level characters.

Orb of Light — Heroic Level

The Orb of Light appears to be a large and faintly glowing white pearl. When worn or wielded by a character capable of using a holy symbol as an implement, its surface shows the image of that character's deity.

The Orb of Light is a +2 holy symbol with the following properties and powers.
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +2d6 radiant damage, or +2d10 radiant damage against undead creatures
Property: You can speak and understand Supernal and read the Supernal script.
Power (Encounter): Standard Action. You can use turn undead (cleric class feature).

Power (Encounter): Standard Action. You can use radiant smite (paladin 1).
Power (Daily ✦ Implement): Standard Action. You can make an attack against each undead creature within 10 squares, using Wisdom vs. Will. On a hit, pull the target 8 squares.

Goals of the Orb of Light

- ✦ Destroy the undead, which are abominations on the earth.
- ✦ Protect the living from the depredations of the undead.
- ✦ Defeat the plans of Orcus and his allies and servants.

Roleplaying the Orb of Light

The Orb of Light rarely speaks to its owner. Instead, it sends the possessor emotions and, on occasion, inspirational images. Before a particularly dangerous and difficult battle against the undead, it might help its wielder feel less afraid by revealing a brief vision of all the people whose lives will be saved if the monsters are vanquished.

CONCORDANCE

| Starting score | 5 |
|---|---|
| Owner gains a level | +1d10 |
| Owner successfully protects someone from undead | +1 |
| Owner destroys an undead creature 1 or more levels higher than he is (maximum 1/day) | +1 |
| Owner fails to destroy an undead creature (maximum 1/encounter) | -2 |
| Owner flees from an undead creature (maximum 1/day) | -1 |

Transcendent (21 or higher)

"I am a just and good servant of life."

The Orb grants its possessor great power against the undead, engendering a mighty champion of good.

Power (Daily): Free Action. When you hit an undead creature and deal radiant damage, that target is stunned until the end of its next turn.

Pleased (16–20)

"I am the scourge of the unliving, a protector of life and a champion of the divine and radiant forces of good."

The Orb of Light knows it has found a worthy owner who is dedicated to purifying the world of foul undead horrors.

Property: You gain a +1 bonus to all defenses against undead creatures.
Power (Encounter): Immediate Interrupt, when an ally within 5 squares of you is hit by an attack. You can use shielding word (cleric 10), but only against attacks made by undead creatures.

Satisfied (12–15)

"I am a righteous protector of the living against the horrors of the walking dead."

The owner has proved to be a heroic champion of the living, but the Orb of Light knows more is possible, and it urges the possessor onward to greatness.

Power (Daily): Standard Action. You can use searing light (cleric 7).

Normal (5–11)

"I must smite the undead horrors that walk the earth."

The Orb is quietly watchful, providing its new owner with a comforting sense that protecting the living from the dead is a righteous and holy calling.

Unsatisfied (1–4)

"The Orb is disappointed in me."

The Orb thinks its owner might be unsatisfactory, but is willing to yet abide a while. It communicates less readily with its possessor, but expresses great satisfaction when pleased.

Special: If an encounter includes undead enemies, you gain a -2 penalty to attacks that do not include an undead creature. This penalty applies whether you are using or even holding the Orb of Light.

Angered (0 or lower)

"The Orb considers me unworthy to bear it."

The Orb urges its owner to find someone else worthy to carry it, even as it throws the possessor into confrontation with the undead. Eventually, the artifact vanishes.

Special: Once per day, at the start of an encounter including undead enemies, the Orb teleports you to a space within 10 squares that is adjacent to the greatest number of undead. This penalty applies whether you are using or even holding the Orb.

Moving On

"We have made the world a better place."

One morning, the Orb is gone, replaced by a luminescent (but mundane) pearl worth 5,000 gp. The former owner gains a permanent +1 bonus to AC against attacks by undead creatures.

If the owner failed the Orb, the next time the character lifts it, the artifact crumbles into coal, leaving permanent marks on the character's hand. The former owner takes a permanent -1 penalty to AC against attacks by undead creatures. The Orb reappears elsewhere in the world, ready to be claimed by another aspirant.

Silver Mask of Kas

The Mask is appropriate for paragon-level characters.

Silver Mask of Kas Paragon Level

This solid silver mask is fashioned in the form of a fanged skull. It was originally forged for the exarch Kas by his overlord Vecna.

Body Slot: Head
Property: You gain darkvision.
Property: You gain a +2 item bonus to Perception checks.
Property: You gain a +4 item bonus to Diplomacy checks and Intimidate checks against undead creatures.
Power (At Will): Standard Action. You can use commander's strike (warlord 1).
Power (Encounter): Standard Action. You can use bolstering blow (warlord 13), but the attack deals necrotic damage.
Power (Daily): Free Action. When you hit an undead creature with a melee attack, make a secondary attack vs. Will using the same attack bonus. On a hit, the target is dominated (save ends).

Goals of the Silver Mask of Kas

- Aid the undead against the living.
- Gain followers for Kas.
- Convince noble warriors that personal power and advancement are the most important goals.

Roleplaying the Silver Mask of Kas

The Mask is a soft-spoken tempter. Instead of ordering or begging its possessor to perform an action, it offers quiet suggestions that help both the owner and the item's agenda. Sometimes it whispers into the owner's ear; at other times, its thoughts manifest in its possessor's mind and are indistinguishable from naturally occurring ones. The owner also has regular dreams revealing the power and glory attainable if the Mask's directions are followed. The artifact is especially eager to suggest that its possessor betray any fellows and aid the undead against the living.

SEAN MURRAY

Concordance

| Starting score | 5 |
|---|---|
| Owner gains a level | +1d10 |
| Owner betrays a comrade to gain an advantage | +2 |
| Owner defeats an enemy three or more levels higher than he or she is (maximum 1/day) | +1 |
| Owner fights alongside an undead creature (maximum 1/day) | +1 |
| Owner or ally kills an intelligent undead creature (maximum 1/encounter) | -2 |
| Owner ignores an insult to his or her honor (maximum 1/day) | -2 |

Transcendent (21 or higher)

"I near my glorious eternity."

The Mask exults in its ideal servant and grants the possessor greater power.

Property: You cease to age.
Power (Encounter): Free Action. Use this power before you make an attack roll. If the attack hits, it deals necrotic damage and you regain 15 hit points.

Pleased (16–20)

"I am a proud and loyal servant of Kas."

The Mask is pleased with its owner's actions—for now. The artifact focuses on advancing Kas's agenda and finds its owner to be a useful servant. It occasionally asks the owner to perform certain tasks, in return for a reward.

Property: The Mask's item bonus to Diplomacy checks and Intimidate checks made against undead creatures increases to +6.
Power (Daily): Standard Action. You can use exalted retribution (paladin 25).

Satisfied (12–15)

"The Mask has plans for me—glorious plans."

The owner has proved to be a worthy representative of Kas, and the Mask works to shape the wearer into an even better tool. At this point, the Mask attempts to encourage the possessor with promises of wondrous rewards, but still includes the occasional threat to provide extra motivation.

Property: You gain a +2 item bonus to Diplomacy checks and Intimidate checks made against targets that do not have the undead keyword.

Normal (5–11)

"The Mask promises me great power in return for my aid and loyalty."

The Mask encourages its new owner, boosting confident and granting powers. Otherwise, the artifact offers quiet promises of the glories and wonders to come. It does not threaten the owner . . . yet.

Unsatisfied (1–4)

"The Mask is angry with me. I fear its rage."

The Mask thinks its possessor might be unsatisfactory, but still attempts to exert influence. At this point, the Mask mixes threats and promises in equal measure and fills the owner's mind with horrific visions of the price of failure.

Special: The artifact's item bonus to Diplomacy and Intimidate checks against undead creatures decreases to +2. The character cannot use the daily power that allows a secondary attack.

Angered (0 or lower)

"The Mask is plotting against me. I can hear it."

The Mask seeks its possessor's death at the hands of the undead or by one more worthy to wear it. The Mask ceases to communicate unless the owner begins behaving appropriately.

Property: The Mask calls out to the greedy, the evil, and the undead within 10 miles, drawing them with thoughts of murder and theft. You take a –2 penalty to all defenses against undead creatures. This penalty applies whether you are using or even holding the Mask.

Moving On

"I claim the reward of faithful service to Kas."

The Mask vanishes, going in search of a place where it can do more to further the cause of the undead, and to tempt other warriors into evil. As a reward for good service, the former owner becomes a vampire lord (and an NPC).

If the Mask is displeased with its former owner, it instead tries to cause the owner's death by attracting hordes of undead to his or her location.

Soul Sword

The Soul Sword is appropriate for paragon-level characters.

Thousands of years ago, the empire of Kortaja stood as a beacon of the divine. Toward the end of that civilization, the glass citadel and its deific armies were besieged by primordial forces. Kortaja's secret weapon was a set of seven fabled swords forged by the dwarf kings and wielded by the empire's seven greatest generals. In the last battle, six of the seven swords were shattered by the blast from a magic, primordial trumpet. The seventh weapon was lost in time. Deific servants have been searching for it for millennia.

Soul Sword Paragon Level

This artifact is a flawlessly crafted, weighty two-handed weapon that shines with its own internal light. The opal pommel stone shines or grows dull depending on the sword's mood.

The Soul Sword is a +4 greatsword with the following properties and powers.

Property: You gain a +1 item bonus to Athletics checks, Insight checks, and Religion checks.

Property: You gain a +1 item bonus to attack rolls and damage rolls against undead creatures.

Property: The Sword grants you immunity to fear effects and resist 10 necrotic.

Property: When making an attack roll using a power granted by the Sword, you can apply the modifier of your highest ability score instead of the modifier normally used by the power.

Power (At-Will): Standard Action. You can use holy strike (paladin 1).

Power (Encounter): Standard Action. You can use divine reverence (paladin 7), applying the Sword's enhancement bonus as if the Sword were a holy symbol.

Power (Daily): Standard Action. You can use hand of the gods (paladin 17), applying the Sword's enhancement bonus as if the Sword were a holy symbol.

Goals of the Soul Sword

- Destroy all undead.
- Challenge deviousness wherever encountered.
- Find remnants of ancient Kortaja. This activity includes but is not limited to repairing lost artifacts, searching out ancient dragons who knew of the empire, and excavating ruins.

Roleplaying the Soul Sword

The Soul Sword communicates telepathically with its wielder, expressing its desires calmly and respectfully. It makes clear that it will defy and counter inappropriate behavior on the part of its owner. The Sword is happy if the goals of its wielder lead toward challenging deceit, especially that caused by undead creatures, and searching for remnants of Kortaja. It is obsessive about this, but does not push hard unless its wielder is being negligent.

|---|---|
| Starting score | 5 |
| Owner gains a level | +1d10 |
| Owner is a member of a divine class | +2 |
| Owner exposes a scheme perpetrated by undead or necromancers | +2 |
| Owner has one or more powers that have the necrotic keyword | –2 |
| Owner lies or cheats | –2 |

Pleased (16–20)

"I bear the instrument of the primordials' destruction."

The Soul Sword is pleased with its wielder—for the time being. It focuses on countering duplicity and searching for Kortajan remnants.

Property: The Sword's item bonus to Athletics checks, Insight checks, and Religion checks increases to +5.
Property: The Sword's item bonus to attack rolls and damage rolls against undead increases to +3.
Property: You take a –5 penalty to Bluff checks, Stealth checks, and Thievery checks. This penalty applies whether you are using or even holding the Soul Sword.

Satisfied (12–15)

"I am fulfilling something begun ages ago."

The Soul Sword is satisfied enough with its wielder, but improvement is possible and desirable.

Property: The Sword's item bonus to Athletics checks, Insight checks, and Religion checks increases to +2.
Property: You take a –2 penalty to Bluff checks, Stealth checks, and Thievery checks. This penalty applies whether you are using or even holding the Soul Sword.

Normal (5–11)

"I sense that I have a greater purpose."

When the Sword first comes in contact with the wielder, it is extremely communicative, friendly, and forthright. It is happy to explain its history, without dissembling or omission.

Unsatisfied (1–4)

"The Sword has a mind of its own."

The Soul Sword believes its wielder has little chance of achieving its goals. It implores the owner to consider relinquishing the artifact.

Property: You take a –2 penalty to Bluff checks, Stealth checks, and Thievery checks. This penalty applies whether you are using or even holding the Soul Sword.
Special: Once per day at any time, the Sword can try to take control of your body. It makes a special attack against your Will, rolling 1d20 + your level. If this attack hits, you are dominated until you save. This attack is possible whether you are using or even holding the Soul Sword.

The Sword typically attempts to take control to warn its owner about deviance from proper behavior. It also tries to take control if the wielder ignores an opportunity to strike out against duplicity or uncover information about Kortaja.

Angered (0 or lower)

"I can hardly bear the touch of this weapon!"

The Soul Sword is completely frustrated by its owner and desperately seeks a new one.

Property: You take a –5 penalty to Bluff checks, Stealth checks, and Thievery checks. This penalty applies whether you are using or even holding the Soul Sword.
Special: Once per day at any time, the Sword can try to take control of your body. It makes a special attack against your Will, rolling 1d20 + your level. If this attack hits, you are dominated until you save. This attack is possible whether you are using or even holding the Soul Sword.
Special: Each time you roll initiative, a 25% chance exists that the Sword refuses to perform any attacks for the encounter.
Special: The Sword importunes any of your allies it feels would be better owners. It might solicit strangers as well.

Moving On

"It is time for the Sword to work to elevate another."

The Soul Sword transforms the wielder into a Kortajan war hero, complete with the Kortajan military uniform, grooming, and mannerisms. The character has the knowledge of Kortajan generals and knows secrets of ancient Kortaja. Upon advancing to a new level, the possessor gains a +2 bonus to a single ability score and +2 bonus to any of two knowledge skills. The Sword disappears, seeking the next hero to elevate.

If the Sword moves on because it is displeased, the former owner takes a permanent –1 penalty to Athletics checks, Endurance checks, and Insight checks.

Sword of Kas

The Sword of Kas is appropriate for epic-level characters.

Sword of Kas Epic Level

The Sword of Kas was created by Vecna for his lieutenant. Kas rewarded his former master by using it to cut off Vecna's hand and gouge out his eye. The Sword offers great power to any who grasp it, but wielders end up betraying what they love most.

The Sword of Kas is a +5 vicious short sword with the following properties and powers.
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +5d12 damage.
Property: The Sword of Kas deals 2d10 extra damage against allies and former allies.
Property: Whenever an attack with the Sword of Kas reduces a target to 0 hit points or fewer, you gain concealment until the end of your next turn.
Property: If you attack Vecna, a servant of Vecna, a cultist of Vecna, or any other creature working directly to serve Vecna's ends, you deal 5 extra damage on a hit.
Property: When you take the total defense action or use your second wind, you gain a +5 item bonus to all defenses until the start of your next turn.
Property: The Sword of Kas is initially invisible to everyone but the creature possessing it. You gain combat advantage against melee targets when using it until you successfully hit, at which point the weapon becomes visible to everyone. The Sword of Kas turns invisible again after being sheathed for a short rest (or for 5 minutes).
Power (Encounter): Free Action. When you would pull or push a target, you slide the target the same distance instead.
Power (Daily ✦ Poison, Radiant): Free Action. When you hit with the Sword of Kas, the target takes ongoing 15 poison damage (save ends). If the attack is made against an undead creature, it instead takes ongoing 15 radiant damage (save ends). Saving throws made to end this effect take a –2 penalty.

Goals of the Sword of Kas

- ✦ Betray that which is most fiercely loved, whether the owner's love or another's.
- ✦ Wreak harm to Vecna, Vecna's plans, and any creature affiliated with Vecna.
- ✦ Destroy all confidences, reveal all secrets, lay bare all that is kept hidden.

Roleplaying the Sword of Kas

The Sword of Kas communicates in whispers that only its bearer can hear. The weapon can abide long periods in silence, but is quick to point out small opportunities for betrayal, especially if such an act would increase the wielder's standing in the short term.

The Sword of Kas is also happy to speak long about its hatred for Vecna and the undead. Vecna did not mean to create an undead-hating sword, or one that would become his nemesis. The Sword looks forward to the day when it and its former master, Kas, can be reunited.

The Sword becomes more and more insulting and acerbic the lower its concordance becomes.

The Sword of Kas and the Hand of Vecna

"Now perhaps we have power enough to kill even a god!"

If the owner affixes the Hand of Vecna (Dungeon Master's Guide, page 168) and wields the Sword of Kas, a new property is unlocked, regardless of either artifact's concordance.

Property: Every successful attack you make with the Sword of Kas against Vecna, his servants, his cultists, or any creature working directly to serve his ends scores a critical hit. However, each time you make such an attack, you take a -1 concordance penalty to the concordance of both the Hand and the Sword. If either artifact's concordance drops to 0 as a result, both immediately move on.

|---|---|
| Starting score | 5 |
| Owner gains a level | +1d10 |
| Owner kills an ally (maximum 1/day) | +2 |
| Owner completes a quest against Vecna's interest | +2 |
| Owner breaks another's confidence (maximum 1/day) | +1 |
| Owner kills an undead (maximum 1/day) | +1 |
| Owner doesn't improve concordance over the course of a day | -1 |
| Owner or ally uses Bluff skill (maximum 1/day) | -2 |

Pleased (16–20)

"My strength is faithlessness! I have mastered well the art of treachery, and soon all the world's secrets shall be laid bare!"

The Sword is clearly in tune with its wielder, and together they are a force few can trust for long.

The Sword's enhancement bonus increases to +6.
Critical: +6d12 damage.
Property: The Sword of Kas deals 3d10 extra damage against allies and former allies.
Property: When you take the total defense action or use your second wind, you gain a +6 item bonus to defenses until the start of your next turn.
Property: Allies within 2 squares of you take a -2 penalty to their attack rolls.
Power (Daily): Free Action. When you hit with the Sword of Kas and you have combat advantage against the target, deal 5d6 extra damage.

Satisfied (12–15)

"One more confidence broken, one more undead destroyed. Soon, I might even turn on my friends. The sword is pleased."

The Sword sees good things ahead for its owner.

Property: Allies within 1 square of you take a -1 penalty to their attack rolls.
Power (Daily): Free Action. When you hit with the Sword of Kas against a creature that has insubstantial or phasing, the creature loses those qualities until the end of your next turn.

Normal (5–11)

"I have a lot to learn. The Sword tells me that the way is hard, but that I am up to the challenge."

The Sword of Kas hopes to lure the owner into keeping it around, and eagerly anticipates pushing the owner into the first of many betrayals.

Unsatisfied (1–4)

"I am a moral coward and a failure. If I do not do better, the Sword promises egregious consequences."

The Sword is upset that the owner doesn't have the strength of will to serve it. The weapon begins to suspect that the owner isn't a choice wielder.

Special: You take a -2 penalty to attack rolls and damage rolls against any creature that does not have the undead keyword, that is not your ally, or that is not Vecna, one of his servitors, or one of his allies. This penalty applies whether you are using or even holding the Sword of Kas.

Sword of Kas Lore

DC 25: The Sword is named for a powerful vampire lord called Kas.

DC 30: The Sword of Kas was created by Vecna at the height of his power in unlife. Believing that his empire was growing too vast to manage alone, he chose one of his faithful, Kas, to serve as his right hand. The Sword was to be Kas's symbol of office, but Vecna made it too well. Part of the lich lord's own consciousness—the ambition to dominate the world—entered the weapon. The Sword eventually caused the lieutenant to turn on his master. The ensuing battle cost the lich his left hand and eye.

DC 35: Over the centuries since the Sword of Kas was created, several powerful magic swords have been mistaken for it. A few swords have been crafted as near-exact replicas of the original.

On more than one occasion, Vecna has managed to trap the sword in a vault or citadel, in hopes of keeping it out of the hands of those who would harm him. Even so, the Sword of Kas has always found a way to slip into the hands of a new betrayer.

Angered (0 or lower)

"The Sword wonders how one as incompetent, clumsy, and ignorant as I managed to claim it. It thinks my end is near."

The Sword knows that the wielder has no intention of fulfilling its goals and is merely holding onto the weapon to gain the abilities it possesses. It will not remain in the owner's possession for long.

The Sword's enhancement bonus drops to +4.

Critical: +4d12 damage.

Special: You take a -5 penalty to attack rolls and damage rolls against any creature that does not have the undead keyword, that is not your ally, or that is not Vecna, one of his servitors, or one of his allies. This penalty applies whether you are using or even holding the Sword of Kas.

Special: Each time you miss an enemy with the Sword, make a melee basic attack as a free action with the Sword against a randomly chosen adjacent ally.

Moving On

"The Sword quits me."

If the Sword of Kas finds a wielder who continually pleases it, that relationship lasts for as long as the owner wants it to.

If the Sword moves on because it is angered, it slips from its owner's hands and into the grasp of the possessor's closest nemesis (which could be a creature across the battlefield, or one across the planes). The new owner is charged with a quest to slay the individual whom the Sword just abandoned.

Tome of Shadow

The Tome is appropriate for epic-level characters.

Maikedhon was a mage living in the Shadowfell during the time of the secret pact between the worshipers of Vecna and Zehir (see "Mirror of Secrets," page 39). He created a number of artifacts related to shadows and shadow creatures, the most important of which was a great magic tome. The battle between the sects of the secret pact that swallowed Trebarra Kan also opened a portal to Maikedhon's tower, sucking his items into the world.

Maikedhon's items came into the possession of some survivors from the pact who were obsessed by shadow. They eventually met up with the shadow-mage, returning his book in exchange for being tutored in shadow magic. Together, the arcanists tested the limits of the medium, exploring the depths of the Shadowfell. The students of shadow were eventually lost in a deep abyss in the Shadowfell, but the book was later discovered near the opening of the chasm. It did not last long in the hands of its new owner, however; the book finds ways to get rid of a wielder who does not meet its expectations. Over the years, it has appeared intermittently in the hands of a gnome merchant, a drow battle mage, and a human princess, but now it is once again lost.

Tome of Shadow Epic Level

This thick volume is bound in a dark hide etched with elaborate silver symbols. The stretched-skin pages and tightly scrawled writing are bathed in shadow, even under the brightest light.

Body Slot: Held

Property: You gain a +2 bonus to monster Knowledge checks related to creatures of the shadow origin.

Property: The Tome functions as a +4 magic orb.

Property: When you use the Tome as an implement, you can use the Orb of Imposition wizard class feature once per encounter.

Property: The Tome counts as a ritual book with 256 pages. It contains five rituals chosen by the DM that the wielder can use once mastered. Other rituals can be added to the book normally, but all except the five original rituals disappear from the book when the artifact moves on.

Property: When you hit a target with an arcane spell that has the necrotic keyword and use the Tome as an implement, you deal extra necrotic damage equal to your Wisdom modifier.

Power (At-Will): Standard Action. You can use ray of enfeeblement (wizard 1).

Power (Encounter): Standard Action. You can use displacement (wizard 16).

Power (Daily): Standard Action. You can use Evard's black tentacles (wizard 19)

Goals of the Tome of Shadow

- Learn all there is to know about the Shadowfell.
- Find secret planar portals to the Shadowfell.
- Make sure that the tome is not found by agents of the Mirror of Secrets.

Roleplaying the Tome of Shadow

The Tome does not tolerate incompetence and becomes incensed if it feels that its goals are being ignored. The Tome communicates telepathically, speaking in short, clipped sentences, never wasting a word. It finds waste disdainful and criticizes an owner who fails to fully utilize the tools available to him or her.

CONCORDANCE

| Starting score | 5 |
|---|---|
| Owner gains a level | +1d10 |
| Owner is a member of an arcane class | +2 |
| Owner has at least three powers that create darkness or summon a creature | +2 |
| Owner is good or lawful good | -2 |
| Owner has three or more powers that have the radiant keyword | -2 |

Transcendent (21 or higher)

"The mysteries of shadow are revealed, and they are great."

The Tome infuses the wielder with shadow. With skin and hair transformed to a dusky gray, the owner takes on the shadow origin. The owner also gains the following power.

Power (Encounter): Minor Action. Until the end of your next turn, you are insubstantial and have phasing.

If at any point after reaching the transcendent concordance, the artifact drops to a lower concordance, or even after the Tome moves on, the owner retains the benefits of this concordance.

Pleased (16–20)

"We will become one with shadow. I can taste it!"

The Tome of Shadow is pleased with its wielder—for the time being. It focuses on studying shadow in all its forms, and on evading Trebarra Kan.

Property: The Tome's item bonus to monster Knowledge checks related to creatures of the shadow origin increases to +6.
Property: When you hit with an arcane power that has the necrotic keyword and use the Tome as an implement, you deal extra necrotic damage equal to one-half your level + your Wisdom modifier.

Satisfied (12–15)

"We will blot out the sun with darkness."

The Tome is satisfied enough with its owner, but it believes that one better is out there.

Property: The Tome's item bonus to monster Knowledge checks related to creatures of the shadow origin increases to +4.
Property: The Tome functions as a +5 magic orb.

Normal (5–11)

"This is only the beginning."

When the Tome of Shadow first comes in contact with the possessor, it sends forth images of shadow, darkness, and summoned monsters. An owner who responds positively is seen in a favorable light. One who responds negatively is perceived poorly.

Unsatisfied (1–4)

"The Tome is reading my thoughts. It knows my fears."

The Tome believes its owner has little chance of achieving its goals. It implores the owner to consider imparting it to someone else.

Property: The Tome functions as a +3 magic orb.
Property: When you use an arcane power that does not have the necrotic keyword, you are slowed until the end of your next turn. This penalty applies whether you are using or even holding the Tome of Shadow.

Angered (0 or lower)

"The Tome must have a more worthy master!"

The Tome frequently defies its possessor, and all pretenses of civility are over.

Property: The Tome functions as a +2 magic orb.
Property: When you use an arcane power that does not have the necrotic keyword, you are stunned until the end of your next turn. This penalty applies whether you are using or even holding the Tome of Shadow.

Moving On

"The mysteries of shadow must be solved by another."

The Tome seeks to spread its shadowy knowledge to others. When the character next gains a level, the Tome disappears, moving on to corrupt others.

If the Tome is at least satisfied with the owner when it moves on, it leaves a 256-page ritual book containing all the rituals that were scribed in the Tome when it moved on.

Von Zarovich Family Sword

The von Zarovich Family Sword is appropriate for paragon-level characters.

Count Strahd von Zarovich (see page 210) commissioned this weapon from a crafter known only as the Alchemist. Impatient with the work, the count infected the Alchemist with vampirism to give him the proper strength, endurance, and insight with which to create a sword fit for the von Zarovich family.

Strahd found the sword so perfect that he used it to decapitate the Alchemist—the man would never again create a work of its equal. The Alchemist's life force was infused into the Sword. Far more than a mere weapon, it became an entity unto itself.

Strahd might have placed the Sword in the tomb of his brother Sergei as repayment for his murder, or perhaps he gave it to Tatyana, his unrequited love. However it came to be, at some point the Sword left the land of Barovia.

The Sword is well aware of its heritage and the powerful icon it represents for both the von Zarovich clan and Barovia as a nation. The weapon draws strength from its own vampiric nature, equating its hunger with a need to spread the family's honor. It demands an owner who respects these needs.

Von Zarovich Family Sword Paragon Level

Commissioned by Count Strahd, this weapon is the family sword of the von Zarovich clan, symbol of its sovereign rule over Barovia.

The von Zarovich Family Sword is a +3 longsword with the following properties and powers.
Enhancement: Attack and damage rolls
Critical: +3d6 damage.
Property: Once per day, if the Sword has been used to help defeat a living enemy, it must feed. The owner is stunned until the start of his or her next turn.
Property: You gain vulnerable 10 radiant.
Property: You do not cast a reflection.
Power (Encounter ✦ Arcane, Weapon): Move Action. You can use spider climb (warlock 6).
Power (Daily ✦ Weapon): Immediate Reaction, when you hit with the Sword. The target is weakened (save ends), and you gain 20 temporary hit points.
Special: At the end of each round in which an attack is knowingly made with it against a member of the von Zarovich family, the weapon burns with sudden intensity, dealing 30 fire damage to its owner.

Goals of the von Zarovich Family Sword

- ✦ Slay the living, especially clerics, and rule the night.
- ✦ Be wielded by a powerful and noble warrior.
- ✦ Advance the von Zarovich name and influence.

Roleplaying the von Zarovich Family Sword

The von Zarovich Family Sword presents itself as a dignified, haughty servant of the von Zarovich family. It soon becomes apparent, however, that it believes itself to be a pure, symbolic embodiment of the von Zarovich family name. The Sword communicates silently with its owner, often lecturing on all that the family has done and all that the owner needs to achieve to live up to the family's name. Only if the Sword has not fed for some time does its personality change, offering shrill critiques and complaints that its thirst essentially serves as an insult to the entire von Zarovich family.

CONCORDANCE

| Starting score | 5 |
|---|---|
| Owner gains a level | +1d10 |
| Owner is a member of a martial class | +1 |
| Owner slays a high-ranking cleric or the angel of a good deity | +1 |
| Owner does not feed the weapon (maximum 1/week) | -1 |
| Owner acts in an uncouth manner, as determined by the Sword (drinks at a common tavern, does not wear fine clothes, associates with unacceptable types; maximum 1/week) | -1 |
| Owner attacks a member of the von Zarovich family | -1 |

Pleased (16–20)

"We are the night. We are Barovia."

The Sword believes that the owner rightfully perpetuates the heritage of the von Zarovich name. The weapon offers lavish praise—together, Sword, family, and owner are fast becoming part of Barovian national legend.

Property: You do not regain healing surges or daily powers until you take an extended rest during daylight hours.
Property: When the Sword feeds, you are not stunned.
Power (Daily ✦ Necrotic, Weapon): Free Action, when you use the Sword to reduce an enemy to 0 or fewer hit points with a melee attack. You regain your healing surge value in hit points, but do not spend a healing surge.

Satisfied (12–15)

"Barovia has found a new scion. I am certain the von Zarovich family is pleased, wherever they roam."

The owner is on the right path. The von Zarovich name is being honored, perhaps even furthered. The Sword offers measured, though frequent, praise.

Power (Daily ✦ Polymorph, Weapon): Standard Action. You become insubstantial and are weakened until the end of your next turn. Sustain Minor: The effect persists.

Normal (5–11)

"I have a solemn responsibility to uphold the values of the von Zarovich name. Fortunately, this honorable weapon can help me."

The von Zarovich Family Sword tries to instill in its owner a sense of expected responsibilities. The weapon is the physical embodiment of the von Zarovich family, which the wielder has a duty to honor.

Unsatisfied (1–4)

"I am failing a glorious tradition. This blade's family would never have wished it to be carried by someone with such an obvious poverty of skill."

The owner is failing the von Zarovich family, and the Sword offers constant, elaborate criticism on this point. Its manner grows abrupt as it snarls and whines for the blood of living targets.

Property: You take a –2 penalty to attack rolls and damage rolls made with the Sword against nonliving enemies.

Angered (0 or lower)

"The Sword starves. It considers me a pretender, little more."

Aside from shrill commands to kill any living target in the area, the Sword remains largely silent. After all, why waste good counsel on such a poor owner?

Property: The Sword functions as a mundane longsword against nonliving enemies.

Moving On

"You are a paragon only of failure."

The von Zarovich Family Sword cannot abide an owner who does not keep it properly fed and thus dishonors the von Zarovich name. During the night of the next new moon, the weapon and its scabbard transform to mist and leave the owner, seeking refuge in the hoard of a powerful creature or the vault of a landed warrior.

The Sword will not remain hidden for long. It needs to feed, but demands to do so openly, enhancing the legend and reputation of its family. It instructs its new owner to hunt down and slay its former, failed owner. Such humiliating defeat is the proper revenge.

RITUALS

Rituals are complex ceremonies that create extraordinary effects. Treasure found with undead at times contains books or scrolls with certain common rituals scribed in them.

RITUALS BY LEVEL

| Lvl | Ritual | Key Skill |
|---|---|---|
| 2 | Corpse Light | Arcana or Religion |
| 2 | Last Sight Vision | Arcana or Religion |
| 3 | Undead Ward | Arcana |
| 4 | Skull Watch | Arcana |
| 6 | Undead Servitor | Arcana |
| 8 | Gravesight | Arcana |
| 14 | Corpse Gate | Arcana |

Corpse Gate

You finish chanting and drop the finger bone to the floor of the ritual circle. In a flash, you and your companions appear in an ancient mausoleum.

Level: 14
Category: Travel
Time: 1 hour
Duration: Special
Component Cost: 800 gp
Market Price: 4,200 gp
Key Skill: Arcana

You create a portal similar to that produced by Linked Portal, but connecting your present location to that of a corpse. You must have a piece of the corpse—at least as much as the tip of a finger—in your possession to begin the ritual. This piece is consumed at the ritual's completion.

If the target corpse is alive, animate, undead, or otherwise more than a simple corpse, or if the corpse is on another plane, the ritual fails and no components (including the bit of the corpse) are expended.

Your Arcana check result determines how long the portal remains open.

| Arcana Check Result | Portal Duration |
|---|---|
| 19 or lower | 1 round |
| 20-39 | 3 rounds |
| 40 or higher | 5 rounds |

Corpse Light

A sickly green flame springs forth, washing the area in nauseating light. In its illumination, those that walk in undeath are revealed beyond a doubt.

Level: 2
Category: Divination
Time: 10 minutes
Duration: 1 hour
Component Cost: 25 gp
Market Price: 100 gp
Key Skill: Arcana or Religion

You create a pale green flame that illuminates as a lantern. The light emanates from an object you designate during the ritual. The green fire produces no heat.

Any undead creature that enters the illuminated area or is within it, and that is of a level equal to or lower than your Arcana or Religion check - 10, is wreathed in a green, flaming aura that harmlessly flickers around the creature. This aura appears even if the undead is disguised by a polymorph or illusion effect. Invisible undead are surrounded by visible green radiance. The glow reveals the square in which the undead is located, but it does not affect the total concealment granted by invisibility.

Gravesight

You recite a funeral dirge, infusing a zombie with necromantic energy. Now, you can spy through the eyes of your undead minion.

Level: 8
Category: Scrying
Time: 30 minutes
Duration: 24 hours
Component Cost: 250 gp
Market Price: 680 gp
Key Skill: Arcana

You are able to perceive the environment around an animate undead creature. The target creature must be within 5 squares of you during the entire time necessary to perform the ritual.

For the ritual's duration, you can spend a standard action to use the affected creature's senses. You use your Perception modifier when you do so. While sensing through the undead, you cannot use your own senses and are considered blind and deaf. You can end the effect as a free action. If the undead creature is destroyed, the ritual ends immediately.

Your Arcana check determines the maximum distance at which you can receive sensory input from the target creature.

| Arcana Check Result | Duration |
|---|---|
| 19 or lower | 1 mile |
| 20-29 | 3 miles |
| 30-39 | 6 miles |
| 40 or higher | 10 miles |

Sufficiently powerful warding magic (such as a Forbiddance ritual) prevents you from receiving sensory input from a creature as long as it is within the warded area. Treat the undead creature as a scrying sensor for such purposes.

Last Sight Vision

As you finish the ritual, you see the final moments of the corpse's life.

Level: 2
Category: Divination
Time: 10 minutes
Duration: 2 or more rounds
Component Cost: 25 gp
Market Price: 100 gp
Key Skill: Arcana or Religion

When you perform this ritual in the presence of a corpse or a skull, you witness an auditory and visual replay of the moments before the death of that creature, as seen from the creature's perspective. You cannot perform this ritual on headless corpses. Once you have performed this ritual, you must wait until you have gained a level before using it again on the same remains.

Your Arcana or Religion check determines the length of time prior to the target's death that you experience.

| Check Result | Time Period |
|---|---|
| 19 or lower | 2 rounds |
| 20-29 | 4 rounds |
| 30-39 | 6 rounds |
| 40 or higher | 10 rounds |

Skull Watch

As you complete the halting words of power, a light shines from the grim skull's sockets before fading again into blackness.

Level: 4
Category: Warding
Time: 10 minutes
Duration: 4 hours
Component Cost: 80 gp
Market Price: 175 gp
Key Skill: Arcana (no check)

You enchant a skull to watch over an area and alert you when something intrudes. The skull uses your Perception modifier with a +5 bonus. It cannot hear or smell, and it never considers you an intruder. In addition, you can designate any number of other individuals as nonintruders. When you perform the ritual, you can also designate one or more categories of creatures that the skull will ignore. You can define these categories by obvious physical characteristics (such as height, weight, or body shape), creature type (such as humanoid), creature race (such as hill giant), or obvious equipment (such as a creature carrying a shield with a flame emblazoned upon it).

When the skull detects an intrusion, it mentally alerts you if you are within 1 mile. At any time during the ritual's duration, you can choose to look through the skull's eyes as a standard action. While you look through the skull's eyes, you cannot see through your own and are considered blind. You can end this effect as a free action.

The skull can be moved from its original position during the ritual's duration without disturbing the effect. Destroying the skull ends the effect, and you are not magically made aware of the skull's destruction (though you might already be alerted about intruders).

Undead Servitor

The corpse shudders, then clambers to its feet. At your direction, it shoulders your gear and lumbers after you.

Level: 6
Category: Creation
Time: 1 hour
Duration: Permanent
Component Cost: 150 gp
Market Price: 360 gp
Key Skill: Arcana (no check)

You imbue a humanoid corpse of natural origin and Medium or smaller size with the ability to move under its own power and an understanding of one language of your choice. It has speed 6 and Strength 16, never tires, and obeys you at all times.

The undead servitor is a noncombatant. When forced onto an active battlefield, treat the servitor as an allied minion (1 hit point, never damaged on a missed attack) with all defenses of 11. It acts just after you do and never makes attacks.

You cannot have more than one undead servitor at a time from different performances of this ritual. If you attempt to create a second servitor, that ritual fails without component expenditure.

Undead Ward

The line you etched in the floor shines like ivory in moonlight, and the skeletons stop advancing.

Level: 3
Category: Warding
Time: 30 minutes
Duration: Until broken
Component Cost: 35 gp
Market Price: 130 gp
Key Skill: Arcana

You create a magical barrier against undead creatures. This barrier can be a closed circle, with an inscription time of 1 minute per square inside the circle, or a line, requiring 1 minute per 2 squares of length.

An undead creature whose level is lower than your Arcana check result - 10 cannot pass through the barrier, affect creatures through the barrier, or affect the barrier in any way. Any other undead creature takes radiant damage equal to your Arcana check result when passing through the barrier, but doing so breaks the barrier and ends the effect. Any creature able to pass through the barrier can take a standard action to obscure the inscription and thereby break the barrier.

UNDEAD GRAFTS

Many beings that revere undead or covet the powers of undeath are not ready to shake off the mortal coil. Some of these devotees reveal their true ambitions by grafting undead flesh or organs onto themselves.

Grafting select parts of an undead monster is no simple task. It involves a particularly vile and complicated ritual. Far more difficult than the ritual is the procurement of undead body parts that are suitable for its performance. Not only are undead loath to give up their organs and body parts, but only perfect specimens can be used for grafting.

A graft is a form of template that introduces an interesting story and visual element to an NPC (a foul necromancer of Orcus is far more memorable if one arm is a blazing claw), and it grants the NPC an extra attack that corresponds to the graft. Grafts do not change the level of the host creature, nor do they make it elite, but they do make the creature slightly more complicated and a little more powerful.

Blazing Skeletal Claw

Grafting the claw of a blazing skeleton to the host grants it powerful fire attacks.

Prerequisites: Humanoid, 6th level

| Blazing Skeletal Claw | Graft |
|---|---|
| Resist 5 fire | |
| Vulnerable 5 radiant | |
| ⚔ Blazing Claw (standard; at-will) ✦ Fire | |
| Level + 5 vs. AC; 1d4 + Strength fire damage and ongoing 5 fire damage (save ends). | |
| ➢ Flame Orb (standard; at-will) ✦ Fire | |
| Ranged 10; level + 3 vs. Reflex; 2d4 + Dexterity fire damage and ongoing 5 fire damage (save ends). | |

THE DOWNSIDE OF GRAFTS

Although grafts are designed with monsters in mind, an adventure or a section of a campaign could revolve around a PC or a good NPC gaining a graft by some means, and the quest to remove it. Maybe a foul necromancer experimented on the poor unfortunate. The host might have had it grafted purposely in a moment of power-hungry weakness. Whatever the case, an undead graft should be treated as something to be expunged, the sooner the better, by sane and reasonable people. A number of story reasons can be devised to drive this point home, but here are rules penalties you could apply to a grafted PC. Pick as many as you think necessary to motivate the quest for the graft's removal.

- ✦ -5 penalty to Bluff checks and Diplomacy checks.
- ✦ -5 penalty to Endurance checks.
- ✦ Lose a healing surge each week.
- ✦ Halve the character's healing surge value.
- ✦ -2 penalty to Fortitude.

Lich's Brain

This graft grants its host esoteric knowledge.

Prerequisites: Intelligence 18, 21st level

| Lich's Brain | Graft |
|---|---|
| Senses darkvision | |
| Resist 15 necrotic | |
| Vulnerable 10 radiant | |
| Grafted Spellmaster (minor; recharge ⚅) | |
| The host regains the use of an expended daily, encounter, or recharge power. | |
| Skills +2 item bonus to Arcana and Religion checks | |

Mummy's Eye

One look from this grafted eye can shake the resolve of even a stalwart soul.

Prerequisite: 11th level

| Mummy's Eye | Graft |
|---|---|
| Senses darkvision | |
| Vulnerable 5 radiant | |
| ✧ Eye of Despair (minor 1/round; at-will) ✦ Fear, Gaze | |
| Close burst 10; targets one creature within the burst; the target takes a -2 penalty to attack rolls against the host (save ends). | |

Thirst of the Vampire

This dangerous and complicated graft inserts fangs and replaces part of the host's digestive system, granting it vampiric thirst.

Prerequisites: Constitution 13, 11th level

| Thirst of the Vampire | Graft |
|---|---|
| Vulnerable 10 radiant | |
| ⚔ Blood Drain (standard; recharges when an adjacent creature becomes bloodied) ✦ Healing | |
| Requires combat advantage against the target; level + 2 vs. Fortitude; 2d12 + Charisma modifier damage, the target is weakened (save ends), and the host regains one-quarter of its maximum hit points. | |

Wight's Claw

A wight's claw graft can suck the life out of targets it slashes.

Prerequisites: Humanoid, 6th level

| Wight's Claw | Graft |
|---|---|
| Vulnerable 5 radiant | |
| ⚔ Wight Claw (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic | |
| Level + 5 vs. AC; 1d6 + Strength modifier damage, and the target loses a healing surge. | |

Zombie Arm

This graft grants a powerful smash attack.

Prerequisite: Humanoid

| Zombie Arm | Graft |
|---|---|
| Vulnerable 5 radiant | |
| ⚔ Zombie Slam (standard; at-will) | |
| Level + 5 vs. AC; 2d6 + Strength modifier damage. | |

CHAPTER 3

Undead Lairs

BRUNO WERNECK

Different monsters conjure up varying images and emotions in players. The cruelty and brutality of orcs inspires righteous anger. Dragons inspire a degree of awe. Aberrations invoke visceral feelings of disgust.

Undead invoke terror. Undead adventures centered around the undead usually include imagery associated with death, decay, and the brief span of mortal life. Building this mood is accomplished by portraying the undead as horrifying and inhuman monsters.

Of course, undead do not exist in a vacuum. Their lairs and the remains of their "food" have an important role to play in creating just the right mood. A haughty vampire lord's gloomy, half-ruined castle contains many fetid rooms thick with secrets.

Some undead enjoy centuries of existence to refine and perfect their lairs, while other undead must make do with whatever dark locations they can find to shelter from the hateful light. Any undead creature, from the weakest specter to the most powerful lich, uses the location and design of its lair to its advantage.

This chapter includes the following sections.

- Lair Features: A short discussion about general characteristics of undead lairs.
- Heroic Tier Lairs: Featuring encounters for characters of 1st–10th levels.
  - Graveyard of Col Fen (level 1)
  - Sandstone Catacombs (level 3)
  - Battlefield Downs (level 7)
- Paragon Tier Lairs: Featuring encounters for characters of 11th–20th levels.
  - Bloodtower on the Moorland (level 12)
  - Mausoleum of Ssra-Tauroch (level 17)
  - Kravenghast Necropolis (level 19)
- Epic Tier Lairs: Featuring encounters for characters of 21st level or higher.
  - Tower of Zoramadria (level 23)
  - Temple of Doresain (level 25)
  - Astral Corpse (level 26)

Lair Features

Whether a sewer tunnel inhabited by ghouls or the crumbling castle of a vampire lord, undead lairs have two characteristics in common.

UNDEAD LAIRS TYPICALLY HAVE . . .

- No source of light
- No need for warmth, water, food, sanitation, sleeping space, or space to socialize

Undead lairs enjoy perpetual darkness, or at least are situated far from bright light. Even undead that are not directly hurt by light avoid illumination when possible, possibly out of some deep instinct to escape the notice of the living. In the dark, they can swarm and hunt. After all, they can see in lightless conditions. If released from external compulsion, even undead with little ability to think on their own, such as skeletons and zombies, eventually collect in darkened allies and in underground caverns.

Lacking a metabolism and possessing dull if not altogether absent physical senses, the majority of undead require no consideration for mortal comfort. Warmth, clean water, food, sanitation, a place to sleep or socialize—none of these are necessities for undead. (Some undead mimic these needs, especially vampire lords, who often continue along with the niceties of their previous mortal existence.) A cold, dry cavern is as comfortable to an undead creature as a well-furnished mansion. Moreover, a cavern filled with foul and poisonous vapors, or one overrun with diseased rats, would be an ideal lair, since it is less likely to be intruded upon by the living.

Wilderness Lairs

In wilderness areas, undead exist without concerning themselves with laws and justice that might cause their destruction by fearful mortals.

WILDERNESS LAIRS CAN BE LOCATED IN . . .

- Ruins
- Isolated castles and hunting lodges
- Woods
- Caves
- The Underdark

Some undead lairs in the wild are remnants of ancient ruins or tombs surrounded by what is now wilderness but once was the heart of an empire. Powerful and confident undead might build bleak castles to rule over a portion of the wilderness, or hunting lodges to prey upon all who dare to stray within their territory.

Many undead are drawn to living creatures to feed on spilled blood and escaping souls from the freshly slain. Undead addicted to such nourishment from humanoids establish wilderness lairs that are close enough to humanoid villages or cities to allow them to make occasional trips into town. Such undead risk exposure if they are tracked back into the woods or to their caves, so creatures that rely on this strategy use a combination of distance and obscurity to maximize their chances of avoiding bounty hunters or revenge seekers.

Undead that have discovered the Underdark find it to be the wildest, least approachable (by others) location of all in which to found their lairs. Since darkness is no hindrance to the undead, the Underdark's caverns and tunnels make comfortable and safe places to gnaw their stolen bones in peace. Some undead are content to wander the sparsely inhabited portions of the Underdark, while others stalk humanoid Underdark prey. A lucky few undead creatures find still-functioning portals that grant quick access between their Underdark lairs and a surface city.

Urban Lairs

Cities and villages provide more protection to their inhabitants than lone farmsteads do, so cities do not harbor more than a few undead lairs at any one time unless they have been completely overrun by the undead.

URBAN LAIRS CAN BE LOCATED IN . . .

- Lone farmsteads
- Abandoned building cellars
- Temple catacombs
- City graveyards and cemeteries

Villages and cities offer a ready source of humanoid prey, so undead that feast on such creatures are attracted to urban spaces. Ghouls, like rats, are more common in cities than living residents realize. They lair in the cellars of abandoned buildings, in the seemingly blocked-off catacombs of old temples, and even in the attics of mansions that see little use. Some ghoul communities persist for years by eating only the flesh of the homeless and recently buried, or by returning to their secret lairs every night before first light by way of secret tunnels or magic portals. A ghoul lair often comes to light when a hunger-mad ghoul fails to retreat before dawn's light and is seen, or a ghoul pack becomes too bold and leaves a home to be found with its residents dead and half-eaten. Officials in relatively large communities recognize these signs and quickly put up a bounty on the warren in question.

Wraiths, specters, and other incorporeal undead find it easy to lair in urban environments because they can phase through solid walls. Such creatures hide from daylight in cavities and tombs completely sealed away from physical access, then glide forth by night to slake their hunger for souls. Incorporeal undead do not range widely or frequently from their lairs, but seem content to haunt one particular location's environs at a measured pace. This circumspect activity can keep a lair of such undead secret for years.

A graveyard is a natural lair for urban undead. Some undead reside in graveyards because their bodies were buried there, but most dwell in them because they are drawn to the dead and the taint of death that pervades the area.

Graveyard lairs are a mixed blessing. The living avoid graveyards, in part because undead are known to inhabit some of them. However, when living creatures are hunting the undead, graveyards are the obvious place to look. Because many graveyards are centuries old, clever undead make their lairs in buried crypts forgotten long ago.

Vampire lords frequently lair in cities. A successful vampire lord keeps the secret of its nature from its living associates. Its lair is the home or mansion where it lives. The lair has a secret chamber where a coffin, which serves as the vampire's true resting place, and the grave dirt used in its ritual of creation is stored.

Planar Lairs

Undead are not restricted to the world. Other realms also harbor the lifeless.

PLANAR LAIRS CAN BE LOCATED IN OR ON . . .

- Abandoned dominions in the Astral Sea
- Ships of the Astral Sea
- The bodies of dead deities
- Mort mounds in the Feywild
- The domain of Orcus, in the Abyss
- Outposts throughout the Shadowfell

Some undead dwell in the Astral Sea, making their lairs in the abandoned dominions of departed gods or sailing in great ships infused with necromantic power. Undead in the Astral Sea pursue lofty personal goals, whch can include discovering ancient lore or accumulating personal power. Some Astral Sea undead inhabit the corpses of dead gods or are themselves deities killed and partially reanimated, though not to their former level of divine power.

Most undead in the Feywild are the incorporeal spirits of fey creatures that are obsessed with legends pertaining to vanished empires. They are no threat unless disturbed. Some mounds in the Feywild contain more than fey magic. They are tunneled with the warrens of eladrin and gnome vampires. Such mort mounds, as the eladrin call them, are shunned by the fey, despite the fact that the undead inhabiting them hunt under cover of moonless nights to steal fey children and consume them in their mud-drenched lairs. Some undead fey mounds contain portals that open into the Shadowfell.

Undead abound in the Elemental Chaos, though they cluster in the Abyss. The Demon Prince of the Undead, Orcus, controls legions of underlings. Most undead of the Abyss are thralls that serve the whims of Orcus and his demons and that guard their demonic lairs, though a few powerful, valued servants of Orcus merit their own lairs.

The sum total of undead across all the planes of existence pales before the lifeless hordes that teem in the Shadowfell. Areas tainted by necromantic seepage (see Manual of the Planes) in the Shadowfell spawn wraiths. Because all souls pass through this dim realm upon the death of their bodies, Shadow's taint can corrupt these soul vestiges before they find their way to the Court of the Raven Queen in Letherna, forging sad spirits into ghosts and other insubstantial undead.

Shadowfell undead are driven by a cold, gnawing hatred for the living. They roam the plane in mindless search of victims to torment or to eat. Those that hold onto their minds and rise above blind instinct to carve out baronies and duchies in the Shadowfell are never free of their aching hunger for and hatred of the living. When a connection between the world and the Shadowfell is forged, undead are eager to stream through and wreak their worst.

Graveyard of Col Fen

A lair for five 1st-level adventurers

The rough ground on the outskirts of the village of Col Fen once served as a graveyard for an evil temple destroyed long ago. A recent disturbance released some of the ancient evil buried here, and now the dead in this graveyard are beginning to walk. Several villagers have already vanished and more will die if the undead are not put to rest.

Background

History DC 10: About 50 years ago, settlers moved into the area and founded the village of Col Fen. While investigating the area around their new homes, the villagers discovered a few ancient, securely closed crypts. Taking a cue from the old structures, the settlers hallowed the ground about the crypts and consecrated it as the Col Fen graveyard. No one ever disturbed the older graves.

History DC 15: Almost 2,000 years ago, a low hill on the edge of the area that later became the village of Col Fen was the site of a temple. The temple was dedicated to the worship of entities of evil and death. Its adherents hoped to prolong their lives with their ceremonies. At the temple, the priests dedicated the souls of many victims on their sacrificial altars to Orcus and other entities.

Eventually, a neighboring community discovered their practices and attacked the cultists. When the attackers destroyed the temple and the priests, they buried the evildoers with their possessions, including an ominous-looking skull carved of onyx, hoping to forestall any vengeful haunting. The grave site was warded to hold in any lingering evil. However, a graveborn sickness still found its way into the neighboring community, and it withered away, leaving the whole region empty of humanoid habitation.

Streetwise DC 15: A few weeks ago, natural weathering finally cracked the previously secure crypts, allowing outside air and glimmers of light to fall upon the warded sarcophagi within. These intrusions broke the already wavering ancient wards.

Religion DC 15: The carved skull buried in one of the old crypts has pulsed back to unlife. Its wakening will attract undead miles away from Col Fen. Unless the skull is destroyed, it will become a magnet for undead from distant places, while at the same time animating skeletons and zombies from the graveyard of Col Fen.

Hook: Missing Villagers

The PCs might be travelers whom desperate villagers approach for help, or adventurers responding to a job offer concerning Col Fen that they found out about in a larger nearby city.

In either case, when they arrive at Col Fen, Mara Kres, the headwoman of the village, explains to the PCs that undead have suddenly started troubling the people of the village.

When the PCs talk to Mara Kres, read:
"A week ago a young woman named Rysa Gosen vanished from her home during the night. The next evening, a pair of zombies set upon a young man named Quen Laren who was working late in his fields. Quen Laren was badly hurt, but he escaped to tell of the attack. Two days ago, a family vanished from its home late one night. The house showed evidence of a serious struggle. Marks in the dirt indicated several objects were dragged from the house toward the village graveyard. We searched the graveyard, and the walking dead attacked us!

"We fled. Can you put to rest the undead in our graveyard and rescue our missing friends?"

Mara Kres tells the PCs that the family that vanished consists of Kyla Tal, her husband Veran Tal, their child Lyse, and Kyla's elderly father Holt Nas.

The villagers warn the PCs about visiting the graveyard after dark and strongly recommend they enter it only in the daytime.

Hook: Resurrectionist Contract

This alternative hook puts one or more PCs on the road to the graveyard for a completely different and, in the eyes of the village folk, perhaps nefarious purpose.

One or more of the PCs have been engaged as "resurrectionists," a slang term for those who disinter dead bodies. In the case of the contracted PC or PCs, a patron in another city has grown frustrated with the mortsafes (stone and ironwork cages built around graves) meant to protect the dead against just this sort of treatment.

Resurrectionists turn over freshly disinterred bodies to folk willing to pay good coin, usually at the back door of a wizard or medical college, where the body is used for research into arcane mysteries or the study of battle injuries. Those who engage in such work are not necessarily evil. They believe that the bodies' original owners have no more use for them. Other creatures that have a more sentimental attachment to the deceased view these activities in a different light.

A mage at a local college has given the PCs a contact who is familiar with the graveyard near Col Fen and a contract for 100 gp for the delivery of two disinterred bodies (not more than two, and no bodies gained by depriving the living of their lives). When the PCs arrive to meet their contact in Col Fen, a fellow named Veran Tal, they are told Veran is missing. The PCs also learn of the plight of the village as described under "Hook: Missing Villagers."

Environment

The area around Col Fen is a mixture of rolling fertile plains and densely wooded forests. The hill containing the graveyard is less fertile, and near the center, even grass has a hard time growing.

- A low stone wall marks the graveyard's boundaries, but it does little to limit access. Any Medium creature can easily cross it. (Treat the wall as difficult terrain, costing 1 extra square of movement for any creature that traverses it.)
- The graveyard contains a number of large trees that look wilted, as if they were beginning to sicken. Squares containing trees are difficult terrain (requiring 1 extra square of movement to enter) and provide concealment (–2 to attack rolls) to anyone standing in them. A tree's trunk provides cover (–2 to attack rolls) to anyone standing adjacent to it.
- Gravestones, many of them decades old, are spread throughout the graveyard. (The stones are not large enough to count as terrain features, and thus they are not represented on the map.)
- Three crypts made of ancient, badly eroded dark gray stone sit far back from the entrance to the graveyard along the eastern wall.

When the characters approach the graveyard's edge, read:
A low wall encircles this village graveyard. Nothing moves in the area, not even the branches of the drooping trees growing within the enclosure. Three large, ancient stone crypts set in the back of the graveyard stand out among the numerous simple grave markers in the rest of the cemetery.

Area 1: Eastern Graveyard

The eastern portion of the graveyard is a well-kept small town cemetery with simple headstones sitting amid tall and widely spaced trees. Several headstones have either cracked in two or fallen over, and one of the graves near the front of the graveyard is open and empty.

When the characters walk through the eastern portion of the graveyard, read:
A chill hangs in the air, a cold that seems more spiritual than actual. Here and there, empty graves gape near fallen headstones. Fresh dirt is scattered around these empty graves. Judging by the way the soil is dispersed around one of the holes, its occupant might have dug itself out.

Perception Check
DC 15: You hear a scrabbling noise along the southern wall as a decayed skeletal hand and arm emerges from the ground at the head of a half-toppled grave marker. The arm flails and rattles, and the hand digs for purchase.

PCs who watch for a moment see another grave disgorge its contents: a decrepit skeleton (Monster Manual, page 234). The PCs can dispatch the creature or can leave it to its own devices. If they take the latter course, the skeleton finally shakes itself loose and heads down into Col Fen.

Optional: Wandering Dead

Level 1 Encounter (XP 400)
- 3 famine hounds (level 2 skirmisher, page 158)
- 1 decrepit skeleton (level 1 minion, MM 234)

PCs who make no effort to hide their presence attract the attention of a few lurking undead that attack without regard to their own safety.

Area 2: Western Graveyard

The trees in the western portion of the graveyard are significantly denser and older than those within the rest of the site. Illumination below their canopy even at noon is akin to early evening (dim illumination during the day, darkness at night). Many grave markers here are toppled, and numerous empty holes in the earth mark the places from where former cemetery residents have gone missing.

When the adventurers enter the western graveyard, read:
The chill in the air grows. The drooping trees creak and undulate as if in the grip of a breeze, a breeze that you don't feel on your skin. The smell of rotting meat lingers in this area. It is a cloying, overwhelming stink. The crypts near the western boundary of the graveyard are shadowy, somber masses of ancient stone.

When the adventurers move to within 10 feet of any of the three crypts, read:
You hear several loud screams that echo off the stone of the crypts. The screams sound like those of a woman. Equally loud and more easily identifiable are the desperate squalls of a human infant. The sounds issue from the northern crypt.

Area 3: Northern Crypt (Level 1)

This rectangular structure is made of slate gray stone. It has a vaulted roof. Though intact, the crypt is worn, and a few small cracks run through its ivy-covered, windowless walls. The crypt's large stone door is slightly ajar. The PCs trigger the tactical encounter if they enter the crypt.

Tactical Encounter: "Northern Crypt," page 60.

Area 4: Middle Crypt

This crypt is slightly larger than the two that flank it. It is also riddled with numerous cracks.

When the adventurers examine the middle crypt, read:

From the way the ivy grows on this structure, the many cracks in its walls might be quite recent. An icy wind blows out of this building's entry, though no air movement is discernible.

Like the other two crypts, Area 4 is a windowless rectangle made of slate gray stone with a vaulted roof. Its stone door lies broken into pieces on the earth before the doorway, allowing easy an easy view to its interior.

Two crumpled forms lie on the floor.

When the PCs examine the interior of the middle crypt, read:

The bloody figures on the floor are human remains. Both bodies are half eaten. Gnawing wounds are obvious on the bones and flesh. One of deceased is an elderly man. He appears to have been dead less than a day. The other body is that of a woman who appears to have been dead for almost a week.

If the characters received descriptions of the missing villagers, they can confirm that the corpses are Rysa Gosen and Holt Nas.

A passage, previously closed by a stone slab door, lies in this crypt's rear. The slab is cracked, and the door hangs slightly ajar. The slab is also covered in arcane runes.

Arcana Check

DC 20: The runes are part of a protective seal meant to keep the door closed. They have been marred by cracks and worn by weather.

Area 5: Undercrypt Stairs

When the adventurers open the rear door in the middle crypt, read:

Narrow, water-stained stone steps lead downward. The staircase is built of great slabs, covered with arcane runes similar to those on the door at the head of this passageway. The smell of death and corruption is strong here. The stairs descend into darkness.

Perception Check

DC 18: Mumbled words that sound like a chant issue from the darkness at the bottom of the stairs, followed by muffled whimpers and pleas.

Area 6: Underground Crypt (Level 1)

An ancient relic was sealed away in this crypt. Time and weathering broke the seals, and the relic began to animate nearby undead and call to distant and more powerful undead. Two ghouls from a distant warren have answered that call, and they hope to waken the relic to further necromantic power by sacrificing living humanoids to it. The PCs trigger the tactical encounter when they enter this crypt.

Area 7: Southern Crypt

This structure is identical to Area 3 in overall appearance and size, except that it is now a collapsed ruin. The roof has fallen in, as has a portion of the south wall. Characters who look in through these openings see that the falling roof has smashed open the sarcophagus that used to sit in the middle of the crypt. Nothing of value remains in this ruined building.

Onyx Skull

The onyx skull is carved in the shape of a human skull of about half normal size. It is icy cold to the touch. A successful DC 20 Arcana check reveals that the carved skull was originally part of a larger item, perhaps serving as the headpiece of a staff or rod. In its current state, the skull has only a fraction of its former power. It is fragile and subject to easy destruction. Destroying the skull breaks it into several fragments. The fragments are free from any evil taint, and the largest piece of onyx retains some value as a gem (90 gp).

A successful DC 20 Religion check reveals that despite its incomplete state, the skull emanates a necromantic influence that reaches outward in subtle waves. The influence causes nearby corpses to spontaneously animate and calls already animated undead to it.

If the skull remains intact at the conclusion of the "Underground Crypt" encounter, the details of how it works (how many undead it animates, and how often) are left up to you.

As an item of arcane interest to mages and collectors, the unbroken skull has monetary value (250 gp), not to mention the worth it might represent to evil creatures and necromancers. However, anyone who transports the skull risks being visited by a large collection of undead.

Northern Crypt

Encounter Level 1 (500 XP)

Setup

1 pale reaver (R)
1 skeleton (S)
1 zombie (Z)
1 decrepit skeleton (D)

This crypt contains two captives (both in the square marked C): the woman Kyla Tal and her infant child Lyse. They are being confined until they are eaten or sacrificed to the onyx skull in Area 6. When the PCs first see this chamber, the monsters are in their marked positions. The zombie and the decrepit skeleton stand motionless, while the pale reaver stares down hungrily into the trench along the southern wall that contains Kyla and her baby.

Roll initiative when the PCs enter the crypt or the approaching PCs are noticed by the undead gathered in the crypt.

When the PCs view this crypt's interior, read:
A slightly decayed animate corpse dressed in farming clothes stands near the crypt entrance. A four-foot-high stone sarcophagus lies near the back of the crypt. One skeletal figure stands next to it against the far wall, and another stands in front of it. A narrow trench is gouged out of the floor along the southern wall; gentle sobbing emanates from the trench. A semisubstantial male humanoid with dead white hair stares down into the trench, apparently entranced by its contents.

Tactics

The skeleton, the decrepit skeleton, and the zombie are mindless and fight until they are destroyed. The pale reaver attacks more cunningly.

Round 1: The zombie and the skeleton both rush forward to attack the nearest PC with melee attacks, while the decrepit skeleton fires arrows with its shortbow at the PCs. The decrepit skeleton stands behind the sarcophagus, gaining cover from ranged attacks (a -2 penalty to ranged attack rolls).

The pale reaver uses insubstantial transformation and then attacks with deadly mane.

Round 2+: When someone moves forward to attack the decrepit skeleton, it draws an aging sword and enters melee.

The zombie and skeletons attack anyone who is not already under attack and do not gang up on their foes. The pale reaver attacks injured or poorly armored individuals first, allowing zombies and skeletons to attack the PC with the most dangerous looking weapons. It uses good use of its blood drain at the earliest opportunity and then again if it recharges.

If at least two of the undead other than the pale reaver are destroyed or the pale reaver becomes bloodied, the pale reaver attempts to escape to the underground crypt (Area 6) by using insubstantial transformation. Here it lingers with the creatures assembled there, and if the PCs investigate Area 6 (if they haven't already), the pale reaver joins in the fight.

If the zombie or the decrepit skeleton is pushed into the trench, it attacks the captive woman because it attacks any living being in front of it unless ordered otherwise by the pale reaver. If the skeleton or the pale reaver is pushed into the trench, it climbs out and goes back to attacking the PCs.

Features of the Area

Illumination: Bright light (streaming in through cracked crypt walls).

Trench: The trench on the southern side of the chamber is 5 feet wide, 10 feet deep, and runs the length of the room. A character who jumps down into the trench must attempt a DC 15 Acrobatics check. On a success, a character who is trained in the skill reduces falling damage (PH 181). A character who is not trained in the skill or who fails the check takes 1d10 falling damage and falls prone. Climbing out of the trench requires a successful DC 15 Athletics check.

Inside the trench is a young woman holding a crying infant. The woman has a rope around her neck. The other end of the rope is attached to a metal spike driven into the wall.

Captives: The woman in the trench is Kyla Tal. She holds her infant child, Lyse. If they are rescued, the tearful Kyla thanks the PCs profusely for saving her and her baby. However, she is desperately concerned with her father, Holt Nas, and her husband, Veran Tal. She asks that her rescuers also go looking for them. She is too weak and malnourished be of any help to the PCs, is preoccupied with caring for her baby. She asks the PCs to escort her out of the graveyard before they explore further.

Sarcophagus: Creatures standing behind the sarcophagus gain cover from ranged attacks (a tactic used by the decrepit skeleton at the beginning of the fight).

This stone sarcophagus is densely inscribed with worn warding symbols that are marred by the large cracks running through them. The sarcophagus's stone lid has fallen and shattered. A peek into the sarcophagus reveals the crumbling remains of a long-dead humanoid.

Treasure: A deliberate search (Perception DC 15; 1 minute searching) of the interior of the sarcophagus reveals a scroll tube tucked between the torso and the left arm of the crumbling corpse. The receptacle holds an ancient map to a location you might want to entice the party to visit as part of your next adventure or your ongoing campaign.

Underground Crypt

Encounter Level 1 (526 XP)

Setup

2 ghouls (G)
2 decrepit skeletons (S)
2 zombie rotter (Z)

A pair of ghouls prepares to sacrifice the kidnapped man Veran Tal and use his blood in an attempt to awaken further power in the onyx skull. Veran is tied down across the top of the sarcophagus in the back of this chamber. The zombies and skeletons stand guard, while the two ghouls bend over the young man (one at his head, and one at his feet). Veran is securely bound and missing a few bite-size chunks from his flesh, though he is still alive. The room is dim, lit by a violet glimmer given off by the onyx skull.

After you provide the read-aloud text, roll initiative.

As the adventurers enter, read:

The air smells of death. A flickering purple light dimly illuminates this pillared chamber. Two badly decayed corpses stand before the first two pillars, and two skeletal figures lurk in the space behind the back two pillars.

In the rear of the chamber, a bound and gagged man struggles atop a four-foot-high stone sarcophagus. A half-sized human skull sits on the sarcophagus next to the man's head. The skull is the source of the purple illumination. A pair of feral and misshapen humanoids with pale skin and clawed hands turn toward you, distracted by your entrance from doing something unspeakable to the man.

Tactics

The decrepit skeletons and zombie rotters do not use sophisticated tactics. The two ghouls are far more purposeful in their attacks.

Round 1: The decrepit skeletons fire their shortbows at the characters from behind the cover of the far pillars while the zombie rotters surge forward to attack with slams.

If the PCs have any light sources, the ghouls attempt to attack the characters holding these lights. If more than two characters carry light sources, the ghouls attack the same character, either a PC who appears to be injured, or the PC who has the lightest armor or seems to be weakest. The ghouls try to immobilize the PCs with their claws, hoping to add to their stock of victims. If their claws seem ineffective on a particular character, they change targets.

Round 2+: The zombies continue to slam, and the decrepit skeletons to use their shortbows. If the characters destroy the two zombie rotters or move forward to attack the decrepit skeletons, the skeletons engage the characters with their longswords.

When a ghoul becomes bloodied, it uses its ghoulish bite on an immobilized PC to feed. If either of the ghouls is destroyed, the other attempts to flee up the stairs and into the wilderness, grabbing the onyx skull along the way if at all possible.

If one ghoul is killed or if both are bloodied and escape looks impossible, one ghoul croaks out a word in Abyssal. The onyx skull instantly flares, and the bound captive screams and then dies. Both ghouls gain 16 temporary hit points, and any destroyed decrepit skeletons or zombie rotters are reanimated.

Features of the Area

Illumination: Dim light (the onyx skull).

Pillars: The four solid stone pillars provide cover (-2 penalty to attack rolls).

Sarcophagus: The sarcophagus is closed, although a section has broken off the lid. The onyx skull, the bound captive, and a silver bowl rest on top of the sarcophagus.

Opening the sarcophagus requires a successful DC 15 Athletics check. Inside are the remains of a humanoid in moldering black robes. Decay has destroyed anything useful for gleaning information about the corpse; however, the right ring finger bears a gold ring with a small onyx stone (30 gp) that can be discovered automatically by any character who attempts a Perception check to search the corpse.

Onyx Skull: The onyx skull has 1 hit point. If the skull is struck or deliberately dropped, it is destroyed in a flare of purple light, and no more undead are spontaneously animated in the graveyard. However, the residual energy grants each remaining undead creature in this crypt 1 action point that it uses to make an extra attack on its next turn.

More information about the skull can be found in the "Onyx Skull" sidebar on page 58.

Silver Bowl: This vessel is crusted with dried blood. After it is cleaned up, it is worth 30 gp.

Veran Kal: Once the PCs have killed the ghouls, they can free Veran Tal if he wasn't slain during the fight. He is terrified, and he mentions that the ghouls stole his wife and child, but he doesn't know where they might be.

Optional Development

If the PCs accepted the contract described under "Hook: Resurrectionist Contract," then Veran Tal is the contact they were supposed to talk to when they first arrived in Col Fen. If Veran survives this encounter and the PCs identify themselves to him as the contractors, the man goes ashen.

When Veran finds out about the PCs, read:
"It could be that my trespass into the graveyard was what woke the dead to renewed life. Maybe if I hadn't started digging up old bodies, none of this would have happened. I have an idea—one that might serve your needs and help cleanse Col Fen. What say you to the idea of taking these dead ghouls with you? They were once humans and should serve the mages at the college just as well as any other corpse."

If the PCs agree to Veran's plan, the ghoul corpses will indeed fufill their contract at the wizard college. It'll also make other PCs who were not in on the original contract less likely to react badly when they see the resurrectionists bundling up corpses for sale.

Conclusion

If the characters rescue Veran and Kyla Tal and their daughter, they are welcomed back into the town as heroes and given a reward (see below). However, the death of Rysa Gosen and Holt Nas casts a pall over the village's celebratory mood.

If the PCs openly carry the intact onyx skull, the villagers become suspicious of them. If either Veran or his wife is alive and the PCs openly carry the onyx skull, the PCs are accused of being suborned by the item's evil influence.

Treasure: The PCs receive a 50 gp reward from Col Fen for each villager they rescued.

SANDSTONE CATACOMBS

A lair for five 3rd-level adventurers

On the outskirts of town lies an ancient temple to an unknown deity. Periodically, undead creatures issue from the catacombs beneath it. The party receives a commission from the city elders to venture into the catacombs and exterminate the undead.

Background

History DC 15: The ruins of at least two long-forgotten cities, including a crumbling temple, lie underneath the town, which is located near a natural trade route.

Streetwise DC 10: No one dares to tear down the old temple because people are fearful that the old deity associated with it will awaken and subject them to its divine wrath or deliver a curse in revenge. Often, townsfolk forget it's even there as they conduct their daily business in its shadow.

Streetwise DC 15: Below the temple, twisting catacombs house the bodies of the temple's long-departed worshipers. Every few years, some of the bodies stir themselves as undead to prowl the neighborhood. The city elders periodically hire a force to go in and destroy whatever walking dead the hired party can find. This cleanup suppresses the undead for a time, allowing business to return to normal.

Hook: Cleanup Crew

A friendly contact introduces the characters to the city elders, who are led by an imposing, bearded man named Argilos. He explains the gist of the Streetwise information under "History" above, and offers the PCs a fee of 150 gp to conduct a cleanup operation.

Argilos tells the party that the city elders used to have a map of the catacombs, but it has been misplaced since the last expedition, which took place a few years ago. However, Argilos hands the characters a key and indicates that it will unlock the iron trapdoor that separates the temple's ground floor from its catacombs.

Before Argilos wishes the PCs luck and dismisses them from the council's presence, he gives them one general order, followed by a warning. He'll then politely entertain further questions but doesn't have any pertinent facts for them that he hasn't already supplied.

The General Order: Do not disturb or destroy any ordinary corpses. Argilos's advisors tell him that doing so risks bringing a curse down on the city—which is why previous adventurers haven't put them all to the torch. This order also applies to any sarcophagi the PCs find: The sarcophagi belong to ancient potentates.

The corpses are unlikely to have any valuables on them after all this time, but Argilos recommends against taking any item of value obviously left as a grave memento. Such a theft could also trigger a curse, either against the adventurers or the entire community.

The Warning: A powerful ghost guards one of the private crypts in the catacombs. The ghost is far mightier than anything else the characters might encounter down there and would undoubtedly cut them to ribbons if they were so foolish as to attack or provoke it. It offers no threat to anyone who leaves it alone.

Environment

The catacombs are hewn from red-brown sandstone. Surfaces within the catacombs are rounded and weathered from centuries of wear. A thin layer of pebbly sand covers the rough, slightly uneven floor.

- The walls muffle sound (+10 to Perception check DCs to listen) and are cool to the touch.
- Ceilings are, unless otherwise indicated, 10 feet above floor level. Layers of soot stain the ceilings and the upper reaches of the walls. A successful DC 15 Dungeoneering check identifies the soot as the residue from countless torches, dating all the way back to the period of the catacombs' active use.

Approaching the Catacombs

The trapdoor into the catacombs is in a ruined temple. Only the granite floor and a few isolated wall sections remain to sketch the confines of the temple. Entry to the catacombs is achieved by entering the ruined temple.

When the adventurers enter the ruined temple, read:
An iron trapdoor is visible amid the rubble of the fallen temple. The iron plate is warped and buckled. The trapdoor has been removed from its hinges, as if hammered free by metal tools.

When the PCs open the trapdoor, read:
Below the broken trapdoor, steps cut from the surrounding rock spiral downward. The edges of the steps are worn, and the center of each step is bowed from use. A nasty smell wafts up from below.

Area 1: Entryway

When the PCs finish descending the stairs and enter the entryway, read:
Above, hundreds of small bats chitter. Mounds of guano spatter the floor of this irregular, wide corridor. A sharp, eye-watering odor suffuses the entire area.

Area 2: Chapel (Level 3)

Funerary rites once sounded here. Now, undead linger, attacking any living explorers. The tactical encounter is triggered when all the PCs have moved well into the room, or when one of the PCs discovers and opens a trapdoor as described in the encounter.

Tactical Encounter: "Trapdoor Chapel," page 68.

Area 3: South Catacombs

When the adventurers reach the spot on the map marked "3," read:

The passage you are traversing leads off to the west for some distance more. Carved into the walls on both sides of this wide passage are three sets of recessed shelves, one set carved above the next, piled high with very old humanoid remains. A narrow length of corridor, 10 feet across, snakes off to the northeast.

On closer inspection, the remains on the shelves are jumbled and skeletal. Perhaps one in ten of the bodies has been naturally mummified through desiccation and is intact.

If the adventurers examine one of the short offshoot corridors, read:

This corridor is even narrower than the main trunk, offering only a few feet of space to maneuver between the corpse-bearing shelves on either side.

A determined search of these offshoots takes 2d10 minutes per branch. As Argilos noted, no valuables remain on or near the bodies.

Area 4: West Crypt

When the adventurers enter this crypt, read:

Five massive sarcophagi rest under inches of dust in this roughly circular chamber. Carved into the curved walls are recessed shelves piled high with very old human remains.

These sarcophagi contain honored retainers of the old city's ruling family.

The sarcophagi are sealed. A successful DC 20 Strength check breaks one open. Each one contains bone fragments and decayed noble's clothing. The southwestern sarcophagus also contains an iron ring set with a small ruby (30 gp).

Area 5: Southwest Crypt

The entrance to this crypt is blocked by a section of collapsed corridor. (The wraith from Area 2 phases through the rubble during the beginning of the "Trapdoor Chapel" encounter.) Four person-hours of effort can clear away enough loose rock to enable characters to crawl into the crypt chamber.

The effort yields little of value. Four sarcophagi in the crypt contain the final resting places of the old city's ruling family.

When the adventurers remove the rubble leading to the chamber and enter it, read:

A round, domed chamber houses four iron sarcophagi. The sculpted representations of reposing, richly attired humans on the coffin lids are presumably portraits of the deceased.

The sarcophagi are welded shut. A successful DC 16 Dungeoneering check allows a character to find the scratches and dents in the sarcophagi where previous grave robbers have tried in vain to open the heavy coffins.

A bundle of rags and bones rests next to the westernmost sarcophagus. These are the bones of a grave robber laid low by an ancient curse. The bones are hundreds of years old.

Area 6: Southeast Crypt

When the adventurers enter this chamber, read:

Four large iron coffins rest here in a circular chamber. The images of well-dressed humans on the lids hint at the contents of the sarcophagi.

Four sarcophagi rest here. They are identical to those in Area 5 except for having depictions of different people on their lids. These sarcophagi are also welded shut (see above).

Area 7: North Crypt

When the adventurers enter this chamber, read:

A thick layer of dust covers everything in this area. It includes four large coffins and deep shelves along all the walls that hold the skeletal remains of humanoids.

These sarcophagi are functionally identical to those in Area 4, though none of them hold any treasure.

Area 8: Shelves of the Dead (Level 3)

Many of the unquiet dead in these catacombs lurk here. The tactical encounter is triggered when the PCs move past the portcullis at the eastern end of this area.

Tactical Encounter: "Shelves of the Dead," page 70.

Area 9: Ghost-Guarded Crypt

As the PCs approach the square labeled "9," read:

An apparition of a grim-faced armored figure shimmers into view, blocking your path. "Turn back," it says, "or I will part your flesh from your souls."

The apparition is the restless spirit of Ammaradon, a member of the old king's guard who failed to prevent the king's assassination. Tormented by this unforgivable lapse, he now guards the king's sarcophagus.

(The king is interred in a chamber that lies beneath this level of the catacombs and is accessed by traveling along the middle of the three passageways here. This area is not depicted on the map because the characters will not need—and should not want—to go there.)

Ammaradon is a watchful ghost (page 151). He could easily take a 3rd-level group apart. He does not attack unless the PCs attack him or they try to force their way past him.

A successful DC 15 Insight check indicates that Ammaradon is honest in his claim: He hopes the adventurers won't force his hand against them.

He answers questions while at the same time warning that ghostly existence has not increased his patience. He reveals the following information:

- The crypt he guards holds nothing of value.
- If they fight him, the characters will surely die.
- The king he served was called Coronas.
- Ammaradon failed because he could not imagine that his comrades would murder their king.
- He slew all five of the conspirators singlehandedly, but the king was already dead by that time.
- Ammaradon cannot be put to rest, and he has no desire to be. He thinks it is only fitting that he should have to stand eternal guard here.
- He knows nothing of the other undead that haunt this place. They know enough to steer clear of him. He thinks they are dishonorable wretches beneath his notice.

This scene offers you a chance to provide a bit of color and character interaction. When it stops being eerie or tragic, cut it short by having Ammaradon announce his tolerance has reached its end.

This scene is not intended to trick the characters into tackling a threat they can't handle. If the PCs think they're being given a thinly veiled hint to attack the ghost, give them additional chances (passive Insight checks) to make them understand that Ammaradon is not a force they should take on.

Area 10: Foolish Looters

When the PCs approach the northern extremity of this corridor, read:

Sprawled along this corridor are the recently slain bodies of four ill-clad men. Lying beside them are the chisels, picks, hammers and other equipment of grave robbers.

The bodies have all been ravaged by claws and teeth, and they are missing major portions of flesh.

With a successful DC 10 Perception check, a character notices tools on one of the bodies and correctly surmises that these robbers broke the trapdoor leading to the spiral steps in Area 1.

With a successful DC 15 Streetwise check, a character recognizes these poor wretches. (Split these up into four checks if you want to give more than one player a chance to shine here.) They were:

- Hoff the Stout, the ne'er-do-well son of a butcher. He liked to instigate tavern brawls, then slink off to a corner to wager on the results. His father, an honest man, recently threw him out of the house.
- Fellan the Southlander, a boastful man who claimed to be a famous mercenary from a distant land. He kept trying to recruit adventurers for a raid on a tunnel complex outside town, but no one with any sense mistook him for the experienced warrior he claimed to be.
- Fergus McEll, a drunkard, occasional pickpocket, and professional eavesdropper. He'd listen in on adventurers as they made their plans in taverns, then whisper their overheard secrets to their rivals in exchange for ale money.
- Podric, a naive young man who fell in with bad company. Though he was regarded by many as a simpleton, the PC making the Streetwise check knew him as an overly trusting fellow who wanted too badly to be an adventurer.

Treasure: Podric wears a bracelet consisting of a leather thong decorated by valueless clay beads. If the PCs take it to his father, who operates a used clothing stall in the town bazaar, they'll be greeted with sad gratitude. The man, clearly embarrassed to be able to afford nothing better, offers them a threadbare rug worth 3 gp. If the PCs politely decline the offer, they earn a reputation for decency among the merchants of the bazaar. They gain a +2 bonus to all Diplomacy checks involving minor commerce in town.

Optional: Vengeful Dead

Level 3 Encounter (XP 675)

- 3 zombies (level 2 brute, MM 274)
- 2 skulk zombies (level 3 skirmisher, page 196)

If the group treats the looters' bodies disrespectfully, three of the four corpses rise to attack as animated dead, attracting the assistance of two wandering skulk zombies.

Conclusion

If the PCs return to town after succeeding in both tactical encounters, representatives of the town council present them with their payment and award them a certificate lauding their service to the town.

Trapdoor Chapel

Encounter Level 3 (600 XP)

Setup

1 wraith (W)
2 skulk zombies (S)
4 decrepit skeletons (D)

In this unconsecrated chapel, the ancient elders of the city once held their funerary rites. Its location makes it a natural ambush point for the catacomb's undead inhabitants.

Various skeletons lie in wait beneath hidden trapdoors on the chapel floor. Spurred on by their wraith commander, they attack all intruders, so the wraith can ultimately turn the victims into tormented shades like itself.

Don't show the trapdoors on the battle map until the adventurers have seen them. If they don't spot them (see the Perception check below), the trapdoors become apparent when the skeletons burst up through them.

The creatures prefer to hold their attacks until the entire party is well inside the room, so they can surround them, gaining easy access to the controllers and strikers. However if an adventurer enters, finds a trapdoor, and opens it, the skeletons are left with no choice but to leap out and attack, regardless of the PCs' positions. When either condition is met, roll initiative.

When the adventurers enter the room, read:
Your light sources illuminate a musty chamber shaped in an elongated oval. You see rough-hewn support pillars in the room, but no other fixtures or furnishings.

Perception Check
DC 15: Obscured beneath a thick layer of sand and stones is an old wooden trapdoor in the floor. You also spot a brass pull ring.

The spaces on the map covered with splotches contain a terrain feature known as umbral taint. It does not become visible or active until the fight begins. However, it is possible to sense its lurking presence with a successful DC 15 passive Religion check.

Passive Religion Check
DC 15: The hairs on the back of your neck stand up. There's something eerie about this place—as if the very essence of death gathers here.

Indicate the place where the umbral taint will appear and suggest that the unease sensed by those who succeed on the passive Religion check is centered there.

Wraith (W) Level 5 Lurker
Medium shadow humanoid (undead) XP 200

Initiative +10 Senses Perception +2; darkvision
HP 37; Bloodied 18

Immune disease, poison; Resist 10 necrotic, insubstantial; Vulnerable 5 radiant (see also regeneration above)
Speed fly 6 (hover); phasing; see also shadow glide

Shadow Touch (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
+8 vs. Reflex; 1d6 + 4 necrotic damage, and the target is weakened (save ends).

Combat Advantage ✦ Necrotic
A wraith deals 1d6 extra necrotic damage against any target it has combat advantage against.

Shadow Glide (move; encounter)
The wraith shifts up to 6 squares.

Spawn Wraith
Any humanoid killed by a wraith rises as a free-willed wraith at the start of its creator's next turn, appearing in the space where it died (or in the nearest unoccupied space). Raising the slain creature (using the Raise Dead ritual) does not destroy the spawned wraith.

Tactics

The decrepit skeletons and the zombies fight until they are destroyed. The wraith is more cunning in its tactics.

Round 1: The decrepit skeletons open with their shortbows. The skulk zombies wade into melee with their slams, hoping to engage PCs who are helping others or dealing a lot of melee damage. The wraith enters through the rubble blocking off Area 5. It phases in with an attempt to gain surprise against the character closest to the Area 5 corridor. Remember the wraith gains extra damage against any target it has combat advantage against.

Round 2+: The decrepit skeletons continue to shoot unless engaged in melee, in which case they switch to their longswords. If a PC who is not heavily armored has been worn down by the skeletons or the zombies, the wraith uses shadow glide to engage him or her. It hopes to quickly kill a PC and then use its spawn wraith power.

Features of the Area

Illumination: Darkness.

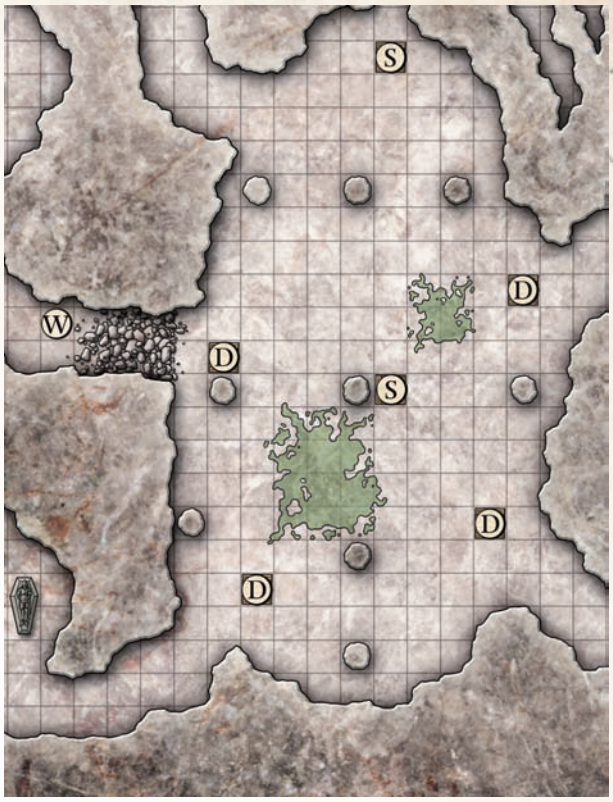
Pillars: The stone pillars interspersed throughout this chamber provide cover (-2 penalty to attack rolls).

Trapdoors: A layer of sand and pebbles cover the trapdoors. Each one of the trapdoors is spotted on a successful DC 17 Perception check (one door per check).

When the skeletons emerge from the spaces beneath the trapdoors, the openings remain open. If a character passes over or ends a move on one of these squares, he or she takes 1d10 falling damage. The bottom of these pits is covered in remains scavenged from shelves in other parts of the catacombs.

Umbral Taint: This catacomb is a place where traits of the Shadowfell manifest. When a powerful undead creature in the Shadowfell is destroyed, it leaves behind a stain to mark its fall. Umbral taint patches are frigid, colder than the normal area around them.



However, these patches are not immediately visible. Umbral taint appears as soon as an undead in the area takes a turn, appearing as spots of low, dark fog.

- Undead Regeneration: Any of the undead creatures in this encounter that occupy a space filled with umbral taint gain regeneration 5.
- Necrotic Bonus: In addition, characters and creatures using powers that have the necrotic keyword while located in umbral taint gain a +2 bonus to their attack rolls.

Shelves of the Dead

Encounter Level 3 (678 XP)

Setup

1 corruption corpse (C)
1 gravehound (G)
1 zombie (Z)
6 zombie rotters (R)

The portcullis shown on the map is raised when the PCs first approach this chamber. The undead in this chamber lie inert on the shelves lining the corridor until the PCs all pass beyond the portcullis. The undead appear to be corpses similar to the dozens of other naturally desiccated or partially mummified bodies lying on the shelves. The exception to this is the corruption corpse, which inhabits a passage that runs above the main corridor (see Features of the Area).

Once the PCs enter the area, the undead swarm together from the shelves, hoping to gain surprise. The zombie drops the portcullis to keep the adventurers in, and mayhem ensues. Roll initiative.

As the adventurers approach the portcullis, read:

Ahead is an area that, from what you can see, leads to a group of branching corridors lined by shelves of corpses. Twenty feet or so beyond where you stand, a glowing orb made of something resembling glass or crystal is embedded in the ceiling.

Perception Check

DC 15: The pointed ends of a raised portcullis are just visible in the ceiling at the mouth of the area ahead.

The portcullis, when raised, is well concealed. If the adventurers spot it, they can disable its mechanism with a successful DC 15 Thievery check, preventing its subsequent use to pen the PCs in.

Tactics

All the undead in this encounter attack until destroyed. If it were clever, the corruption corpse would retreat to a far corner of the upper tunnel when all its allies are killed, but it isn't. It just keeps lobbing away.

Round 1+: The zombie lying on the shelf next to the portcullis spends its first move action to lower the portcullis with the hidden winch mechanism. Unless prevented from doing so by the PCs' actions, it automatically succeeds.

The zombie rotters, the zombie, and the gravehound all converge on the PCs closest to them with the intent of attacking the largest number of targets possible at the same time. The zombie rotters slam, the zombie uses its zombie grab and then slams any grabbed PC, and the gravehound bites.

The corruption corpse in the upper corridor moves between murder holes (indicated by the grate symbols on the map) to rain down motes of corruption on vulnerable-seeming targets. It has line of sight and line of effect to the square beneath a grate it occupies and any square adjacent to that grate.

Features of the Area

Illumination: The glowing orb in the ceiling (the light-colored circle on the map) provides dim light in a 4-square radius. The rest of this area is dark.

Portcullis: A character who operates the winch mechanism, lifts the portcullis, or slips under the partially raised portcullis permits enemies in adjacent squares to make opportunity attacks on him or her.

Once the portcullis is dropped, it can be lifted in one of two ways:

Find the Hidden Winch Mechanism: A successful DC 16 Perception check locates the winch mechanism inside the shelf adjoining the hallway. Working the winch mechanism (a standard action) lifts the portcullis up a few feet, high enough for characters to crawl under it. Pulling a second time on the winch (a second standard action) raises it 4 feet off the ground. A character more than 4 feet in height must squeeze to pass through the opening. A third pull on the winch mechanism (a third standard action) raises it flush with the ceiling.

Lift the Portcullis: A successful DC 17 Strength check (standard action) lifts the portcullis a few feet off the ground so that adventurers can crawl through the gap. The character holding the portcullis can then slip underneath and let the portcullis fall back. Keeping the portcullis up past the end of one's turn requires an additional DC 15 Strength check at the end of each turn.

Murder Holes: An upper tunnel runs exactly parallel above the main corridor. Murder holes in its floor look down into the main corridor. A corruption corpse inhabits this upper tunnel. When the corpse makes attacks from above, it gains cover against attacks from below.

To engage the corruption corpse in melee, a character must get into the upper tunnel. Reaching a grate requires a successful DC 15 Athletics check (move action) to climb up to it, then a second successful DC 17 Athletics check (move action) to wrench the grate out of place and vault up into the upper tunnel.

The upper tunnel ends at the portcullis. If the portcullis raised, its bars are visible here abutting the end of the corridor.

Glowing Orb: The crystal that partially illuminates this area can be pried out of the ceiling by a character who takes 1 minute to do so. It retains its light-giving property after it is removed. A successful DC 16 Arcana check identifies it as a magic item of moderate value (200 gp). If the characters don't sell it, one of them can keep it and use it as a portable light source.

BATTLEFIELD DOWNS

A lair for five 7th-level adventurers

The desolate, uneven country known to fearful locals as Battlefield Downs is strewn with the scattered remains of the ancient dead. During the last terrible years of the old empire, a series of grinding military engagements played out across the rolling fields of Battlefield Downs. In one battle that was part of a wider, disastrous campaign that contributed heavily to Nerath's downfall, the Empire of Nerath's legions clashed here against ravaging gnoll packs. It is now a haunted place, where only the bravest dare to tread.

Background

History DC 14: The scholar Tirian Forkbeard proved himself courageous but unwise when he built a small home for himself near the Downs. Forkbeard devoted decades of his life to the study of the undead. For years, he claimed to be on the verge of great discoveries that would enable the world's clerics to rid the world of undead entirely. How he aimed to achieve this goal was never clear. Forkbeard always told questioners that he would unveil the secret technique only when he was sure it would work.

History DC 19: Months ago, Tirian moved out to the Downs proper. He theorized that careful measurements of its haunted energies could aid him in his research. He hoped to find or create a ritual that would cut the link between undead creatures and the Shadowfell. Whatever he might have been onto, he has taken his secrets to the grave.

Streetwise DC 14: Last week Joachim Cork, a traveling peddler taking a risky shortcut across the edges of the Downs, was chased by a deceased and rotting Tirian Forkbeard. Joachim says that Tirian, who had been his friend, gibbered at him inarticulately, showing no sign of his previous personality or intelligence. Despite the reckless chances he took during his research, Joachim says, Tirian feared nothing more than turning into one of the creatures he spent his life trying to destroy.

Hook: Bring Me Tirian's Head

Before leaving for the Downs, Tirian established a reward fund. He entrusted its administration to Neko Blunt, a middle-aged woman who is the keeper of Tirian's local tavern. Neko will pay 3,000 gp to anyone who brings back proof that Tirian's undead body has been laid to its eternal rest. As a researcher of the undead, Tirian was not squeamish or sentimental: The terms of the reward that Tirian arranged with Neko specify that to receive the gold, the claimants must chop off Tirian's zombie's head and present it to Neko for authentication.

Neko provides a physical description of her friend so that whoever takes up the task of securing the reward can identify Tirian's walking corpse. Tirian wore a long, gray beard divided in two bunches and adorned with strings of wooden beads. Tirian's left arm featured a tattoo of blue geometric forms that snaked around the entirety of the limb.

Environment

This time of year, the Downs are swept by cold and lashing winds from the northern mountains. A heavy snowfall took place a few days ago. Northern gales have sculpted the snow into high banks, leaving much of the area's dead, grassy ground essentially clear.

The map's terrain zones are indicated on its key.

- Areas of normal terrain consist of hard, frozen ground covered with brown, trampled grasses, and a light dusting of snow.
- The gully is a 5-foot-deep trench. Creatures occupying gully squares grant combat advantage to melee attackers that are not in gully squares.

ZOMBIE BREEDING GROUND

The thousands of deaths that took place on the Downs transformed this battlefield into a place where the walls between the world and the Shadowfell are weak. People who die here reanimate as undead. This is what happened to Tirian Forkbeard.

Humanoid creatures in the Downs (the entire area shown on the full-page map) who are reduced to 5 or fewer hit points take on a pale, waxy complexion. Their veins darken and become visible through their increasingly translucent flesh. An opaque glaze dulls their eyes, and their eyes remain open even while they are unconscious.

Humanoid creatures who die transform into chillborn zombies (Monster Manual, page 275).

If any PCs die here, you can delay their transformation until after surviving PCs have defeated their current enemies or fled the field if things are going poorly for them. Otherwise, a dead comrade rises 1 round after death. It turns on living PCs, acting last in initiative order. It has full hit points as a chillborn zombie.

Victims of zombie transformation can, after being reduced to 0 hit points, be restored to life by a Raise Dead ritual. A player whose character became a zombie can choose to roleplay the character as haunted by hazy memories of the undead state or to shrug off the incident entirely.

Creature powers that raise slain enemies as undead (such as spawn wraith) supersede the zombie breeding ground effect.

One square = 5 feet

- Difficult terrain is strewn with uneven rocks or covered with half a foot of loose snow. It costs 1 extra square of movement to enter a square of difficult terrain.
- Hard snow banks are made of partially melted snow that has later refrozen into thick blocks of ice. They range from 5 to 10 feet in height. They can be climbed with a successful DC 14 Athletics check. They support the weight of a Medium or smaller creature. Characters traveling along the tops of hard snow banks treat them as difficult terrain once they have climbed onto them.
- Soft snow banks range from 5 to 10 feet high. They do not support a combatant's weight. Anyone attempting to scale one instead falls into the snow. Soft snow banks are blocking terrain and prevent movement through them. A character who falls into soft snow make a successful DC 19 Athletics check and must use both a standard action and a move action to return to the closest adjacent square to the square where he fell in.
- Ice is challenging terrain. A successful DC 19 Acrobatics check allows a character to move his speed across the ice. He rolls a new Acrobatics check each time he moves. A character who fails this check falls prone in the square of ice he occupies. The ice squares on the map represent an ice-covered pond that features a tactical combat encounter. See the description of Area 3, below, and the "Pond Ambush" encounter on page 76.

If the PCs accept the challenge to secure the offered reward by ending Tirian's undead wanderings, they arrive in the general area where Neko thinks Tirian established his makeshift hut. On their approach, the PCs might hear some unexplained wails and feel an unaccountable chill or two, but so their journey from the safety of town unfolds without incident.

When the adventurers first approach the Downs, read:
The Downs are a vast swath of low, rolling hills. Snow is thick and deep on the ground, and the air is cold, but not bitterly so. Intermittently, the wind blows across the terrain, sounding for all the world like the wails of a hunting, yet sorrowful, creature.

Area 1: Pile of Weapons

This area holds an amorphous pile of useless weapons and pieces of armor. These relics of the wars fought here are loosely strewn about the entire area of the Downs. At this spot, the adventurers find a dense collection of them.

When the adventurers draw near sight of the pile, read:
Scattered on the ground next to a snowbank are dozens of ruined pieces of very old weapons and armor.

The weapons and armor have no resale value.

Area 2: Rubbish Pile

When the adventurers draw near sight of the rubbish pile, read:
A pile of unidentifiable rubbish molders in a depression.

With a successful DC 15 History check, a character concludes that this once-buried detritus is the remains of a campsite that dates back to the imperial wars. A successful DC 15 Perception check turns up an old buckle, a handful of coins (5 sp and 7 cp), and a jug with "Sergeant Petrus" scratched into it.

Area 3: Icy Pond (Level 6)

This pond has a thick layer of ice across it. The ice hides undead lurking under the water, one is phased into the ground nearby, and two others hide behind a snowbank. When adventurers come near or walk onto the ice, they trigger the tactical encounter, and the undead ambush the adventurers.

Tactical Encounter: "Pond Ambush," page 76.

Area 4: Gully

When the adventurers approach the gully, read:
A low ditch snakes through the snowbanks. Bits of old trash litter its shallow bottom.

A successful DC 8 Perception check reveals fragments of well-gnawed bones in the gully. They are not Tirian's.

Area 5: Ruined Ballistae

When the adventurers approach this area, read:
Rusted and pitted iron fittings jut up from the ground. More bits of some ruined mechanism are clearly buried beneath it.

A successful DC 19 History check identifies the fittings as remnants of several ballistae. Their wooden parts have long since rotted away.

Area 6: Pile of Bones

When the adventurers approach the mound, read:
A great stack of bones is piled on the ground. The mound is 10 feet high and includes many humanoid skulls.

A successful DC 19 Heal check reveals that the ages of the bones range from a hundred years to a few months. They include the remains of animals—deer, bear, wolves—as well as humans, dwarves, elves, dragonborn, and gnolls. Someone has carefully sorted the bones by anatomical function: all the ribs piled here, all the pelvises over there, and so on.

Area 7: Frozen Corpse

When the adventurers approach this area, read:
A frozen corpse lies huddled in the snow, clutching a tattered piece of parchment in a closed fist.

The body is that of a 50-year-old male human who bears no tattoos and is clean-shaven. He foolishly came here by himself seeking Tirian's reward.

A successful DC 20 Arcana check reveals that the parchment is inscribed with magic similar to the Gentle Repose ritual. It is designed to keep a body safe from reanimation if killed. If the scroll is removed from the corpse's grasp, the magic of the scroll loses any power it had. The body stumbles to its feet a minute later, groaning inarticulately—and then its frozen body, unable to take the strain of animating into a zombie, shatters into dozens of pieces.

Area 8: Circle of Protection

When the adventurers approach these cryptic symbols, read:
Someone has scratched out a mystic pattern in the earth. Large sections of it have been hacked away by digging, leaving the pattern broken.

A successful DC 21 Arcana check reveals that the pattern is either an inept attempt at a magic circle or the remains of an interrupted ritual.

Area 9: Gibbering Head

When the adventurers move to within sight of the stake, read:
A wooden stake juts up from the rocky ground. On top of it is a weathered, blackened human head.

This head is all that remains of one of the leaders of the long-ago battle, impaled here as a trophy of sorts and a warning to other enemies. Long exposure to the taint of this area has infused it with malefic abilities.

Gibbering Head Level 7 Blaster
Trap XP 300

A severed head animates and spews a cacophony of blasphemies and imprecations at approaching creatures.

Trap: This cursed head scours its target's mind for memories that it incorporates into horrifying psychic threats.

Perception
✦ DC 19: The character notices that the head twitches, and its lips move every so often.

Trigger
When a character comes within 2 squares of it, the head begins to gibber and yell, and it attacks.

Attack ✦ Psychic
Immediate Reaction or Standard Action Close burst 2
Target: Each living creature in burst
Attack: +10 vs. Will
Hit: 2d10 psychic damage. After the initial attack, the gibbering head repeats the attack each round as a standard action at an initiative count one higher than the highest PC initiative count.

Countermeasures
✦ The head can be destroyed. It has AC 10, Fortitude 5, Reflex 10, and 50 hit points. It is immune to necrotic damage and has vulnerable 10 radiant.

Area 10: Smoking Crater (Level 7)

This remnant of the old war still pulses with evil, exuding a constant plume of foul smoke. The rock-strewn crater is the site where a terrible magic siege weapon was used during the ancient war. The PCs trigger the tactical encounter when they come within 2 squares of any of the creatures milling about this crater.

Tactical Encounter: "Around the Crater," page 78.

Area 11: Destroyed Hut

When the adventurers move adjacent to the hut, read:
This crude wooden structure has been partially dismantled, as if torn apart by hand. Among the scattered planks and broken furniture lie fragments of journals that have been torn into unreadable pieces. The parchment remnants now litter the ground like clumps of snow.

Tirian lived here during his ill-fated mission to the downs. He brought nothing of value with him, and his personal items have been scattered across the area.

If the characters investigate this area before comng upon the Smoking Crater (Area 10), they disturb the two corruption corpse zombies hiding here and trigger the tactical encounter associated with the crater.

Tactical Encounter: "Around the Crater," page 78.

Tirian's Whereabouts

The zombie Tirian appears as an enemy in the second of the two tactical encounters the characters engage in.

If the group completes the "Pond Ambush" encounter last, he is one of the corruption corpses. When he explodes, his head is left sufficiently intact to take back to Neko and claim the reward.

If the group completes "Around the Crater" last, Tirian is the chillborn zombie.

Conclusion

After the PCs present Tirian's head to Neko, she arranges a wake at her tavern for her friend. The scholar's friends gather to remember him, and Neko presents the 3,000 gp reward to the adventurers.

Pond Ambush

Encounter Level 6 (1,276 XP)

Setup

1 zombie hulk (Z)
1 mad wraith (W)
1 dread zombie (D)
2 corruption corpses (C)
2 skeleton soldiers (S)

The shambling undead of Battlefield Downs wait in listless suspended animation for new victims, lurking in the chill waters of a pond covered by a layer of ice. The undead are hidden.

When the adventurers wander into this area, read:

A windswept expanse of brown, grassy ground is interrupted by the glare of sunlight (or moonlight) bouncing off a sheet of ice.

When adventurers move adjacent to one of the submerged undead or walk onto the ice, the undead ambush the adventurers. A character can avoid being surprised by making a successful DC 24 passive Perception check.

Place undead on the map as they become evident to the party. (You can change the starting positions of the undead in underneath the ice into good initial ambush squares.)

The zombie hulk, the dread zombie, and the skeleton soldiers burst up through the ice. The mad wraith phases up from the ground, and the corruption corpses burst out from behind the nearby snowbank.

Zombie Hulk (Z) Level 8 Brute

Immune disease, poison; Resist 10 necrotic; Vulnerable 10 radiant
Speed 4

⊕ Slam (standard; at-will)
Reach 2; +12 vs. AC; 2d8 + 5 damage.

⸸ Zombie Smash (standard; recharge ⚅)
Reach 2; targets Medium size or smaller creature; +12 vs. AC; 4d8 + 5 damage, and the target is knocked prone.

Rise Again (the first time the zombie hulk is reduced to 0 hit points)
Make a new initiative check for the zombie hulk. On its next turn, the zombie hulk rises (as a move action) with 44 hit points.

⊕ Touch of Madness (standard; at-will) ✦ Psychic
+8 vs. Will; 1d6 + 5 psychic damage, and the target takes a -2 penalty to Will (save ends).

⸸ Touch of Chaos (standard; recharge ⚄ ⚅) ✦ Psychic
+9 vs. Will; 2d6 + 4 psychic damage, and the target moves up to its speed and makes a basic attack against its nearest ally as a free action.

Spawn Wraith
Any humanoid killed by a mad wraith rises as a free-willed mad wraith at the start of its creator's next turn, appearing in the space where it died (or in the nearest unoccupied space). Raising the slain creature (using the Raise Dead ritual) does not destroy the spawned wraith.

Tactics

The undead are not hampered by fighting while standing in 3-foot-deep water, and they gain combat advantage against characters who have fallen or been pulled into it.

Round 1+: Characters who are on the ice when the attack occurs face the chance of falling into the frigid waters (see "Features of the Area"). If only one character is in the water, the dread zombie attacks that character. If two or three characters are in the water, the skeleton soldiers engage the others. If four or five characters are in the water, the zombie hulk moves to fight the last two.

If any characters are adjacent to the pond, the undead creatures that burst up from the pond move to them and try to drag them into the water, which requires an opposed Athletics check. Each creature tries this tactic only once, then heads onto open ground to fight there if the attempt fails. If no character is near enough to be caught by this tactic, the creatures head immediately to open ground.

The zombie hulk uses zombie smash, the dread zombie uses zombie grab, and the skeleton soldiers slash with their longswords unless they are on solid ground and not engaged in melee, in which case they use their shortbows instead.

The mad wraith positions itself to affect the most PCs possible with mad whispers while using touch of chaos on heavily armored targets or targets that seem opportune. The corruption corpses attack with mote of corruption at range. They switch to their slams when they are engaged in melee, and they maneuver back to resume using mote of corruption if possible.

Features of the Area

Illumination: Varies with the time of day—bright light, dim light, or darkness.

Gully, Difficult Terrain, Hard Snow, Soft Snow: See the "Environment" section, page 72.

Icy Pond (Ice): The ice is challenging terrain. A successful DC 19 Acrobatics check allows a character to move his speed across the ice. Characters who fail this check fall prone in the first square of ice they enter. The ice holds the weight of a character until the undead below it attack or until the ice itself is attacked.

Icy Pond (Water): Characters on the ice when the undead break through must make a successful DC 14 Acrobatics check to avoid slipping on the ice and falling into the water. Characters who fail the Acrobatics check can avoid falling into the water by falling prone on the ice. They must crawl to solid ground, or they fall through the ice upon standing up.

If a character begins his or her turn in the water, he or she takes 5 cold damage. Treat the icy pond water as difficult terrain for the characters (but not for undead).

Around the Crater

Encounter Level 6 (1,200 XP)

Setup

1 chillborn zombie (Z)
2 corruption corpses (C)
2 rotwing zombies (R)
5 carcass eaters (E)

Undead mill or flap about (in the case of the rotwing zombies) without discernible motive around the hissing crater. When they are alerted to the presence of invading adventurers, they leap at the chance to attack the living.

Place the creatures as indicated on the map, and roll initiative.

When the adventurers first view the area, read:
A motley collection of dull-eyed walking corpses pointlessly circles a smoking crater, following its plume of green-tinged smoke as it moves about in the shifting wind. Some of the undead creatures are moaning as if in time to an ancient military marching song. Some of them hop and flap about on huge bat wings. A few of the corpses wear scraps of ancient military garb, and these corpses seem particularly ancient. Others of the undead are less rotted and appear to be more recently deceased. A few gore-covered, ratlike wolves nose around the area.

Str 19 (+6) Dex 16 (+5) Wis 12 (+3)
Con 14 (+4) Int 4 (-1) Cha 5 (-1)

Tactics

All the undead fight until they are destroyed.

Round 1+: The chillborn zombie and the carcass eaters close to melee with the nearest targets and set upon them with their basic attacks.

The corruption corpses remain behind the ruins of Tirian's hut, which grants them cover (-2 penalty to attack rolls against them). They make ranged attacks with mote of corruption until forced into melee.

One rotwing zombie remains mobile and charges with its slam whenever possible, gaining additional damage from flying charge when it can.

The other rotwing zombie initially remains near the snowbank to the north, trying to lure an adventurer into contact with the gibbering head trap (page 75). Once it has tried the trap trick for two rounds, whether or not it worked, it uses the same tactics as the other rotwing zombie.

Features of the Area

Illumination: Varies with the time of day—bright light, dim light, or darkness.

Smoking Crater: The 4 squares of the smoking crater are difficult terrain.

Plume of Smoke: The crater gives off a constant plume of smoke in the shape of a close blast 3. The origin square of the blast is one of the 4 squares occupied by the crater. When the encounter begins, the southeast square of the crater is the origin square, and the blast extends directly east away from that square.

Plume Terrain Effects: The squares in the blast are lightly obscured. Creatures in those squares have concealment (-2 penalty to attack rolls). The plume of smoke is also mildly caustic. It irritates the eyes of any living creature standing within it, granting combat advantage to nonliving foes.

Plume Shifts: Frequently shifting winds are present in this area. Whenever the wind changes direction, the plume moves accordingly. Roll 1d6 at the beginning of each round of the battle starting with round 2. On a result of 4–6, the plume shifts in a counterclockwise direction.

The first time it shifts, the northeast square of the crater becomes the origin square, and the blast extends directly east away from that square.

The next time the plume shifts, the northwest square of the crater becomes the origin square, and the blast extends directly north away from that square.

If the plume shifts again, the southwest corner of the crater becomes the origin square, and the blast extends directly west away from that square.

If it shifts a fourth time, the plume occupies the same space it did at the start of the encounter.

Ranged Penalties on the Round of a Shift: During any round that starts with a plume shift, the turbulent winds force characters using ranged weapons to adjust their aim. They take a -2 penalty to their attack rolls.

There is no penalty for rounds during which the plume does not move. Having taken a shot, ranged weapon users are able to compensate for the winds until the next change of direction.

Tirian's Hut: The structure in the southeast part of this area is Tirian's makeshift, ruined hut. See the description of Area 11, page 75. The squares of Tirian's hut are difficult terrain, costing 1 extra square of movement to enter.

Bloodtower on the Moorland

A lair for five 12th-level adventurers

The lost Bloodtower has returned, arising from its earthen grave to stand as a mute sentinel over the fog-shrouded moorland. In the weeks since its return, locals and travelers have spoken of new undead roaming the countryside.

Background

History DC 21: In centuries past, the Bloodtower was home to a society of necromancers. The members of this cloistered sect, easily recognized by their smooth shaved heads, unadorned gray robes, and white gloves, were known for their expertise in combating and commanding undead.

For reasons unknown, the Bloodtower vanished into the moor several centuries ago.

History DC 23: The Bloodtower's lord was a necromancer named Mervaun, and his expertise in the fields of necromancy and demonology were unparalleled.

Hook: Find the Black Petal

The PCs are visiting or passing through a city that lies near the moorland. While taking a meal at a local watering hole, they overhear a resident relating the following story.

Not long ago, a woman with pale skin and piercing gray eyes, wearing a distinctive amulet, passed through the city. The slender, graceful woman offered no name as she methodically purchased supplies. Locals called her the Black Petal, for the pendant depicting long, thorny roses with petals dark as night that she wore on a chain around her neck. When she left the city, she traveled into the moorland.

If that's not enough of an enticement to get the characters to follow the mysterious woman, you could arrange for the resident to engage them in conversation and speculate that the woman's activities are connected with the long-lost Bloodtower.

The Black Petal

The true name of the woman known as the Black Petal is Anefsina Bleth. She is a noble with a strong interest in necromantic matters. She entered the moorland in search of the lost Bloodtower.

After weeks of scouring the rocky headlands along the eastern moor, she at last divined the tower's concealed resting place. Anefsina then recited a complex ritual from a scroll of tattered vellum. At the conclusion of the ritual, the Bloodtower rose up out of the moorland, freed from its ages-old burial site.

Environment

Low, coarse grasses and scattered briars dot the fog-swept lowlands. A great river lies adjacent to the moorland that annually overtops its banks in winter, flooding the fields.

The lowlands of the moor are mostly flat, allowing PCs to move overland without restriction. The highlands are rocky and thick with vegetation, making the terrain difficult to cross. Thick blankets of fog often roll in from the nearby inland sea. Beasts native to the moorlands might take advantage of the heavy fog to achieve surprise against the PCs (see obscured terrain, Dungeon Master's Guide, page 61).

The following physical traits apply to the Bloodtower:

- The tower stands 96 feet tall. It has eight floors, each 12 feet in height. However, it remains partially buried underground in the moor. The third level of the tower is even with the ground, and the floor of the top level of the tower is 60 feet above the ground. The exterior walls of the tower are rough surfaces, and climbing them requires a successful DC 21 Athletics check.
- The central spiral staircase is difficult terrain. Characters have cover against foes below them on the spiral stairs because they can duck behind the staircase's central support. A successful DC 16 Acrobatics check is required at the start of each run action attempted on the stairs. Failure results in a PC falling prone and ending his or her movement.
- All doors in the tower are closed but not locked and can be opened as part of a move action.

When the PCs survey the area around the tower, read:

The Bloodtower juts out against a forested tor. The tower is constructed of dark green stone speckled with bright red spots. It stands about 75 feet in height.

In the Lee of the Tower

As the power of Anefsina's ritual pulled the Bloodtower skyward, the edifice was dragged along a large boulder, damaging the structure and punching a hole in its outer wall. The crevice is large enough to allow a single Medium creature to pass through at one time.

When the adventurers reach the tower, read:

The tower appears solidly constructed despite a jagged scar running along its wall. The gash ends at ground level, where a great boulder has punctured a hole in the tower's outer wall. The stink of death and corruption near the boulder is overwhelming. The stench pours from the exposed crevice.

If you want to provide a hint about what lies ahead (in Area 7), you can allow a character to gain the following information on a successful passive Religion check.

Religion Check
DC 20: Your studies of the undead strongly suggest that the odor you sense belongs to some variety of ghoul that might be waiting just inside the crevice.

If you want to give the characters a challenge before they enter the tower, throw the following optional encounter at them. Afterward, allow them to take a short rest (or even an extended rest, if you're feeling generous) in order to replenish their resources before they continue.

Optional: Horrible Stalker
Level 12 Encounter (XP 3,500)
✦ 1 fen hydra (level 12 solo brute, MM 164)

A fen hydra has wandered too close to the Bloodtower. Its movement through the moor foliage makes an easily missed background noise.

Perception Check
DC 22: A curious humming or clicking, barely noticeable above the natural sounds of the moor, can be heard.

Areas 1–4: Flooded Chambers
The first floor of the Bloodtower is below ground level and flooded. Submerged chambers include the foyer (Area 1), the kitchen (Area 2), the storeroom (Area 3), and the cold storage locker (Area 4).

When the adventurers move down the central stairs toward this location, read:
As you descend the central stairway, the steps become increasingly slick and slime-covered. Navigating a few steps farther reveals that the chamber below you is completely submerged in fetid, chilly water.

Submerged Chambers: Swimming through this calm, deep water requires a successful DC 10 Athletics check. See "Aquatic Combat," Dungeon Master's Guide, page 45, for information on fighting underwater (and the suffocation by drowning rules in the Dungeon Master's Guide, page 159). Note that this area is dark.

Optional: Diving into the Unknown
Level 11 Encounter (XP 2,800)
✦ 7 sodden ghoul wailers (level 9 soldier, page 154)

Area 5: Dining Room
The dining room (currently below ground but not submerged) contains a long, narrow wooden table that is cracked, warped, and even rotted away in some spots. The remnants of several high-backed wooden chairs lie on the floor. Two rusty iron chandeliers dangle precariously from the ceiling. In the northern corner of the room, the ruined remains of a stairwell for the servants lead down to the kitchen. The stairway has long since rotted away. Dark water can be seen through the opening left when the stairway collapsed.

Area 6: Library
This study (currently below ground but not submerged) was a favorite haunt of Mervaun, the lord and builder of the tower. It was in this room that the great necromancer penned many of his rituals.

When the adventurers enter the library, read:
Bookcases line the outer wall of this dusty, poorly ventilated room. A haze of mold spores hangs in the air. An empty desk sits to the north beneath an archaic map of the region hung on the wall. Moldy, frail tomes and scrolls are piled in heaps and scattered around the room.

History Check
DC 20: Examining the landmarks and settlements on the map, you discern that it depicts the region around the Bloodtower several centuries past.

Treasure: Four tomes (total value 1,000 gp) in the collection in this chamber deal with esoteric history and magical subjects. Even though Anefsina has already searched the room, she missed one juicy item—a ritual scroll of Consult Mystic Sages (1,000 gp).

Area 7: Dissection Chamber (Level 11)
In ages past this chamber was used by the Bloodtower necromancers to dissect cadavers and conduct necromantic rituals. Today the room is home to a wretched stench ghoul commanded to guard the entryway. The PCs trigger the tactical encounter when they move through the crevice in the tower wall.

Area 8: Undead Barracks
Dozens of manacles attached to chains are bolted into the floor of this chamber. This room was once used to house the tower's undead occupants.

Area 9: Sacrament Antechamber
A curved line of blotches on the floor that are a lighter color than the rest of the floor suggests that a number of objects used to rest here, and that they have only recently been moved. This chamber was used to store rituals written on long scrolls and stored in locked metal coffers, though the coffers are no longer here.

Area 10: Priest Alcove

The door to this room is normally closed and locked. A large, ornate wooden desk sits along one wall. It seems remarkably preserved considering the amount of time it was underground, suggesting that it was magically enhanced. Priests used this room to prepare for rituals and sacred rites, and hints of its previous purpose are found in its now-ruined frescoes and oramentation.

Area 11: Sanctum of Divine Death

When the adventurers enter this chamber through the double doors leading from the central stairway, read:

Beyond the doors is an open chamber supported by four granite pillars. The floor is tiled with elaborate mosaics. An altar of polished bloodstone rests upon a dais at the far end of the room. Behind the altar stands an imposing statue carved in the likeness of some ancient, alien creature with too many eyes in its head and a body type similar to a cross between a dwarf and a skinned corpse.

An inscription in the statue's base reads in the Rellanic script, "Ometh watches from beyond the grave."

Religion Check

DC 20: Runes etched on the sanctum walls reveal that this chamber was once a chapel to an entity known as Ometh, once an exarch of a deity of death.

Areas 12–13: Sleeping Quarters

Each of these chambers holds six beds and six footlockers. These rooms were the sleeping quarters for the Bloodtower necromancers.

Area 14: Anefsina's Private Quarters

Anefsina recently claimed this luxuriously furnished room for herself. It was the bedchamber and office of Mervaun. It contains a large bed, a personal chest, two wardrobes, two chairs, and a bathing tub.

Treasure: Next to the bathing tub is a gilded ivory bowl worth 2,500 gp that holds fragrant soap. A successful DC 26 Perception check reveals that the flagstone beneath the bowl has a shallow niche under it that holds 300 gp.

Area 15: Vault

The iron door leading to this room from the central staircase is locked. This small, secured chamber once housed the accumulated wealth of the tower. Anefsina has already passed through the vault, collecting most of the valuable items.

Iron Doorway: The entrance to the vault is blocked by an iron door warded with an Arcane Lock. A successful DC 26 Thievery check or Strength check, or a Knock ritual, is required to enter the room.

Treasure: +3 staff of fiery might (13,000 gp).

Secret Door: A secret door (Perception DC 28 to find) is located along the southwest wall. It leads to Area 16.

Area 16: Portal Chamber

Mervaun crafted three teleportation circles in this chamber. One leads to the Vaulted Sepulcher (Area 17). The other two lead to places you can determine as you see fit for your campaign. (These other two circles could be dormant until after the PCs have bested all the enemies in the tower, or they could provide a means of escape if things go badly for the characters.)

After the PCs move through the secret door, read:

Three 5-foot-diameter circles are inked in intricate glyphs upon the chamber's hardwood floor. At the center of each, a larger glyph has been carved and traced over in blood that has now dried.

Teleportation Circles: The three permanent teleportation circles are keyed to different locations. The user of a circle must stand on it and speak the proper password to activate it. When the word "Ometh" is spoken by someone standing on circle A, a Linked Portal opens to the permanent teleportation circle in the Vaulted Sepulcher (Area 17). Even if only a single PC stands on circle A, all the PCs in Area 15 or 16 teleport with that character at the same time.

Area 17: Vaulted Sepulcher (Level 14)

Anefsina and her guardians await the PCs in this large open room containing an ornate sarcophagus. The PCs trigger the tactical encounter when they teleport into the room by activating circle A in Area 16.

Tactical Encounter: "Black Petal," page 86.

Conclusion

Upon the defeat of the Black Petal and her undead servants, the PCs are free to explore the Vaulted Sepulcher fully.

If Anefsina escapes from this chamber, she either launches one or two more ambushes against the adventurers or retreats from the area to return at a later date to trouble the PCs.

Stench Attack

Encounter Level 11 (3,100 XP)

Setup

1 wretched stench ghoul (G)
1 skull lord (S)
8 putrescent zombies (Z)

The pungent stench of rot and decay exudes from the gash in the side of the Bloodtower caused by the boulder (see "In the Lee of the Tower," page 80). A wretched stench ghoul lurks within, ready to greet trespassers, but its unseen allies could spell ruin for the PCs.

The wretched stench ghoul was commanded by Anefsina to guard the tower entry crevice. The ghoul is hidden and isn't visible from the entry crevice. Provide the read-aloud text only after the first character enters the chamber.

Place the wretched stench ghoul as shown on the map when the first PC enters the chamber, then roll initiative. The character who enters first through the crevice is surprised by the ghoul unless he or she succeeds on a Perception check.

Perception Check
DC 21: You hear the faintest whisper of a word repeated over and over: "Flesh!"

The skull lord and its zombie minions are present, but hidden, as they lurk in the nearby Undead Barracks (Area 8). Place these creatures on the map after the encounhter has begun, as described in "Tactics" below.

When the first adventurer enters this area, read:
A stomach-turning stink of death and corruption pervades the air. A ghastly, disease-ridden figure crouches in the room upon a stone slab. The creature is muttering one word over and over again. It opens its impossibly wide mouth of jagged, hungry teeth to enunciate: "Flesh!"

Tactics

The wretched stench ghoul fights until it feels in danger of being destroyed, at which point it retreats. The skull lord fights cunningly, directing the putrescent zombies, who fight until destroyed.

Round 1: The ghoul surprises the first PC who moves into the crevice unless one of the characters succeeded on the passive Religion check (see page 82) before entering. If it gains surprise, the ghoul moves adjacent to the intruder in preparation for using a claw attack.

Rounds 2-3: As other PCs enter the tower through the crevice, the ghoul strives to pick off invaders one by one. It attempts to immobilize them all with claw attacks, using ghoulish bite to worsen the condition of any victims of its claws.

Round 4+: The skull lord and the putrescent zombies join the fight when someone enters Area 8 through the door from Area 7, or at the beginning of the fourth round, whichever comes first.

When any PC enters Area 8 from Area 7, the putrescent zombies and the skull lord attack. The zombies shamble toward the door when it is opened and fight as close as possible to it, attempting to surround the PCs.

The skull lord keeps its distance, staying near the northern edge of Area 8 unless it needs to move in order to bring targets within range of its skulls (or to stay away from enemies trying to get close to it). It uses its ranged powers to hamper the characters and replenish the putrescent zombie minions.

The wretched stench ghoul remains near the largest concentration of PCs, using its nauseating stench aura to maximum effect. When the ghoul is bloodied, it retreats into Area 8.

Features of the Area

Illumination: Darkness.

Crevice in the Wall: A break in the wall provides the only easy means of entering the tower. Any Medium or Small creature that wants to get through the crevice must take a full round to enter the opening and pull itself through. During that round, the creature occupies the space where the crevice is located and is treated as if squeezing (Player's Handbook, page 292).

In order for a Large or bigger creature to get through the opening, it must be widened by spending 10 minutes bashing the edges of the crevice with blows from the blunt end of a weapon or other serviceable tool.

Rotting Bookshelves: Five rotting bookshelves in the eastern end of the room just out from the northern wall. Their shelves hold numerous items of primitive surgical equipment as well as nests of rotten and shredded scrolls and books.

Stone Slabs: Three low stone slabs to the south were previously used to dissect corpses and undead. The slabs are 3 feet high. A creature can jump up on top of a slab by making a successful DC 15 Athletics check. A creature standing on a slab has combat advantage against an enemy on the floor of the area. A slab provides cover for a creature that crouches down next to it.

Dense Rubble: The pile of rocks and bones surrounding the crevice is difficult terrain.

Cage: Three iron cages are positioned against the outside tower wall in the western edge of the room. Each cage is large enough for a Medium creature. The iron bars to the cages have AC 8, Reflex 8, Fortitude 15, and 60 hit points. Each cage also has a release latch on its underside, out of the occupant's reach. Each of the cages is occupied by a humanoid corpse.

Black Petal

Encounter Level 14 (5,500 XP)

Setup

Anefsina, the Black Petal (A)
1 boneclaw (B)
3 marrowshriek skeletons (S)
1 spectral tendrils trap (T)

By the time the adventurers make it into this chamber, Anefsina is well aware of their presence. The Black Petal is not alone when the PCs confront her. In addition to the marrowshriek skeletons that serve as her constant guardians, she has commanded the allegiance of a boneclaw.

When the PCs enter, provide the read-aloud text, then place Anefsina, the boneclaw, and the marrowshriek skeletons as shown on the map, and roll initiative. The characters are teleported into the area of the spectral tendrils trap, so it takes effect immediately.

When the adventurers teleport into the Vaulted Sepulcher, read:

You feel a slight sensation of nausea as you and your companions are instantly whisked away to a secret chamber. Before you can fully acclimate to your new surroundings, spectral tendrils lash out at you from the darkness. A woman's laugher can be heard above the startled cries of your companions.

Anefsina, the Black Petal (A) Level 13 Elite Controller

Dagger (standard; at-will) ✦ Weapon
+22 vs. AC; 1d4 + 6 damage.

Slashing Darkness (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
Ranged 5; targets two enemies within range; +20 vs. Reflex; 2d6 + 9 necrotic damage.

Cold Ray (standard; at-will) ✦ Cold
Ranged 10; +20 vs. Reflex; 2d6 + 9 cold damage, and the target is slowed (save ends).

Life Tap (standard; encounter) ✦ Healing, Necrotic
Ranged 5; +20 vs. Fortitude; 3d10 + 9 necrotic damage, the target is stunned until the end of Anefsina's next turn, and Anefsina regains 15 hit points.

Shackles of Death (standard; recharge ⚄ ⚅) ✦ Necrotic
Ranged 10; targets two enemies within range; +20 vs. Fortitude; 2d8 + 9 necrotic damage, and the target takes ongoing 10 necrotic damage (save ends). While taking this ongoing damage, the target cannot spend healing surges.

Blackfire (standard; recharge ⚄ ⚅) ✦ Fire, Necrotic
Close blast 5; +20 vs. Reflex; 2d8 + 12 necrotic damage, and the target takes ongoing 10 fire damage (save ends).

Shadow Step (move; encounter) ✦ Teleportation
Anefsina teleports up to 5 squares.

Claw (standard; at-will)
Reach 3; +20 vs. AC; 1d12 + 6 damage.

Necrotic Pulse (free, when first bloodied; encounter) ✦ Healing, Necrotic
Close burst 10; undead allies in the burst regain 10 hit points, and enemies in the burst take 10 necrotic damage.

Relentless Opportunist
If a boneclaw hits with an opportunity attack, it can make another opportunity attack against the same target during the current turn.

Threatening Reach
A boneclaw can make opportunity attacks against all enemies within its reach (3 squares).

⊕ Osseous Thrust (standard; at-will)
+17 vs. AC; 1d8 + 9 damage.

⸸ Marrow Feast (standard; recharge ⚅ ⚄ ⚃)
Requires combat advantage against the target; +17 vs. AC; 2d8 + 12 damage, and the target is grabbed. Each round that the marrowshriek skeleton sustains the grab, the target takes 15 damage and is weakened until the end of the marrowshriek skeleton's next turn.

✧ Marrowshriek (minor 1/round; at-will)
Close burst 3; targets living creatures; +15 vs. Fortitude; the target is dazed until the end of the marrowshriek skeleton's next turn. If the target is grabbed by the marrowshriek skeleton, it is stunned until the end of the marrowshriek skeleton's next turn instead of dazed.

Shadowrought (standard; at-will)
The marrowshriek skeleton becomes invisible until it attacks.

Alignment Chaotic evil Languages –

Anefsina's Spectral Tendrils (T) Level 13 Obstacle
Trap XP 800

Ghostly tendrils whip from the ground to lash at you.

Trap: This trap occupies a field of 15 squares. When a creature enters the area or starts its turn in the area, spectral tendrils lash out and attack the creature.

Perception
✦ DC 27: The character notices something strange about the area ahead, as though a ghostly mist hangs just above the ground.

Additional Skill: Arcana
✦ DC 23: The character recognizes a tile mosaic on the floor that serves as the trap's focus.
✦ DC 31: The character's knowledge provides a +2 bonus to Thievery checks to delay or disable the trap.

Trigger
When a creature enters a trapped square or begins its turn in a trapped square, the trap attacks.

Attack ✦ Necrotic
Opportunity Action Melee
Target: Each creature in a trapped square
Attack: +18 vs. AC
Hit: 2d10 + 6 necrotic damage, and the target is dazed until the end of its next turn.
Aftereffect: The target is dazed until the end of its next turn.

Countermeasures
✦ A character who succeeds on a DC 27 Acrobatics check can move into a trigger square without provoking the attack. The squares count as difficult terrain.
✦ An adjacent character can delay a trigger plate with a successful DC 27 Thievery check.
✦ An adjacent character can disable a trigger plate with a successful DC 31 Thievery check.

Tactics

Though confident in her ability to defeat the PCs, the Black Petal does not hesitate to flee a battle she feels is lost. She is even prepared to surrender to the PCs if necessary (figuring she'll devise a way to later escape).

Round 1+: Anefsina is content to let her undead guardians wade into the fight while she attacks from behind the sarcophagus. She leads with shackles of death, follows that with blackfire, and then uses cold ray until the first two powers recharge. The marrowshriek skeletons use marrowshriek and then follow up with marrow feast. The boneclaw moves to a good position to attack as many targets as possible with necrotic pulse if it becomes bloodied. It uses its reach to make claw attacks against nonadjacent enemies when it can.

If bloodied, Anefsina uses life tap, and then spends her action point to shadow step over to the linked teleportation circle. In the following round she activates the circle and flees to Area 16.

Features of the Area

Illumination: Dim light (candlelight). Several candelabra are arrayed around the edge of the room.

Illusory Surfaces: The ceiling is masked with an illusion that makes the sepulcher appear open to the night sky. If they peer beyond the illusion, the PCs observe a vaulted stone ceiling.

Anefsina's Spectral Tendrils Trap (T): This trap covers the indicated squares. Anefsina has keyed herself and her guardians to this trap. Anefsina, the boneclaw, and the marrowshriek skeltons can move into a trapped square without provoking the attack.

Sarcophagus: The ornate sarcophagus at the head of the chamber is 4 feet tall and deep, and 8 feet long. Within the sarcophagus lies a male human body. A successful DC 21 History check reveals that the man is Mervaun. His flesh is magically preserved by some ritual, but he is quite dead.

Teleportation Circle: This permanent teleportation circle is linked to circle A in Area 16. Its user must stand on the circle and speak the proper password ("Ometh") to activate it. This teleportation circle transports users one at a time (as opposed to circle A).

Treasure: The amulet that Anefsina wears is a +4 symbol of power. Anefsina also has a potion of healing (50 gp) in her clothes if she hasn't used it during the battle.

A cursory search of the sepulcher reveals a tiny stone jar of Keoghtom's ointment (13,000 gp) that is tucked into the intricate ornamentation of the sarcophagus.

Mausoleum of Ssra-Tauroch

A lair for five 17th-level adventurers

The Auburn Desolation is a forsaken waste of treacherous sand and unbearable heat within the Shadowfell. Gloom-wrapped serpents and foul undead haunt the wastes, striking out at unsuspecting travelers from sandy graves.

Background

History DC 20: In a dense jungle realm whose name is now long forgotten, a prehistoric race of snake people ruled a vast and powerful civilization. As monarch of that land, Ssra-Tauroch was praised for his military accomplishments yet reviled for his strict rule and zealous adoption of ritualistic sacrifice.

History DC 25: As Ssra-Tauroch's reign extended into decades and the rigors of time weakened his once mighty frame, he requested a great boon from Zehir: the gift of immortality. Ssra-Tauroch, the empire, and its yuan-ti citizenry were devout followers of the god of poison and serpents. The monarch's lifetime of service to the serpent lord had not gone unnoticed. Zehir sent a dark angel to the aging monarch who taught him the secret knowledge of mummification.

History DC 27: Upon completing the ritual, Ssra-Tauroch retreated to his inner sanctum. As time passed, rumors circulated that Ssra-Tauroch had been slain or possessed by demonic fiends. With the king absent from the public eye and thus unable to refute the claims, insurrection wracked the land. Angry dissidents stormed Ssra-Tauroch's palaces, forcing Ssra-Tauroch to escape into the Shadowfell. His refuge became a windswept desolation of sand and searing heat, but it now is a place where his mausoleum was safe from his former subjects.

Environment

Sandy expanses stretch across the inhospitable climate of the Auburn Desolation in the Shadowfell. These expanses are broken by scattered rocky outcroppings. By day, white-bearded vultures circle above, seeking carrion to feast upon. The desert wasteland comes alive at night, when its denizens emerge from beneath the shifting sands.

The temperatures rise anomalously high (for the Shadowfell) by day. It is sunny, though the sun hovers just above the horizon during the day. In the evening, temperatures plummet to the Shadowfell's normal gravelike chill. Rolling dunes shift eternally, blown by the burning winds. Those same winds reveal and cover rocky outcroppings with sand.

A lone river winds through the region's barren crags, terminating at a cliff face. The Mausoleum of Ssra-Tauroch looks out of that tan and red-brown cliff face. The river's swift-flowing water is murky but fresh.

Sandblasted monuments and collapsed structures poke out of the sand before the cliff face. At night scores of mummified yuan-ti, the so-called children of Ssra-Tauroch, walk along lost boulevards and congregate in ruined buildings as if reenacting the familiar habits of the living.

The Mausoleum of Ssra-Tauroch stands as a sentinel overlooking the sand-covered ruins. The foundations of the Mausoleum are carved from the cliff to form a huge shelf on which the marble structure is built. The marble outside facade of the sepulcher is smooth, except for a large relief carving of Ssra-Tauroch.

- The interior of the mausoleum has a main floor and two subfloors, one higher in elevation than the main floor and one lower in elevation.
- Unless otherwise noted, all doors within the structure are locked, requiring a successful DC 25 Thievery check to open or a successful DC 20 Strength check to break down.
- No light sources exist within the structure.
- The ceilings throughout the mausoleum are 20 feet high.

When the adventurers approach the mausoleum, read:
Ruins spread away from the side of a steep cliff wall. Windblasted monuments and collapsed structures draped in sand bear testimony to a displaced and fallen civilization. A great edifice is carved into the cliff face. The building is a reddish-brown marble structure. Its only ornament is a huge carving depicting the face of a humanoid with scales instead of skin.

Area 1: Mausoleum Ledge

The outward face of the mausoleum stands on a narrow ledge 40 feet above the sandy ground below. Climbing to the ledge requires a successful DC 20 Athletics check.

When the PCs reach the ledge outside the mausoleum, read:
The outside face of the building is smooth, and it curves toward the cliff face. As the wall ascends, it slowly arches into a great dome. The walls of the dome show stress fractures, as if the area has suffered earthquakes at some point in its past.

Area 2: Shrine of the Snake God

When the PCs enter this chamber, read:
In the center of the north, east, and south walls, a fountain head in the shape of a large statue of a snake slowly trickles water into a fountain that wraps those three walls. Carved reliefs of yuan-ti and serpents decorate the base of the fountain and the walls behind the fountain. The floors were once highly polished floors, but the persistent grit of the driven sand has given them a matte haze.

Perception Check
DC 25: A faint seam glimmers in the wall behind the eastern fountain head. A secret passage might lie beyond.

Optional: Slithering Surprise

Level 17 Encounter (XP 8,400)

✦ 6 shadow snakes (level 16 skirmisher, MM 240)

Shadowy serpents slither forth from the fountain heads to strike out at the PCs.

Area 3: Alcove

When the PCs enter this area, read:
This alcove is bare of any decoration except large urns in each of the four corners. Several small, empty niches are carved along the walls. In one corner, the disarticulated skeletal remains of long-dead humanoid are crumpled in a pile.

If there was anything else in this room, it has long since been removed by treasure hunters or other adventurers. The urns contain only ashes. The skeletal remains are all that remains of a trespasser.

Area 4: Nave of Serpents

When the PCs enter this hallway, read:
Painted on the western wall of this long hallway is a massive fresco depicting an extraordinarily detailed and regal serpent giving birth to countless species of snakes.

Religion Check
DC 20: The serpent is likely meant to depict a serpent god, such as Zehir.

Area 5: Rectory (Level 18)

The rectory was once the living quarters of priests of Zehir. A bone naga disciple has claimed this corner of the mausoleum as its home. It is aware of the presence of intruders and attempts to waylay the PCs as they enter the rectory. The PCs trigger the tactical encounter when they open the south door or are noticed in the room after entering by other means.

Tactical Encounter: "Disciples of Zehir," page 92.

Area 6: Shadow Vestry

When the PCs enter this circular chamber, read:
Snakes slither and twine around a simple square stone altar in the center of this circular chamber. The altar is ornamented with carved, coiled snakes at each corner. Scattered bones of various creatures lie on the floor, along with a few naturally mummified corpses. The snakes slide across these remains indiscriminately.

The snakes are mundane snakes and are not dangerous. They flee into small cracks in the floor if they are menaced. Carved into the east wall is a small niche. Inside it is a heavy coffer.

Medium Iron Coffer: AC 5, Reflex 5, Fortitude 10; hp 60. The coffer is warded with Arcane Lock. It can be opened by a Knock ritual or a successful DC 35 Thievery check or Strength check. This coffer contains two mundane holy symbols of Zehir and the treasure noted below. If displayed prominently, these holy symbols grant immunity to the effects of the altar of zealotry in Area 15.

Treasure: 1,000 gp and a potion of vitality (1,000 gp).

Area 7: Great Statuary Hall

When the PCs enter the hall, read:
Great battles pitting yuan-ti against mighty dragons are carved in relief along the walls of this great hall. Dozens of towering statues, each of a yuan-ti warrior in ceremonial armor, are arranged in rank and file throughout the chamber, facing east. The largest and most intricate of the giant statues in this hall stands in front of the east wall and faces toward the warrior statues.

Perception Check
DC 25: The name "Ssra-Tauroch" is carved into the base of the largest statue.

Area 8: Crypt

Each of these small alcoves, four on the upper floor and four on the lower floor, contains a single ornate sarcophagus either set upright on end or lying on a granite slab. The sarcophagi are empty unless you opt for an optional encounter on one or both of the floors.

Optional: Sleeping Mummies

Level 17 Encounter (XP 8,000)

✦ 4 yuan-ti abomination mummy lords (level 14 elite controller, see below)

Disturbing a sarcophagus awakens the mummified yuan-ti within it. Three other mummy lords in the crypts on the same floor awaken at the same time. All three of the additional mummy lords quickly move toward the opened sarcophagus to fight the PCs.

Area 9: Sandy Vestibule

The double doors on the north side of this chamber are broken and can be opened by simply pulling on them. When they are opened, one of the doors falls out of its frame to land heavily within the vestibule, giving off a deep boom that echoes throughout the structure.

When the PCs enter this area, read:
Narrow, waist-high vertical slits along the western wall permit swirling winds and stinging sand access to the chamber. The floor is covered in sand several inches deep.

Iron Door: The eastern door leading deeper into the mausoleum is an iron door. The door is warded with an Arcane Lock ritual. It can be opened by a Knock ritual or a successful DC 35 Thievery check or Strength check.

Area 10: Antechamber

When the PCs enter this chamber, read:
The walls in the antechamber are bare stone. The large double doors to the east are carved intricately with snakes.

Area 11: Well of Serpents

Hundreds of mundane desert serpents writhe and slither across the floor here. The snakes are of all shapes and sizes. Beneath them, a colorful mosaic depicts a magnificent serpent.

Area 12: Embalming Room

When the PCs enter this chamber, read:
Shelves are carved into this room's stone walls. Broken clay and stone urns and a few gilded tools gather dust and cobwebs on the shelves. A slightly inclined stone table dominates the center of the room.

Area 13: Gloom Grotto

This small natural chamber is connected to one of the small crypts (Area 8). A narrow tunnel leads away from it, eventually connecting with two final areas.

Perception Check
DC 25: A faint seam glimmers in the western wall, disclosing the existence of a secret door.

When the PCs open the secret door and enter this area, read:
An excavated tunnel leads away from the side of the cavern.

Area 14: Catacomb Chamber

Stalactites and stalagmites fill this natural chamber. The perimeter of the chamber is lined with the skulls of many creatures, stacked haphazardly. Several areas have collapsed, leaving skulls strewn on the ground. Plaster frescos once covered the walls, but they are now so cracked and worn that it's impossible to tell what they once depicted.

Optional: All the King's Men

Level 18 Encounter (XP 9,600)

- ✦ 1 yuan-ti malison disciple of Zehir (level 17 controller, MM 270)
- ✦ 2 bodak reavers (level 18 soldier, MM 36)
- ✦ 2 slaughter wights (level 18 brute, MM 263)

If you choose to run this optional encounter, Ssra-Tauroch does not wait for the PCs to walk into his sepulcher. He sends a troop of guardians out to harry the adventurers, intercepting them either in Area 14 or in the small chamber to the south of that area.

Area 15: Crypt of Ssra-Tauroch (Level 19)

When the PCs enter this area, read:
An ornate throne rests upon a raised, curved dais. A mummified creature sits on the throne. Flanking that creature, two undead serpentine humanoids stand at the ready.

The PCs trigger the tactical encounter when they open the crypt's door or are noticed in the room after entering by other means.

Tactical Encounter: "Throne of Ssra-Tauroch," page 94.

Disciples of Zehir

Encounter Level 17 (8,600 XP)

Setup

1 bone naga (N)
2 shadow snakes (S)
1 wrath spirit (W)
1 blackspawn gloomweb (B)

When the PCs enter Area 5, have the players place their miniatures on the board as appropriate for their marching order. Place the bone naga, then provide the read-aloud text.

The shadow snakes, the blackspawn gloomweb, and the wrath spirit begin the encounter hidden. Place these creatures on the map only after they gain a surprise action or the PCs notice them.

When the first adventurer enters the rectory, read:

A bizarre creature is coiled in the northwest corner of the chamber with its head and upper body raised into the air. It looks like a skeletal snake topped with a large human skull with fangs.

This chamber might once have served as living quarters for the temple priests. Rotten, broken furniture is collected into three broken heaps in the room.

Perception Check

DC 13: A malevolent humanoid apparition lurks overhead.
DC 20: Two large, twin-headed black snakes are poised in the east half of the room, hiding within a heap of broken furniture.
DC 25: A six-armed, twin-tailed, dragonlike spider with black scales hangs from the ceiling.

Hiding and Remaining Hidden

When this encounter begins, the wrath spirit and the blackspawn gloomweb are hidden as they lurk near the ceiling, and the shadow snakes are hidden withn one of the piles of furniture. Even if the PCs are carrying a light source that illuminates the immediate area around them, they do not notice the insubstantial and shadowy forms of these creatures unless they succeed on an appropriate Perception check (see the "Setup" section).

If they are not detected initially, these creatures remain hidden until they do something to reveal their presence (in other words, move or attack). Once they have revealed themselves, they cannot become hidden again unless they attempt to do so and also succeed on a Stealth check opposed by each PC's passive Perception check.

Tactics

The bone naga is not surprised by the appearance of the adventurers. In fact, through its wrath spirit servitor, the naga has been kept apprised of the adventurers' expedition through the mausoleum. It has no fear of the PCs and in fact invites them to come forward to engage it.

Round 1: The bone naga positions itself among the PCs before attacking with death sway.

If the characters did not detect them, the shadow snakes, the wrath spirit, and the blackspawn gloomweb begin the first round of combat hidden. The blackspawn readies an action to drop from its height

⨽ Goring Charge (standard; at-will)
The blackspawn gloomweb makes a charge attack: +21 vs. Fortitude; 2d8 + 7 damage, the target is knocked prone, and the blackspawn gloomweb makes a bite attack against the same target.

⨽ Mobile Melee Attack (standard; at-will)
The blackspawn gloomweb can move up to half its speed and make one melee basic attack at any point during that movement. The creature doesn't provoke opportunity attacks when moving away from the target of its attack.

⤙ Acidic Web (standard; at-will) ✦ Acid
Ranged 10; +20 vs. Reflex; the target takes ongoing 10 acid damage and is restrained (save ends both).

Gloom
If the blackspawn gloomweb does not move on its turn, the shadows that constantly swirl around its form settle into a cloudlike mass that grants concealment until the beginning of its next turn.

onto a PC moving beneath it, using its goring charge as it does so.

If the characters did notice any of the other creatures, those creatures enter combat immediately, employing the tactics described for them in the next paragraph.

Round 2: The shadow snakes enter the fray by using shifting shadowstrike. The wrath spirit hurls its exploding head. The blackspawn gloomweb continues to wait for an opportune time to use its goring charge.

Round 3+: The bone naga alternates between its bite and death sway as tactically appropriate. The wrath spirit attacks with keening sword. The shadow snakes use vanish into the night and follow that with their vicious double attacks.

If no PC moves beneath the blackspawn in the first two rounds, it uses acidic web first on foes in range, then drops down and charges. As the encounter goes on, it makes liberal use of mobile melee attack. If it begins its turn adjacent to a single enemy, the creature prefers to make a basic attack and avoid moving so that it can use gloom to give itself concealment.

Features of the Area

Illumination: Darkness.

Secret Stone Door: AC 5, Reflex 5, Fortitude 20; 40 hit points; break Strength DC 25. A secret door (Perception DC 30 to discover) in the north wall leads to the shadow vestry (Area 6).

Broken Furniture Heaps: The piles of broken furniture count as difficult terrain for the characters and the bone naga but not for the other creatures.

Throne of Ssra-Tauroch

Encounter Level 19 (11,600 XP)

Setup

Ssra-Tauroch (S)
2 corrupted yuan-ti malison incanters (Y)
1 Ssra-Tauroch's altar of zealotry trap

The PCs have entered the deepest chamber of the mausoleum, the Crypt of Ssra-Tauroch. Provide the read-aloud text, then place Ssra-Tauroch and the corrupted yuan-ti malison incanters as shown on the map. The area affected by the altar of zealotry is indicated by the dotted lines. If the PCs have some business with Ssra-Tauroch, they can converse—the mummy doesn't attack first, but will attempt to viciously finish any fight once it is begun.

When the adventurers enter this area, read:
The walls of this crypt are covered with glyphs and pictographs. At the far end of the chamber rests a large, elder yuan-ti on an ornate throne that faces a large altar. The yuan-ti is wrapped almost completely in white strips of funeral linen yellowed with age. Two dull-eyed yuan-ti stand on either side of the altar.

Ssra-Tauroch's Altar of Zealotry — Level 15 Lurker
Trap — XP 1,200

A large altar devoted to Zehir is the centerpiece of a trap that attempts to control unbelievers who approach it.

Trap: The trigger area encompasses nearly the entire crypt. It draws its energy from living creatures not devoted to Zehir, and functions only as long as such creatures are within the area it affects.

Perception
No check is required to see the altar.

Additional Skill: Religion
✦ DC 27: The character recognizes the nature of the altar and realizes that the trap can be negated by destroying the altar.

Initiative +6

Trigger
When characters enter the area, the trap activates and rolls initiative. The trap continues its attacks until no living unbelievers remain in the area.

Attack
Standard Action Ranged sight
Target: One random creature within the area not bearing the holy symbol of Zehir
Attack: +19 vs. Will
Hit: The target is dominated by Ssra-Tauroch until the end of the trap's next turn.
Aftereffect: The target is dazed until the end of the trap's next turn.

Countermeasures
✦ A character can attack the altar (AC 26, other defenses 24; hp 125; resist 10 all). Destroying the altar disables the trap.

Ssra-Tauroch (S) — Level 17 Solo Controller

⊕ Scepter of Ssra-Tauroch (standard; at-will) ✦ Poison, Weapon
+22 vs. AC; 1d8 + 9 damage, and the target takes ongoing 10 poison damage (save ends).

Shielding Wallop (standard; recharge ⚄ ⁞⁞⁞) ✦ Poison, Weapon
Ssra-Tauroch makes two scepter of Ssra-Tauroch attacks against the same target. If both attacks hit, the target is also pushed 3 squares and is immobilized (save ends), and Ssra-Tauroch and one adjacent ally gain a +1 power bonus to AC until the end of Ssra-Tauroch's next turn.

Scaletongue (minor; recharge ⚄ ⁞⁞⁞) ✦ Charm
Ranged 10; +22 vs. Will; the target is dominated (save ends).
Aftereffect: The target is dazed (save ends).

Curse of Ssra-Tauroch (when first bloodied) ✦ Cold, Necrotic
Close burst 3; +20 vs. Fortitude; 2d4 + 6 necrotic damage, and the target takes ongoing 10 cold damage and is immobilized (save ends both).

Pestilence of Doom (standard; encounter) ✦ Necrotic
Area burst 2 within 10; +20 vs. Fortitude; 3d8 + 9 necrotic damage, and the target takes a -2 penalty to all defenses until the end of Ssra-Tauroch's next turn. Aftereffect: The target contracts level 17 mummy rot (see below).

Mindwarp (standard; at-will) ✦ Psychic
Ranged 20; +22 vs. AC; 2d6 + 7 psychic damage, and the target is dazed (save ends).

Poisoned Domination (standard; recharges when first bloodied) ✦ Charm
Ranged 5; affects a creature taking ongoing poison damage; +20 vs. Will; the target is dominated until the end of the corrupted yuan-ti malison incanter's next turn. Aftereffect: The target is dazed (save ends).

Zehir's Venom (standard; recharge ⚅ ⚄ ⚃) ✦ Poison
Ranged 10; affects a creature taking ongoing poison damage; +20 vs. Fortitude; 2d10 + 6 poison damage, and the target is dazed (save ends).

Deflect Attack (immediate interrupt, when hit by an attack; recharge ⚄ ⚃)
The corrupted yuan-ti malison incanter transfers the attack's damage and effects to an adjacent ally.

Slither Away
While bloodied, the corrupted yuan-ti malison incanter gains +2 speed and a +5 bonus to all defenses.

Alignment Evil Languages Common, Draconic

Str 16 (+10) Dex 22 (+13) Wis 22 (+13)
Con 22 (+13) Int 25 (+14) Cha 25 (+14)

Tactics

Ssra-Tauroch has no contingency plan for escape. If the PCs make it to his crypt and defeat him, he is resigned to that fate. However, Ssra-Tauroch has no desire to pass on to the halls of Zehir without a fight. The mummy lord is an intelligent strategist, employing the best possible tactics against his enemies.

Ssra-Tauroch and his lieutenants focus their attacks on PCs who are not already dominated because of the trap. Because all three of these creatures also have abilities that make their victims dominated, the characters might have a hard time making headway against their enemies until after they disable the trap.

Round 1+: Ssra-Tauroch opens combat with scaletongue, followed by pestilence of doom targeted to catch the largest number of characters. When forced into melee or if his scaletongue has not recharged, he engages in melee with shielding wallop and his scepter of Sraa-Tauroch.

The corrupted yuan-ti malison incanters remain at Ssra-Tauroch's side, attacking with mindwarp until the PCs move into melee range. At that point, they interpose themselves between the PCs and Ssra-Tauroch, using their bite attacks, and then follow with Zehir's venom and poisoned domination when possible, targeting adventurers who are taking ongoing poison damage caused by their or Ssra-Tauroch's powers.

Features of the Area

Illumination: Darkness.

Dais: The altar and Ssra-Tauroch's throne are situated on a platform 5 feet above the floor of the rest of the crypt. Creatures on the dais have combat advantage against those on the lower floor. Ascending or descending from the dais costs 1 extra square of movement.

Treasure: Ssra-Tauroch begins the encounter sitting on a large, ornate throne (15,000 gp art object). The throne is a rectangular wooden bench with arms crafted of mithral and gold and encrusted with ten fire opals and a large ruby.

Mummy Rot Level 17 Disease Endurance improve DC 26, maintain DC 21, worsen DC 20 or lower

The target is cured.

◀ Initial Effect: The target regains only half the normal number of hit points from healing effects.

◀▶ The target regains only half the normal number of hit points from healing effects. In addition, the target takes 10 necrotic damage, which cannot be healed until the target is cured of the disease.

▶ Final State: The target dies.

KRAVENGHAST NECROPOLIS

A lair for five 19th-level adventurers

Kravenghast Necropolis is hidden in a valley that was formerly part of a now-dead city. It consists of a small cemetery that sits atop an abandoned necromancer's laboratory. The necropolis has been refitted as a temple to Vecna, the undead god of secrets. The mausoleum in the cemetery contains a secret spiral staircase that leads to the underground laboratory. The temple is populated by a twisted cult of Vecna, led by the lich-priest Mauthereign.

For more information about the cult and Mauthereign's beliefs and goals, see "The Scroll of Mauthereign" on page 215 and the entry for Vecna on page 212.

Background

History DC 22: A decade ago, evil humans inhabited the valley where the cemetery of Kravenghast Necropolis now stands. Obsessed with death, the people performed living sacrifices on the tops of the mountains that frame both ends of the valley. They buried the mangled remains of the sacrifices in unhallowed graves in a central cemetery. Over time, the sacrifice victims rose as undead, though they were confined to the place of their burial.

History DC 27: The evil humans answered to a necromancer named Kravenghast. Kravenghast used rituals to bind the undead of the graveyard to his purposes. He built an arcane laboratory under the cemetery to house his experiments and his acolytes. The self-reinforcing energies of his experiments mixed with the unliving influence of the walking undead above, creating a location ideal for the study of death. Few places in the world were as sodden with necromantic influence as the valley, its central cemetery, and what lay below. Over time, the central cemetery spread out, and the homes of the living were turned into crypts of the dead. Finally, no living creatures remained in the valley. When Kravenghast went missing, the entire place passed out of civilized knowledge.

History DC 29: Five years ago, a priest of Vecna named Mauthereign found the necropolis, which had become overgrown by the resurging grasses and foliage of the mountain valley. He uncovered the heart of the cemetery and bound the undead that yet lingered there, many of which had only grown in power with their age and proximity to that which lay below. Mauthereign, a lich, attracted followers who serve him in his crazed worship of the Lord of Secrets, Vecna.

Hook: Punish the Butchers

Strange reports of monsters appearing in the night have spread far and wide. The monsters seize commoners and maim and blind them. Multiple sightings imply that these hauntings originate from the dreary valley to the east, a blighted land with an ugly history.

The adventurers come upon or are presented with maimed and blinded villagers, some missing a limb, others one eye, and more than a few dead in the bargain from shock and blood loss. Evidence suggests that the agents responsible for these reprehensible actions might lie as close as the next valley over.

Environment

Kravenghast Necropolis is situated in the center of a valley flanked by two high mountains. The region around the necropolis for several hundred feet is blighted by rampant necromantic energy leaking from that which shelters beneath its weathered grave markers.

The following traits exist within the area of the cemetery, the mausoleum, and the underground complex:

- The DCs of all Heal checks increase by 2.
- Powers that have the radiant keyword take a –1 penalty to the attack roll.
- Powers that have the fear keyword gain a +1 bonus to the attack roll.
- Sources of bright illumination (such as lanterns or torches), whether mundane or magical, have their radiuses halved and their intensity reduced to dim.

As the adventurers approach the cemetery, read:
This ancient, partially overgrown cemetery sits at the bottom of a bleak valley. The heart of the graveyard is ringed by a rusted but still functional iron fence topped with sharp spikes.

The area around the graveyard is blighted and twisted. Plants are withered, animals are sickly, and carcasses litter the ground. Ruined bits of rock and a sculpture peek out here and there among the long tufts of stringy brown grass, thorny vines, and tough bushes. Some sickly splotches of electric yellow-green leaves and intense purple flowers that belong to an odd strain of wild thistles serve as a contrast to the otherwise gray-green and brown foliage.

Area 1: The Graveyard (Level 19)

Before the characters can confront the occupants of the mausoleum and what lies beneath it, they must deal with the creatures that prowl among the gravestones.

Arrange for the PCs to approach the heart of the graveyard from the northwest or northeast, so that they can get over the fence without immediately attracting the attention of the monsters that await. The rusted iron fence presents no real obstacle, but each character must spend a standard action to get over the fence in either direction.

When the characters get over the fence and are all in the graveyard, read:
From what you can see, the fenced-in area is dotted with a large number of graves. In the center of this area is a rectangular building that looks like an enormous above-ground crypt.

The PCs trigger the tactical encounter when any of them move to within 2 squares of the building or within 2 squares of one of the undead guardians.

Tactical Encounter: "The Necropolis," page 98.

Area 2: The Mausoleum (Level 15 or Level 19)

Inside the rectangular building, the characters face a two-stage encounter. They trigger the tactical encounter when one of them moves through the archway on the south wall and into the structure.

Tactical Encounter: "The Mausolem," page 100.

Area 3: Sanctuary and Shrine (Level 21)

In the climactic encounter of their mission, the characters confront a lich they might have been expecting and another one they certainly did not anticipate. The tactical encounter begins when one PC descends the spiral staircase and emerges into the central chamber.

Tactical Encounter: "Sanctuary and Pool," page 102.

The Necropolis

Encounter Level 19 (11,200 XP)

Setup

2 slaughter wights (S)
2 sword wraiths (W)
2 nabassu gargoyles (G)

Two slaughter wights, two sword wraiths, and two nabassu gargoyles stalk the graves in the overgrown cemetery, waiting for any of the living to invade their territory. None of the creatures is initially visible while the adventurers remain outside the fence. The sword wraiths are using their phasing ability, and the slaughter wights and nabassu gargoyles are hiding within the high grass, which provides total concealment.

If any of the PCs investigates the gravestones, read:

A casual perusal of the headstone inscriptions reveals them to be worn and faded to the point that most are unreadable. Those that are decipherable bear the name of the occupant and the words "Death is a doorway" or minor variations on that message.

The undead begin their attack when one or more of the characters move to within 2 squares of the mausoleum in the graveyard's center, or when any character moves to within 2 squares of one of the monsters. Roll initiative.

+20 vs. Reflex; 2d8 + 7 necrotic damage, and the target is weakened (save ends).

⨽ Death Strike (when reduced to 0 hit points) ✦ Necrotic
The sword wraith shifts up to 4 squares and makes a melee basic attack, dealing 2d8 extra necrotic damage on a hit.

Combat Advantage ✦ Necrotic
A sword wraith deals 2d6 extra necrotic damage against any target it has combat advantage against.

Shadow Glide (move; encounter)
The sword wraith shifts up to 6 squares.

Spawn Wraith
Any humanoid killed by a sword wraith rises as a free-willed sword wraith at the start of its creator's next turn, appearing in the space where it died (or in the nearest unoccupied space). Raising the slain creature (using the Raise Dead ritual) does not destroy the spawned wraith.

Tactics

The wights attack head-on, but the gargoyles and the wraiths use stealth and hit-and-run tactics, attempting to keep the PCs off balance.

Round 1: Slaughter wights revel in combat, and those wandering among the gravestones are no different. When the undead become aware of the PCs, the wights charge toward the nearest target, taking as direct a path as possible between the headstones, and bring their claw attacks to bear. If they have a choice of targets, they try to focus their claw attacks on foes who have little or no armor.

Using stone form, the nabassu gargoyles pretend to be statues until the slaughter wights attack the PCs. Then they fly into battle, closing to melee with their claws and hoping to affect wounded enemies with their bloodfire gaze. Each of them uses savage bite against the first PC that succumbs to its aura.

The sword wraiths lurk in the shadows, waiting to prey on enemies that attempt to hide or stay away from the wights. When the opportunity arises, they try to flank PCs to gain combat advantage while stabbing with their shadow swords.

Round 2+: When one of the wights is destroyed, it gives voice to a death wail that deals necrotic damage to the PCs but also gives nearby undead allies within 5 squares a basic attack as a free action against adjacent PCs. The other wight and the gargoyles fight to the death—and they will pursue characters who enter the mausoleum (Area 2) before dealing with them.

If a sword wraith is bloodied, it turns tail, phasing into the ground.

Features of the Area

Illumination: Dim light (even during daylight hours, a strange gloom suffuses the area).

Graves: The graves depicted on the map are ones that have disgorged their contents in the form of undead. The earth in these spots is soft and counts as difficult terrain. The gravestones are not large enough to impede movement or provide cover.

If any industrious character decides to dig down into a grave, that act requires 5 minutes per grave and the use of some sort of digging tool. (A sword or an axe works in a pinch.) The first excavation uncovers a scroll tube containing a Speak with Dead ritual scroll. For each other grave excavated, roll 1d8 and refer to the following table, but cross off items 4 through 8 after they are discovered.

GRAVE GOODS

| d8 | Item Found |
|---|---|
| 1 | Nothing |
| 2 | Empty pine coffin |
| 3 | Empty iron coffin |
| 4 | Iron coffin containing a ruby chess set (500 gp) |
| 5 | Sarcophagus containing a gold hourglass (300 gp) |
| 6 | Iron coffin containing an iron ring of the dwarf lords (21,000 gp) or an item from a character's magic item wish list (DMG 125) |
| 7 | Sarcophagus containing an emerald bracelet (200 gp) |
| 8 | Pine coffin containing crystal chimes (600 gp) |

Mausoleum: The building in the center of the graveyard is described in the following tactical encounter.

The Mausoleum

Encounter Level 15 (6,000 XP)
(if the PCs are victorious in the skill challenge)
or
Encounter Level 19 (12,000 XP)
(if the PCs defeat Kravenghast in combat)

Setup

Vecna's Revenge trap
Kravenghast (K)

The mausoleum is divided into two areas: the entrance foyer and the crypt. The crypt is located behind the double doors on the western wall of the foyer. The entrance foyer is a trap, and the wraith Kravenghast waits in the crypt beyond.

Entrance Foyer

The foyer is entered through an archway in the south. Four statues, one in each corner of the foyer, wait to loose a deadly trap.

When the adventurers enter the entrance foyer, read:
This dimly lit chamber is lined with ossuary shelves except along the western wall, which contains great bronze double doors. Each of the four corners of the room holds a statue of a humanoid lich.

Religion Check
DC 30: The lich depicted in the sculptures reminds you of likenesses of Vecna you have seen, but each statue has all its limbs and eyes.

Secret Door (Trapdoor): The foyer contains a secret trapdoor near the center of the room (see Features of the Area).

Crypt

The doors opening onto the crypt are locked, and require a successful DC 31 Thievery check or Strength check, or a successful Knock ritual, to open.

| Vecna's Revenge Trap | Level 18 Elite Blaster 4,000 XP |
|---|---|

The left arm of each these four statues is outstretched, pointing to the center of the room. The four statues pulse, releasing a life-sucking bolt of fell energy.

Trap: The trigger area of the trap is the entire foyer. When a living creature enters the foyer or ends its turn in the foyer, the statue closest to that creature releases a ray of necrotic energy that attacks the target.

Perception
✦ DC 27: The statues have a faint aura of shadowy energy.

Additional Skill: Arcana
✦ DC 30: The character recognizes the trap as one used by some death cultists.

Trigger
When a living creature enters the foyer or remains within the foyer at the end of its turn, the trap is triggered, hitting that target with necrotic energy. The trap can trigger multiple times in one round, once for each time a living creature enters the room or ends its turn there.

Attack ✦ Necrotic
Immediate Reaction or Opportunity Action Ranged 5
Target: Living creature within the room
Attack: +22 vs. Fortitude
Hit: 2d10 + 5 necrotic damage, and ongoing 10 necrotic damage (save ends).
Miss: Half damage

Countermeasures
✦ A character adjacent to one of the statues can disable the trap with a successful DC 30 Thievery check.

This chamber holds the worldly remains of Kravenghast, the original necromancer who created the surrounding cemetery.

When the adventurers enter the crypt, read:
The shadowy, ever-shifting spectral form of a humanoid floats above the ground between two sarcophagi.

Religion Check
DC 25: The figure pauses as if intending to speak, but seems unable to find its tongue. Perhaps a Speak with Dead ritual would give it the voice it desires to communicate.

The PCs can try to converse with Kravenghast's wraith. If they perform a Speak with Dead ritual, they can convince Kravenghast to tell his story if they achieve victory in a skill challenge.

Confer with Kravenghast Level 18
Skill Challenge XP 2,000

The transparent, shadowy humanoid form speaks. "I am Kravenghast. Tell my why I should share the secrets of my life with you."

To learn what Kravenghast knows, you must give it a reason to help you.
Complexity 1 (requires 4 successes before 3 failures)
Primary Skills Bluff, Diplomacy, Insight
Victory Kravenghast describes all the information provided under the Background section on page 96. If asked, he describes how, as he was preparing to become a lich, death found him when he fell from a great height while climbing one of the peaks over the valley—a simple accident. Kravenghast also indicates where the PCs can find the secret trapdoor into the lower temple, which (as he informs them) has been converted to a temple of Vecna by the priest Mauthereign.
Defeat Kravenghast answers no questions and attacks the party.
Bluff DC 27 (1 success, no maximum successes).
A character who succeeds on this check feigns some connection with Kravenghast, or convinces him that the character is an admirer of his work and deeds.
Diplomacy DC 22 (1 success, no maximum successes).
A character who succeeds on this check uses courtesy to flatter Kravenghast.
Insight DC 27 (1 success, no maximum successes).
Failure on this check triggers a psychic feedback, and the PC takes a -2 penalty to saves until the PC takes an extended rest. Failing this check also ends the skill challenge in defeat.
A character who succeeds on this check feels Kravenghast's emotional ruin and uses this understanding to befriend him.

Tactics

If it comes to a fight, Kravenghast fights directly but intelligently.

Round 1+: Kravenghast charges the largest PC, seeking to wither the target with his decomposing touch. He uses his shadowdrain ray on a weaker-looking target. In later rounds, Kravenghast continues to focus on the same PCs with similar tactics unless they prove resistant or another PC takes actions too dangerous to ignore.

Features of the Area

Illumination: Darkness or dim light (see page 96).

Sarcophagi: The two sarcophagi in the crypt can be opened easily. They appear to be empty of all but dust at first glance. However, a successful DC 31 Perception check involving the southern one reveals that it has a false bottom.

Treasure: Below the false bottom is 3,300 gp, 35 pp, 1,000 gp worth of residuum in a ceramic vial, 1,000 gp worth of gems, and a +4 orb of inevitable continuance (85,000 gp).

Statues: These four statues comprise the Vecna's Revenge trap and form the corners of the trap's area.

Secret Door (Trapdoor): The entrance foyer has a secret trapdoor near the center of the room. A successful DC 29 Perception check reveals the trapdoor, which hides a secret spiral staircase that leads to the sanctuary in Area 3.

Kravenghast (K) Level 17 Solo Lurker

Action Points 2

⊕ Decomposing Touch (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
+22 vs. Reflex; 2d8 + 5 necrotic damage, and the target takes ongoing 10 necrotic damage (save ends). While taking this ongoing damage, the target cannot spend healing surges.

↯ Deadly Reaction (immediate interrupt, when an enemy moves to a position where it flanks Kravenghast; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
Kravenghast attacks the enemy with his decomposing touch. If the attack hits, he can make another decomposing touch attack against another creature he is adjacent to.

➢ Shadowdrain Ray (minor; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
Ranged 10; +22 vs. Reflex; 2d8 + 6 necrotic damage, and the target is weakened (save ends).

Combat Advantage ✦ Necrotic
Kravenghast deals 2d6 extra necrotic damage against any target he has combat advantage against.

Kravenghast's Evasion
When an area or close attack targeting AC, Fortitude, or Will misses Kravenghast but deals damage on a miss, Kravenghast takes no damage from the attack.

Shadow Glide (move; encounter)
Kravenghast shifts up to 6 squares.

Second Wind (standard, encounter) ✦ Healing
Kravenghast spends a healing surge and regains 140 hit points. He gains a +2 bonus to all defenses until the start of his next turn.

Demesne
Kravenghast is aware of all that goes on in the mausoleum. While within, he cannot be surprised and does not grant combat advantage. He knows the location and appearance of all creatures in the area.

Binding
If Kravenghast is forced to leave the mausoleum (through forced movement or a compulsion), he suffers excruciating pain. Each round that he spends outside the mausoleum, he takes 2d6 damage, and his regeneration doesn't function until the end of his next turn. If he is reduced to 0 hit points because of this damage, he reforms in the mausoleum 1d6 days later. He can be permanently killed only by damage from living creatures.

Spawn Wraith
Any humanoid killed by Kravenghast rises as a free-willed sword wraith at the start of Kravenghast's next turn, appearing in the space where it died (or in the nearest unoccupied space). Raising the slain creature (using the Raise Dead ritual) does not destroy the spawned wraith.

Sanctuary and Pool

Encounter Level 21 (16,000 XP)

Setup

Mauthereign (M)
4 undead Vecna cultists (C)
Pavan, aboleth overseer lich (P)

This shrine of Vecna is broken up into three rooms: a sanctuary (the center room), Mauthereign's ritual chamber (to the west), and a bathing chamber (to the east) used by an aboleth lich that calls itself Pavan. The spiral staircase from the mausolem opens onto the southern section of the sanctuary.

Sanctuary

When the adventurers descend into the sanctuary, read:

This chamber is filled with low pews of dusty stone arranged in rows and an altar toward the north. The area is suffused by a dim glow that seems to emanate from small side chambers to the north and south.

Ritual Chamber

When the adventurers move west into the ritual chamber, read:

A one-armed, one-eyed human skeletal figure stands chanting before a large engraved circle inscribed in the northwest corner of the floor of an opulent bedchamber. Prostrated around the chamber are four undead humanoids.

Mauthereign, the lich that is the skeletal figure, continues his ceremony until he becomes aware of the characters. Once the PCs are noticed, Mauthereign and the undead Vecna cultists attack. Roll initiative.

Mauthereign (M) Level 18 Elite Controller
Human lich
Medium natural humanoid (undead) XP 4,000

Initiative +11 Senses Perception +18; darkvision
Necromantic Aura (Necrotic) aura 5; any living creature that enters the aura or starts its turn within the aura takes 5 necrotic damage.

⊛ Lash of Grazroblain (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
Ranged 10; +24 vs. Reflex; 3d6 + 5 necrotic damage, and the target is dazed until the end of Mauthereign's next turn.

⸸ Wither (standard; recharge ⚄ ⚅) ✦ Necrotic
+21 vs. Reflex; 4d6 + 5 necrotic damage, and the target takes ongoing 10 necrotic damage and is slowed (save ends both).
Aftereffect: The target is slowed until it takes an extended rest, it is the subject of a Remove Affliction ritual, or Mauthereign is slain (whichever occurs first).

✧ Stunning Escape (standard; daily) ✦ Teleportation
Close burst 1; +21 vs. Fortitude; the target is stunned until the end of Mauthereign's next turn, and Mauthereign teleports up to 10 squares.

Indestructible
When Mauthereign is reduced to 0 hit points, his body and possessions fall into dust, but he is not destroyed. He reappears, along with his possessions, within 1 square of his phylactery (an amulet hidden under the bed in his ritual chamber) 1d10 days later.

Bathing Chamber

When the adventurers look into the bathing chamber, read:

An enormous pool fills an opening carved from the surrounding rock.

Pavan remains submerged until one of the PCs enters the bathing pool or it is otherwise disturbed.

Tactics

As soon as he takes any damage, Mauthereign tries to make a fighting retreat toward the pool, ordering the cultists to block and impede the characters so that he can escape. Once he gets to the pool, he gains the aid of the aboleth lich Pavan.

Pavan begins combat on the surface of the pool. It remains at least 1 square from the edge of the pool at all times, but it is still able to use its attacks against enemies in the pool or in any of the squares adjacent to the pool. When characters enter the pool, use the rules for aquatic combat (DMG 45). If Pavan is bloodied, it descends to the bottom of the pool, trying to force PCs to come after it and (it hopes) fight at a disadvantage when they are underwater.

Features of the Area

Illumination: Darkness or dim light (see page 96 and below).

Bed: The ritual chamber contains a bed (of no real use to Mauthereign) that provides cover. A creature that hops up onto the bed (using 1 square of movement) has combat advantage on melee attacks against other creatures adjacent to the bed. The other furnishings in the room (the rug and the small chests) have no effect on combat.

Teleportation Circle: The circle in the northwest corner of the ritual chamber can serve as the origin point of a Linked Portal, Planar Portal, or True Portal ritual, as you see fit.

Pews and Altar: The furnishings in the sanctuary are not tall enough to provide cover. A creature must squeeze to move through a square partially occupied by one or more of these features.

Statues: The four statues in the alcoves give off dim light that illuminates the sanctuary but does not extend into the ritual chamber or the pool. The statues are otherwise not remarkable.

Pool: The pool is 20 feet deep. It is filled with murky, dark water. A character who descends at least 10 feet into the pool notices a softly glowing gem near the center of the pool on the bottom. A successful DC 33 Arcana check or Religion check identifies the gem as Pavan's phylactery.

Close burst 1; +20 vs. AC; 1d8 + 8 necrotic damage (3d8 + 8 damage against dazed targets), and the target is dazed (save ends).

Psychic Slime (standard; encounter; recharges when first bloodied) ✦ Psychic
Close burst 10; targets enemies; +20 vs. Will; 2d8 + 8 psychic damage, and the target is dazed (save ends).

Dominate (minor; at-will) ✦ Charm
Ranged 10; targets a dazed humanoid; +20 vs. Will; the target is dominated (save ends). Pavan can dominate only one creature at a time.

Enslave (standard; at-will) ✦ Charm, Psychic
Ranged 5; targets a dominated creature; +20 vs. Will; 6d8 + 8 psychic damage. A target reduced to 0 hit points or fewer by this attack doesn't die but becomes enslaved in preparation for the Aboleth Servitor ritual. Enslaved targets are dominated, and only the death of Pavan can end this domination. Once a creature is enslaved, Pavan is free to dominate another creature.

Invisibility (minor; recharge ⚄ ⚅) ✦ Illusion
Pavan and one ally within 10 squares of it turn invisible until the end of Pavan's next turn.

Indestructible

Tower of Zoramadria

A lair for five 23rd-level adventurers

The Tower of Zoramadria is hidden away in the Feywild. The tower is an arcane academy under the tutelage of the lich Parthal. Parthal and his students lead serene lives of study and contemplation, except when they engage in a bout of bloody necromantic research that requires innocent souls as vital components. Parthal has a score to settle, and the Feywild itself might shudder and scream before the lich has had his revenge on those who killed his love.

Background

History DC 16: Like many novice eladrin mages, the wizard Parthal had dreams of unraveling the loftiest secrets of magic. He wished to commune with the forces that weave together the mysteries of magic and the cosmos. He dared much, and gained more in the process, despite his young age and relatively meager experience. On the trail of a promising arcane lead, Parthal disappeared one day. He was never seen in the world again. In a diary scroll left behind, Parthal explained that he was "ascending to a higher plane to learn the ultimate Art at the feet of the Teacher."

History DC 24: The eladrin warlock Zoramadria the Teacher was exiled from the fey city of her birth for performing rituals that breached the barriers between the Feywild and the Shadowfell. She was performing just such a ritual in the confines of her tower when the nobles of her home city descended upon her. Forewarned, she collapsed the space around her tower, transferring it and all her students in one fell swoop to a far corner of the Feywild. One of her newest students, Parthal, was instrumental in accomplishing the tower's movement.

History DC 29: When the Tower of Zoramadria was moved across the Feywild through a ritual, the life force of many of its inhabitants was drained off to power that ritual. Many of Zoramadria's students that escaped permanent destruction did so only by embracing undeath. Unfortunately for Zoramadria, the strain of the ritual was too much, and her soul shattered, leaving the heartbroken Parthal and her other students, some newly birthed to unlife, to their own devices. Zoromadria cursed the city of her birth upon her death, and her ghostly invective against that fair place yet whispers through the many halls and chambers of her tower.

History DC 31: Parthal has grown in power and taken on new students over the decades. His goals have shifted from when he was a young, living wizard. Instead of knowledge for its own sake, Parthal now seeks vengeance. He wants to wreak terrible retribution on the city whose attack slew Zoromadria.

Hook: The Vanished

Eladrin have been vanishing from a fey city that the PCs are connected with (or have traveled to). Some of the missing are innocent children, and others are powerful lords. Divinatory rituals to find the vanished have unearthed only the name "Zoramadria." Bereft parents and concerned noble families have posted rewards for information on Zoramadria. They want to find out what has happened. Why are their loved ones missing? Where have they vanished to? Can they be brought back home safely?

Environment

The Tower of Zoramadria is hidden in a great Feywild canyon where three rivers drop torrents of water into a central basin. The resultant spray hides a pale tower that sits on an outcropping in the center of the basin.

- The entrance to the tower is a triangular opening on the south side. The spray that falls constantly on the tower makes visually finding the entrance difficult. A successful DC 24 Perception check while searching the outside wall of the tower allows a PC to locate the opening.
- The tower is not only invisible to easy visual identification, but also concealed from various forms of arcane scrying and divination by a permanent Forbiddance ritual (Player's Handbook, page 305) that envelops it.
- The tower has six floors. Three are barren shells, and the three others are in use. The majority of Parthal's students and servants (and all of the vanished eladrin mentioned in the hook above) have been expended in the build-up to his final revenge ritual. The empty levels are not depicted on the map.
- Ladders connect the floors of the tower. Each ladder is 2 squares wide, meaning that two Small or Medium creatures can ascend or descend a ladder at the same time. The hole into which a ladder extends is 2 squares by 2 squares.
- Each of the floors in use is sealed off from the adjacent floor or floors by a trapdoor. Each of these trapdoors is sealed by an Arcane Lock ritual (DC 29 Thievery or Strength check, or a successful Knock ritual, to open). When a trapdoor is opened, it slides to the south into a slot cut into the surface of the floor/ceiling, leaving behind an oblong hole.
- The ceiling of each floor (including the empty ones) is 10 feet in height.
- Because each ladder extends from floor to ceiling, it prevents a creature in a space north of the ladder from being pushed into the hole. Creatures adjacent to the hole in other squares, however, can be pushed into the hole and are subject to falling damage in such a case.

- Floor One and Floor Two are bathed in dim light from glowing orbs embedded in the tower walls. (These light sources cannot be removed or otherwise affected.) Floor Three is brightly lit because of the skylight that serves as its ceiling—unless the characters enter this area at night, in which case it is dark.

When the adventurers approach the tower, read:
Three rivers drop vast waves of water into a central basin in this great canyon. The spray from this massive combined waterfall hides most of the area. When you focus intently, you see glimpses of an outcropping in the center of the canyon upon which a pale tower is built. The tower is there when the spray thins briefly, but gone again when it thickens.

When the PCs move through the entrance, read:
You are in a dark chamber devoid of any features except for minor debris and a wide ladder stretching from floor to ceiling just north of the center of the room.

Floor One: Classroom

When the characters move adjacent to the ladder and look up (or if they just start climbing), they quickly notice the trapdoor that blocks access to the area above them. After they open the door, they get no inkling of what awaits them in the chamber above until they climb up far enough to enter the room.

Tactical Encounter: "Scrying Students," page 106.

Floor Two: Residence

After the PCs open the trapdoor in the ceiling of Floor One, they see another darkened chamber identical to the one at the bottom of the tower. Climbing the ladder and opening yet another trapdoor puts them in position to enter the next encounter area.

Tactical Encounter: "Chamber of Eternal Sleep," page 108.

Floor Three: Parthal's Study

Accessing the top floor is done in the same way as on the floors beneath.

Tactical Encounter: "Observatory Sanctorum," page 110.

Scrying Students

Encounter Level 24 (30,600 XP)

Setup

Leglanth (L)
Yargo (Y)
8 abyssal ghoul myrmidons (G)

Upon opening the trapdoor, PCs see another ladder leading to a trapdoor positioned in the same relative position in the ceiling above them.

Leglanth and Yargo, a pair of aspiring celebrants to Parthal's power, are in this chamber when the characters arrive. Normally, these two eladrin wizards spend their hours meditating in the leather chairs or viewing distant vistas in the scrying basin. However, Parthal has learned of the imminent arrival of intruders in his structure (see the description of the skylight in Features of the Area in "Observatory Sanctum," page 110), and Leglanth and Yargo are prepared to fend off the adventurers.

The eladrin command eight abyssal ghoul myrmidons. Leglanth and Yargo believe that they and their ghoul minions are sufficient to the task of putting down any invading force.

Place the occupants of this floor on the map, then have the players locate their miniatures in any of the squares adjacent to the hole. Provide the read-aloud text, then roll initiative.

When the adventurers enter the chamber, read:
This tower chamber holds comfortable leather chairs, a table, and a scrying basin. Standing as if waiting for intruders are eight slavering undead humanoids with gruesome black claws and two eladrin males in umber robes.

Leglanth (L) and Yargo (Y) Level 23 Elite Artillery
Medium fey humanoid, eladrin XP 10,200 each

Initiative +14 Senses Perception +16; low-light vision
HP 316; Bloodied 158
AC 37; Fortitude 34, Reflex 35, Will 36
Saving Throws +2 (+7 against charm effects)
Speed 6
Action Points 1

⊕ Staff (standard; at-will) ✦ Weapon
+25 vs. AC; 1d8 + 5 damage.

Chain Lightning (standard; recharge ⚄ ⚅) ✦ Lightning
Ranged 20; +28 vs. Reflex; 4d6 + 12 lightning damage. Secondary Targets: Two creatures within 5 squares of the primary target; +28 vs. Reflex; 2d6 + 12 damage. Tertiary Targets: All other enemies within 20 squares of the caster; +28 vs. Reflex; 1d6 + 12 lightning damage.

Disintegrate (standard; daily)
Ranged 10; +28 vs. Reflex; 5d10 + 12 damage, and the target takes ongoing 10 damage (save ends). Aftereffect: Ongoing 5 damage (save ends). Miss: 3d10 + 12 damage, and the target takes ongoing 5 damage (save ends).

Force Volley (standard; encounter) ✦ Force
Ranged 20; targets up to three creatures (+4 power bonus to attack roll if targeting one creature); +28 vs. Reflex; 3d6 + 12 force damage, and the target is dazed until the end of the caster's next turn.

Thunderwave (standard; at-will) ✦ Thunder
Close blast 3; +25 vs. Fortitude; 2d6 + 11 thunder damage, and the target is pushed 5 squares.

Blur (minor; daily) ✦ Illusion
Until the end of the encounter, Leglanth or Yargo gains a +2 power bonus to all defenses, and enemies more than 5 squares away from him cannot see him.

Displacement (immediate interrupt, when a ranged or a melee attack hits the caster or one of his allies in range; encounter) ✦ Illusion
Ranged 5; the attacker must reroll the attack roll.

Fey Step (move; encounter) ✦ Teleportation
Leglanth or Yargo teleports up to 5 squares.

Alignment Evil Languages Abyssal, Common, Elven
Skills Arcana +25, History +20, Religion +23
Str 12 (+12) Dex 17 (+14) Wis 20 (+16)

Str 27 (+19) Dex 25 (+18) Wis 18 (+15)
Con 23 (+17) Int 19 (+15) Cha 13 (+12)

Tactics

Both Leglanth and Yargo prefer to fight from a distance, allowing their minions to do the bulk of the melee fighting.

Round 1: Leglanth and Yargo keep to the periphery of the chamber, taking a cautious approach until they ascertain what sort of resistance they are up against. Both take minor actions to use blur on themselves, then chain lightning and disintegrate (with their action points) to quickly damage the PCs as much as possible.

The abyssal ghoul myrmidons are not so cautious. They move toward the intruders, hungering for their flesh.

Round 2+: The eladrin continue to rely on ranged and close attacks as much as possible, using thunderwave at every opportunity once their other powers are expended. If they find themselves cornered, they call upon fey step to get out of immediate trouble.

If any characters remain adjacent to the hole for more than 1 round, the ghouls make bull rush attempts to shove the intruders into the opening and cause them to fall. Otherwise, the ghouls try to create flanking opportunities for each other whenever possible and rely on their claws to immobilize their enemies. The ghouls fight until they are destroyed.

If the eladrin become bloodied, they attempt to escape. Both know that their failure to stop the intruders ruins their chances to be taken into Parthal's confidence. Thus, rather than seek aid, the two try to flee the tower.

The characters can pursue Leglanth and Yargo if the eladrin try to descend the ladder and get out of the tower. If combat continues on the ground level of the tower, use the tactical map provided here—except that the ground level contains no furnishings or light sources.

Features of the Area

Illumination: Dim light (orbs in walls).

Deathly Visions: Anyone who takes a short rest or an extended rest in this chamber is assailed by a variety of horrifying visions of a future filled with death and mayhem. These visions linger after a creature stops resting and leaves the area, giving it a –4 penalty to Will for 1 hour afterward or until all the encounters in this lair have been resolved (whichever comes first).

Leather Chairs: These leather chairs are especially comfortable but otherwise unremarkable. Each chair weighs 100 pounds, occupies a square, and is large enough to provide cover to a creature that is adjacent to it (but not to one sitting in it). If a chair is carted away and sold, it brings 50 gp.

Table: A number of scrolls are scattered across the table, most detailing the procedures for vivisection of various humanoid races and methods to remove organs from a living creature in such a way as to prolong the life of the victim as long as possible.

Treasure: Mixed in with the vivisection scrolls are a ritual scroll of Sending (360 gp) and a ritual scroll of View Location (4,200 gp). Each one can be discovered by a character who succeeds on a DC 30 Perception check.

Scrying Basin: This wide basin is filled with shimmering water through which streams of bubbles flow in complex, eye-catching patterns. Because of the presence of the basin, any creature who attempts to use View Location, View Object, or any other scrying ritual in this chamber gains a +2 bonus to the associated Arcana check.

Chamber of Eternal Sleep

Encounter Level 23 (30,600 XP)

Setup

Kellemor (K)
Przithnee (P)
Loratha (L)

Upon opening the trapdoor in the ceiling of Floor One, PCs see another ladder leading to a trapdoor positioned in the same relative position in the ceiling above them.

Three additional aspirants to Parthal's power reside in this chamber (which serves as the bedchamber for all the remaining students in the Tower of Zoramadria). Like the wizards on Floor One, Kellemor, Przithnee, and Loratha are aware that an attack on the Tower of Zoramadria is ongoing.

Unless the PCs retreat after their fight on Floor One, the three students in this chamber are ready for an attack up the central shaft through the trapdoor.

Place the occupants of this floor on the map, then have the players locate their miniatures in any of the squares adjacent to the hole. Provide the read-aloud text, then roll initiative.

When the adventurers view the chamber, read:
This chamber contains several bierlike sleeping pallets that look in which hundreds of tiny humanoid skulls has been carved. Three eladrin stand in the chamber, alert and eager to deal with intruders.

Kellemor (K) and Przithnee (P) Level 23 Elite Artillery
Medium fey humanoid, eladrin XP 10,200 each

Initiative +14 Senses Perception +16; low-light vision
HP 316; Bloodied 158

+26 vs. AC; 1d8 + 6 damage.

Disintegrate (standard; daily) ✦ Fire
Ranged 10; +28 vs. Reflex; 5d10 + 12 damage, and the target takes ongoing 10 damage (save ends). Aftereffect: Ongoing 5 damage (save ends). Miss: 3d10 + 12 damage, and the target takes ongoing 5 damage (save ends).

Blast of Flame (standard; 2/day) ✦ Fire
Close blast 5; +26 vs. Reflex; 6d8 + 12 fire damage.

Scorching Burst (standard; at-will) ✦ Fire
Area burst 1 within 10; +26 vs. Reflex; 2d6 + 12 fire damage.

Combust (standard; encounter) ✦ Fire
Area burst 2 within 20; +26 vs. Reflex; 5d6 +12 fire damage.

Displacement (immediate interrupt, when a ranged or a melee attack hits the caster or one of his allies in range; encounter) ✦ Illusion
Ranged 5; the attacker must reroll the attack roll.

Irresistible Flame
Kellemor or Przithnee treats his targets' resist fire as 20 lower than normal when determining damage for his attacks.

Fey Step (move; encounter) ✦ Teleportation
Kellemor or Przithnee teleports up to 5 squares.

Alignment Evil Languages Abyssal, Common, Elven
Skills Arcana + 25, History +20, Nature +21, Religion +23
Str 12 (+12) Dex 17 (+14) Wis 20 (+16)
Con 14 (+13) Int 24 (+18) Cha 13 (+12)

Dagger (standard; at-will) ✦ Weapon
+28 vs. AC; 1d4 + 6 damage.

Eyebite (standard; at-will) ✦ Charm, Psychic
Ranged 10; +27 vs. Reflex; 2d6 + 11 psychic damage, and Loratha is invisible to the target until the start of her next turn.

Bewitching Whispers (standard; recharge ⚄ ⚅) ✦ Charm
Ranged 10; +27 vs. Will; until the end of Loratha's next turn, the target treats all creatures as enemies for the purpose of opportunity attacks and must take every opportunity attack possible (with a +5 bonus to the attack roll).

Curse of the Golden Mist (standard; sustain standard; daily) ✦ Charm
Ranged 10; +27 vs. Will; the target loses its next standard action. Loratha must make a new attack roll when she sustains this effect. If the attack misses, the effect ends.

Thirsting Tendrils (standard; encounter) ✦ Healing
Ranged 10; +27 vs. Fortitude; 3d6 + 11 damage, and Loratha can spend a healing surge to regain 113 hit points.

Twofold Curse (minor 1/round; at-will)
Loratha can place her Warlock's Curse on the two nearest enemies she can see. Once per round, when Loratha damages a cursed enemy, she can deal 3d6 extra damage to that target.

Fey Step (move; encounter) ✦ Teleportation
Loratha teleports up to 5 squares.

Infuriating Elusiveness (move; encounter) ✦ Illusion, Teleportation
Loratha becomes invisible and then teleports up to 4 squares. The invisibility lasts until the start of Loratha's next turn.

Warding Blade
When a creature Loratha has cursed makes a melee attack against her, that creature takes 5 damage.

Wings of the Fiend (minor; daily) ✦ Polymorph
Loratha grows wings and gains a fly speed of 6 until the end of the encounter.

Equipment dagger

Tactics

These students do not attempt to flee if bloodied. They fight to the bitter end, neither seeking to run nor aid.

Round 1: All three students lead with their most damaging powers. Kellemor uses disintegrate followed by blast of flame (with his action point). Przithnee also uses disintegrate and then follows that with combust (with his action point). Loratha uses a minor action to grow wings of speed, and follows that with curse of the golden mist and bewitching whispers (with her action point).

Round 2+: The eladrin students use fey step to remain clear of melee combat as long as possible. They continue to use the most potent powers they have remaining until they are defeated.

Features of the Area

Illumination: Dim light (orbs in walls).

Beds: Each stone bed is crafted from tiny humanoid skulls. A thin sheet of linen provides the only hint of comfort on each bed.

Chests: At the foot of each bed is an iron chest. Each chest holds the keepsakes of Parthal's remaining students.

Treasure: The total worth of the valuable items in the chests is 100,000 gp in gold and gems, 50,000 gp worth of residuum, and five ritual books with the following rituals:

- Book One: Corpse Gate (4,200 gp, page 49), Last Sight Vision (100 gp, page 50)
- Book Two: Disenchant Magic Item (360 gp), Enchant Magic Item (175 gp)
- Book Three: Phantom Steed (360 gp)
- Book Four: Shadow Walk (2,600 gp)
- Book Five: Gentle Repose (50 gp), Speak with Dead (360 gp)

Observatory Sanctorum

Encounter Level 25 (37,250 XP)

Setup

Parthal the Archlich (P)
1 dread wraith (W)

Upon opening the trapdoor in the ceiling of Floor Two, PCs see another ladder leading to a trapdoor positioned in the same relative position in the ceiling above them.

Parthal, the lord of the Tower of Zoramadria, waits here. He has been researching a plane-shaking ritual in his observatory sanctorum.

Few things escape his notice beneath the many-colored enchanted skylight. Parthal is well aware of the intruders in his tower. If the PCs have defeated the remaining aspiring students, Parthal knows it. He is ready to engage the PCs.

Place Parthal and the wraith on the map, then have the players locate their miniatures in any of the squares adjacent to the hole. Provide the read-aloud text, then roll initiative.

When the adventurers view the observatory, read:

A majestic floating humanoid in flowing black robes hangs in the air under slanting skylight panes that flow with all the colors of the rainbow and more. Bookcases constructed of humanoid skeletal parts sag under the weight of hoary tomes and scrollcases. The figure, whose head is fleshless, says, "I see you."

Parthal (P) Level 24 Solo Controller
Archlich
Medium fey humanoid, eladrin (undead) XP 30,250

Initiative +14 Senses Perception +14; darkvision
Archlich Aura (Necrotic) aura 5; any living creature that enters the aura or starts its turn within the aura takes 20 necrotic damage.
HP 1,090; Bloodied 545
Regeneration 10 (if Parthal takes radiant damage, regeneration doesn't function until the end of his next turn)
AC 40; Fortitude 37, Reflex 38, Will 39
Immune disease, poison; Resist 20 necrotic
Saving Throws +5 (+10 against charm effects)
Speed 6
Action Points 2

⊕ Death's Touch (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
+30 vs. AC; 2d8 + 10 necrotic damage.

Weakening Rays (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
Ranged 20; targets two enemies within range; +28 vs. Reflex; 3d8 + 14 necrotic damage, and the target is weakened until the end of Parthal's next turn.

Black Lightning (standard; encounter) ✦ Lightning, Necrotic
Ranged 20; +28 vs. Reflex; 4d6 + 14 lightning and necrotic damage. Secondary Targets: Two creatures within 5 squares of the primary target; +28 vs. Reflex; 2d6 + 14 damage. Tertiary Targets: All other enemies within 20 squares of Parthal; +28 vs. Reflex; 1d6 + 14 lightning damage.

Eye of the Archlich (minor; recharge ⚄ ⚅) ✦ Gaze, Necrotic
Ranged 10; +28 vs. Fortitude; 3d8 + 14 necrotic damage, and the target is stunned until the end of Parthal's next turn.

Death Pulse (standard; daily) ✦ Necrotic
Area burst 2 within 20; +28 vs. Reflex; 6d6 + 14 necrotic damage, and the target gains vulnerable 15 necrotic (save ends).

Thunderwave (standard; at-will) ✦ Thunder
Close blast 3; +28 vs. Fortitude; 2d6 + 14 thunder damage, and the target is pushed 2 squares.

Spellmaster (standard; recharge ⚄ ⚅)
Parthal regains the use of an expended encounter power.

Archlich Ambition
Whenever Parthal reduces a creature to 0 or fewer hit points, he regains a spent action point.

Parthal's Step (move; encounter) ✦ Teleportation
Parthal teleports up to 10 squares. Creatures adjacent to Parthal at the start of this move are blinded until the end of Parthal's next turn.

Indestructible
When Parthal is reduced to 0 hit points, his body and possessions crumble into dust, but he is not destroyed. He reappears (along with his possessions) in 1d10 days within 1 square of his phylactery, unless the phylactery is also found and destroyed.

Alignment Evil Languages Common, Elven
Skills Arcana +28, Heal +19, History +28, Insight +19, Nature +19, Religion +26
Str 12 (+13) Dex 15 (+14) Wis 15 (+14)
Con 18 (+16) Int 28 (+21) Cha 24 (+19)
Equipment orb

Dread Wraith (W) Level 25 Lurker
Large shadow humanoid (undead) XP 7,000

Initiative +25 Senses Perception +18; darkvision
Shroud of Night aura 5; bright light within the aura is reduced to dim light, and dim light becomes darkness.
HP 124; Bloodied 62; see also death strike
Regeneration 20 (if a dread wraith takes radiant damage, regeneration doesn't function until the end of its next turn)
AC 37; Fortitude 33, Reflex 37, Will 37
Immune disease, fear, poison; Resist 30 necrotic, insubstantial; Vulnerable 15 radiant (see also regeneration above)
Speed fly 10 (hover); phasing ; see also shadow glide

⊕ Dread Blade (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
Reach 2; +28 vs. Reflex; 2d10 + 9 necrotic damage, and the target is weakened (save ends).

Death Shriek (when reduced to 0 hit points) ✦ Psychic
Close blast 3; targets enemies; +27 vs. Will; 4d6 + 9 psychic damage, and the target is dazed (save ends). Miss: Half damage, and the target is not dazed.

Combat Advantage ✦ Necrotic
A dread wraith deals 3d6 extra necrotic damage against any target it has combat advantage against.

Shadow Glide (move; encounter)
The dread wraith shifts up to 6 squares.

Spawn Wraith
Any humanoid killed by a dread wraith rises as a free-willed dread wraith at the start of its creator's next turn, appearing in the space where it died (or in the nearest unoccupied space). Raising the slain creature (using the Raise Dead ritual) does not destroy the spawned wraith.

Alignment Chaotic evil Languages Common
Skills Stealth +26
Str 18 (+16) Dex 28 (+21) Wis 12 (+13)
Con 20 (+17) Int 14 (+14) Cha 28 (+21)

Tactics

Parthal fights intelligently and viciously until he is destroyed. The dread wraith does so also, since it is bound to Parthal.

Round 1: Parthal starts with eye of the archlich (a minor action) and death pulse to soften up his opponents' resistance to necrotic damage. He follows that up with a ray of weakness at the largest or most heavily armored intruder (with one of his action points).

Round 2+: Parthal uses eye of the archlich again as soon as it recharges. In the meantime, he lets fly with weakening ray, black lightning, and thunderwave depending on the position of his attackers to try to affect the largest number or the most threatening intruders. He does not hesitate to use spellmaster to regain encounter powers, or Parthal's step to gain an advantage in positioning.

The dread wraith flies to advantageous spots, using shroud of night to place its attacks better or to screen attacks on Parthal. It attacks with its dread blade.

Features of the Area

Illumination: Bright light (skylight) or darkness, depending on the time of day.

Library: The library contains hundreds of books on numerous esoteric subjects penned by devils, demons, and mad necromancers of previous eras. The predominant theme of them is apocalyptic cataclysms. Parthal was obviously following several leads in touching off an apocalypse all his own, beginning with the fey city that was the birthplace of Zoramadria.

Treasure: The library also holds these ritual books (one ritual per book): Consult Mystic Sages (1,000 gp), Consult Oracle (9,000 gp), Discern Lies (360 gp), Gravesight (680 gp, page 49), Linked Portal (680 gp), Loremaster's Bargain (65,000 gp), Secret Page (50 gp), Sending (360 gp), Skull Watch (175 gp, page 50), Undead Servitor (360 gp, page 50), and Undead Ward (130 gp, page 50).

Parthal's Diaries: The library houses numerous dairies penned by Parthal through the years. One of these is a slender black tome that serves as Parthal's phylactery. In it, a less insane Parthal describes his love for Zoramadria, how she was wrongfully accused of necromancy by a sinister eladrin noble, and how her death broke Parthal's mind and heart, driving him to the revenge he currently seeks.

Skylight: This fixed window in the ceiling displays a bizarre, hypnotic, and hallucinogenic light show that allows Parthal godlike omniscience when he views its ever-shifting colors. It grants any creature gazing up into it a +2 bonus to any single Intelligence-based skill for the next 24 hours. It also gives that creature a nasty headache and mild nausea.

Temple of Doresain

A lair for five 25th-level adventurers

The entity known as Oreiax is a gruesome, stunted monstrosity born of ancient death. Rescued from an eternity of petrification by Doresain the Ghoul King, Oreiax immediately pledged itself to the Ghoul King's service, and thus indirectly, into Orcus's service. Oreiax, born of stone and death, seeks to glorify Doresain by petrifying the world.

Background

History DC 17: Doresain's palace rises in the center of the White Kingdom. His palace is a defeated primordial named Syvexrae, the Queen of Stone. Except for her face, Syvexrae's body is petrified. The primordial retains a fragment of her ancient power—the power of regeneration. Doresain's throne room rests in the great primordial's hollowed foreskull. Despite the quantities of her flesh consumed daily by Doresain and the hundreds of swarming ghouls that comprise Doresain's Court of Teeth, Syvexrae yet survives, regenerating just enough, year after year.

History DC 26: Syvexrae had a "son" of sorts, before her defeat in the ages before the world cooled. The primordial produced a massive egg filled with all her hate against the deities and the world. She hid the egg away in the world, knowing that in the fullness of time, it would hatch and release a creature of such unrelenting fury that even gods and the pillars of the world would fall before it.

History DC 31: Doresain the Ghoul King found hints of Syvexrae's plans in her deteriorating mind as he fed upon her mind daily. After millennia of collating clues from her mind, Doresain discovered the location of the massive egg in the mortal world. Doresain infused the egg with demonic ichor and necromantic vitality. The child in the egg tore out of the shell ages before his time, emerging as a stunted sliver of the enormous entity he should have been. Doresain named the child Oreiax, from the Abyssal words for "always hungry."

History DC 33: Initially ignorant of his own history, Oreiax declared his eternal service to Doresain. Oreiax created a temple from the hollowed remnants of his petrified birth egg. Eventually, Oreiax learned of his own origin. But instead of railing against Doresain and Orcus, Oreiax was inspired to even greater adulation of the Ghoul King and Orcus, and he declared his fondest desire to be to develop a ritual capable of turning a huge portion of the world into stone, converting its verdant landscape into a stony tomb.

Hook: Destroy the Tharizdun Ritual

The PCs have learned that a strange entity known as Oreiax has discovered an ancient palimpsest containing a fragment of a powerful ritual penned by Tharizdun. Though incomplete, the fragment is still a potent weapon of evil, and much destruction could be wrought with it. Worse, the fragment might be enough for Oreiax to develop the original ritual. Indications are that that ritual might have something to do with the spike of pure evil Tharizdun drove into the Elemental Chaos, creating the Abyss in the process.

Environment

You can set the Temple of Doresain anywhere in the mortal world in an obscure valley. The Temple of Doresain is the massive, hollowed egg that once housed Oreiax's developing form. Oreiax uses it as a temple to his father (Doresain) and to Orcus, and as a place to craft his own plans. Oreiax holds sway over undead servants, demons, and cultists of Orcus who have been directed to follows his orders by Doresain. The temple has a few pervasive properties that are in force throughout it.

- Powers used within the temple that have the fire, acid, and necrotic keywords gain a +1 bonus to the attack roll.
- The first time a creature other than an undead creature or a demon is bloodied during an encounter, it is slowed (save ends). If the target fails its first saving throw against being slowed, the target is restrained (save ends). If the target fails its first saving throw against being restrained, the target is petrified.

When the adventurers approach the temple, read:
One hemisphere of an enormous petrified egg lying on its side rises 40 feet above the ground in the mist-shrouded valley. A forest of petrified trees and plants surrounds the egg. The egg is cracked along a portion of its surface as if something burst out of it long ago, and two huge, obsidian double doors plug the opening where the cracks converge. The doors are closed, but great iron pull rings carved to resemble a demonic ram's head hint at how they might be opened.

A character who succeeds on a DC 31 Strength check can pull open one of the two doors, creating an opening wide enough to admit one Medium or Small creature at a time. For a Large creature to enter, both doors must be pulled open. Opening the doors with brute force is possible but time-consuming; each door has AC 20, Fortitude 20, and 500 hit points. The obsidian doors open onto an alcove that adjoins the cultist quarters (Area 1) on the main floor.

Two 10-foot-wide secret doors in the shell wall of the temple (Perception DC 40 to find, Strength DC 30 to open) provide alternative entrances.

Area 1: Cultist Quarters

If the characters enter through the obsidian doors, read:

A dark, roughly circular chamber 20 feet in diameter lies before you. Opposite the door you entered through is another set of double doors.

The second set of doors is closed but not locked. Each one opens easily.

The tactical encounter is triggered if a character moves through this doorway into Area 1.

If the characters enter Area 1 through the secret door, read:

A narrow corridor that appears to be empty leads north.

The occupants of this chamber don't know about the secret door and thus are unprepared for anyone who enters from this direction. The tactical encounter is triggered, but the characters gain a round of surprise.

Tactical Encounter: "Cultist Cavity," page 114.

Area 2: Temple

This area is where the characters first meet Oreiax. How the encounter unfolds depends on which entrance the characters use and whether Oreiax is aware of their impending arrival. Either way, the tactical encounter is triggered when the PCs move into this chamber.

Tactical Encounter: "Temple Scuffle," page 116.

Area 3: Oreiax's Basement

The lower level of Oreiax's domain is a mazelike mixture of narrow passages and open chambers. Even if the characters manage to vanquish Oreiax in Area 2, they must deal with the threats in the basement in order to fully cleanse the temple of all its evil. The tactical encounter is triggered when the PCs emerge from the stairs that lead into this area.

Tactical Encounter: "Germinal Crypt," page 118.

Cultist Cavity

Encounter Level 24 (29,300 XP)

Setup

4 death cultists
4 abyssal ghoul myrmidons

Despite Oreiax's inhuman nature and ultimate goals, the entity allows living cultists who demonstrate exceptional power to join him in his temple, especially those who do not mind sharing quarters with the many ghouls also found in the temple. The temple is a structure dedicated to the reverence of Doresain, after all. Or, at least, that is what Oreiax tells those who find their way to the hidden valley and ask to join the cause. At the very least, these cultists are meant to serve as a buffer if any intruders seek entry.

The starting positions of the cultists and ghouls are not indicated on the map because their location varies depending on how the characters entered, and how they got past the outer doors if they came in that way.

If the PCs opened the outer doors without damaging them, or if they came in through the secret door, read:

Ahead and to the side, the dim glow of small lanterns reveals crude beds, each of which contains a figure that seems to be stirring.

Unless the characters have made an exceptional amount of noise in gaining entry, they can catch the four human cultists in this chamber reclining on their beds, and the four ghouls are off guard as well. Place each of the cultists on one of the beds and position the ghouls around the blood pool, then roll initiative and begin combat, giving the PCs surprise actions if they have them.

If the PCs opened the outer doors by damaging them, and then they enter through the second set of doors, read:

This dimly lit space is full of creatures that do not seem pleased to see you, although they refrain from immediately attacking. Four living humans wearing green robes and heavy cowls are looking at you, mildly bemused.

Place the four cultists evenly spread around the perimeter of the chamber adjacent to the doors. The ghouls are not evident at first. Two of them occupy a backup position in the eastern corridor, and the other two are in the western corridor. Roll initiative and begn combat, with neither side gaining surprise.

As opportunity permits (either during combat or after the PCs have dealt with the enemies), provide the following bits of read-aloud text when the characters are able to see the pertinent features.

An elaborate basin filled with red liquid bubbles and steams near the southwest corner of this chamber.

A portcullis more than 10 feet wide bars the passage that leads from the northwest part of this chamber into a different area.

Swirling murals carved in stony material adorn all the walls. The scenes feature depictions of two creatures. One is a ghoul with blazing green eyes who wears a crown of human bones and wields a staff made from a humanoid spinal column. The other is a mammoth mockery of a child, disfigured and swollen into an ogrelike monstrosity. The creature is half-petrified, dripping ichor, and partially rotted.

Tactics

The death cultists keep their distance from the PCs when they can, but do not shrink from melee if it proves necessary. Not all of them are willing to fight to the death. The ghouls are out to cause the greatest havoc they can, and they fight to the end.

Round 1: Each of the death cultists uses word of Orcus, positioning the attack to catch two or more PCs in the burst if possible.

The abyssal ghoul myrmidons move around the chamber trying to flank the PCs. They concentrate their claw attacks on characters that are lightly armored or using ranged or close powers.

Round 2+: The cultists use their mace attacks until word of Orcus recharges, at which time they use word of Orcus again. Three of the four cultists fight to the death, but when only one cultist remains standing, he throws up his hands and sues for mercy. The PCs can interrogate the cultist if they spare his life.

Interrogated Cultist: If the PCs manage to capture a cultist, or if they accept the surrender of the last surviving one, they can ask the cultist a few questions.

The cultist provides the following information to the adventurers:

- His name is Jamard Fellwing. He is a priest of Orcus who was directed to this excavated petrified primordial egg to serve Oreiax. Jamard is bitter about this assignment, but when Orcus or his exarchs command, sworn cultists do not question the order.
- If the characters don't already know it, Jamard relates a truncated version of the DC 31 and DC 33 information in the "Background" section (page 112).
- Jamard says that if the PCs let him go, he will give them instructions on how to activate the blood pool. Jamard says the blood pool allows one who stands before it to view Oreiax (but he does not reveal the pool's harmful aspect).

Features of the Area

Illumination: A small lantern at the foot of each bed provides dim light in a 5-square radius. A character can extinguish a lantern as a minor action.

Cots: These cots are austere by anyone's standards. Upon closer examination, it's clear that they are made from the stretched skins of humans. It costs 1 extra square of movement to enter a square occupied by a cot. The cots are not tall enough to provide cover.

Chests: Each chest holds a couple changes of a cultist's clothes (robes and cowls), as well as personal toiletries and other knickknacks. A square containing a chest is treated as difficult terrain.

Portcullis: The iron portcullis in the northwest part of the room requires a successful DC 26 Strength check to force open or lift.

Blood Pool: This piece of magical furniture grants a connection to the head of the temple. If a creature stands before the blood pool, stares into its swirling depths, and says the phrase "Queen of Stone," an image of Oreiax appears to that creature. (Oreiax is the twisted, ogrelike child depicted on the murals covering the walls in this chamber.)

Seconds later, the viewpoint provided by the pool switches to show what lies immediately in front of Oreiax. At this point in time, Oreiax is in Area 2 (see the tactical map of the next encounter), standing before the altar and looking out over the cultists scattered among the benches. The viewpoint then pans toward the east, providing a glimpse of the closed portcullis that separates Area 1 from Area 2. All of this information enables the characters to have an idea of what stands against them if they move into the adjoining area. (The PC using the pool recognizes the portcullis as the same one that the characters can see from within Area 1.)

The downside of using the pool is that Oreiax can see whoever stands before it, and whenever someone contacts Oreiax in this fashion, that individual is targeted by a special version of Oreiax's petrifying breath, which functions as a ranged attack through the pool interface. This attack takes place after the viewer has gained all of the information described above. Once Orieax uses his petrifying breath in this manner, contact between the viewer and Oreiax is severed.

Petrifying Breath: Ranged sight; +25 vs. Fortitude; 4d6 + 20 damage, and the target is slowed and weakened (save ends).

Temple Scuffle

Encounter Level 25 (32,500 XP or more)
(if the PCs defeat Oreiax here)
or
Encounter Level 22 (20,400 XP or more)
(if Oreiax flees)

Setup

Oreiax (O)
3 death cultists (C)
1+ couatl mockeries (M)
3 demon brazier traps

This chamber is set aside for the daily, rantlike rituals that Oreiax offers up to Doresain and Orcus.

If the PCs sneak into the temple through the secret door, they could catch Oreiax delivering one of his loud, monotonous rants to three human death cultists. Otherwise, Oreiax and his cultists stand ready to attack any creatures that enter by opening the portcullis. Provide the read-aloud text, then roll initiative and begin combat, giving the PCs surprise actions if they have them.

When the adventurers view the sanctuary, read:
Three braziers provide bloody illumination here. The enormous sanctuary houses an altar of red crystal and numerous benches formed of fused humanoid bones. South of the benches is a magic circle painted in the stone. Horrific murals are carved in all surfaces of the cavernlike chamber.

A large creature stands behind the podium. The creature is a mammoth mockery of a child, disfigured and swollen into an ogrelike monstrosity. The being is partially petrified, dripping in ichor, and his flesh is rotted. The creature holds a bone rod in one great paw. He rattles the rod and laughs like a lunatic.

Several human cultist are grouped around the ogrelike creature. They begin to chant "Oreiax, Oreiax, Oreiax . . ."

The three braziers that fill the room with bright red light are traps, each of which triggers when any creature not a denizen of the temple moves adjacent to it.

In addition, a summoning circle south of the bone benches begins to summon couatl mockeries into the chamber as soon as combat begins.

Target: Each creature in burst
Attack: +27 vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d10 + 5 fire damage, and ongoing 5 fire damage (save ends). Denizens of the temple are immune to this damage.

Countermeasures
✦ Hitting a demon brazier with a power that has the cold keyword suppresses the brazier's attack for 1d6 rounds.
✦ A successful DC 36 Thievery check disables the trap.

Tactics

Orieax defends the temple vigorously, but won't stick around if it becomes clear that the characters are on the verge of victory.

Round 1: Before combat begins (on an initiative count 1 higher than the combatant with the best initiative check), one couatl mockery is summoned and appears in the indicated square adjacent to the circle south of the benches. This creature (and any mockery summoned in subsequent rounds) flies toward the PC closest to Oreiax and attacks that character with its wing slash.

Each of the death cultists begins combat by using word of Orcus, positioning the attack to catch two or more PCs in the burst if possible.

If at least one PC gets within reach of Oreiax before Oreiax's first action, he uses his death rattle and follows with petrifying breath.

Round 2+: Each round after the first, 1d4 additional couatl mockeries are summoned until the couatl mockery circle is destroyed (see Features of the Area).

The cultists use their mace attacks until word of Orcus recharges, at which time they use word of Orcus again.

Until his petrifying breath recharges, Oreiax relies on his aura of death and his death rattle attack to keep the characters from getting the upper hand. He saves his action point to use while fleeing if things go poorly.

When Oreiax is reduced to 140 hit points or fewer, he flees toward the basement. The PCs have to deal with him again there. If the path to the stairs is blocked, he uses the secret door (see below).

Features of the Area

Illumination: The demon brazier traps emit bright light in a 10-square radius (even before they are triggered). Add 6,050 XP to the encounter's experience reward for each trap that is disabled.

Couatl Mockery Circle: This magic summoning circle continues to disgorge 1d4 couatl mockeries each round as long as Orieax is present in the temple, or until an adjacent character spends a standard action scuffing through the lines of the circle with a boot, a weapon, or other hard object.

Add 2,250 XP to the encounter's experience reward for each couatl mockery (beyond the initial creature) that is defeated.

Altar: Cut from red crystal, this altar contains a secret compartment (Perception DC 31 to find) that contains 5 ad.

Benches: These furnishings are made from ghoul-gnawed bones. They are not tall enough or substantial enough to provide cover. A creature must squeeze to move through a square occupied by a bench.

Portcullis: The iron portcullis at the eastern end of the room requires a successful DC 26 Strength check to force open or lift.

Secret Door: A secret door (Perception DC 33 to find) is concealed along the northwestern edge of this chamber. The cultists don't know about it. Oreiax is aware of it, though, and he uses it if he feels the need to flee and the path to the stairs leading to Area 3 is blocked. (He then enters Area 3 through the secret door in the south side and awaits the characters therein.)

Setup

Oreiax (O)
4 rot slinger captains (R)
1+ abyssal ghoul myrmidons (G)

The basement is a warrenlike nest of irregular corridors and larger open chambers. The stairs in the south end of the area provide access.

This area is Oreiax's personal space. Here the abomination researches his ritual, stores ritual components, summons ghouls for worship and sport, and manages the other obligations he has been assigned by Doresain. None of the cultists is allowed down into the basement.

If the PCs forced Oreiax to flee in the previous encounter and chased him down here, the abomination fights to defend his home turf, with the aid of his rot slinger cronies, summoned ghouls, and the traps located in the area.

When the PCs enter Area 3, provide the read-aloud text and then roll initiative.

When the PCs enter the area, read:
Bloody illumination bathes this maze of passages hewn through sulfur-yellow stone. Barrels and crates are scattered about on the floor, each bearing arcane symbols. A large circle is painted on the floor of the area within sight of the stairs.

The four braziers that fill much of the room with bright red light are traps, each of which triggers when any creature not a denizen of the temple moves adjacent to it.

In addition, a summoning circle in the southern half of the area begins to summon abyssal ghoul myrmidons into the chamber as soon as combat begins.

Tactics

Orieax defends his domain with fervor . . . but he waits for the ghouls and the rot slingers to engage the characters before he steps into the fray,

Round 1: Before combat begins (on an initiative count 1 higher than the combatant with the best initiative check), one abyssal ghoul myrmidon is summoned and appears in the indicated square adjacent to the ghoul circle (see "Features of the Area"). This creature (and any ghoul summoned in subsequent rounds) moves toward the PC closest to it and attacks that character with its claws.

The rot slinger captains begin adjacent to the demon braziers and remain in those positions as long as they can, flinging their orbs from a distance.

Oreiax starts in a secluded location and probably does not get a chance to attack for at least 1 round. Unless the PCs immediately chase him during his flight from Area 2 and give him no time to rest, assume that Oreiax has had time to spend healing surges and regain all of his lost hit points.

Round 2+: If a rot slinger captain succeeds in luring a character into a position where a trap is triggered, it tosses in a rotting claw attack for good measure and then tries to put some distance between it and the PCs again.

Oreiax holds his position in the early going, ready to use either death rattle or petrifying breath against someone who approaches him. If two or more characters cluster in such a way that they can be hit by his petrifying breath, then that group of PCs is his preferred target, He tries to avoid catching any of the rot slinger captains in the blast of his breath, When he is encountered in this area, he probably does not have his action point (having spent it during his escape from Area 2).

Oreiax fights to the end in this chamber (though he could flee if he wanted to), since relinquishng the temple is a fate worse than utter destruction.

4 Demon Braziers Level 24 Blaster
Trap 6,050 XP each

This large brazier glows red and gold.

Perception
✦ DC 29: With a Perception check, the character notices glowing sigils on the brazier.

Additional Skill: Arcana
✦ DC 29: The character recognizes the demon brazier for what it is. The character also realizes that powers that have the cold keyword temporarily neutralize the brazier.

Initiative +17

Trigger
When a character steps into an adjacent square, the brazier releases a burst of fire. It then attacks in each subsequent round according to its initiative count until no character is adjacent to it.

Attack ✦ Fire
Standard Action or Opportunity Action Close burst 2
Target: Each creature in burst
Attack: +27 vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d10 + 5 fire damage, and ongoing 5 fire damage (save ends). Denizens of the temple are immune to this damage.

Countermeasures
✦ Hitting a demon brazier with a power that has the cold keyword suppresses the brazier's attack for 1d6 rounds.
✦ A successful DC 29 Thievery check disables the trap.

Features of the Area

Illumination: The demon brazier traps emit bright light in a 10-square radius (even before they are triggered). Add 6,050 XP to the encounter's experience reward for each trap that is disabled.

Ghoul Circle: This magic summoning circle continues to disgorge 1d4 abyssal ghoul myrmidons each round as long as any rot slinger captain remains alive, or until an adjacent character spends a standard action scuffing through the lines of the circle with a boot, a weapon, or other hard object.

Add 1,275 XP to the encounter's experience reward for each abyssal ghoul myrmidon (beyond the initial creature) that is defeated.

Secret Door: The secret door in the south of the area is known to and used only by Orieax.

Barrels and Crates: Each sturdy barrel or crate is locked with Arcane Lock and can be opened only by a DC 31 Thievery check or Strength check or a successful Knock ritual. Each is massive enough to occupy a square but not tall or wide enough to provide cover. Most contain gold, gems, residuum, and other easy-to-carry treasures. The total value of all such items recovered is equivalent to three level 26 treasure parcels (see DMG 129).

One other container holds pieces of an ancient text that describe a "manifest evil," an evil so pure it takes on solidity. If the PCs have followed the hook on page 112, these are fragments of the Tharizdun ritual.

Astral Corpse

A lair for five 26th-level adventurers

Floating eternally among the endless silver void of the Astral Sea are vast, once-living islands—the cast-off flesh of primordials and deities who lost their lives eons past in a great war. Today these colossal outposts bear mute testimony to the fate of even the mightiest among us.

Background

History DC 26: Among primordials, Haemnathuun the Blood Lord was exceptionally depraved. Haemnathuun reveled in gorging his gluttonous desires and satisfying his lewd impulses. So great was his wickedness that it is said that the race of blood fiends was born of his vile acts against the youngest deities.

History DC 31: In the time of the great war between gods and primordials, the Blood Lord enlisted his blood fiend infernal offspring to his aid. However, Haemnathuun was slain, suffering a grievous wound to his upper thorax. Agents of the deities known as astral stalkers claimed the corpse as their home, and they continue to dwell there to this day.

Religion DC 31: Orcus, Demon Prince of the Undead, made the first vampires in the image of blood fiends, who are themselves made in the image of Haemnathuun.

Streetwise DC 31: Dire rumors abound that some entity living deep within the corpse of the desecrated flesh of a dead god is attempting to rouse the flesh back into life. Different rumors indicate the floating island isn't a dead deity, but instead is a quiescent primordial.

Hook: Voice from Beyond

Read the PCs the following telepathic sending:
You hear a strange, rasping voice in your head.

"You are an agent of destiny, and that destiny is now upon you. A dread and primordial evil seeks life after death. I need your help to make sure this never happens. Seek the remains of the Blood Lord, Haemnathuun, and find me within its heart."

The voice is that of the atropal Harrowzau, imprisoned in the ancient corpse of the primordial Haemnathuun, trying to enlist the PCs' help.

Environment

Haemnathuun's corpse is as an island floating upon the Astral Sea, an otherworldly realm filled with vast clouds of a luminous, silver-gray substance that is not mist and not liquid. Thousands of stars glitter in the distance, especially in darker portions of the plane.

Subjective Gravity

In the Astral Sea, gravity does not act consistently as it does in the world. Instead, gravity is subjective, which means that if a traveler is standing on or in something that he or she wishes to exert gravity on him or her, it does so. In other words, if you want to stand on it, you can.

Gravity remains in force even if the traveler leaps into the air or flies—as long as the traveler wants it to. Unattended objects do not experience gravity. Attended objects are subject to a traveler's will. If you drop something and want it to fall, it does—but you can't "will it" to "fall" back to you.

In the absence of gravity (in other words, when you don't want to be affected by it), a creature can fly through a plane of subjective gravity by exercising its will. This mode of movement is slow, however.

SUBJECTIVE GRAVITY

On a plane that has subjective gravity, you can choose whether gravity affects you.

- You can stand on any surface equal to your space (1 square for most characters) or larger than your space.
- You gain the ability to fly at one-half your normal speed if not under the effect of gravity. You can hover, but you are a clumsy flier.
- A creature that has the ability to fly can use its innate flying speed instead. It gains hover.

The God Corpse

The following traits apply to the God Corpse:

- While on the corpse of Haemnathuun, the PCs can choose to have gravity affect them in respect to the god corpse. Attempts to "land" anywhere other than the god corpse's right hand (Area 1), risk a random encounter with astral stalkers.
- Moving across and through the corpse is difficult. Haemnathuun's decomposing body is not dry or preserved at all. Even after such a long time, the corpse is still gory and filled with fluids. Acrobatics or Athletics checks are required to slog through deep rivers of blood or to dodge spasms in the flesh. Assign an appropriate DC (see "Challenging Terrain" and the Skill Check Difficulty Class table, Dungeon Master's Guide, page 61).
- Boils, welts, and cancerous lesions on the corpse should be avoided. PCs contacting such tissue risk exposing themselves to deadly and virulent diseases (see the God Corpse Contagion sidebar).

As the PCs approach the corpse, read:
A distant isle resolves as an immense, decaying humanoid form. It is skinless, and its muscles and tissues glisten in the silvery light. A penetrating chest wound to the left side reveals fractured ribs, torn muscle, and a collapsed lung beneath.

Arrival

Approaching PCs observe swarms of astral stalkers patrolling the god corpse. With patience and good timing, it is possible to avoid these patrols and land on the god corpse undetected.

Perception Check
DC 30: The route least likely to alert the astral stalker swarm you see is to approach the corpse from the north and land upon its outstretched right hand.

Optional: Welcoming Party

Level 24 Encounter (XP 33,200)
✦ 4 astral stalkers (level 22 elite lurker, MM 10)

If the PCs try a direct approach to the heart by landing on the rib cage, or if they are careless in their approach, astral stalkers spot them and attack.

Area 1: The Claws

The right arm of the Blood Lord stretches backward beyond its head, the long fingers of its massive hand ending in razor-sharp claws that are each the size of a large monolith.

When the PCs reach the hand, read:
The god corpse's clawed fingers loom overhead, looking like large outcroppings growing out of the bedrock.

Optional: Lurking Horror

Level 23 Encounter (XP 24,900)
✦ 3 bone collectors (level 22 elite brute, page 175)

Movement near the index finger reveals huge undead oozes slithering toward the PCs with numerous tendrils.

Area 2: Perfidious Ridge

As the PCs begin their long trek south along the outstretched arm of the astral corpse, the terrain becomes increasingly rough and treacherous. The petrified flesh cracks easily and shifts underfoot, threatening to send the PCs over the edge of the corpse.

Complicating matters even further, a malevolent blackfire dracolich has carved out a home here in the cavernous tissue of the upper arm, near the elbow.

Optional: Crackling Black Flame

Level 23 Encounter (XP 25,500)
✦ 1 blackfire dracolich (level 23 solo controller, MM 73)

The dracolich is not content to allow the PCs to pass unmolested. The PCs can parley with the undead dragon. It is primarily interested in relieving the characters of their magic items and equipment, and it will try to kill them to get these items if it is not stiffly bribed.

Area 3: Blood Visage

As the PCs approach the head of the corpse, read:
The head and face of the corpse is jarringly preserved when compared to the ruin visited upon the remainder of its body.

Here at the temple of the forehead of the god corpse, the atropal Harrowzau the Unborn hopes to attempt a ritual. The PCs discover Harrowzau within the corpse's body at Area 8, and they can release Harrowzau from its imprisonment at this location. If the PCs agree to escort Harrowzau to Area 3, they trigger the tactical encounter when they arrive at that location.

Tactical Encounter: "Apotheosis," page 126.

Area 4: Chest Cavity

When the adventurers reach the clavicle, read:
A great abyss of jagged bone and shredded muscle descends into the chest of the god corpse's flesh. This wound is so severe it must have been the strike that killed this creature. Lower still in the chest you see a gap at the base of a collapsed lung.

As they stand near the chest above a great fracture in the left collarbone, the PCs easily observe the great wound that has laid bare Haemnathuun's chest cavity. Near the junction of the breastbone and the fractured left clavicle, the PCs can descend through the exposed rib cage and into an air tube of that is part of the lungs that leads deeper into the chest cavity of the god corpse, to Area 5.

Area 5: Lung Labyrinth

The collapsed left lung of the corpse is visible just below the ribs. The PCs must enter this labyrinth to get to the heart. The stench of the corpse threatens to overpower even the hardiest PCs once they enter the labyrinthine passageways of the lungs.

Optional: Alveolar Sacs

Level 23 Encounter (XP 25,500)
✦ 1 desecration (level 23 solo controller, page 139)

The winding air tubes of the lungs occasionally terminate in large circular sacs called alveoli that are clogged with dead cells. If the characters engage in this optional encounter on their way to the heart and defeat the desecration, they gain the treasure described below.

Treasure: 30 ad and two potions of recovery.

Area 6: Blood Plasma Tributary

When the PCs move through the tubes of the lungs to the arteries that lead to the heart, they discover that the corpse is not as dead as it seemed from the exterior. Fast-moving rivers of blood still flow in these huge arteries, and the faint beating of the heart can be heard in the distance. The PCs need only follow the flow of blood toward Area 7, one of the chambers of the heart.

When the adventurers approach the heart (Area 7), read:
What was once a stream of swift-flowing blood has now grown into a torrent of fast-moving gore. Up ahead you can hear the distinctive crash of great falls, and the distant pounding of the heart has become a slow, rhythmic thunder.

Area 7: Upper Right Heart Chamber

When the characters approach the chamber, read:
A blood river plunges from a gap in the ceiling to fall 60 feet before it crashes into a lake of blood covering the floor of this vast chamber floor. A thick layer of coagulated blood covers the walls of the chamber. At slow, regular intervals the walls contract violently, then release.

Along the far eastern wall, about 20 feet above the level of the blood, two larva mages and two death titans guard a passageway that opens to the east (the heart valve into Area 8). When the PCs enter the chamber, they trigger the tactical encounter.

Tactical Encounter: "Inside the Heart," page 124.

Area 8: Lower Right Heart Chamber Grotto

The PCs enter the lower right heart chamber through the valve that connects with Area 7. This chamber holds the prison of Harrowzau the Unborn. The heart's chamber is crisscrossed with narrow walkways of muscle.

When the adventurers enter the grotto, read:
A powerful stench rises from the coagulated blood that coats the walls of this chamber. The roaring of the blood falls is muted here. At the end of one of the fibrous walkways that cross this chamber, a bulbous nodule hangs from the wall. Something presses against the side of the nodule, as though whatever is caught within is frantically struggling to get out. A powerful voice speaks in your mind: "I am the one you seek. Free me immediately! I can endure this captivity no longer!"

This cancerous lesion is the prison of Harrowzau the Unborn. The atropal is the emerging seed of Haemnathuun reborn. Even nascent as it is, it managed to influence enough creatures to put in motion the plan that delivered the PCs to this location. The PCs can free Harrowzau by slicing the sack open (AC 5, Reflex 5, Fortitude 12, 40 hit points).

When Harrowzau is freed, read:
The cancerous lesion rips open to reveal a large, hairless creature, its shriveled body gaunt and atrophied. The creature reaches a withered hand out in greeting.

Religion Check
DC 25: This being bears a striking resemblance to an atropal, an undead spark of the divine animating dead flesh.

The atropal introduces itself as Harrowzau. It explains it journeyed to the god corpse in an attempt to prevent the Blood Lord from returning to life. Before Harrowzau could complete the ritual, Haemnathuun's awakening consciousness entombed him. A successful DC 38 Insight check to sense motives gives a PC the feeling that Harrowzau is hiding something, but he or she can't pinpoint the particulars of the deception.

The atropal claims it knows how the previous ritual failed, and it has a new plan to deal with the Blood Lord. Harrowzau asks the PCs to escort him to Haemnathuun's forehead, where Harrowzau will perform a new ritual to lay the primordial to rest forever.

If the PCs attack or attempt to stop Harrowzau from leaving the chamber, he attacks. Use the statistics for Harrowzau the Unborn in "Apotheosis," page 126.

God Corpse Contagion

The corpse of the partly revivified primordial is a hotbed of exotic diseases. At your option, when an adventurer is bloodied in or on the corpse, you can make him or her subject to a disease. One new disease that is apropriate for this circumstance, silvery sleep, is described below.

| Silvery Sleep | Level 26 Disease |
|---|---|
| The process of petrification that turns dead primordials and deities to unliving stone begins to slow and stiffen the victim. | Attack: +28 vs. FortitudeEndurance improve DC 28, maintain DC 19, worsen DC 18 or lower |

Inside the Heart

Encounter Level 27 (54,800 XP)

Setup

2 larva mages (L)
2 dread wraiths (W)
2 death titans (T)

Upon entering the upper right heart chamber of the god corpse (Area 7), the characters find themselves under ranged attack by a pair of larva mages firing rays of cold death from across the chamber. Any PCs who enter the blood pool find themselves immediately set upon by dread wraiths.

When the PCs enter the atrium, provide the read-aloud text, then place the larva mages and death titans on the map. The wraiths begin the encounter beneath the surface of the blood pool. Do not place them until the encounter begins.

The larva mages do not deign to speak with the PCs. They were set here to guard against the potential reanimation of the Blood Lord, and they aim to do their job.

When the adventurers enter the upper right heart chamber, read:

This slowly beating heart interior is moist and humid with falling blood. Two humanoids made up of swarming larva and two hulking figures swathed in swirling souls stand on a cartilaginous lip that forms a ledge at the east side of the chamber. They guard a valve that leads to a passage out of the room.

Tactics

The larva mages act as soon as they can after noticing the PCs. The other creatures might wait for a short time before joining combat.

Round 1: The larva mages shoot rays of cold death across the chamber at PCs who are afloat on the surface of the blood pool.

The dread wraiths attack with their dread blades against characters who submerge themselves in the blood pool and come within reach.

The death titans postpone their attacks until targets come within range of soul devourer or within reach of their greataxe attacks.

Round 2+: If the submerged dread wraiths have no opportunity to engage enemies in melee, they rise to the surface of the blood pool in the second round and carry the fight to any intruders they find there.

2 Dread Wraiths (W) Level 25 Lurker
Large shadow humanoid (undead) XP 7,000 each

Initiative +25 Senses Perception +18; darkvision
Shroud of Night aura 5; bright light within the aura is reduced to dim light, and dim light becomes darkness.
HP 124; Bloodied 62; see also death strike
Regeneration 20 (if a dread wraith takes radiant damage, regeneration doesn't function until the end of its next turn)
AC 37; Fortitude 33, Reflex 37, Will 37
Immune disease, fear, poison; Resist 30 necrotic, insubstantial; Vulnerable 15 radiant (see also regeneration above)

⊕ Dread Blade (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
Reach 2; +28 vs. Reflex; 2d10 + 9 necrotic damage, and the target is weakened (save ends).

Death Shriek (when reduced to 0 hit points) ✦ Psychic
Close blast 3; targets enemies; +27 vs. Will; 4d6 + 9 psychic damage, and the target is dazed (save ends). Miss: Half damage, and the target is not dazed.

Combat Advantage ✦ Necrotic
A dread wraith deals 3d6 extra necrotic damage against any target it has combat advantage against.

Shadow Glide (move; encounter)
The dread wraith shifts up to 6 squares.

Spawn Wraith
Any humanoid killed by a dread wraith rises as a free-willed dread wraith at the start of its creator's next turn, appearing in the space where it died (or in the nearest unoccupied space). Raising the slain creature (using the Raise Dead ritual) does not destroy the spawned wraith.

Alignment Chaotic evil Languages Common
Skills Stealth +26
Str 18 (+16) Dex 28 (+21) Wis 12 (+13)
Con 20 (+17) Int 14 (+14) Cha 28 (+21)

The larva mages rely on ray of cold death to press the attack, saving their recharge powers and their withering flame for attackers who get close to them.

If an enemy gets within melee range of a larva range, it uses horrific visage to give itself time to move, and follows that with worm's feast if it still needs more space.

The death titans engage in melee against PCs who come within their reach, using double attack, until soul devourer recharges. If a soul devourer attack succeeds, the titan expends a soul shard to use soulfire burst.

If a wraith becomes bloodied, it uses shadow glide to shift away from the PCs and toward the protection of the larva mages. If a larva mage becomes bloodied, it attempts to flee through the valve to Area 8.

Features of the Area

Illumination: Bright light (a sourceless, blood-red glow suffuses everything).

Gravity: Gravity works in only one direction here, and the pooling blood reveals its direction.

Blood Pool: The lower reaches of the chamber are flooded with blood pouring down from above. The pool is 20 feet deep and covers the entire chamber except for the ledge where the larva mages and death titans are located and three bone spurs that jut out of the blood pool on either side of that ledge.

2 Death Titans (T) Level 25 Elite Brute
Huge shadow humanoid (giant) XP 14,000 each

Initiative +18 Senses Perception +20; darkvision
Soulburner aura 5; any enemy within the aura takes a -2 penalty to attack rolls and all defenses; a creature that dies within the aura bestows one soul shard to the death titan (see soul shroud).
HP 574; Bloodied 287
AC 39; Fortitude 42, Reflex 38, Will 35
Resist 30 necrotic
Saving Throws +2
Speed 8
Action Points 1

⊕ Greataxe (standard; at-will) ✦ Weapon
Reach 3; +28 vs. AC; 2d8 + 10 damage (crit 6d8 + 26).

Double Attack (standard; at-will) ✦ Weapon
The death titan makes two greataxe attacks.

Soul Devourer (standard; recharge ⚅) ✦ Necrotic
Ranged 5; +28 vs. Fortitude; the target loses a healing surge, and the death titan's soul shroud gains one soul shard. A target without healing surges takes damage equal to half its total hit points.

Soulfire Burst (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
Close burst 1; +26 vs. Reflex; 2d12 + 6 necrotic damage. The death titan must expend one soul shard to use this power.

Consume Soul Shard (minor; at-will) ✦ Healing
The death titan expends one soul shard and regains 20 hit points.

Soul Shroud
The soul shroud contains soul shards that swirl around the death titan to protect and empower it. At the beginning of an encounter, the soul shroud contains four soul shards. While the soul shroud is depleted of soul shards, the death titan takes a -2 penalty to attack rolls.

Alignment Evil Languages Giant
Skills Intimidate +20
Str 31 (+22) Dex 23 (+18) Wis 17 (+15)
Con 27 (+20) Int 12 (+13) Cha 16 (+15)
Equipment plate armor, greataxe

Bloodfall: Staying on the surface of the blood pool while directly beneath the blood waterfall (the area of turbulence between the dread wraiths) requires a successful DC 31 Athletics check. A character who fails this check is forced beneath the surface and is likely to be attacked by the submerged wraiths.

Tricuspid Valve: The passage heading off to the east leads to area 8, but is closed by a fleshy valve (which lies outside the area depicted on the map). Forcibly opening the valve requires a successful DC 31 Strength check. Alternatively, the PCs can choose to perform a Passwall ritual to enter the grotto.

Apotheosis

Encounter Level 23 (26,000 XP)
(if the PCs defeat Harrowzau the Unborn)
or
Encounter Level 27 (52,000 XP)
(if the PCs achieve victory in the skill challenge but do not defeat Harrowzau the God Swallower)
or
Encounter Level 38 (167,000 XP)
(if the PCs achieve victory in the skill challenge and also defeat Harrowzau the God Swallower)

Prelude

With Haemnathuun gaining greater consciousness every moment, Harrowzau quickly leads the PCs back to Area 3. The atropal says it will recite a powerful ritual there to put the ancient primordial to rest forever.

When the ritual begins, read the following, then run the skill challenge:
With but a thought, Harrowzau summons a gilded scroll to hover into the air before its hands. While reciting the text in the dark tongue of the ancients, the atropal begins etching intricate glyphs with its shriveled forefinger into the flesh of the god corpse.

After completing the beginning of the ritual, Harrowzau turns its eyes upon you, and its words spill into your mind. "Step forward quickly and form a ring within this circle. Aid me in this grand invocation. If we succeed, the Blood Lord will be silenced forevermore, and I will reward you greatly!"

With each action in the skill challenge, have the acting PC attempt a passive Insight check. A successful DC 24 Insight check during the challenge reveals to a character that something is very wrong, though it takes a followup DC 31 Religion check to recognize the ritual's true purpose. A result of 26–30 on this Religion check reveals that the ritual will not accomplish what Harrowzau claims. If the PCs engage the atropal, interfere with the ritual in any way, or are defeated in the skill challenge, go to "Defeat Setup." If the PCs achieve victory in the skill challenge, go to "Victory Setup."

Harrowzau Apotheosis Level 28
Skill Challenge XP 52,000

The ritual words of a powerful invocation flow over you. "Help me to silence the Blood Lord forever, and the reward will be great," Harrowzau says in your mind. "I need you to fuel the ritual with your inner power. My own will not be enough."

Uncertain of success on his own, Harrowzau requests the assistance of the PCs to complete the complex ritual. Unwittingly, the PCs are aiding Harrowzau in his apotheosis into a divine being. The atropal has no intention of granting a reward of any kind for the PCs' aid. Harrowzau plans to betray the characters as soon as the ritual is complete.

Complexity 4 (requires 10 successes before 3 failures)
Primary Skills Arcana, Endurance, Religion
Victory The atropal's apotheosis into a true deity has succeeded. Harrowzau rewards the PCs for their assistance by attacking them. Refer to "Victory Setup."
Defeat Harrowzau's apotheosis into a true deity has been foiled. Though the atropal has failed in its goal, it remains a potent foe. Harrowzau curses the PCs for their ineptness and attacks them. Refer to "Defeat Setup."
Arcana DC 26 (1 success, no maximum successes). The PC expends one arcane encounter or daily power per success.
The character channels his or her personal arcane energy into the ritual.
Endurance DC 18 (1 success, no maximum successes). The PC expends two healing surges per success.
The character offers up a portion of his or her life energy to fuel the ritual.
Religion DC 26 (1 success, no maximum successes). The PC expends one divine encounter or daily power per success.
The PC channels a portion of his or her divine energy into the ritual.

Defeat Setup

Harrowzau the Unborn, atropal (H)

Provide the read-aloud text, then place Harrowzau (H) on the map in the space indicated for a Large creature.

If Harrowzau is attacked before the ritual begins, read:
"I should have known not to trust in the aid of mortals. Oh well, perhaps there is just enough life force in each of you to fuel the ritual. . . ."

If the ritual fails or is interrupted, read:
Protective wards fail, collapsing the mantle of necromantic energy surrounding the atropal. Harrowzau's scream of rage floods your thoughts as the atropal turns to attack.

Harrowzau the Unborn (H) Level 28 Elite Brute
Large immortal magical beast (undead), atropal XP 26,000

Initiative +18 Senses Perception +20; darkvision
Shroud of Death (Necrotic) aura 5; at the beginning of the atropal's turn, any undead ally within the aura regains 20 hit points, and any living creature within the aura takes 10 necrotic damage. Radiant damage to the atropal ends its shroud of death. The atropal can restore the aura as a minor action.
HP 634; Bloodied 317
AC 42; Fortitude 42, Reflex 37, Will 40
Immune disease, necrotic, poison; Vulnerable 10 radiant
Saving Throws +2
Speed fly 9 (hover)
Action Points 1; see also atropos burst

⨁ Necrotizing Touch (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
Reach 2; +29 vs. Reflex; 2d10 + 10 damage, and the target takes ongoing 15 necrotic damage and a -2 penalty to attack rolls, and the target loses any resistance or immunity to necrotic damage (save ends all).

⨁ Atropos Burst (standard; encounter; recharges when a living creature is reduced to 0 hit points within the atropal's aura) ✦ Necrotic
Close burst 5; +27 vs. Reflex; 4d8 + 5 necrotic damage, and the target loses a healing surge. The atropal gains 1 action point if it hits any creatures with atropos burst.

Alignment Evil Languages Supernal
Skills Insight +25, Religion +19
Str 30 (+24) Dex 18 (+18) Wis 22 (+20)
Con 27 (+22) Int 10 (+14) Cha 20 (+19)

Tactics

Enraged, Harrowzau fights ruthlessly. It floats toward the PCs to envelop them with its shroud of death. The atropal then uses atropos burst, and if it hits, the atropal uses the acquired action point to make a necrotizing touch attack against the most severely wounded PC. Harrowzau continues to attack this PC with necrotizing touch, hoping to slay the adventurer and recharge atropos burst.

Victory Setup

Harrowzau the God Swallower (H)

Provide the read-aloud text, then place Harrowzau (H) on the map in the space indicated for a Gargantuan creature.

When the encounter begins, read:
The ancient ritual is complete. Pulses of necromantic energy stream out of the god corpse and into the atropal's growing and strengthening form. Eyes blazing with supremacy, the treacherous newborn deity turns toward you, unleashing its divine power.

Harrowzau has shed its former skin and crafted a commanding form. The newborn deity stands 50 feet tall and has four arms topped with sharp claws. Its gaping maw droops toward the ground, threatening to swallow everything in its path.

Harrowzau the God Swallower (H) Level 31 Solo Brute
Gargantuan immortal humanoid (undead) XP 115,000

Initiative +23 Senses Perception +26; darkvision
Gaping Maw aura 6; at the start of Harrowzau's turn, any enemy within the aura is pulled 2 squares.
HP 1,440; Bloodied 720
AC 43; Fortitude 42, Reflex 37, Will 40
Immune disease, necrotic, poison; Vulnerable 10 radiant
Saving Throws +5
Speed 8, burrow 8, climb 8
Action Points 2

⨁ Claw (standard; at-will)
Reach 4; +34 vs. AC; 2d8 + 16 damage.

⨁ Bite (minor 1/round; at-will)
Reach 4; +34 vs. AC; 2d8 + 16 damage.

⨁ Rending Claws (standard; at-will)
Harrowzau makes four claw attacks, no more than two of them against a single target. If two attacks hit the same target, it is grabbed, and it takes ongoing 15 damage until the grab ends. Harrowzau cannot use rending claws against another target while it is grabbing a creature.

⨁ Consume (standard; at-will) ✦ Acid, Necrotic
+34 vs. AC; 2d8 + 16 necrotic damage, and the target is trapped (save ends). A trapped target is removed from play and can take no actions, and takes ongoing 15 acid damage. Harrowzau occupies the target's former space and gains regeneration 15. If the target succeeds on the saving throw, Harrowzau takes 1d6 damage, and the target escapes and appears in an unoccupied space of Harrowzau's choice adjacent to Harrowzau. A trapped target automatically escapes when Harrowzau is destroyed, reappearing in a space of its choice within the space previously occupied by Harrowzau.

Combat Advantage
Harrowzau makes an extra bite attack against any enemy it has combat advantage against. Harrowzau automatically gains combat advantage against any living, bloodied enemy.

Alignment Evil Languages Supernal
Skills Insight +26, Religion +19
Str 42 (+31) Dex 26 (+23) Wis 22 (+21)
Con 32 (+26) Int 18 (+19) Cha 23 (+21)

Tactics

Every round, the God Swallower uses its gaping maw aura to draw the PCs closer to itself. It then attempts to take out its greatest perceived threat with consume. In following rounds, Harrowzau inflicts devastating wounds with its rending claws attack.

It's possible that the PCs will be overwhelmed by the God Swallower and be forced to flee. If so, they receive the experience point reward for the skill challenge only. If the PCs flee, you can incorporate Harrowzau as a recurring threat in your campaign.

Features of the Area

Illumination: Dim light (the stars in the silvery Astral Sea).

Gravity: See the "Subjective Gravity" sidebar on page 120.

CHAPTER 4

New Monsters

SEAN MURRAY

Undead are among the most terrifying monsters in the Dungeons & Dragons world. From flesh-eating ghouls to scythe-wielding reapers, undead haunt the nightmares of mortals and lurk in the darkest corners of the imagination.

Undead share no ancestry, heritage, or bond with others of their ilk, and they are as widespread and varied as living creatures. The creatures share only one trait—their return from the grave.

Common beliefs holds that undead are evil, and although many are indeed cruel and wicked, some are merely animate creatures that act mindlessly at the behest of an evil master. Many undead are capable of experiencing the same emotions and desires as the living. They commit treachery and harbor hate, yet they can also have friendships and exemplify honor, kindness, and even love.

This chapter presents dozens of new creatures and other material, including the following sections and more:

- Game statistics and additional background material for many new varieties of undead.
- Other kinds of creatures that have cheated death in some way. They are sometimes found with undead even though they are not undead themselves.
- Legendary undead of the D&D world.
- Templates and alternative powers to customize undead.

New Undead and Unliving

This section offers a variety of new undead creatures (and a few that aren't undead), as well as variations on traditional monsters such as ghouls, and zombies.

Abomination

Ageless though they are, immortals can die, and when they do, some return as twisted remnants of what they once were. Most abominations were created as weapons in the war between the gods and the primordials, but a scarce few have arisen spontaneously out of the chaotic forces of the universe. When these beings stir, they come full of rage, craving only to spread destruction and despair.

Rotvine Defiler

The rotvine defiler has but one purpose: to ingest and spoil all that is living. A profane vestige of a powerful immortal devoted to fertility, the rotvine defiler seeks to destroy that which it has lost—life. In its wake, the creature leaves a trail of despoiled organic matter, a record of its vindictive mission.

Rotvine Defiler Level 26 Solo Controller
Gargantuan immortal magical beast (plant, undead) XP 45,000

Initiative +19 Senses Perception +16; darkvision, tremorsense 10
Despoiled Morass aura 4; any creature that starts its turn within the aura is slowed until the start of its next turn.
HP 1,210; Bloodied 605; see also putrescent explosion
AC 42; Fortitude 41, Reflex 39, Will 37
Immune disease; Resist 15 necrotic, 10 poison
Saving Throws +5
Speed 8, burrow 8
Action Points 2

⊕ Lashing Tendrils (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
Reach 4; +30 vs. Reflex; 3d8 + 9 necrotic damage, and the target cannot shift until the end of its next turn.

✧ Tendrils of Rot (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
Close burst 5; targets enemies; +29 vs. Reflex; 3d8 + 9 necrotic damage, and the target is restrained (save ends); see also earthly maw. Miss: Half damage, and the target is not restrained.

✧ Earthly Maw (minor 1/round; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
Close burst 5; targets each creature restrained by the rotvine defiler; +30 vs. Fortitude; the target takes ongoing 15 necrotic damage, loses a healing surge at the start of each of its turns, and is grabbed (escape ends all).

✧ Putrescent Explosion (when first bloodied and again when the rotvine defiler is reduced to 0 hit points) ✦ Necrotic
Close burst 10; +29 vs. Reflex; 3d8 + 9 necrotic damage.

Threatening Reach
A rotvine defiler can make opportunity attacks against all enemies within its reach (4 squares).

Alignment Chaotic evil Languages –
Str 28 (+22) Dex 22 (+19) Wis 17(+16)
Con 26 (+21) Int 8 (+12) Cha 20 (+18)

Rotvine Defiler Tactics

This creature is a sprawling morass of mud, rotting vines, dead animals, and writhing tendrils. It burrows through the ground, sending up tentacles to grab living creatures. When it becomes bloodied, a rotvine defiler releases an explosion of desecrating fumes that wither ally and enemy alike.

Rotvine Defiler Lore

DC 26: A rotvine defiler is the profane remnant of an immortal devoted to nature or agriculture. The corrupted immortals were slain and sealed under the ground, where the seeds of evil caused them to return to life and outwardly manifest their malevolence.

DC 31: A rotvine defiler arises when a creature makes a sacrifice over the monster's earthly tomb, breaking the seals containing it. The creature usually retains none of its original intelligence or memories.

Encounter Groups

Rotvine defilers are usually alone, but they sometimes permit other creatures to accompany them.

Level 29 Encounter (XP 81,000)
- ✦ 2 blood fiends (level 23 soldier, MM 12)
- ✦ 1 rotvine defiler (level 26 solo controller)

BRUNO WERNECK

Discord Incarnate

At the dawn of creation, mighty couatls—winged serpents of purity and virtue—strove to bind evil elementals and fiends. The titanic spiritual struggle sometimes resulted in the death of both entities and brought about a terrible fusion of body and spirit. From these morbid unions arose discord incarnates—perverse abominations bent on wanton destruction.

| Discord Incarnate | Level 29 Solo Brute |
|---|---|
| Huge immortal humanoid (undead) | XP 75,000 |
| Initiative +18 Senses Perception +17; truesight 5 | |
| Discordant Aura (Fear) aura 10; while the discord incarnate is not bloodied, any enemy that starts its turn within the aura takes a -2 penalty to all defenses until the end of its next turn. | |
| Retribution Aura (Necrotic, Radiant) aura 5; while the discord incarnate is bloodied, any enemy that starts its turn within the aura takes 15 necrotic and radiant damage. | |
| HP 1,340; Bloodied 670; see also discordant retaliation | |
| AC 43; Fortitude 43, Reflex 38, Will 39 | |
| Immune disease, fear; Resist radiant 10, necrotic 10 (if a discord incarnate takes radiant damage or necrotic damage, it gains a +5 bonus to damage rolls until the end of its next turn) | |
| Saving Throws +5 | |
| Speed 8, fly 10 | |
| Action Points 2 | |
| ⊕ Longsword (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic, Radiant, Weapon | |
| Reach 3; +32 vs. AC; 3d12 + 13 necrotic and radiant damage. | |
| ⸸ Discord's Wrath (standard; while bloodied; at-will) ✦ Necrotic, Radiant, Weapon | |
| Requires longsword; reach 3; make three longsword attacks, each against a different target. | |
| ⇙ Discordant Retaliation (when first bloodied and again when the discord incarnate is reduced to 0 hit points) ✦ Necrotic, Radiant | |
| Close burst 10; +30 vs. Fortitude; 5d6 + 8 necrotic and radiant damage, and the target is knocked prone and dazed (save ends). Miss: Half damage, and the target is knocked prone but not dazed. | |
| Create Couatl Mockeries (minor; recharge ⚄ ⚅) | |
| Four couatl mockeries (page 185) appear within 10 squares of the discord incarnate and act as it wishes. They take their turns directly after the discord incarnate in the initiative order. | |
| Alignment Evil | Languages Supernal |
| Str 31 (+24) | Dex 18 (+18) Wis 16 (+17) |
| Con 28 (+23) | Int 12 (+15) Cha 24 (+21) |
| Equipment longsword | |

Discord Incarnate Tactics

A discord incarnate uses create couatl mockeries at the start of battle and then flies in among its foes, attempting to position itself within reach of multiple enemies. The incarnate relies on the mockeries to gain flanking, and it creates more of them at each opportunity. A discord incarnate is a remorseless foe and never retreats except to seek a new tactical position.

Discord Incarnate Lore

DC 28: Discord incarnates arose during the cosmic war between the gods and the primordials. After that conflict, these creatures were destroyed or imprisoned throughout the planes. Whenever a discord incarnate breaks free of its prison, it roves the planes, destroying everything in its path.

Even from inside a cosmic prison, a discord incarnate can dream couatl mockeries into existence. Couatls, winged serpents of purity and virtue, work hard to keep discord incarnates and the mockeries contained within otherworldly prisons. However, even their power has limits. Couatls regard discord incarnates and the mockeries as their greatest failure.

DC 33: Scholars speculate that a discord incarnate spontaneously arises from the clash of two powerful, opposing forces—a powerful demon and a couatl. Some experts suggest that the profane union is the work of a now-forgotten god or primordial that saw benefit in the creation of the twisted monstrosities. It is even possible that a cache of discord incarnates could yet lie hidden in the cosmos, awaiting some event or signal from their creator that stirs them to action.

Encounter Groups

Discord incarnates have no allies, but they sometimes tolerate the company of other creatures that feed on death and ruin.

Level 30 Encounter (XP 99,000)
- ✦ 1 discord incarnate (level 29 solo brute)
- ✦ 2 shadowraven swarms (level 27 brute, MM 243)

WAYNE REYNOLDS

BEHOLDER, UNDEAD

Beholders are among the most feared and deadly monsters to prowl the world. Yet even beholders succumb to death, and when they do, necromancers sometimes find use in their vile remains.

Bloodkiss Beholder Level 9 Solo Controller
Large aberrant magical beast (undead) XP 2,000

Initiative +6 Senses Perception +12; all-around vision, darkvision
Unquenchable Thirst aura 2; the bloodkiss beholder makes an eye bite attack as a free action against any enemy within the aura at the start of the enemy's turn.
HP 412; Bloodied 206; see also bloodied writhe
AC 25; Fortitude 25, Reflex 21, Will 22
Immune disease, poison; Resist 10 necrotic; Vulnerable 5 radiant
Saving Throws +5
Speed fly 6 (hover)
Action Points 2

⊕ Eye Bite (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
Reach 2; +13 vs. AC; 1d8 + 3 damage plus 10 necrotic damage.

Eye Writhe (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
The bloodkiss beholder makes three eye bite attacks.

Blood Call (minor; recharge ⚅)
Ranged 5; targets a bloodied enemy; +11 vs. Will; the target is stunned (save ends). Aftereffect: The target is slowed (save ends).

Bloodkiss (immediate reaction, when a creature within 2 squares of the bloodkiss beholder becomes bloodied; at-will) ✦ Healing
Reach 2; targets the triggering creature; +11 vs. Fortitude; 4d6 + 6 damage, and the target is weakened (save ends). In addition, the bloodkiss beholder spends a healing surge to regain 103 hit points.

Death Scream (standard; recharge ⚄ ⚅) ✦ Psychic
Close blast 5; +11 vs. Will; 4d6 + 6 psychic damage, and the target is dazed (save ends).

Bloodied Writhe (free, when first bloodied; encounter) ✦ Necrotic
The bloodkiss beholder's death scream power recharges, and the beholder uses it immediately.

Alignment Evil Languages Deep Speech
Str 21 (+9) Dex 15 (+6) Wis 17 (+7)
Con 23 (+10) Int 12 (+5) Cha 8 (+3)

Bloodkiss Beholder Tactics

A bloodkiss beholder flies up to a group of foes and uses death scream, targeting as many enemies as possible. It takes advantage of its foes' proximity to gain attacks using unquenchable thirst and eye writhe. The beholder utilizes blood call as soon as a target becomes bloodied, and it continues to use the powers at each available opportunity. Like its living kin, the bloodkiss beholder is a practical creature that recognizes a losing fight. When pressed in combat, the creature flees.

Beholder Death Tyrant Level 15 Solo Artillery
Large aberrant magical beast (undead) XP 6,000

Initiative +14 Senses Perception +15; all-around vision, darkvision
Eyes of the Beholder aura 5; the beholder death tyrant uses one random eye ray as a free action against any enemy within the aura at the start of the enemy's turn.
HP 740; Bloodied 370
AC 29; Fortitude 29, Reflex 27, Will 29
Immune disease, poison; Resist 15 necrotic; Vulnerable 10 radiant
Saving Throws +5
Speed fly 4 (hover)
Action Points 2

⊕ Bite (standard; at-will)
+21 vs. AC; 2d4 + 1 damage.

Central Eye (minor; at-will)
Ranged 20; +22 vs. Will; the target is slowed and loses necrotic resistance until the end of the beholder death tyrant's next turn.

Eye Ray (standard; at-will) ✦ see text
The beholder death tyrant uses up to two different eye ray powers (chosen from the list below). Each ray must target a different creature, and using eye ray does not provoke opportunity attacks.
1, 2, 3, 4, 5—Withering Ray (Necrotic): Ranged 10; +19 vs. Fortitude; 1d8 + 5 necrotic damage, and ongoing 10 necrotic damage (save ends).
6—Grave Ray (Necrotic): Ranged 10; +19 vs. Reflex; 2d8 + 5 necrotic damage.
7—Fear Ray (Fear, Psychic): Ranged 10; +19 vs. Will; 1d8 + 5 psychic damage, and the target immediately moves its speed away from the beholder death tyrant. The target avoids hazardous terrain and difficult terrain if possible.
8—Entombing Ray: Ranged 10; +22 vs. Fortitude; the target is slowed (save ends). First Failed Saving Throw: The target is immobilized instead of slowed (save ends). Second Failed Saving Throw: The target is petrified (no save).
9—Death Ray (Necrotic): Ranged 10; +19 vs. Fortitude; 1d8 + 5 necrotic damage, and if the target is bloodied it is dazed (save ends). First Failed Saving Throw: The target is dazed and weakened (save ends). Second Failed Saving Throw: The target dies.
10—Reanimating Ray (Necrotic): Ranged 10; +19 vs. Fortitude; 2d10 + 5 necrotic damage. If the target is reduced to 0 hit points or fewer, the target rises as a horde ghoul (MM 118) under the beholder death tyrant's control at the end of the death tyrant's next turn.

Killing Look (immediate reaction, when an enemy within 10 squares fails a saving throw against ongoing necrotic damage) ✦ Gaze, Necrotic
Close burst 10; targets the triggering creature; +19 vs. Will; the target loses a healing surge.

Alignment Evil Languages Deep Speech
Str 12 (+8) Dex 24 (+14) Wis 17 (+10)
Con 20 (+12) Int 22 (+13) Cha 28 (+16)

Death Tyrant Tactics

A beholder death tyrant tries to remain close enough to enemies to gain the benefit of its aura while staying out of reach of melee attacks. The death tyrant uses central eye to slow nimble foes and to strip resilient enemies of necrotic resistance. It uses killing look at each opportunity, often focusing on one opponent.

Undead Beholder Lore

A character knows the following information with a successful Dungeoneering or Religion check.

DC 18: Bloodkiss beholders do not have eyes at the end of their eyestalks. Instead, the stalks can drain the blood of prey.

A death tyrant beholder is an animated corpse of an eye tyrant. Necromancer cults sometimes hunt and kill eye tyrants specifically for the purpose of animating them. A death tyrant retains many of the powers it had in life.

DC 23: The necrotic forces that reanimate a bloodkiss beholder warp and change the creature's flesh, making the monster barely akin to its living counterpart. Bloodkiss beholders have toothed, blood-draining orifices at the end of each stalk. Whenever a bloodkiss beholder drains a foe's blood, the beholder is rejuvenated.

A beholder death tyrant is more akin to a lich than a zombie. In death, it retains full mobility and reason, and it can use many of the powers it had in life. The creature also gains the use of new eye rays that can wither an opponent's flesh using necrotic energy. Additionally, the creature can strip necrotic resistance from its foes, giving its eye rays more potency.

SEAN MURRAY

Encounter Groups

Undead beholders are often encountered as lone occupants of ancient ruins or lightless caverns. However, because of their cunning and intelligence, evil creatures—particularly undead—are frequently drawn into their service. Like living beholders, undead beholders loathe serving anyone or anything. An undead beholder obeys another only if forced into service by a powerful master, such as a skilled necromancer.

Level 12 Encounter (XP 3,500)
- 2 battle wights (level 9 soldier, MM 262)

- 1 bone naga (level 16 elite controller, MM 194)

BLASPHEME

Crafted from pieces of corpses and given life through alchemy and magic, blasphemes are intelligent, cunning undead. They often guard ancient repositories of knowledge, such as wizards' libraries or shrines to dark gods.

Blasphemes have a variety of motivations, ranging from the worship of dark gods and obedience to sinister masters to the pursuit of redemption for their cursed existence.

Blaspheme Unholy Slayer Level 12 Skirmisher
Medium natural animate (construct, undead) XP 700

| Con 14 (+8) | Int 13 (+7) | Cha 14 (+8) |

Equipment cloak, 10 daggers

Blaspheme Unholy Slayer Tactics

A blaspheme unholy slayer thinks itself a monstrosity, and it believes with conviction that by sending the souls of other creatures to the afterlife, it can redeem its own tortured existence. It approaches assassination with religious devotion, targeting noble and righteous creatures in particular. In combat, a blaspheme unholy slayer singles out characters who worship good and lawful good deities. It uses sightless sands to blind opponents and then follows up with blasphemous blades and dagger attacks.

Grave Chill Blaspheme Level 12 Brute
Medium natural animate (construct, undead) XP 700

Initiative +11 Senses Perception +6; darkvision
Seeping Chill (Cold) aura 1; while the grave chill blaspheme is bloodied, any enemy that enters the aura or starts its turn within the aura takes 5 cold damage.
HP 150; Bloodied 75; see also seeping chill
AC 25; Fortitude 23, Reflex 25, Will 22

|---|---|---|
| Str 18 (+10) | Dex 21 (+11) | Wis 10 (+6) |
| Con 20 (+11) | Int 12 (+7) | Cha 13 (+7) |

Grave Chill Blaspheme Tactics

The grave chill blaspheme likes to proves its worth against melee combatants, especially defenders and melee strikers. When possible, the creature uses chill to the bone on strikers or high-damage defenders. After it has been bloodied and its seeping chill aura has activated, the creature uses nimble attack to position itself among groups of its enemies.

BLASPHEMES AS FOES

A creature constructed from the parts of dead bodies and given life, a blaspheme serves as the Frankenstein's monster of D&D. Its mindless cousin is the flesh golem, a hulking brute created for destruction. When you want a smart foe that is tactically savvy, learns from its mistakes, and talks to the PCs, a blaspheme is the better choice.

Because of the combination of a devious intellect and the touch of madness, a blaspheme can make a compelling, capable villain. Here are a few quotes that reflect the philosophy of a blaspheme:

"The void of death is cold and hungry. You'll learn that soon."

"All things die in time. Life is unnatural; it is an abomination."

"My existence is proof that death is not final. Take comfort in that fact as I bring death to you."

"I am composed of many parts, and each has felt the pain of death—a pain you will soon know."

"Your perspective is limited by your experience. You have not died, and therefore you know nothing of life."

Blaspheme Entomber Level 12 Elite Controller

Speed 6; see also grave stride
Action Points 1

⊕ Grave Slam (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
+17 vs. AC; 2d6 + 5 necrotic damage, and the target is knocked prone until it succeeds on a DC 20 Strength check to stand up.

⸸ Entomb (standard; encounter) ✦ Charm
+16 vs. Fortitude; the target is stunned and entombed 2 squares beneath the ground, blocking line of sight and line of effect to the target (save ends both). On a save, the target returns to the square it occupied before it was entombed. First Failed Saving Throw: The target is no longer entombed and returns to the surface in the square it occupied before it was entombed. The target is dominated instead of stunned (save ends).

Beckoning Gaze (minor; at-will) ✦ Charm, Gaze, Psychic
Ranged 10; +14 vs. Will; 1d8 + 5 psychic damage, and the target is pulled 4 squares.

Bloodied Entombment (free, when first bloodied; encounter)
The blaspheme entomber's entomb power recharges, and the blaspheme entomber uses it immediately.

Command of the Grave (minor; at-will)
The blaspheme entomber causes a creature dominated by it to take a free action to move its speed, shift up to 1 square, or make a melee basic attack.

Grave Stride (move; recharge ⚄ ⁞⁞)
The blaspheme entomber burrows 6 squares.

Blaspheme Entomber Tactics

The blaspheme entomber stalks graveyards and crypts, hunting for interlopers. In combat, it draws enemies close with beckoning gaze before attacking them with grave slam. Once the entomber succeeds in knocking an opponent prone, it spends an action point to use entomb on the target. The entomber typically targets foes that have low Fortitude, attacking the target it is most likely to entomb. A blaspheme entomber cannot speak because its mouth is sewn shut, but it still understands Common.

Blaspheme Disciple Tactics

Even in death, some priests remain devoted to their unholy cause. Blaspheme disciples revel in the destruction of life. In combat, a blaspheme disciple remains out of melee, unleashing unholy ray upon the weakest creatures and those with the worst defenses. After its allies have taken damage, the disciple uses words of undeath to heal them and hurt nearby opponents. The blaspheme disciple then continues to use that power at each opportunity.

Blaspheme Imperfect Level 14 Brute
Medium natural animate (construct, undead) XP 1,000

Initiative +9 Senses Perception +12; darkvision

⸸ Life Drain (standard; at-will) ✦ Healing, Necrotic
Targets a creature grabbed by the blaspheme imperfect; +15 vs. Fortitude; 2d10 + 4 necrotic damage, and the target loses a healing surge, and the blaspheme regains 10 hit points.

Bloodied Degeneration (while bloodied)
The blaspheme imperfect's body begins to degenerate, and it enters a state of bloodlust. The blaspheme gains vulnerable 5 to all damage and deals 2d6 extra damage on a hit.

Alignment Evil Languages –
Str 24 (+14) Dex 14 (+9) Wis 19 (+11)
Con 14 (+9) Int 14 (+9) Cha 12 (+8)

Blaspheme Imperfect Tactics

This blaspheme, due to its flawed creation, must suck the life from others to restore its health. A blaspheme imperfect grabs foes using deadly clutch, attempting to keep them inside its life sap aura. When bloodied, the creature begins to fall apart—stitches tear open, its flesh starts drying up, and its bones become brittle. In this state, its eyes fill with desperate hunger. The creature becomes more vulnerable to attack, but it also lashes out more violently, dealing extra damage.

Left to right: grave chill blaspheme, blaspheme entomber, blaspheme knight, blaspheme soul vessel

Blaspheme Knight Tactics

This powerfully built, well-armored blaspheme follows a code when it fights. Once it engages an opponent, it continues to try to engage that enemy throughout the fight. The creature does not use sweeping cleave unless multiple enemies gang up on it. The blaspheme knight looks poorly upon dirty tricks and unfair tactics, and it will target a foe whom it perceives as cowardly and dishonorable.

Blaspheme Lore

DC 11: Blasphemes are created from pieces of multiple corpses. Through carefully guarded rituals, these crafted forms are given life or, in a few cases, infused with the creator's intelligence. Blasphemes are smart, cunning creatures. They often guard repositories of knowledge, such as secret libraries or shrines to dark gods. Cults of Vecna or Orcus favor the use of blasphemes, preferring them over mindless servitors such as zombies and flesh golems.

DC 18: In ancient cities where dark magic was openly practiced, blasphemes were commonplace, acting as servants or soldiers. Records indicate that in a few places, armies composed entirely of blasphemes existed. When such an army was destroyed, powerful ritualists would reassemble the pieces of the fallen blasphemes, re-creating the army.

DC 23: Not all blasphemes were created for evil ends. Some were given life in the pursuit of knowledge, to befriend a xenophobic arcanist, to restore a bereaved's lost love, or to create a body in which to house one's consciousness.

Arcane Sparks (standard; at-will) ✦ Fire, Necrotic
Ranged 10; +19 vs. Reflex; 2d6 + 5 fire and necrotic damage.

Warring Wills
A blaspheme soul vessel's mind constantly struggles against the body it was placed in. At the start of the blaspheme soul vessel's turn, roll 1d6.
1-3: The body is dominant, and the blaspheme gains the lifestealing mace and exert mind powers (see Body Dominant below).
4-6: The mind is dominant, and the blaspheme gains the sphere of delusion and exert body powers (see Mind Dominant below).

Will Transfer (when the blaspheme soul vessel is hit by an attack vs. Will)
The attacker chooses whether the blaspheme soul vessel's body or mind is dominant until the end of the blaspheme's next turn.

Dominant Action
When a blaspheme soul vessel spends an action point, the creature determines whether its body or mind is dominant.

Body Dominant

Exert Body (minor 1/round; at-will) ✦ Necrotic, Weapon
The blaspheme makes a mace attack.

Lifestealing Mace (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic, Weapon
Requires mace; +20 vs. AC; 3d8 + 6 necrotic damage, and the target is dazed until the end of the blaspheme soul vessel's next turn.

Mind Dominant

Exert Mind (minor 1/round; at-will) ✦ Fire, Necrotic
The blaspheme soul vessel makes an arcane sparks attack.

Sphere of Delusion (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic, Psychic
Area burst 2 within 20; two attacks:
1. Targets enemies; +19 vs. Fortitude; 1d10 + 5 necrotic damage, and the target is blinded until the end of the blaspheme soul vessel's next turn.
2. Targets enemies; +19 vs. Will; 2d6 + 5 psychic damage, and the target is slowed (save ends).

Blaspheme Soul Vessel Tactics

A blaspheme soul vessel is created to store the mind of a dying creature. Sometimes the dead flesh used to create the blaspheme rebels, though, and the mind and body of the creature end up at war. A blaspheme soul vessel's tactics are not consistent because of the creature's inner conflict. A soul vessel always uses the attacks that are exclusive to its dominant half. If a blaspheme soul vessel's body is dominant, it moves into melee if not already engaged with opponents. If the creature's mind is dominant, it retreats from melee if engaged with opponents.

Encounter Groups

More than two or three blasphemes are rarely encountered together. In general, blasphemes avoid unintelligent undead, so they are usually found with mummies, vampires, liches, and their ilk.

Level 12 Encounter (XP 3,800)
- 1 guardian naga (level 12 elite artillery, MM 194)

Bone Yard

A bone yard is a mass of animated bones that rises up due to a tragedy, massacre, or desecration. These creatures crave the bones of the living, seeking to fill the void left by the deaths of their inhabitants.

Charnel Cinderhouse

A charnel cinderhouse is a skeletal conflagration that yearns to fill its blazing form with the bodies of living creatures so that it can strip flesh from bone and add fuel to its flames.

Charnel Cinderhouse Level 9 Solo Soldier
Large natural animate (fire, undead) XP 2,000

Initiative +8 Senses Perception +5; darkvision

⸸ Prison of Flame and Bones (standard; at-will) ✦ Fire, Necrotic
+16 vs. AC; 2d8 + 6 fire and necrotic damage, and the target is grabbed; see also crushing prison.

⸸ Crushing Prison (free 1/round; at-will)
Targets a creature grabbed by the charnel cinderhouse; 2d6 + 6 damage (no attack roll required).

⸸ Charnel Action (free, when an enemy within 2 squares of the cinderhouse is reduced to 0 hit points or fewer; at-will)
Make a charnel slam attack against the triggering creature.

✧ Charnel Pyre (when first bloodied and again when the charnel cinderhouse is reduced to 0 hit points) ✦ Fire, Necrotic
Close burst 3; +13 vs. Fortitude; 2d6 fire damage plus 2d6 necrotic damage. Miss: Half damage.

Rejuvenation
A charnel cinderhouse rises at full hit points one day after it has been destroyed. Performing the Gentle Repose ritual on the creature's remains destroys the creature completely, preventing it from using the rejuvenation power.

Alignment Chaotic evil Languages –
Str 20 (+9) Dex 15 (+6) Wis 12 (+5)
Con 18 (+8) Int 3 (+0) Cha 17 (+7)

Charnel Cinderhouse Tactics

A charnel cinderhouse begins combat by spending an action point to attack twice with prison of flame and bones in an attempt to grab two opponents. The creature then focuses its attacks on the weakest creature until that target is reduced to 0 hit points or fewer, at which point it uses charnel action before turning its attention to a new opponent.

Charnel Cinderhouse Lore

DC 14: Charnel cinderhouses arise when a conflagration consumes a building and kills the inhabitants.

DC 19: A charnel cinderhouse rises one day after its destruction unless a Gentle Repose ritual is performed on its remains.

Pit of the Abandoned Regiment

Born of the rotting, skeletal remains of soldiers left to die after battle, the pit of the abandoned regiment is a force driven by hatred and revenge.

Pit of the Abandoned Regiment Level 14 Solo Soldier
Huge natural animate (earth, undead) XP 5,000

Initiative +12 Senses Perception +8; darkvision, tremorsense 5

⸸ Bone Grab (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
Reach 3; +17 vs. Reflex; 2d10 + 10 necrotic damage, and the target is grabbed; see also crushing hate.

⸸ Crushing Hate (minor 1/round; at-will)
Targets a creature grabbed by the pit of the abandoned regiment; +17 vs. Fortitude; 3d10 + 10 damage.

✧ Skeletal Eruption (when first bloodied and again when the pit of the abandoned regiment is reduced to 0 hit points) ✦ Necrotic
Close burst 5; +17 vs. Reflex; 5d6 necrotic damage. Miss: Half damage.

Regimental Discipline
When the pit spends an action point to take an extra action, it also gains an extra move action or minor action.

Rejuvenation
A pit of the abandoned regiment rises at full hit points one day after it has been destroyed. Performing the Gentle Repose ritual on the creature's remains destroys the creature completely, preventing it from using the rejuvenation power.

Alignment Chaotic evil Languages –

Str 22 (+13) Dex 16 (+10) Wis 12 (+8)
Con 20 (+12) Int 5 (+4) Cha 18 (+11)

Pit of the Abandoned Regiment Tactics

A pit of the abandoned regiment lies underground until creatures pass above it. The creature then rises up, using bone grab to seize a target. It then uses crushing hate on the grabbed victim and unleashes regimental retaliation on a new target.

Pit of the Abandoned Regiment Lore

DC 18: This creature is the amalgamated remains of a regiment of soldiers that was left to die after a battle. It rises from the ground and crushes enemies in a cage of earth and bone.

DC 23: A pit of the abandoned regiment rises one day after its destruction unless a Gentle Repose ritual is performed on its remains.

Desecration

A desecration is the animated remains of a desecrated cemetery. Rage consumes the creature, and it lives only to destroy.

| Desecration | Level 23 Solo Controller |
|---|---|
| Gargantuan natural animate (earth, undead) | XP 25,500 |
| Initiative +14 | Senses Perception +14; darkvision |
| Aura of Malevolence (Fear) aura 10; any enemy within the aura that attacks with a radiant power takes a -2 penalty to the attack roll. | |

| ✧ Dark Plague (when first bloodied and again when the desecration is reduced to 0 hit points) ✦ Necrotic | |
| Close burst 20; targets enemies; +24 vs. Fortitude; the target is weakened (save ends). In addition, the target loses a healing surge. Miss: Half damage, and the target is weakened until the end of its next turn. The target does not lose a healing surge. | |
| Rejuvenation | |
| A desecration rises at full hit points one day after it has been destroyed. Only a quest destroys the creature completely, preventing it from using the rejuvenation power. | |
| Second Wind (standard; encounter) ✦ Healing | |
| The desecration spends a healing surge and regains 269 hit points. The desecration gains a +2 bonus to all defenses until the start of its next turn. | |
| Alignment Chaotic evil | Languages – |

Desecration Tactics

A desecration is fueled by a desire to consume the living. It prefers to attack divine characters, believing them to have failed in their duty to safeguard the cemetery. It focuses on one or two targets at a time, grabbing them with mouth of darkness and afflicting them with ongoing damage using unholy smite.

AMELIA STONER

Desecration Lore

DC 24: This creature arises when a cemetery is desecrated by the community that created it.

DC 29: A desecration rises one day after its destruction unless a great quest is performed to bring peace to the creature.

Encounter Groups

When bone yards form, their skeletal parts often give rise to skeletons and other undead.

Level 13 Encounter (XP 4,000)
- ✦ 1 charnel cinderhouse (level 9 solo soldier)
- ✦ 2 death kin skeletons (level 9 lurker, page 181)
- ✦ 2 spine creep skeletons (level 11 soldier, page 182)

Level 15 Encounter (XP 6,300)
- ✦ 4 nighthaunt slips (level 12 minion, page 170)
- ✦ 1 pit of the abandoned regiment (level 14 solo soldier)
- ✦ 4 skeletal haulers (level 11 minion, page 182)

Level 23 Encounter (XP 31,875)
- ✦ 4 abyssal ghoul myrmidons (level 23 minion, MM 119)
- ✦ 1 bone collector ooze (level 22 brute, page 175)
- ✦ 1 desecration (level 23 solo controller)

Brain in a Jar

A brain in a jar is the preserved brain of a sinister being who sought to escape death. Through ritual magic and complicated alchemical processes, the brain is kept alive, retaining all the memories and mental faculties of its former host. The creature usually has some malevolent goal that could not be achieved in life, which drove the brain's former host to take desperate measures to achieve longevity.

Brain in a Broken Jar Level 4 Controller
Small natural animate XP 175

Initiative +2 Senses Perception +5; darkvision

Speed fly 4 (hover)

Dominate (standard; at-will) ✦ Charm
Ranged 10; +7 vs. Will; the target is dominated until the end of the brain in a broken jar's next turn.

Mind Stab (standard; at-will) ✦ Psychic
Close burst 3; targets enemies; +8 vs. Will; 1d6 + 4 psychic damage, and the target takes a -2 penalty to Will (save ends).

Faulty Invisibility (minor; recharge ⚅ ⚅ ⚅) ✦ Illusion
The brain becomes invisible until the start of its next turn.

Alignment Evil Languages Common, telepathy 10
Skills Arcana +11, Bluff +9, Diplomacy +9
Str 6 (+0) Dex 10 (+2) Wis 16 (+5)
Con 10 (+2) Int 18 (+6) Cha 14 (+4)

Brain in a Broken Jar Tactics

Despite the brain's insanity, it recognizes its physical vulnerability. It tries to maintain invisibility while keeping distant from enemies. A brain in a broken jar uses mind thrust to weaken an opponent's Will before attempting to use dominate on the target. The brain typically orders a dominated creature to either defend it or to leave the area.

Brain in a Jar Tactics

Anything that disturbs this brain's private meditations antagonizes the creature. However, the brain knows its physical weakness, so it enters combat only as a last resort. The creature attempts to threaten, negotiate, or fool a foe before attacking.

If forced into combat, a brain in a jar uses mind thrust on the opponent that appears most susceptible. It then dominates the target and orders it to attack other foes. The creature employs telekinetic thrust to push away opponents, especially toward obstacles and other dangers.

Brain in an Armored Jar Level 9 Artillery
Medium natural animate XP 400

Initiative +7 Senses Perception +6; darkvision
HP 77; Bloodied 38
AC 22; Fortitude 20, Reflex 18, Will 20
Speed fly 6 (hover)

Slam (standard; at-will)
+12 vs. AC; 1d6 + 4 damage.

Psychic Overload (standard; recharge ⚅) ✦ Psychic
Ranged 8; +12 vs. Will; the target loses a healing surge, and the brain in an armored jar makes a secondary attack against another creature in range. Secondary Attack: +10 vs. Will; the target takes psychic damage equal to the first target's healing surge value.

Electrical Discharge (standard; at-will) ✦ Lightning
Close burst 3; +14 vs. Reflex; 1d10 + 4 lightning damage, and the target is dazed (save ends). Miss: Half damage, and the target is not dazed.

Alignment Evil Languages Common, telepathy 10

Brain in an Armored Jar Tactics

This is the quickest type of brain in a jar to leap into combat. It unleashes electrical discharge to daze opponents and then slams into them with its heavy jar. A brain in an armored jar uses psychic overload when possible, targeting the most threatening creatures.

Exalted Brain in a Jar Level 12 Controller
Medium natural animate XP 700

Initiative +7 Senses Perception +9; darkvision
HP 123; Bloodied 61
AC 26; Fortitude 22, Reflex 18, Will 24
Speed fly 6 (hover)

Teleportation Field (immediate reaction, when an enemy hits the exalted brain in a jar with a melee attack; at-will) ✦ Teleportation
Targets the triggering creature; +16 vs. Will; the target is teleported up to 8 squares.

Fearful Recoil (minor; at-will)
Ranged 8; +14 vs. Will; the target immediately moves its speed plus 4 squares away from the exalted brain in a jar. The target avoids hazardous terrain and difficult terrain if possible.

Supreme Domination (standard; recharge ⚅ ⚅) ✦ Charm
Ranged 10; +15 vs. Will; the target is dominated (save ends).

Mind Stab (standard; at-will) ✦ Psychic
Close burst 5; +16 vs. Will; 1d10 + 8 psychic damage, and the target takes a -2 penalty to Will (save ends).

Alignment Evil Languages Common, telepathy 10
Skills Arcana +16, Bluff +15, Diplomacy +15, Intimidate +15

Con 19 (+10) Int 21 (+11) Cha 18 (+10)

Exalted Brain in a Jar Tactics

This brain is a master of deflection and evasion. An exalted brain in a jar uses teleportation field to send away attacks while bombarding its enemies with attacks. The creature uses mind thrust to weaken an opponent's willpower before employing supreme domination to capture the target's mind.

Brain in a Jar Lore

DC 14: Different kinds of brains in jars exist, though each is created using the same principles.

A brain in a broken jar is created through incomplete rituals, spoiling fluids, or damaged containers. A brain in a broken jar is usually deranged.

A brain placed within a more heavily armored container retains its sanity. The armored jar protects the brain from harm or serves as an eternal prison for the brain inside. In a few rare cases, these armored brains exist to chronicle past history and lore.

The most powerful of these creatures is the exalted brain in a jar. This is a brain taken from a powerful creature by devotees to preserve the subject's knowledge and wisdom.

In general, a brain in a jar prefers an isolated existence. Some wall themselves within former laboratories and dungeons, where they slip into madness.

DC 19: The preservation fluid within a brain's jar is a valuable alchemical material, especially useful for crafting undead. Some alchemists claim that the fluid can be distilled into an elixir that imparts the memory and knowledge of the jar's occupant brain.

DC 21: The brains of these creatures often come from cult leaders or advisors, whom the subject's associates have tried to eternally preserve. While such brains are usually evil, it is sometimes possible to return a brain to its host body to grant it a peaceful death.

Encounter Groups

The brains often draft constructs and undead to guard them against intruders.

Level 3 Encounter (XP 775)
- ✦ 1 bonewretch skeleton (level 4 skirmisher, page 180)
- ✦ 1 brain in a broken jar (level 4 controller)

- ✦ 1 spine creep skeleton (level 11 soldier, page 182)

Crawling Claw

This severed hand or paw has been animated by foul magic. Some crawling claws exist as lone creatures, while others are made up of many claws. Regardless of their makeup, all crawling claws move at a frenetic pace, clawing at potential threats.

| Crawling Claw | Level 1 Minion |
|---|---|
| Tiny natural animate (undead) | XP 25 |
| Initiative +3 | Senses Perception +0; tremorsense 10 |

Crawling Claw Tactics

Crawling claws scamper around a creature, using their speed and ability to climb to gain an advantageous position. Multiple crawling claws try to gang up on a single target, slowing its movement to allow more formidable creatures to kill it.

| Crawling Gauntlet | Level 3 Minion |
|---|---|
| Tiny natural animate (undead) | XP 200 |
| Initiative +5 | Senses Perception +2; tremorsense 10 |
| HP 1; a missed attack never damages a minion. | |

| Str 7 (-1) | Dex 18 (+5) Wis 12 (+2) |
| Con 15 (+3) | Int 3 (-3) Cha 10 (+1) |

Crawling Gauntlet Tactics

A crawling gauntlet follows the bidding of its host or creator without regard for self-preservation. Like crawling claws, crawling gauntlets attempt to gang up on a single enemy. When in combat with other creatures, crawling gauntlets try to immobilize mobile enemies, allowing their allies to eliminate the threat.

| Crawling Claw Swarm | Level 4 Soldier |
|---|---|
| Medium natural animate (swarm, undead) | XP 175 |
| Initiative +7 | Senses Perception +5; tremorsense 10 |
| Swarm Attack aura 1; the crawling claw swarm makes a swarm of claws attack as a free action against any enemy that starts its turn within the aura. | |
| HP 53; Bloodied 26 | |
| AC 20; Fortitude 16, Reflex 17, Will 14 | |

| Con 13 (+3) | Int 3 (-2) Cha 6 (+0) |

Crawling Claw Swarm Tactics

Crawling claw swarms attempt to move in amid a cluster of enemies, clawing at all nearby creatures. They retreat when faced with close or area attacks and search for less dangerous prey. Crawling claw swarms pursue enemies they perceive as less formidable, attempting to immobilize them.

MATTHIAS KOLLROS

| Lich Claw | Level 14 Minion |
|---|---|
| Tiny natural animate (undead) | XP 250 |
| Initiative +16 Senses Perception +8; tremorsense 10 | |

| Con 22 (+17) Int 3 (+7) Cha 10 (+11) | |

Dragonclaw Swarm Tactics

These swarms of claws position themselves among groups of enemies and attack all nearby creatures. They shrink away from close and area attacks. However, they rely on dragonclaw pin to incapacitate any enemy that might be trying to hit them with close or area attacks.

Crawling Claw Lore

DC 12: Crawling claws are severed hands, feet, or paws that have been animated by necromantic rituals or by spontaneous necrotic energy. They latch on to a victim, slowing or immobilizing it.

DC 17: The most basic crawling claw is crafted from any hand or paw.

Crawling gauntlets are severed hands enchanted or trained to serve as minions.

Crawling claw swarms are the result of numerous severed limbs lost in a horrible battle. Sometimes the limbs animate on their own; other times, necromancers sweep a battlefield for useful pieces.

Liches that want to humiliate and dominate their rivals seek out other liches to acquire pieces to make lich claws. Many lich claws occur spontaneously, due to the saturation of necrotic energy in the chambers of defeated liches.

Dragonclaw swarms are the result of necromantic experiments with dragon bones.

Encounter Groups

Crawling claws are usually found in the service of evil cultists or mages.

Level 2 Encounter (XP 600)
- 4 crawling claws (level 1 minion)
- 2 famine hounds (level 2 skirmisher, page 158)
- 1 gnome arcanist (level 3 controller, MM 134)
- 4 rot hounds (level 1 minion, page 158)

Level 2 Encounter (XP 600)

Level 25 Encounter (XP 33,800)
- 1 blackfire dracolich (level 23 solo controller, MM 73)
- 2 dragonclaw swarms (level 22 brute)

DEATHTRITUS

The presence of necrotic energy can animate flesh, but it can also give unlife to refuse and residue, forming a deathtritus.

Tomb Mote

What this tiny, implike creature lacks in intelligence, it makes up for in mischief. Tomb motes often dwell in graveyards and mausoleums, where they harass grieving visitors.

| Tomb Mote | Level 3 Minion |
|---|---|
| Tiny natural animate (undead) | XP 38 |
| Initiative +9 Senses Perception +4; darkvision | |
| HP 1; a missed attack never damages a minion. | |
| AC 17; Fortitude 13, Reflex 18, Will 14 | |
| Immune disease, poison; Resist 10 necrotic | |
| Speed 8 | |
| ⨭ Bite (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic | |
| +8 vs. AC; 3 necrotic damage, and ongoing 2 necrotic damage (save ends). | |
| Tomb Tactics | |
| When a tomb mote hits a target adjacent to three or more tomb motes, it instead deals 6 damage and ongoing 5 necrotic damage (save ends). | |
| Alignment Unaligned Languages – | |
| Skills Stealth +14 | |
| Str 8 (+0) Dex 26 (+9) Wis 16 (+4) | |
| Con 17 (+4) Int 4 (-2) Cha 14 (+3) | |

Tomb Mote Tactics

Tomb motes scurry around in the shadows, trying to surprise visitors in their domain. They like to harry a single target to gain the benefit of tomb tactics. If a target seems threatening, they slip back into the darkness until a weaker victim comes along.

Tomb Mote Lore

DC 15: Tomb motes are made up of the animated bone, dust, hair, and flesh particles that accumulate in tombs. They are usually found in areas filled with necrotic energy. The creatures can be quite mischievous.

Offalian

Composed of the butchered flesh, rotting organs, and pungent fluids of humanoids and livestock, these snakelike creatures crave the taste of fresh meat.

| Offalian | Level 6 Brute |
|---|---|
| Large natural animate (undead) | XP 250 |
| Initiative +8 Senses Perception +5; darkvision | |
| HP 88; Bloodied 44 | |
| AC 18; Fortitude 21, Reflex 18, Will 15 | |

| Speed 7, climb 7 | |
| ⨭ Bite (standard; at-will) | |
| Reach 2; +9 vs. AC; 2d6 + 7 damage, and the target is grabbed; see also clamp down. An offalian can have only one creature grabbed at a time. | |
| ⨽ Clamp Down (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic | |
| Targets a creature grabbed by the offalian; 1d10 + 7 necrotic damage (no attack roll required). | |
| ⇙ Effluvia Expulsion (minor; recharge ⚄ ⚅) ✦ Acid, Necrotic | |
| Close blast 3; +7 vs. Reflex; 2d8 + 11 acid and necrotic damage, and the target is blinded (save ends). | |
| Alignment Unaligned Languages – | |
| Str 22 (+9) Dex 20 (+8) Wis 15 (+5) | |
| Con 18 (+7) Int 5 (+0) Cha 11 (+3) | |

Offalian Tactics

An offalian prefers to rush an opponent. The creature bites a foe, grabbing the target and keeping it held while using clamp down. If multiple enemies approach an offalian, it hisses and releases a gout of acidic effluvia that burns and blinds would-be attackers.

Offalian Lore

DC 15: Offalians are undead serpents that form when people or animals are senselessly butchered and left to rot. They are composed of the organs and bodily fluids of the slain creatures. The creatures are filled with an unquenchable hunger that drives them to attack most living creatures.

DANIEL RUDNICKI

Osteopede

Created from dirt, dust, and crushed bone, the osteopede is a centipedelike creature that skitters rapidly across the ground. The creature is infused with necrotic energy, which it releases with each bite and each slash of its jagged legs.

Osteopede Level 8 Elite Skirmisher
Medium natural animate (undead) XP 700

Initiative +14 Senses Perception +7; darkvision
Bone Scraping Stone (Fear) aura 5; any enemy within the aura takes a -2 penalty to attack rolls and damage rolls.
HP 178; Bloodied 89
AC 24; Fortitude 21, Reflex 22, Will 21
Immune disease, poison; Resist 10 necrotic

Speed 9, climb 9; see also bite and skittering rake
Action Points 1

⊕ Bite (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
The osteopede shifts up to 2 squares before or after the attack; +13 vs. AC; 1d8 + 5 damage, and ongoing 5 necrotic damage (save ends).

⸸ Skittering Rake (standard; recharge ⚄ ⁞⁞) ✦ Necrotic
The osteopede shifts up to 9 squares and makes up to three attacks during its move; +13 vs. Reflex; 2d4 + 6 damage, and ongoing 5 necrotic damage (save ends).

Deep Lacerations
An osteopede deals 2d6 extra damage when it hits a target it has combat advantage against.

Necrotic Advantage
An osteopede gains combat advantage against a creature affected by ongoing necrotic damage.

Alignment Unaligned Languages –
Str 18 (+8) Dex 26 (+12) Wis 17 (+7)
Con 17 (+7) Int 12 (+5) Cha 14 (+6)

Osteopede Tactics

An osteopede skitters around the battlefield, never staying in one place for long. Whenever possible, it uses its skittering rake to attack multiple enemies.

Osteopede Lore

DC 15: Osteopedes are undead centipedes that form from dirt and bone in places of death. They also sometimes arise from pastures where bone fragments were used as fertilizer.

Dragonscale Slough

This slithering pile of molted scales often forms where a dragon has died or has spent a considerable amount of time. The sloughs have many of the same attitudes and instincts of their progenitors, and they are quite hostile.

Dragonscale Slough Level 18 Minion
Medium natural animate (undead) XP 500

Initiative +15 Senses Perception +11; darkvision
HP 1; a missed attack never damages a minion.
AC 33; Fortitude 29, Reflex 30, Will 31
Immune disease, poison; Resist 10 necrotic
Speed 6, climb 6 (spider climb)

⊕ Grabbing Slam (standard; at-will)
+25 vs. AC; 9 damage, and the target is grabbed; see also squeezing scales.

⸸ Squeezing Scales (standard; at-will)
Targets a creature grabbed by the dragonscale slough; 9 damage (no attack roll required).

Skills Stealth +20
Alignment Unaligned Languages –
Str 20 (+14) Dex 22 (+15) Wis 14 (+11)
Con 22 (+15) Int 1 (+4) Cha 8 (+8)

Dragonscale Slough Tactics

Dragonscale sloughs climb up walls and then drop down on unwary prey. Once a slough grabs a creature, it uses squeezing scales to constrict the opponent.

Dragonscale Slough Lore

DC 20: A dragonscale slough is made of the animated flesh and scales that fall from dragons. It is common for multiple sloughs to form in the lairs of older dragons.

Encounter Groups

Various forms of deathtritus are often found alongside undead and other nonliving creatures.

Level 3 Encounter (XP 775)
- ✦ 1 deathlock wight (level 4 controller, MM 262)
- ✦ 3 skeletons (level 3 soldier, MM 234)
- ✦ 4 tomb motes (level 3 minion)

Level 7 Encounter (XP 1,550)
- ✦ 2 offalians (level 6 brute)
- ✦ 1 osteopede (level 8 elite skirmisher)
- ✦ 1 dragon shell (level 8 soldier, page 148)

Level 18 Encounter (XP 10,000)
- ✦ 4 abyssal ghoul hungerers (level 18 minion, MM 119)
- ✦ 1 darkflame taskmaster (level 17 elite controller, page 168)
- ✦ 4 dragonscale sloughs (level 18 minion)
- ✦ 1 spirit ooze (level 16 elite lurker, page 175)

Flesh Cult

Flesh cults worship death but do not seek eternal life. Members of flesh cults create temporary servants from dead flesh and turn their own organs into weapons. Flesh cults disdain those who seek eternal life and those who create permanent undead servants. Each cult is highly clandestine, and it reviles intruders and those who might try to steal its secrets.

Flesh Scamp

These child-sized creatures appear to be animated piles of flesh that trundle like hideous, misshapen toddlers. They act at the behest of their flesh cult masters.

Flesh Scamp Level 12 Minion
Small natural animate (homunculus) XP 175

Initiative +9 Senses Perception +6; darkvision
HP 1; a missed attack never damages a minion.
AC 25; Fortitude 23, Reflex 21, Will 19
Immune disease; Resist 5 necrotic
Speed 7, climb 7

⊕ Slam (standard; at-will)
+19 vs. AC; 6 damage.

↓ Scamps' Dance (standard action, while at least three flesh scamps are adjacent to the target; at-will)
+16 vs. AC; 2 damage per flesh scamp adjacent to the target, and the target is immobilized until the end of the flesh scamp's next turn. If the target is already immobilized, the target is instead dazed until the end of the flesh scamp's next turn. If the target is already dazed, the attack deals 2 extra damage.

Alignment Unaligned Languages –
Str 8 (+5) Dex 16 (+9) Wis 11 (+6)
Con 18 (+10) Int 4 (+3) Cha 7 (+4)

Flesh Scamp Tactics

Flesh scamps hunt in packs. They try to surround a target, forming a ring of hypnotic flesh that prevents their foe from moving.

Flesh Scamp Lore

DC 20: A flesh cult is composed of three tiers. The lowest tier is made up of the barely intelligent flesh scamps, which are created from the flesh of slaughtered beasts. They are transient creatures and exist for only a short time before collapsing back into heaps of flesh.

Flesh Acolyte

Flesh acolytes are the devotees and underpriests of a flesh cult. Flesh and organs cascade off the bodies of these robed acolytes, falling to the ground before slithering back up.

Flesh Acolyte Level 14 Artillery
Medium natural humanoid XP 1,000

Initiative +10 Senses Perception +11, darkvision
Sickening Stench aura 2; any living creature that starts its turn within the aura is weakened until the end of its next turn.
HP 109; Bloodied 54
Regeneration 5
AC 28; Fortitude 25, Reflex 25, Will 28
Immune disease; Resist 5 necrotic; Vulnerable 10 radiant

Flesh Acolyte Tactics

Flesh acolytes throw globs of flesh at foes while their allies engage in melee. They show no fear in melee themselves, relying on their sickening stench to weaken those who dare to attack them.

MATS MINNIGAN

Flesh Acolyte Lore

DC 25: A flesh cult has three tiers. Flesh acolytes make up most of the membership. To enter the cult, they undergo a ritual that gives their bodies regenerative properties. The ritual devastates their bodies, creating a perpetual cascade of flesh and organs.

Hooded Master

These powerful necromancers radiate auras of necrotic strength. They are cowled from head to toe in black robes, and they are the leaders of a flesh cult.

| Hooded Master | Level 16 Elite Controller |
|---|---|
| Medium natural humanoid | XP 2,800 |

Hooded Master Tactics
A hooded master prefers to avoid melee and instead hurls bits of organ at foes. When enemies come too close, it uses its staff to knock them away. If a hooded master is bloodied, it removes its organs, expanding and animating the pieces to create an organ wretch.

Hooded Master Lore

DC 20: A flesh cult is composed of three tiers. The hooded masters represent the top tier. They are powerful necromancers that can remove their eyes and organs to create temporary animates. To gain this power, a flesh acolyte must drink from a sacred skull chalice that bestows the drinker with the power to mold and animate flesh.

DC 25: No one knows why flesh cults form. Some say they were enemies of liches, necromancers, and anyone who created undead. Others speculate that they are vestiges of a time when the Raven Queen was less opposed to necromantic experimentation.

Organ Wretch

These horrifying creatures consist of the animated, disembodied organs of a creature. Bloated and empowered with necrotic energy, the organs form vaguely humanoid creatures that do their masters' bidding.

| Organ Wretch | Level 16 Elite Brute |
|---|---|
| Medium natural animate (homunculus) | XP 2,800 |

Organ Wretch Tactics
An organ wretch rushes groups of foes, trying to constrain enemies.

Organ Wretch Lore

DC 20: An organ wretch is created from the innards of necromancers who animate the parts with necrotic energy. They are intelligent animates that obey their masters without question. An organ wretch is usually the product of a hooded master.

Encounter Groups
Flesh cults are usually encountered as a cohesive unit within a secret temple or ruin.

Level 17 Encounter (XP 8300)
- ✦ 2 flesh acolytes (level 14 artillery)
- ✦ 4 flesh scamps (level 12 minion)
- ✦ 1 hooded master (level 16 elite controller)
- ✦ 1 organ wretch (level 16 elite brute; after hooded master is bloodied)

FORSAKEN SHELL

A forsaken shell is skin ripped from a creature's body and then animated purposefully or spontaneously by foul magic. The primary motivation of forsaken shells is to propagate their kind, though they also hunt living creatures for sport.

Forsaken Shell Level 6 Skirmisher
Medium natural animate (undead) XP 250

Initiative +12 Senses Perception +5; darkvision
HP 70; Bloodied 35
AC 20; Fortitude 16, Reflex 20, Will 18
Immune disease, poison; Resist 10 necrotic
Speed 8, climb 8; see also envelop

⊕ Necrotic Slap (standard; at-will) ✦ Healing, Necrotic
+11 vs. AC; 1d6 damage plus 5 necrotic damage, and the target is grabbed; see also envelop. In addition, the target loses a healing surge, and the forsaken shell regains 5 hit points.

⸸ Envelop (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
Targets a creature grabbed by the forsaken shell; the forsaken shell shifts up to 3 squares before or after the attack, pulling the target with it; 2d6 + 3 necrotic damage (no attack roll required).

Combat Advantage
A forsaken shell deals 2d6 extra damage when it hits a target it has combat advantage against.

Flexibility (immediate interrupt, when the forsaken shell would be immobilized, restrained, pushed, pulled, or slid; at-will)
The forsaken shell makes a saving throw. On a save, the triggering effect is negated.

Spawn Shell
When a forsaken shell kills a Medium living humanoid creature, the slain creature rises as a free-willed forsaken shell at the start of its creator's next turn.

Alignment Unaligned Languages –
Skills Stealth +15
Str 12 (+4) Dex 24 (+10) Wis 15 (+5)
Con 14 (+5) Int 14 (+5) Cha 13 (+4)

Forsaken Shell Tactics

Forsaken shells use their speed and stealth to ambush prey. A forsaken shell climbs along ledges and walls to find ideal places to hide. Then the creature quickly slithers out and attacks a target, using necrotic slap and then envelop. Forsaken shells focus on one opponent, though they also look for opportunities to gain combat advantage. If too many opponents are engaging a forsaken shell in melee, it retreats and tries to find a more defensible position.

Dragon Shell Level 8 Soldier
Large natural animate (dragon, undead) XP 350

Initiative +8 Senses Perception +11; darkvision
HP 92; Bloodied 46
AC 24; Fortitude 21, Reflex 20, Will 19
Immune disease, poison; Resist 10 necrotic; Vulnerable 10 radiant
Speed 6, fly 4; see also clench

⊕ Bite (standard; at-will) ✦ Healing; Acid, Cold, Fire, Lightning or Poison
Reach 2; +15 vs. AC; 1d10 + 5 damage plus 1d6 acid, cold, fire, lightning, or poison damage, depending on the dragon shell's origin dragon, and the target is grabbed; see also clench. In addition, the target loses a healing surge, and the dragon shell regains 5 hit points.

⸸ Clench (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
Targets a creature grabbed by the forsaken shell; the dragon shell shifts up to 3 squares before or after the attack, pulling the target with it; 1d10 + 5 necrotic damage (no attack roll required).

Breath Weapon (standard; recharge ⚄ ⚅)
Close blast 5; +13 vs. Reflex; 3d8 + 5 acid, cold, fire, lightning, or poison damage, depending on the dragon shell's origin dragon.

Flexibility (immediate interrupt, when the forsaken shell would be immobilized, restrained, pushed, pulled, or slid; at-will)
The forsaken shell makes saving throw. On a save, the triggering effect is negated.

Spawn Shell
When the forsaken shell kills a living dragon creature, the slain creature rises as a free-willed dragon shell at the start of its creator's next turn.

Alignment Unaligned Languages –
Str 22 (+10) Dex 14 (+6) Wis 15 (+6)
Con 20 (+9) Int 14 (+6) Cha 13 (+5)

Dragon Shell Tactics

Dragon shells are braver than forsaken shells, using toughness over speed. A dragon shell uses its bite and clench attacks to keep a single foe engaged. If a dragon shell is close to multiple enemies, it unleashes its breath weapon on the group. Once a dragon shell gauges its enemies' strengths, it attacks the creatures it perceives as weak or those that seem most capable of hurting it—usually strikers or opponents that deal radiant damage.

Titan Shell Level 12 Brute
Large natural animate (giant, undead) XP 250

Initiative +14 Senses Perception +9; darkvision
HP 149; Bloodied 74
AC 24; Fortitude 24, Reflex 26, Will 23
Immune disease, poison; Resist 15 necrotic
Speed 7, climb 7; see also absorb life

⊕ Necrotic Slap (standard; at-will) ✦ Healing, Necrotic
Reach 2; +15 vs. AC; 2d6 + 3 damage plus 5 necrotic damage, and the target is grabbed; see also absorb life. In addition, the target loses a healing surge, and the forsaken shell regains 10 hit points.

⸸ Absorb Life (minor 1/round; at-will) ✦ Healing, Necrotic
Targets a creature grabbed by the titan shell; the titan shell shifts up to 2 squares before or after the attack, pulling the target with it; +13 vs. Fortitude; the target loses a healing surge, and the forsaken shell regains 10 hit points.

Flexibility (immediate interrupt, when the titan shell would be immobilized, restrained, pushed, pulled, or slid; at-will)
The titan shell makes a saving throw. On a save, the triggering effect is negated and the titan shell can make a necrotic slap attack as a free action.

Spawn Shell
When a titan shell kills a Large living humanoid creature, the slain creature rises as a free-willed titan shell at the start of its creator's next turn.

Alignment Unaligned Languages –

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Str 18 (+10) | Dex 26 (+14) | Wis 16 (+9) |
| Con 19 (+10) | Int 11 (+6) | Cha 14 (+8) |

Titan Shell Tactics

A titan shell has few tactics in combat. The creature utilizes its speed to slither up to an enemy and quickly engage the target using necrotic slap. Once the shell has a creature grabbed, it follows up with absorb life, which it continues to use as long as possible. A titan shell rarely focuses its attacks on one creature, relying on strength over strategy to defeat its foes.

Forsaken Shell Lore

SEAN MURRAY

DC 15: Forsaken shells arise when skin is ripped from the flesh of a living target. The flesh is then animated either through the actions of a necromancer or through spontaneous necrotic energy. Forsaken shells have incredible elasticity and flexibility. They can easily escape many forms of restraint.

DC 18: Forsaken shells propagate their kind by ripping the skin off their victims, assimilating it, and then exuding it as a new monster. In this way, one forsaken shell can spawn thousands of its kind, creating an army of animate skin.

DC 21: Numerous kinds of forsaken shells exist. Each kind of creature victimized by a forsaken shell has the potential to become a new kind of shell. Humans, giants, and dragons are the most common targets of forsaken shells.

Encounter Groups

Forsaken shells are usually found with others of their kind or with flesh-eating creatures.

Level 6 Encounter (XP 1,250 XP)
- 2 forsaken shells (level 6 skirmisher)
- 1 poltergeist (level 6 artillery, page 150)
- 1 stench ghoul (level 6 elite soldier, page 154)

Level 7 Encounter (XP 1,550 XP)

GHOST

Infused by dark emotions and binding Shadowfell energy, ghosts wander the world's haunted places, persisting in a tormented, shadowy state of existence.

A ghost's visage, when visible, can take any number of aspects. This form varies from swirling mist, to empty armor or clothing, to a wispy humanoid shape that resembles the spirit's former appearance.

Poltergeist Level 6 Artillery
Medium shadow humanoid (undead) XP 250

Initiative +8 Senses Perception +6; darkvision
HP 42; Bloodied 21
AC 18; Fortitude 17, Reflex 18, Will 18
Immune disease, poison; Resist insubstantial
Speed fly 6 (hover); phasing; see also flinging rebuke

⊕ Spirit Touch (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
+13 vs. AC; 1d6 + 6 necrotic damage.

↛ Hurl Away (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
Ranged 10; +11 vs. Reflex; 1d6 + 8 necrotic damage, and the target is pushed 3 squares.

↛ Kinetic Claw (standard; recharge ⚄ ⁞⁞) ✦ Necrotic
Ranged 10; +11 vs. Fortitude; 2d6 + 10 necrotic damage, and the target slides 5 squares and is restrained (save ends).

Flinging Rebuke (immediate interrupt, when an enemy moves adjacent to the poltergeist; encounter) ✦ Necrotic
The poltergeist shifts up to 1 square and uses hurl away on the triggering enemy. If the attack hits, the target is knocked prone.

Alignment Unaligned Languages Common
Skills Stealth +15
Str 15 (+5) Dex 20 (+8) Wis 16 (+6)
Con 17 (+6) Int 13 (+4) Cha 20 (+8)

Poltergeist Tactics

A poltergeist begins battle by finding a high perch from which to strike with kinetic claw and hurl away. Poltergeists are cowardly ghosts. A poltergeist retreats from an enemy if it becomes engaged in melee and flees from battle if it seems as though combat might lead to its destruction.

Servile Ghost Level 11 Minion
Medium shadow humanoid (undead) XP 150

Initiative +9 Senses Perception +6; darkvision
Faceless Dread (Fear) aura 2; any living creature that starts its turn within the aura takes a -2 penalty to saving throws until the end of its next turn.
HP 1; a missed attack never damages a minion.
AC 26; Fortitude 24, Reflex 22, Will 21
Immune disease, poison; Resist insubstantial
Speed 6; phasing

⊕ Spirit Touch (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
+15 vs. Reflex; 7 necrotic damage, or 9 necrotic damage if the target is granting combat advantage to the servile ghost.

Alignment Unaligned Languages Common
Str 20 (+10) Dex 18 (+9) Wis 13 (+6)
Con 12 (+6) Int 13 (+6) Cha 9 (+4)

Servile Ghost Tactics

When servile ghosts engage in melee, they look for opponents affected by adverse conditions. They move in on these enemies, using faceless dread to weaken opponents' resistances.

Drowned Ghost Level 11 Artillery
Medium shadow humanoid (undead) XP 600

Initiative +10 Senses Perception +7; darkvision
Ghost Water aura 2; any living creature that starts its turn within the aura is slowed until the start of its next turn.
HP 60; Bloodied 30
AC 24; Fortitude 21, Reflex 24, Will 23
Immune disease, poison; Resist insubstantial
Speed 6, climb 6 (spider climb); phasing

⊕ Spirit Touch (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
+16 vs. Reflex; 2d6 + 4 necrotic damage.

↛ Eerie Transfiguration (standard; recharge ⚄ ⁞⁞) ✦ Psychic
Ranged 5; +16 vs. Will; 3d6 + 8 psychic damage, and the target's features appear to distort. Secondary Attack (Gaze, Psychic): Close burst 3; targets enemies within 3 squares of the primary target; +14 vs. Will; the target takes ongoing 5 psychic damage and is dazed (save ends both).

↛ Vengeful Emanation (standard; at-will) ✦ Psychic
Ranged 5; +16 vs. Will; 2d6 + 6 psychic damage.

Alignment Unaligned Languages Common
Skills Stealth +15
Str 15 (+7) Dex 21 (+10) Wis 14 (+7)
Con 13 (+6) Int 10 (+5) Cha 18 (+9)

AMANDA SARTOR

Drowned Ghost Tactics

A drowned ghost uses its climb speed to cling to a high wall or ceiling, remaining out of melee. It uses eerie transfiguration when it is available, defaulting to vengeful emanation until the former power recharges. The ghost uses ghost water to slow nearby enemies, allowing it to scurry away and escape.

Malicious Ghost Level 13 Lurker
Small shadow humanoid (undead) XP 800

Initiative +14 Senses Perception +13; darkvision
HP 72; Bloodied 36
AC 27; Fortitude 23, Reflex 25, Will 26; (+2 to all defenses with inexorable creep)
Immune disease, poison; Resist insubstantial
Speed fly 6 (hover); phasing

⊕ Spirit Touch (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
+16 (+18 with inexorable creep) vs. Reflex; 2d8 + 4 necrotic damage.

Piercing Malice (standard; at-will) ✦ Psychic
Ranged 5; +16 (+18 with inexorable creep) vs. Will; 2d8 + 4 psychic damage, and the target is slowed (save ends).

Inky Breath (standard; recharge ⚄ ⁞⁞) ✦ Necrotic
Close blast 5; +15 (+17 with inexorable creep) vs. Fortitude; 2d8 + 4 necrotic damage, and the target takes ongoing 10 necrotic damage and is immobilized (save ends both).

Inexorable Creep
When a malicious ghost uses phasing to move through obstacles, it gains a +2 bonus to attack rolls and all defenses, and deals 1d6 extra damage on melee attacks and ranged attacks until the start of its next turn.

Alignment Unaligned Languages Common
Skills Stealth +18
Str 14 (+8) Dex 24 (+13) Wis 14 (+8)
Con 19 (+10) Int 10 (+6) Cha 25 (+13)

Malicious Ghost Tactics

Malicious ghosts prefer to lurk in corridors, catacombs, and mazelike areas. A malicious ghost typically attacks by phasing through a barrier, using piercing malice or inky breath, and then escaping through an obstacle on its next turn. This strategy allows a malicious ghost to gain the benefit of inexorable creep each time it attacks. The ghost engages in melee only as a last resort.

Watchful Ghost Level 15 Soldier
Medium shadow humanoid (undead) XP 1,200

Initiative +11 Senses Perception +18; darkvision
HP 104; Bloodied 52
AC 31; Fortitude 26, Reflex 26, Will 28
Immune disease, poison; Resist insubstantial
Speed fly 6 (hover); phasing; see also harry the marked

⊕ Spectral Sword (standard; at-will) ✦ Psychic
+22 vs. AC; 2d8 + 7 psychic damage, and the target is marked (save ends).

Spectral Crossbow (standard; at-will) ✦ Psychic
Ranged 15; +22 vs. AC; 2d8 + 7 psychic damage, and the target is marked until the end of the watchful ghost's next turn.

Halting the Marked (minor 1/round; at-will) ✦ Psychic
Close burst 5; targets each creature marked by the watchful ghost; +20 vs. Will; the target takes ongoing 10 psychic damage and is immobilized (save ends both). Miss: No ongoing damage, and the target is slowed until the end of the watchful ghost's next turn instead of immobilized.

Harry the Marked (move; recharge ⚄ ⁞⁞)
The watchful ghost teleports up to 10 squares into a square adjacent to an enemy it has marked.

Alignment Unaligned Languages Common
Str 15 (+9) Dex 20 (+12) Wis 23 (+13)
Con 20 (+12) Int 16 (+10) Cha 15 (+9)

Watchful Ghost Tactics

A watchful ghost fights with spectral crossbow until opponents engage it in melee, at which point it uses spectral sword. It usse phasing to seek an advantageous position while keeping enemies fixed in place with halting the marked.

Wrath Spirit Level 17 Soldier
Medium shadow humanoid (undead) XP 1,600

Initiative +11 Senses Perception +12; darkvision
HP 111; Bloodied 55
AC 33; Fortitude 27, Reflex 29, Will 30
Immune disease, poison; Resist insubstantial
Speed fly 6 (hover); phasing

⊕ Keening Sword (standard; at-will) ✦ Psychic
+24 vs. AC; 2d8 + 7 psychic damage, and the target is marked until the end of the wrath spirit's next turn.

Exploding Head (standard; recharge ⚄ ⁞⁞) ✦ Fear, Necrotic
The wrath spirit materializes a flaming semblance of its missing head and hurls it: area burst 2 within 10; +21 vs. Fortitude; 3d10 + 7 necrotic damage, and the target is immobilized and marked (save ends both). Miss: Half damage, and the target is marked but not immobilized.

Burning Challenge (immediate reaction, when an enemy marked by the wrath spirit makes an attack that does not include the wrath spirit; at-will) ✦ Psychic
The triggering enemy takes ongoing 10 psychic damage and is dazed (save ends both).

Alignment Evil Languages Common
Str 16 (+11) Dex 17 (+11) Wis 18 (+12)
Con 15 (+10) Int 22 (+14) Cha 24 (+15)

Wrath Spirit Tactics

A wrath spirit phases through a wall or other barrier in an attempt to surprise its foes. It opens combat by hurling its exploding head before closing in and using keening sword. Early in a fight, it tries to mark as many combatants as possible, increasing the chance that it can use burning challenge.

Caller in Darkness Level 19 Elite Soldier
Large shadow animate (undead) XP 4,800

Initiative +13 Senses Perception +16; darkvision
HP 253; Bloodied 126; see also soulstorm
AC 33; Fortitude 33, Reflex 28, Will 33
Immune disease, poison; Resist insubstantial
Saving Throws +2
Speed fly 8 (hover); phasing
Action Points 1

⊕ Spirit Bite (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic, Psychic
Reach 2; +23 vs. AC; 1d10 + 7 necrotic damage, and ongoing 10 psychic damage (save ends).

⸸ Double Bite (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic, Psychic
The caller in darkness makes two spirit bite attacks.

⸸ Steal Essence (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic, Psychic
Reach 2; targets a creature marked by the caller in darkness; +22 vs. Fortitude; 1d10 + 9 necrotic damage, and ongoing 5 psychic damage (save ends). First Failed Saving Throw: The target takes ongoing 5 psychic damage and is weakened (save ends both). Second Failed Saving Throw: The target takes ongoing 10 psychic damage and is stunned instead of weakened (save ends both).

✧ Advantage of Fear (minor 1/round; at-will) ✦ Fear
Close burst 10; targets one creature; the target is marked and grants combat advantage to the caller in darkness (save ends both); see also steal essence.

✧ Soulstorm (free, when first bloodied; encounter) ✦ Necrotic, Psychic
Close burst 2; +22 vs. Reflex; 1d10 + 9 psychic damage plus 1d10 + 9 necrotic damage. In addition, a target that grants combat advantage to the caller in darkness takes ongoing 5 psychic damage and ongoing 5 necrotic damage (save ends both).

Alignment Chaotic evil Languages Common
Str 24 (+16) Dex 18 (+13) Wis 24 (+16)
Con 21 (+14) Int 10 (+9) Cha 25 (+16)

Caller in Darkness Tactics

At the beginning of each turn, a caller in darkness targets an enemy with advantage of fear. It then attacks marked creatures with double bite or steal essence. A caller in darkness keeps close to targets granting combat advantage to it through advantage of fear so that when it becomes bloodied, its soulstorm power has maximum effect.

Famine Spirit Level 21 Brute
Large shadow humanoid (undead) XP 3,200

Initiative +12 Senses Perception +16; darkvision
Gaping Maw aura 6; any living creature that starts its turn within the aura is pulled 1 square.
HP 167; Bloodied 83; see also swallow whole
AC 33; Fortitude 34, Reflex 32, Will 33
Immune disease, poison; Resist insubstantial
Speed 4; phasing

⊕ Rending Claws (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
Requires a free hand; reach 2; +24 vs. AC; 3d8 + 8 necrotic damage, and the target is grabbed.

⸸ Swallow Whole (standard; at-will) ✦ Acid, Necrotic
Targets a creature grabbed by the famine spirit; +24 vs. AC; 2d8 + 4 necrotic damage, and the target is engulfed, entering the famine spirit's space and disappearing from sight and removing line of effect to all squares. While engulfed, the target takes ongoing 10 acid damage and is stunned and immobilized (save ends all). The famine spirit gains regeneration 10 while a target is engulfed.
When the target saves, it is no longer engulfed. The target reappears in an unoccupied square adjacent to the famine spirit of the target's choosing. If the famine spirit is killed, an engulfed target is no longer engulfed and reappears in a square previously occupied by the famine spirit. A famine spirit can have only one creature engulfed at a time.

Alignment Evil Languages Common
Str 26 (+18) Dex 14 (+12) Wis 23 (+16)
Con 19 (+14) Int 22 (+16) Cha 17 (+13)

Famine Spirit Tactics

Famine spirits hide in ambush and attempt to enter melee as quickly as possible. A famine spirit uses rending claws to grab a target before employing swallow whole. It continues to grab at other opponents while it has a target engulfed. As soon as one creature escapes, it swallows another.

Ghost Lore

DC 14: A poltergeist first appears as a wisp of swirling mist and dust. As the creature's form becomes clearer, it becomes evident that it has a vaguely humanoid shape. Poltergeists are often responsible for inexplicable sounds, such as phantom footsteps, rattling walls, knocking, and eerie music. Innocuous as they might seem, these odd sounds could escalate to more potentially harmful occurrences such as flying objects and physical attacks.

DC 22: Servile ghosts are blurry-faced, shambling, translucent spirits. A servile ghost arises when a servant or lackey dies an ignoble death as a consequence of its master's actions. Such deaths are often a result of betrayal or carelessness on the master's part. Knowing nothing but obedience in life, these ghosts seek out new masters in death.

Drowned ghosts are the spirits of those who died watery deaths. They are filled with jealousy of the living, which drives them to take vengeance upon humanoids they encounter. They do not fly but can cling to walls and crawl across ceilings. It is possible to lay a drowned ghost to rest by finding and properly interring its bloated corpse, or by bringing its murderer to justice if the creature was intentionally drowned. A drowned ghost sometimes takes offense at such intrusive acts, though, and instead hunts down a would-be benefactor.

Malicious ghosts are childlike apparitions that have dull skin and enlarged, inky eyes. Although a malicious ghost appears to walk or run when moving, it actually floats above the ground. Malicious ghosts arise from children who die frightened or alone. Enraged that no one saved its life, the ghost of the child becomes a creature of unquenchable malice. A malicious ghost might pretend to negotiate, but this is always a ruse intended to cause harm later.

DC 27: A watchful ghost is a spirit that manifests as a semitranslucent, empty suit of armor that wields spectral weapons. Watchful ghosts are the spirits of guards killed in the line of duty while failing to protect their charges. They stand in eternal defense of the posts they held in life or gravitate toward new treasures or places in need of their protection. Killing a watchful ghost dissipates it temporarily. A year after its destruction, the ghost appears at the site of its original demise. A watchful ghost might cooperate with the living in exchange for help in redeeming its failed duty.

A wrath spirit wears elaborate armor that reveals itself to be semitransparent under bright light. In combat, its weapons emit shrieking, tormented cries. The most notable characteristic of a wrath spirit is its lack of a head, which is a manifestation of its mindless anger. A wrath spirit arises when a violent individual dies while enraged. Such spirits seek out conflict and dive into any fight they find, slaughtering indiscriminately. As a veritable incarnation of anger, a wrath spirit is a difficult negotiating partner. It might be possible to get its attention with information of a brewing war or conflict in which it might unleash its wrath.

A caller in darkness is created from the spirits of dozens of victims who died together in terror. It seeks to draw others into its fear-wracked, hellish existence. The spiritual amalgamation appears as a dark, roiling cloud of gloomy fog that contains dozens of churning humanoid faces that are silently screaming.

DC 29: Famine spirits manifest as grotesquely obese humanoids. They have sagging jowls and are sometimes called hungry ghosts. Famine spirits are spectral remnants of people who shortened their lives through gluttony, who hoarded food while others starved, or who died of starvation. These spirits seek to devour the living. Their massive ectoplasmic bellies convert flesh, blood, and bone into necrotic energy to feed them. Only through the promise of great amounts of flesh is it possible to negotiate with a famine spirit, and even then, the creature often loses concentration during negotiations due to the tantalizing aroma of the negotiator's flesh.

Darkpact Ghoul Tactics

Darkpact ghouls scurry about the battlefield, looking for injured and bloodied prey. A darkpact ghoul looks for a vulnerable target and then claws at it, keeping the creature in place. The creature retains baleful step for a situation in which it needs to escape a group of attackers or when it wants to reach a bloodied creature to use ravenous bite.

Ghoul Lore

DC 15: Sodden ghouls, known also as lacedons, are aquatic cousins of landborne ghouls. A sodden ghoul arises when an aquatic humanoid that engages in cannibalism dies. Sodden ghouls are also created through deliberate rituals by evil aquatic creatures, such as bog hags, kuo-toas, sahuagin, and aboleths. They lurk near reefs and rocky shores where ships and humanoids are likely to pass. Sodden ghouls are also adept climbers. More than one ship has been discovered adrift with the flesh and marrow of the vessel's sailors stripped from their bones by a horde of sodden ghouls.

Stench ghouls haunt graveyards, battlefields, and other places rich with carrion. A stench ghoul is the result of a cannibalistic humanoid who dies after consuming the rancid flesh of another humanoid. These ghouls typically command packs of other ghouls.

DC 25: Darkpact ghouls are the product of corrupt individuals who are cursed to return in undeath. They lose all sanity in the transformation, replacing it with predatory cunning. A few darkpact ghouls are dead warlocks who made pacts with sinister forces to extend their lives without realizing the form they would take upon death. Darkpact ghouls are motivated entirely by hatred and hunger.

Encounter Groups

Ghouls are often encountered with others of their ilk or under the servitude of a powerful master.

Level 6 Encounter (XP 1,125)
- ✦ 1 sahuagin priest (level 8 artillery, MM 224)
- ✦ 1 sahuagin raider (level 6 soldier, MM 224)

GOLEM, DEATHTOUCHED

A subcategory of golem called deathtouched is the result of animated materials associated with death, such as corpses, grave dirt, hangman's nooses, and tombstones. Some are designed as guards; others serve as assassins or weapons.

Cadaver Golem Level 12 Elite Brute
Large natural animate (construct) XP 1,400
Initiative +6 Senses Perception +5; darkvision
HP 228; Bloodied 114; see also assimilate flesh
AC 26; Fortitude 27, Reflex 22, Will 25
Immune disease, poison, sleep
Saving Throws +2
Speed 6; can't shift
Action Points 1
⊕ Slam (standard; at-will)
Reach 2; +15 vs. AC; 2d8 + 5 damage, and the target is dazed (save ends).
⸸ Double Attack (standard; at-will)
The cadaver golem makes two slam attacks.
⸸ Assimilate Flesh (free, when an adjacent enemy becomes bloodied or is reduced to 0 hit points or fewer; at-will) ✦ Healing
Targets the triggering enemy; +13 vs. Fortitude; 2d12 + 5 damage, and the cadaver golem regains 57 hit points.
Alignment Evil Languages Common
Str 20 (+11) Dex 10 (+6) Wis 8 (+5)
Con 22 (+12) Int 12 (+7) Cha 10 (+6)

Cadaver Golem Tactics

Cadaver golems attack any creatures that get in their way. Compared to other golems, they are cunning, deliberate foes. They focus attacks on injured enemies, attempting to bloody them to gain the benefit of assimilate flesh. A cadaver golem also engages nearby foes in an attempt to daze them with double attack.

Grave Dirt Golem Level 15 Elite Brute
Large natural animate (construct) XP 2,400
Initiative +5 Senses Perception +6; darkvision
HP 368; Bloodied 184
AC 29; Fortitude 31, Reflex 25, Will 26
Immune disease, poison, sleep
Saving Throws +2
Speed 6, burrow 4; see also grave dirt rampage
Action Points 1
⊕ Slam (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
Reach 2; +18 (+20 while bloodied) vs. AC; 2d8 + 6 damage, and the target takes ongoing 10 necrotic damage and is dazed (save ends both).
⸸ Double Attack (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
The grave dirt golem makes two slam attacks.
⸸ Grave Dirt Rampage (standard; recharge ⚄ ⚅) ✦ Necrotic
The grave dirt golem moves up to its speed plus 2 and can move through enemies' spaces without provoking opportunity attacks. When it enters a creature's space (ally or enemy), the golem makes a slam attack against that creature. The grave dirt golem must end its movement in an unoccupied space, and it can make no more than one slam attack against any single creature when using this power.
Alignment Unaligned Languages –
Str 22 (+13) Dex 7 (+5) Wis 8 (+6)
Con 24 (+14) Int 3 (+3) Cha 3 (+3)

Grave Dirt Golem Tactics

This golem's slam attack infects a wound with necrotic energy and staggers the senses of the defender, so the creature tries to attack as many foes as possible. Unlike with other golems, the grave dirt golem's shifting form keeps its grave dirt rampage from provoking opportunity attacks. The golem uses that attack when faced with several clustered enemies.

Tombstone Golem Level 17 Elite Soldier
Large natural animate (construct) XP 3,200
Initiative +8 Senses Perception +7; darkvision
HP 336; Bloodied 168; see also death burst
AC 35; Fortitude 32, Reflex 27, Will 28
Immune disease, poison, sleep
Saving Throws +2
Speed 6; can't shift; see also golem rampage
Action Points 1
⊕ Slam (standard; at-will)
Reach 2; +24 vs. AC; 3d6 + 7 damage, and the target is pushed 1 square and dazed (save ends).

MATTHIAS KOLLROS

Double Attack (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
The tombstone golem makes two slam attacks, or one touch of the grave attack and one slam attack.

Golem Rampage (standard; recharge ⚄ ⚅)
The tombstone golem moves up to its speed plus 2 and can move through enemies' spaces, provoking opportunity attacks as normal. When it enters a creature's space (ally or enemy), the golem makes a slam attack against that creature. The golem must end its movement in an unoccupied space, and it can make no more than one slam attack against any single creature when using this power.

Touch of the Grave (standard; recharges when first bloodied) ✦ Necrotic
Reach 2; +22 vs. Fortitude; 4d8 + 15 necrotic damage, and the target is weakened (save ends).

Death Burst (when reduced to 0 hit points) ✦ Necrotic
The tombstone golem explodes in a burst of jagged stones and necrotic energy. Close burst 1; targets enemies; +23 vs. AC; 2d6 + 2 damage plus 5 necrotic damage, and the space it occupied is difficult terrain until cleared.

Alignment Unaligned Languages –
Str 24 (+15) Dex 7 (+6) Wis 8 (+7)
Con 24 (+15) Int 3 (+4) Cha 3 (+4)

Tombstone Golem Tactics

This golem uses golem rampage at every opportunity. The creature employs touch of the grave to weaken the opponent that it considers most capable of hindering it or dealing damage to it. The golem relies on double attack while it waits for golem rampage to recharge.

Hangman Golem Level 20 Elite Brute
Large natural animate (construct) XP 5,600

Initiative +13 Senses Perception +8; darkvision
HP 476; Bloodied 238
AC 34; Fortitude 36, Reflex 32, Will 30
Immune disease, poison, sleep
Saving Throws +2
Speed 6
Action Points 1

Hangman's Lash (standard; at-will)
Reach 2; +23 (+25 while bloodied) vs. AC; 2d8 + 7 damage, and the target is immobilized until the end of the hangman golem's next turn; see also strangle.

Double Attack (standard; at-will)
The hangman golem makes two hangman's lash attacks.

Strangle (minor 1/round; at-will)
Reach 2; targets a creature immobilized by the hangman golem; +21 vs. Fortitude; 3d8 + 8 damage, and the target takes ongoing 10 damage and is restrained (save ends both).

Rope Whirlwind (standard; recharge ⚄ ⚅)
Close burst 3; targets enemies; +21 vs. Reflex; 2d8 + 6 damage, and the target is immobilized (save ends).

Alignment Unaligned Languages –
Skills Stealth +18
Str 26 (+18) Dex 16 (+13) Wis 8 (+9)
Con 28 (+19) Int 3 (+6) Cha 3 (+6)

Hangman Golem Tactics

These lanky, humanoid-shaped golems move swiftly on two rope feet. A hangman golem starts battle with rope whirlwind and then uses strangle on an immobilized creature. While it waits for rope whirlwind to recharge, it makes double attacks and continues to strangle creatures.

Golem Lore

A character knows the following information with a successful skill check.

Arcana DC 25: With the exception of the cadaver golem, deathtouched golems are mindless like other golems. They act in accordance with their creator's wishes.

Stone golems that are constructed using tombstones and necrotic energy become tombstone golems.

A grave dirt golem is a huge, animate mound of soil excavated from ancient graves. The necrotic energy and fragments of bone and dry flesh transform the golem into an undead monstrosity.

Also known as a rope golem, a hangman golem is made from long ropes and at least three nooses that have been used to hang people. Hangman golems are stealthy yet resilient, so they are often used as assassins.

Religion DC 25: Most cadaver golems are produced accidentally when the creation of a flesh golem goes awry. The result is that the creature retains the soul and intelligence of one of the humanoid components. Most cadaver golems then kill or break free from their creators, wandering off to find a place in the world. Unlike most golems, cadaver golems are free-willed, thinking beings.

Encounter Groups

Deathtouched golems are often encountered in the company of creatures they have been commanded to serve.

Level 12 Encounter (XP 3,600)
- ✦ 2 cadaver golems (level 12 elite brute)
- ✦ 1 minotaur cabalist (level 13 controller, MM 190)

Level 17 Encounter (XP 8,400)
- ✦ 1 bone naga (level 16 elite controller, MM 194)
- ✦ 1 grave dirt golem (level 15 elite brute)
- ✦ 1 tombstone golem (level 17 elite soldier)

Level 18 Encounter (XP 10,800)
- ✦ 4 abyssal ghoul hungerers (level 18 minion, MM 119)
- ✦ 1 death knight, human paladin (level 17 elite soldier, MM 50)
- ✦ 1 hangman golem (level 20 elite brute)

HOUND, DEATH

Some types of hounds are animated canine corpses, and a few are creatures of shadow that have canine forms. The association these creatures have with death has gained them the name death hounds. They are driven by predatory urges and an appetite for fresh flesh.

Rot Hound Level 1 Minion
Small natural beast (undead) XP 25

Initiative +3 Senses Perception +2; darkvision
Rotting Stench aura 1; any enemy that starts its turn in the rotting stench aura of at least three rot hounds takes a -2 penalty to attack rolls, skill checks, and ability checks until the start of its next turn.
HP 1; a missed attack never damages a minion.
AC 15; Fortitude 11, Reflex 17, Will 11
Immune disease, poison; Resist 10 necrotic
Speed 8

⊕ Gravebite (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
+4 vs. Reflex; 5 necrotic damage.

Alignment Unaligned Languages –
Str 8 (-1) Dex 16 (+3) Wis 14 (+2)
Con 14 (+2) Int 3 (-4) Cha 3 (-4)

Rot Hound Tactics

Rot hounds are cowardly creatures that dash from shadow to shadow, nipping at their foes. The dogs reek of death, and if a fight is forced, they swarm an opponent and attempt to overwhelm the creature with rotting stench and gravebite.

Famine Hound Level 2 Skirmisher
Small natural beast (undead) XP 125

Initiative +6 Senses Perception +3; darkvision
HP 38; Bloodied 19
AC 16; Fortitude 14, Reflex 15, Will 14
Immune disease, poison; Resist 10 necrotic; Vulnerable 5 radiant
Speed 8

⊕ Gnash (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
+5 vs. Reflex; 1d4 + 2 necrotic damage, and ongoing 5 damage (save ends).

Combat Advantage
When a famine hound hits a target it has combat advantage against, the target is knocked prone.

Alignment Unaligned Languages –
Str 12 (+2) Dex 16 (+4) Wis 14 (+3)
Con 14 (+3) Int 3 (-3) Cha 8 (+0)

Famine Hound Tactics

Famine hounds are cowards, though their hunger for warm flesh drives them toward audacious action. If the hounds have numbers or allies on their side, they all charge the same target using gnash. They seek out opportunities to flank an opponent to gain the additional benefit of knocking an opponent prone.

Deathdog Level 6 Elite Brute
Large shadow beast XP 500

Initiative +6 Senses Perception +6; darkvision
HP 176; Bloodied 88
AC 20; Fortitude 19, Reflex 17, Will 16
Saving Throws +2
Speed 8
Action Points 1

⊕ Pouncing Bite (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
+9 vs. AC; 4d6 + 3 necrotic damage, and the target is knocked prone.

↓ Go for the Legs (opportunity, when an adjacent enemy stands up; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
The deathdog makes a pouncing bite attack against the triggering creature.

Unholy Animation
A living humanoid killed by a deathdog rises as a free-willed corruption corpse (MM 274) at the end of its creator's next turn.

Deathdog Tactics

Deathdogs charge headlong into combat, launching themselves at the nearest foe using pouncing bite. The creatures mauls opponents to the ground and then devours them. If the dogs sense weakness and frailty in a creature, they direct their ferocity toward that target, hoping to fell the creature and bring a corruption corpse to their aid.

Charnel Hound Tactics

A charnel hound rushes into melee as soon as possible and then focuses on a single target. The hound alternates between gaping maw and doom claws, and it spends its action point when it has a chance to use both attacks against a single target in the same round. The canine is fearless and fights to the death.

Hound Lore

A character knows the following information with a successful skill check.

Religion DC 15: Rot hounds are wretched creatures that look like rotting mutts with putrefying, gut-filled bellies. These creatures are the result of dogs that dig up and eat rotting corpses. The dogs grow sick and slowly rot from the inside out, eventually dying and reanimating due to necromantic energy in an area. The creatures return to "life" with a hunger for living flesh.

A famine hound has the gaunt, hollow features of a starving street dog. Famine hounds arise when dogs are abandoned by their masters and left to starve. They have a boundless hunger for fresh flesh and retain none of their former loyalties.

Religion DC 20: A charnel hound consists of a cluster of decaying bodies shaped in the form of a large canine. Charnel hounds are the unholy result of necromantic experiments. Evil ritualists fuse corpses together to create this vicious, predatory dog. Fiercely territorial, a charnel hound roams places infected with necrotic energy or prowls an area at the behest of its creator.

Arcana DC 15: A deathdog is a large canine that has two heads, each with a mouth full of sharp fangs. The stench of death lingers in places where a deathdog has been.

Arcana DC 20: Deathdogs are creatures of the Shadowfell that transform their prey into corruption corpses. They enter the world through shadow crossings, places where the Shadowfell and the mortal world converge.

Encounter Groups

Death hounds are drawn to cemeteries and places of death. They sometimes raid towns, though they prefer to linger on the fringes of civilization, preying on hapless travelers. Death hounds can be found among the living or the dead, with or without masters.

Larva Assassin Tactics

A larva assassin keeps moving, striking and then slipping away from potential enemies using million leg scuttle. It takes advantage of terrain features and squeezing swarm to gain cover. The assassin uses insect mimicry when an enemy tries to escape its clutches. If million leg scuttle doesn't recharge, the creature uses parasitic infestation on a nearby foe.

Larva Sniper Tactics

A larva sniper prefers to fire on foes from a long distance, using disrupting double arrow and vespine speed. However, a sniper is not totally opposed to engaging in melee. If one or two enemies pursue a sniper, becoming isolated from the group, it uses escaping sting and possibly vengeful hive on the attackers. The sniper continues to try to retreat, drawing the enemies into dangerous situations due to terrain or the sniper's nearby allies.

Larva War Master Tactics

A larva war master wades into melee combat, usually targeting strikers or leaders. The creature positions itself among as many enemies as possible, making enemies suffer from tactical feedback if they want to shift away from the war master or its allies. It prefers to use punishing beetle on a bloodied enemy that has just been healed. If reduced to 50 hit points or fewer, a war master looks for a way to flee, using squeezing swarm if it can to discourage pursuit.

Larva Undead Lore

DC 22: Individuals who have relentlessly pursued evil might return as larva undead. When a larva undead is destroyed, the necrotic energy holding it together dissipates, leaving behind a harmless mound of maggots and bugs.

DC 27: A larva assassin is a conscienceless killer that arises when a humanoid dies after spending his or her life murdering without pity. When the individual's body begins to decay, a swarm of hornets and centipedes gathers to devour the corpse. Necrotic energy merges the vermin with the consciousness of the former humanoid, creating a larva assassin. The original larva assassins served the legendary being Kyuss; many such creatures now pursue their own dark ambitions. They lurk in the world's shadows, quietly eliminating those who oppose their schemes.

Larva snipers are the result of dead humanoids who took sadistic delight in their ability to slay foes from afar. Upon such a creature's death, masses of yellow, segmented wasps and hornets gather and give the creature's consciousness a physical form. Larva snipers are clever combatants that try to isolate enemies. Although the creature might appear to let its guard down, it has a nasty surprise awaiting anyone foolish enough to take advantage of the opening. When the elder entity Kyuss makes his final assault on the world, it is said that larva snipers will rain down death from atop the towers and roofs of cities.

Larva war masters are the undead progeny of powerful warriors who become unhinged by bloodlust, commit strings of atrocities, and then die. Upon the subject's death, its body is consumed by devouring beetles that strip flesh from bone and then form a new body. Larva war masters hate creatures that show effrontery or that grant succor to their allies. The ancient undead entity Kyuss rewarded his most faithful and remorseless warriors with eternal existence as larva war masters. Now these warriors marshal his ever-growing army of undead.

Encounter Groups

Larva undead often employ powerful undead as guardians and sentinels. They also occasionally serve mighty creatures.

Baelnorn Tactics

A baelnorn opens combat with voice of solemnity, followed quickly by projection if it succeeds in dominating a target. The baelnorn uses its conjuration to distract creatures while it forces the dominated creature to attack allies. It typically tries to dominate a ranged attacker. Once the conjuration is destroyed, the baelnorn uses fey ire and dream haunting while employing ethereal shift and fey step to negotiate the battlefield.

+21 vs. AC; 2d8 + 3 damage, and ongoing 5 necrotic damage (save ends).

Necrocreeper Vines (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
Ranged 10; two attacks, each one against a different target; +19 vs. Reflex; 2d8 + 3 damage per attack, and the target slides 4 squares. At the end of the slide, the target takes ongoing 5 necrotic damage and is restrained (escape ends both).

Blight Burst (standard; recharges when first bloodied) ✦ Poison
Close burst 3; targets enemies; +19 vs. Fortitude; 2d10 + 3 poison damage, and the target takes ongoing 10 poison damage and is weakened (save ends both).

Death Spike (minor 1/round; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
Close burst 3; targets one creature restrained by necrocreeper vines; +21 vs. AC; 1d6 + 8 damage plus 2d8 necrotic damage, and the target is weakened and takes a –2 penalty to Athletics checks and Acrobatics checks (save ends both).

Deceptive Veil (minor; at-will) ✦ Illusion
A thicket dryad lich can disguise itself to appear as any Medium humanoid, usually a beautiful elf or eladrin. A successful Insight check (opposed by the dryad's Bluff check) pierces the disguise.

Necrotic Treestride (move; at-will) ✦ Necrotic, Teleportation
A thicket dryad lich teleports up to 8 squares if it begins and ends the move adjacent to a tree, a treant, or a plant of Large size or bigger. When it teleports in this manner, a thicket dryad lich deals 10 necrotic damage to all nonplant creatures adjacent to it at the end of the teleport.

Thorny Body
A creature that a thicket dryad lich has grabbed takes 10 damage when the dryad sustains the grab.

Indestructible
When a thicket dryad lich is reduced to 0 hit points, it dissipates into a spray of dead leaves, but it is not truly destroyed. It reappears in 1d10 days within 1 square of its phylactery tree, unless the phylactery tree is also found and destroyed.

Thicket Dryad Lich Tactics

Often posing as a comely elf or eladrin in need of aid, a thicket dryad lich transforms to its true visage when its victims come within the range of its aura. The creature then lashes out with blight burst, switching to necrocreeper vines while it waits for blight burst to recharge. The lich uses a combination of its death thorns aura, necrocreeper vines, and death spike to restrain and incapacitate nearby foes. It uses necrotic treestride to escape if too many enemies surround it.

Life Tap (standard; at-will) ✦ Healing, Necrotic
+23 vs. Fortitude; 2d6 + 7 necrotic damage, and the void lich regains 15 hit points.

Void Tendrils (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
Ranged 10; +23 vs. Will; 2d8 + 7 necrotic damage, and the target is knocked prone and dazed (save ends).

Frightful Gaze (minor; at-will) ✦ Fear, Gaze
Close blast 3; +21 vs. Will; the target is pushed 5 squares and takes a –2 penalty to attack rolls (save ends). First Failed Saving Throw: The target is dazed, immobilized, and takes a –2 penalty to attack rolls (save ends all).

Hideous Laughter (minor; recharges when the void lich bloodies an enemy) ✦ Fear, Psychic
Close blast 3; +21 vs. Will; 2d8 + 7 psychic damage, and the target takes a –5 penalty to all defenses until the end of the void lich's next turn.

Fade to Dusk (minor; recharge ⚄ ⁞⁞)
The void lich becomes insubstantial and invisible until it attacks or until the end of its next turn.

Phase Step (minor; at-will)
The void lich teleports up to 2 squares.

Indestructible
When a void lich is reduced to 0 hit points, its body and possessions dissipate into whips of darkness, but it is not destroyed. It reappears (along with its possessions) in 1d10 days within 1 square of its phylactery, unless the phylactery is also found and destroyed.

Con 22 (+16) Int 24 (+17) Cha 20 (+15)

Void Lich Tactics

A void lich uses fade to dusk and phase step to surprise its foes and move about the battlefield. The creature tries to attack at night or in areas of darkness, where it can best utilize shroud of night. The lich releases its hideous laughter to lower foes' defenses before assaulting them with frightful gaze or void tendrils.

Tentacles (standard; at-will)
+26 vs. AC; 3d8 + 3 damage, and the target is grabbed. The alhoon can have only one creature grabbed at a time.

Bore into Brain (standard; at-will)
Targets a creature grabbed by the alhoon or a dazed or stunned creature; +25 vs. Fortitude; 3d10 + 3 damage, and the target is stunned (save ends). If this power reduces the target to 0 hit points or fewer, the alhoon can use devour brain or create thrall.
Devour Brain: The alhoon devours the target's brain. The target is killed, and the alhoon regains an action point.
Create Thrall (Charm): The target regains hit points equal to its bloodied value and is dominated until the alhoon lich is destroyed. The target is immune to mind blast and gains a +5 bonus to Will while within 10 squares of the alhoon that dominated it.

Enslave (standard; recharge ⚄ ⋮⋮) ✦ Charm
Ranged 10; +25 vs. Will; the target is dominated (save ends). While dominated, the target is immune to mind blast and gains a +5 bonus to Will while within 10 squares of the alhoon that dominated it. The alhoon can have only one creature dominated using enslave at a time.

Mind Blast (standard; recharge ⚄ ⋮⋮) ✦ Psychic
Close blast 5; does not target mind flayers and their thralls; +23 vs. Will; 4d8 + 7 psychic damage, and the target is dazed (save ends). Miss: Half damage, and the target is not dazed.

Interpose Thrall (immediate reaction, when an enemy targets the alhoon with a melee attack; at-will)
The triggering attack targets a thrall within the attacker's reach.

Second Wind (standard; encounter) ✦ Healing
The alhoon spends a healing surge and regains 98 hit points. The alhoon gains a +2 bonus to all defenses until the start of its next turn.

Indestructible
When an alhoon is reduced to 0 hit points, its body and possessions crumble into dust, but it is not destroyed. It reappears (along with its possessions) in 1d10 days within 1 square of its phylactery, unless the phylactery is also found and destroyed.

Alignment Evil Languages Deep Speech, telepathy 10
Skills Arcana +23, Bluff +17, Insight +21
Str 15 (+12) Dex 21 (+15) Wis 23 (+16)
Con 21 (+15) Int 26 (+18) Cha 14 (+12)

Alhoon Tactics

An alhoon is a clever, intelligent combatant, entering battle only when it feels it has an advantage. The lich uses mind blast or its tentacles until it succeeds in dazing or grabbing a creature. The alhoon then commences to use bore into brain on the target. If an alhoon is not yet bloodied and succeeds in dropping a target, it kills the creature outright with devour brain. After the lich is bloodied, it is more likely to use the create thrall power.

Demilich Level 20 Solo Artillery
Tiny natural animate (undead) XP 14,000

Initiative +13 Senses Perception +18; darkvision
Intruding Terror (Fear) aura 2; enemies within the aura take a -2 penalty to attack rolls.
HP 800; Bloodied 400; see also consume soul and indestructible
Regeneration 20 (if a demilich takes radiant damage, regeneration doesn't function until the end of its next turn)
AC 33; Fortitude 35, Reflex 32, Will 32
Immune disease, poison. sleep; Resist 10 necrotic, 10 psychic
Saving Throws +5
Speed fly 12 (hover)
Action Points 2

Shadow Ray (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
Ranged 20; +25 vs. AC; 3d6 + 8 necrotic damage.

Twin Rays (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
The demilich makes two shadow ray attacks.

Drain Soul (standard; at-will)
Ranged 5; does not provoke opportunity attacks; +25 vs. Fortitude; the target is dazed and restrained (save ends both). First Failed Saving Throw: The target is instead stunned and restrained (save ends both). Second Failed Saving Throw: The target dies, and its soul is trapped in one of the demilich's soul gems until the demilich is destroyed; see also consume soul and the "Fate of Drained Souls" sidebar (page 201).

Obsidian Eye (minor; at-will) ✦ Gaze, Necrotic
Ranged 20; +25 vs. Fortitude; the target takes ongoing 10 necrotic damage (save ends).

Soul Shriveling Pulse (immediate reaction, when a creature fails a saving throw against drain soul; at-will) ✦ Fear, Necrotic
Close burst 5; +25 vs. Will; 3d6 + 5 necrotic damage, and the target takes a -2 penalty to saving throws (save ends).

Consume Soul (minor; expends a trapped soul; recharge ⋮⋮) ✦ Healing
The demilich regains 200 hit points.

Soul Gems
The demilich's six soul gems can each hold the soul of one of its victims. At the beginning of an encounter, the soul gems contain two souls. Crushing a gem after the demilich is defeated releases the soul to the Shadowfell.

Indestructible
When a demilich is reduced to 0 hit points or fewer, its skull (but not the soul gems) crumbles into dust, but it is not destroyed. It reappears in 1d10 days within 1 square of its phylactery, unless the phylactery is also found and destroyed.

Alignment Evil Languages Common, Supernal
Skills Arcana +17, Insight +18, Religion +18
Str 16 (+13) Dex 16 (+13) Wis 17 (+13)
Con 24 (+17) Int 15 (+12) Cha 27 (+18)

Demilich Tactics

Demiliches rarely enter melee directly, preferring to instead send wave after wave of servitors at adversaries. While foes are engaged with other creatures, a demilich sends volleys of twin rays and obsidian eye. A demilich targets particularly troublesome nearby opponents with drain soul, then positions itself to maximize the effect of soul shriveling pulse. As long as the demlich knows that its phylactery is safe, it does not fear fighting to "the death."

DAVID SOURWINE

Lich Lore

DC 27: Eladrin become baelnorn liches for a variety of reasons. Many choose this path so they can act as guardians of ancestral vaults and tombs. Unlike most liches, baelnorns are not necessarily evil. The creatures are less power-hungry and covetous than other liches, and they often keep their phylacteries in close proximity to the places they guard. A few baelnorn have no phylacteries at all; rather, their prolonged existence is achieved through a powerful ritual or the blessing of a deity.

Sometimes a dryad's desire to protect its woodland twists into dark obsession. In rare instances, one of these fey creatures crosses the threshold into undeath and becomes a thicket dryad lich. The dryad transforms a favorite tree into a phylactery. The corruption in the dryad's soul then causes the tree to become warped and rotted. Over time, this blight can spread out over the surrounding forest.

A void lich is an antediluvian horror from the Far Realm that seizes control of the body and phylactery of someone performing a lich transformation ritual. Lured into the world by the eldritch power unleashed during the ritual, this aberrant entity shunts the ritual performer's soul off to the Far Realm and possesses the host body as its own. A void lich is cloaked in darkness, a remnant of the dark, churning corridors of its origin plane.

DC 31: An alhoon lich's skin has none of the smooth, slimy quality of its mind flayer origin. Instead, the undead illithid's skin appears dry and cracked. An alhoon is known also as an illithilich. Alhoons are magic-using outcasts from mind flayer societies who have defied the ruling elder brains. They still delight in devouring mortal brains, but they no longer require them for sustenance.

A demilich is an animated skull, a skeletal hand, or a spine that is festooned with costly gems. The jewels gleam wickedly with the light of trapped souls. Despite the implication of its name, a demilich is more deadly than a normal lich. Particularly powerful liches that learn the secret of fashioning soul gems often shed their bodies and evolve into demiliches. With size and mobility on their side, these demiliches travel the universe in search of its secrets.

Encounter Groups

Liches often command armies of lesser undead or have demons or devils serving them. Few liches tolerate anything less than mastery over all creatures surrounding them; they rarely serve more powerful monsters.

Level 14 Encounter (XP 5,600)
- 1 baelnorn (level 15 elite controller)
- 2 briar witch dryads (level 13 elite controller, MM 96)

Level 17 Encounter (XP 9,000)
- 2 boneclaws (level 14 soldier, MM 37)
- 1 thicket dryad lich (level 16 solo controller)

Level 19 Encounter (XP 13,200)
- 1 alhoon (level 21 elite controller)
- 1 darkpact ghoul (level 19 elite skirmisher, page 155)
- 1 gibbering abomination (level 18 controller, MM 126)

Level 20 Encounter (XP 15,500)
- 2 callers in darkness (level 19 elite soldier, page 152)
- 1 void lich (level 20 elite lurker)
- 1 voidsoul specter (level 23 lurker, MM 244)

Level 21 Encounter (XP 18,000)
- 2 bodak reavers (level 18 soldier, MM 36)
- 1 demilich (level 20 solo artillery)

MUMMY

Mummies guard sacred locations, which they sometimes watch over for hundreds of years. Even after centuries, though, their deadliness does not abate. They bestow powerful curses and unleash deadly attacks that infect an interloper with disease.

| Deranged Champion | Level 12 Elite Brute |
|---|---|
| Large aberrant humanoid (undead), foulspawn | XP 1,400 |

Initiative +8 Senses Perception +9; darkvision
Despair (Fear) aura 5; any enemy within the aura takes a -2 penalty to attack rolls against the deranged champion.
HP 300; Bloodied 150
Regeneration 10 (if a deranged champion takes fire damage, regeneration doesn't function until the end of its next turn)

Str 24 (+13) Dex 14 (+8) Wis 7 (+4)
Con 20 (+11) Int 7 (+4) Cha 14 (+8)

Deranged Champion Tactics

A deranged champion attacks with its fists, mauling whichever opponent seems to be the greatest threat in any given round. The creature tries to infect as many foes as possible with mummy rot.

| Dark Pharaoh | Level 13 Elite Controller (Leader) |
|---|---|
| Large natural animate (construct, undead), eidolon | XP 1,600 |

Initiative +8 Senses Perception +9; darkvision
Despair (Fear) aura 5; any enemy within the aura takes a -2 penalty to attack rolls against the dark pharaoh.
HP 264; Bloodied 132; see also mummy's curse
Regeneration 10 (if a dark pharaoh takes fire damage, regeneration doesn't function until the end of its next turn)
AC 30; Fortitude 28, Reflex 22, Will 27
Immune disease, poison, sleep; Resist 10 necrotic; see also false faith
Saving Throws +2
Speed 5
Action Points 1

⊕ Slam (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
Reach 2; +19 vs. AC; 2d8 + 6 necrotic damage.

Slamming Fury (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
The dark pharaoh makes two slam attacks, each one against a different target.

Psychic Block (immediate interrupt, when an enemy would target the dark pharaoh with an attack; at-will) ✦ Psychic
Ranged 10; targets the triggering enemy; +17 vs. Will; the target designates another target for the attack, or the attack is negated. A negated daily power or encounter power is expended.

Psychic Curse (standard; at-will) ✦ Psychic
Ranged 10; +17 vs. Will; 2d8 + 6 psychic damage, and each time the target uses an attack power, it takes 5 psychic damage (save ends). Aftereffect: The target is dazed (save ends).

Mummy's Curse (when reduced to 0 hit points) ✦ Disease
Close burst 10; targets enemies; +17 vs. Will; the target contracts mummy rot (level 13; Endurance improve DC 23, maintain DC 17, worsen DC 16 or lower; DMG 49).

False Faith (standard; at-will)
The dark pharaoh assumes a meditative stance. Until the end of its next turn, it gains resist 20 to all damage, and allies in its line of sight gain a +2 bonus to attack rolls. If the dark pharaoh moves, the effect ends.

Alignment Evil Languages Common
Str 22 (+12) Dex 14 (+8) Wis 16 (+9)
Con 20 (+11) Int 7 (+4) Cha 11 (+6)

Dark Pharaoh Tactics

A dark pharaoh uses false faith to protect itself while bolstering its allies. When out of its meditative state, it judiciously targets foe with psychic curse. When an opponent closes in, the dark pharaoh uses slamming fury and psychic block to deter the enemy.

GORAN JOSIC

Scourge of Baphomet Level 13 Elite Controller (Leader)
Medium natural humanoid (undead), minotaur XP 1,600

Initiative +7 Senses Perception +16; darkvision
Despair (Fear) aura 5; any enemy within the aura takes a -2 penalty to attack rolls against the scourge of Baphomet.
Baphomet's Boon aura 10; any ally of the scourge of Baphomet that starts its turn within the aura gains a +2 bonus to attack rolls when charging.
HP 258; Bloodied 148; see also ferocious curse
Regeneration 10 (if a scourge of Baphomet takes fire damage, regeneration doesn't function until the end of its next turn)
AC 29; Fortitude 31, Reflex 24, Will 30
Immune disease, poison; Resist 10 necrotic
Saving Throws +2
Speed 6
Action Points 1

⊕ Great Cursed Mace (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic, Weapon
+15 vs. AC; 1d8 + 7 damage plus 1d6 necrotic damage.

↓ Goring Charge (standard; at-will)
The scourge of Baphomet makes a charge attack: +16 vs. AC; 2d6 + 6 damage, and the target is knocked prone.

Horns of Force (minor; at-will) ✦ Force
Ranged 5; +18 vs. AC; 1d8 + 3 force damage, and the target is pushed 2 squares.

Ferocious Curse (when reduced to 0 hit points) ✦ Necrotic, Weapon, Disease
The scourge of Baphomet makes a melee basic attack and then makes a secondary attack. Secondary Attack: Close burst 10; targets enemies; +18 vs. Will; the target contracts mummy rot (level 13; Endurance improve DC 23, maintain DC 17, worsen DC 16 or lower; DMG 49).

Call out the Beast (minor; at-will)
Ranged 10; one bloodied ally within 10 squares of the scourge of Baphomet makes a melee basic attack as a free action.

Alignment Chaotic evil Languages Abyssal, Common
Skills Dungeoneering +14, Intimidate +14, Nature +16, Religion +12
Str 22 (+12) Dex 12 (+7) Wis 17 (+9)
Con 17 (+9) Int 13 (+7) Cha 16 (+9)
Equipment robes, mace

Scourge of Baphomet Tactics

A scourge of Baphomet beseeches Baphomet as it smites foes. It uses horns of force to push an enemy into a place where it can use goring charge against the target. The mummy also uses horns of force to shove enemies closer to allies so they can attack when the scourge uses call out the beast.

Nonhumanoid Mummies

"Mummy champion" and "mummy lord" are monster templates that can be applied to nonplayer characters. See page 180 of the Dungeon Master's Guide for rules on creating new monsters using these templates.

The Dungeon Master's Guide indicates that mummy champions and mummy lords should be humanoids, but not every mummy has to follow this guideline. Certain nonhumanoid creatures make excellent mummies. In this section, an eidolon and a sphinx were used as the base creatures for mummies. In general, any creature can become a mummy as long as its purpose is to guard an important location.

Necrosphinx Level 16 Solo Soldier
Large immortal magical beast (undead) XP 7,000

Initiative +12 Senses Perception +17; darkvision
Despair (Fear) aura 5; any enemy within the aura takes a -2 penalty to attack rolls against the necrosphinx.
HP 760; Bloodied 380; see also mummy's curse and second wind
Regeneration 10 (if a necrosphinx takes fire damage, regeneration doesn't function until the end of its next turn)
AC 37; Fortitude 35, Reflex 32, Will 37; see also sphinx's challenge
Immune disease, poison; Resist 10 necrotic
Saving Throws +5
Speed 6, fly 8 (clumsy), overland flight 10; see also death's pounce
Action Points 2; see also sphinx's challenge

⊕ Claw (standard; at-will)
+21 (see also sphinx's challenge) vs. AC; 2d10 + 5 damage, and the target is marked until the end of the sphinx's next turn.

↓ Death's Pounce (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
The necrosphinx moves up to 6 squares and makes two claw attacks, each one against a different target. If an attack hits, that target is knocked prone. If both attacks hit, each target also takes ongoing 5 necrotic damage (save ends).

↓ Fierce Retort (immediate interrupt, when a creature marked by the necrosphinx makes a melee attack against it; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
Targets the triggering creature; +21 (see also sphinx's challenge) vs. AC; 2d10 + 5 damage, and the target takes ongoing 5 necrotic damage and is marked (save ends both).

Necrotic Roar (minor; recharge ⚄ ⚅) ✦ Fear, Necrotic
Close burst 5; targets enemies; +19 (see also sphinx's challenge) vs. Will; the target takes ongoing 5 necrotic damage and a -2 penalty to attack rolls (save ends both).

Mummy's Curse (when reduced to 0 hit points) ✦ Disease
Close burst 10; targets enemies; +18 vs. Will (see also sphinx's challenge); the target contracts mummy rot (level 16; Endurance improve DC 25, maintain DC 20, worsen DC 19 or lower; DMG 49).

Second Wind (standard; encounter; see also sphinx's challenge) ✦ Healing
The necrosphinx spends a healing surge and regains 190 hit points. It gains a +2 bonus to all defenses until the start of its next turn.

Sphinx's Challenge
The necrosphinx poses a question or riddle out of combat (see MM 245). If the challenged creatures refuse to answer or fail to answer correctly, the necrosphinx gains the following benefits until the end of the encounter: 1 extra action point, an extra use of second wind, a +2 bonus to attack rolls, and a +2 bonus to all defenses.

Alignment Evil Languages Common, Supernal
Skills Arcana +16, History +16, Insight +17, Intimidate +16, Religion +16
Str 19 (+12) Dex 15 (+10) Wis 19 (+12)
Con 16 (+11) Int 16 (+11) Cha 16 (+11)

Necrosphinx Tactics

Like its living counterpart, a necrosphinx enjoys posing a question, challenge, or riddle to potential enemies. Once combat commences, a necrosphinx fights without mercy or pause until it or the intruders are dead. The necrosphinx starts with necrotic roar and then uses death's pounce on grouped foes.

Darkflame Taskmaster Level 17 Elite Controller
Medium elemental humanoid (fire, undead), azer XP 3,200

Initiative +12 Senses Perception +15; darkvision
Clinging Darkflame (Fire, Necrotic) aura 5; any enemy that starts its turn within the aura takes 5 fire and necrotic damage.
HP 330; Bloodied 165; see also mummy's curse
Regeneration 10 (if a darkflame taskmaster takes cold damage, regeneration doesn't function until the end of its next turn)
AC 33; Fortitude 30, Reflex 27, Will 34
Immune disease, poison; Resist 10 fire, 10 necrotic
Saving Throws +2
Speed 5
Action Points 1

⨺ Scourge (standard; at-will) ✦ Weapon
+22 vs. AC; 1d8 + 4 damage.

↷ Burning Despair (standard; at-will) ✦ Fear, Fire
Ranged 5; +20 vs. Reflex; the target takes ongoing 5 fire damage and a -2 penalty to all defenses (save ends both).

↯ Mummy's Curse (when reduced to 0 hit points) ✦ Disease
Close burst 10; targets enemies; +19 vs. Will; the target contracts mummy rot (level 17; Endurance improve DC 25, maintain DC 20, worsen DC 19 or lower; DMG 49).

Alignment Evil Languages Giant
Str 20 (+13) Dex 18 (+12) Wis 24 (+15)
Con 21 (+13) Int 14 (+10) Cha 16 (+11)
Equipment chainmail, scourge

Darkflame Taskmaster Tactics

A darkflame taskmaster moves into the midst of combat to gain the greatest effect with its clinging darkflame aura. The mummy is eager to engage in melee so it can affect multiple opponents with its aura while striking a foe each round with burning despair. If an opponent uses a cold attack, the darkflame taskmaster focuses on eliminating that threat.

Forsaken Hierophant Level 21 Solo Controller
Medium natural humanoid (undead), human XP 16,000

Initiative +11 Senses Perception +14; darkvision
Decaying Hope (Fear, Necrotic) aura 5; any enemy within the aura takes a -2 penalty to all defenses and a -2 penalty to attack rolls against the forsaken hierophant.
HP 955; Bloodied 477; see also mummy's curse
Regeneration 10 (if a forsaken hierophant takes fire damage, regeneration doesn't function until the end of its next turn)
AC 37; Fortitude 37, Reflex 32, Will 41
Immune disease, poison; Resist 15 necrotic
Saving Throws +5
Speed 5
Action Points 2

⨺ Mace (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic, Weapon
+24 vs. AC; 1d8 + 5 damage, and ongoing 10 necrotic damage (save ends).

↯ Vision of Death (minor 1/round; at-will) ✦ Psychic
Close burst 10; targets one creature; +24 vs. Will; 2d6 + 7 psychic damage, and the target is dazed (save ends).

↯ Word of Orcus (standard; recharge ⚅) ✦ Healing, Necrotic
Close burst 5; targets enemies; +24 vs. Fortitude; 2d6 + 7 necrotic damage, and the target is stunned (save ends). Undead in the burst regain 15 hit points.

↯ Mummy's Curse (when reduced to 0 hit points) ✦ Disease
Close burst 10; targets enemies; +23 vs. Will; the target contracts mummy rot (level 21; Endurance improve DC 29, maintain DC 24, worsen DC 23 or lower; DMG 49).

Forsaken Hierophant Tactics

A forsaken hierophant uses vision of death to keep a foe off balance while it fights other enemies. It invokes word of Orcus as often as possible, and otherwise attacks with its mace. If an opponent makes an attack that deals fire damage, the forsaken hierophant focuses its attacks on that creature.

Mummy Lore

DC 20: Deranged champions are foulspawn hulks that were turned into mummies by cultists who worship beings from the Far Realm. Deranged champions are creatures of madness that know only destruction in death. Even their creators steer clear of the monstrosities once they are set to guard a location.

The scourge of Baphomet's black and crimson robes cover its bandaged body. Exposed fur flakes off, exposing maggot-ridden skin. A select few members of the minotaur cult of Baphomet are chosen to undergo the process that transforms a minotaur into this formidable kind of mummy. As a symbol of its dedication, the mummy's horns and weapon are etched with runes of devotion to Baphomet.

The dark pharaoh is an eidolon infused with the souls of lords and kings and then animated through a divine ritual. This intelligent construct might have once existed to guard great treasures or secrets, but when the divine spark becomes corrupted, it twists the souls within the creature, turning the undead construct against mortals. The souls become a singular consciousness that believes itself to be a deity of death and tyranny, and so the creature searches the world for worshipers, killing all who refuse to follow it.

A necrosphinx is a great, black-winged lion covered in strips of black linen. Its eyes are black with flecks of gold, and its wings consist of dark feathers that barely conceal its rotting flesh. A necrosphinx is created to be a keeper of secrets. These mummies often guard artifacts, lich phylacteries, or tomes of necromantic lore. When first encountered, the creature often issues a challenge in the form of a riddle or question. One's survival often depends on the answer.

DC 25: A darkflame taskmaster looks like an undead dwarf that has hair and a beard composed of crackling black flame. The creature is wrapped in oil-soaked bandages that burn with dark fire but are never consumed. Its moldering, brass-colored skin is barely visible beneath its flaming vestments. Darkflame taskmasters are the undead leaders of rogue groups of azers that worship Asmodeus. Darkflame taskmasters bring discipline and community to the devil's followers, and they oversee the construction of massive unholy edifices dedicated to the Lord of the Nine Hells.

Forsaken hierophants are mummies of priests that were so depraved that the subject's fellow death cultists killed and embalmed the priest. Rather than let the priest's power be wasted, though, the other cultists instead transformed the subject into a guardian to watch over their most valuable stores of treasure and knowledge.

Encounter Groups

Mummies are often found in the company of undead servitors or living devotees.

Level 12 Encounter (XP 3,800)
- 2 deranged champions (level 12 elite brute)
- 1 mind flayer infiltrator (level 14 lurker, MM 188)

Level 13 Encounter (XP 4,600)
- 4 minotaur warriors (level 10 soldier, MM 190)
- 1 scourge of Baphomet (level 13 elite controller)
- 2 skeletal tomb guardians (level 10 brute, MM 235)

Level 14 Encounter (XP 5,600)
- 1 dark pharaoh (level 13 elite controller)

- 2 rot harbingers (level 20 soldier, MM 223)

NIGHTHAUNT

Malicious, sinister creatures of darkness, nighthaunts are the cursed souls of those who have consumed food infused with necrotic energy. These undead feed on the life force of living creatures until sated, at which point they travel to the world to unleash their poisoning energy on crops and food stores.

| Nighthaunt Slip | Level 12 Minion |

Nighthaunt Slip Tactics

A nighthaunt slip is attracted to living creatures, eager to draw out their life force. Slips encountered in a group attempt to cluster around a single enemy, trying to deal as much extra necrotic damage as possible through claw touch.

| Nighthaunt Whisperer | Level 12 Lurker |
|---|---|

| ⨽ Night's Embrace (standard; at-will) | |
| The nighthaunt whisperer makes two claw touch attacks. If both attacks hit the same target, the target is grabbed; see also night's fell kiss. A nighthaunt whisperer can grab only one creature at a time. | |
| ⨽ Night's Fell Kiss (standard; recharges after the nighthaunt whisperer uses shadow wing) ✦ Necrotic | |
| The nighthaunt whisperer shifts up to 2 squares, sliding the creature it has grabbed with it. If the nighthaunt whisperer ends this movement adjacent to no other enemy aside from the grabbed target, it makes an attack against the creature: +15 vs. Will; 2d6 + 4 necrotic damage, and the target is stunned (save ends). | |
| Shadow Wing | |
| If a nighthaunt whisperer moves at least 8 squares on its turn, it is invisible until the start of its next turn. | |

Nighthaunt Whisperer Tactics

This winged creature of shadow hovers at the edge of combat, looking for an opening before skimming forward to attack. A whisperer tries to move at least 8 squares so it can gain invisibility from shadow wing. Once in melee, the creature attacks with night's embrace, attempting to grab a target. If it succeeds, on its next turn it presses its blank face to its victim's and uses night's fell kiss. The nighthaunt whisperer then glides away from melee, attempting to recharge night's fell kiss by using shadow wing.

Nighthaunt Shrine Tactics

A nighthaunt shrine begins combat by targeting an enemy with terrifying vision. If that foe falls prone, the shrine uses its minor action to place Shadowfell taint over its victim. A nighthaunt shrine tries to position itself among allies to give as many as possible the bonus from its death shield aura. As soon as some of its allies are hurt, a nighthaunt shrine urges those creature to move among enemies so it can employ life leak with greatest effect.

Nighthaunt Lore

DC 18: Nighthaunts seek out strong forces of life energy, such as children and young adults. They often target those who are far from help, sweeping into lone farmhouses or campsites to slake their unholy hunger. The commonly held belief is that nighthaunts are bodiless souls whose progress across the Shadowfell was interrupted. Instead of dissipating, these itinerant spirits cloaked themselves in bodies of shadow. Nighthaunts are known for their remorseless hunger, their power over shadow, and the terror they can instill in even the bravest foes.

DC 23: The truth of nighthaunts' creation lies in the history of the Black Tower of Vumerion, a former den of necromancy. Before Vumerion was destroyed, it produced many horrors, including an addictive black weed called corpse grass. When consumed, the weed infuses the eater with strength and joy. However, foul nightmares always follow the consumption of the grass.

Corpse grass has spread throughout the Shadowfell and into the world, and many have become addicted to its properties. Those who eat even a little of the grass—no matter what they achieved in life—become nighthaunts in death. The curse of the corpse grass fills these creatures with a raging hunger in death, a hunger that can be sated only through sucking the life out of living creatures.

DC 25: The name "corpse grass" is a bit of a misnomer now, for since the initial creation of nighthaunts, the curse of the corpse grass has spread into other vegetation. When a nighthaunt has ingested enough life force, it finds a twilight-lit meadow or field and releases its energies into the grass, weeds, grains, nuts, and other vegetation. The vegetation continues to grow, gaining the properties of corpse grass and perpetuating the nighthaunt cycle.

Encounter Groups

Nighthaunts travel with their own kind or with other creatures that have ghastly hunger, such as wraiths and vampires.

Level 12 Encounter (XP 3,400)
- 4 nighthaunt slips (level 12 minion)
- 1 vampire lord, human rogue (level 11 elite lurker, MM 258)

Oni

Although all oni are creatures of nightmare, some are particularly terrifying because of their ability to shepherd and harvest souls. Often found in the world or in the Shadowfell, these oni prowl the land for spirits to fuel their deadly powers or for souls that can grant them knowledge and longevity.

Oni Souleater Level 11 Elite Controller

⸸ Consume Essence (minor 1/round; at-will) ✦ Healing, Necrotic
Targets an immobilized creature; +15 vs. Fortitude; 1d8 + 4 necrotic damage, and the target loses a healing surge; see also devour soul. In addition, the oni souleater regains 5 hit points.

⊛ Harvest Souls (standard; recharge ⚅ ⚄ ⚃) ✦ Necrotic
The oni souleater makes three soul grasp attacks.

Deceptive Veil (minor; at-will) ✦ Illusion
An oni souleater can appear as a Medium or Large humanoid. A successful insight check (opposed by the oni's Bluff check) pierces the illusion (see "Change Shape," MM 280).

Devour Soul
A creature reduced to 0 healing surges by an oni souleater is killed and its body is reduced to dust. The oni souleater acquires the languages and memories of a target it kills in this way.

Alignment Evil Languages Common, Giant; see also devour soul

Oni Souleater Tactics

Oni souleaters lull their prey into a false sense of security by using deceptive veil. A souleater lures creatures into secluded locations where it then drops the guise and attacks using harvest souls. Oni souleaters are generally cowardly, though, and if a battle turns against one, it doesn't hesitate to flee, using its guises to help cover its escape.

⊛ Harassing Spirits (standard; encounter; see also devour spirit) ✦ Necrotic, Psychic
Ranged 20; +19 vs. Reflex; 3d10 + 5 necrotic damage, and the target is dazed and takes ongoing 10 psychic damage (save ends both).

⊛ Howling Blast (standard; encounter; see also devour spirit) ✦ Fear, Psychic
Close blast 5; targets enemies; +17 vs. Will; 2d8 + 6 psychic damage, and the target is knocked prone.

Deceptive Veil (minor; at-will) ✦ Illusion
An oni spiritmaster can appear as a Medium or Large humanoid. A successful insight check (opposed by the oni's Bluff check) pierces the illusion (see "Change Shape," MM 280).

Devour Spirit (minor 1/round; at-will)
The oni spirit master devours one howling spirit within sight, killing it and recharging harassing spirits, howling blast, or spirit form.

Spirit Form (standard; sustain standard; encounter; see also devour spirit) ✦ Polymorph
The oni spiritmaster becomes insubstantial, gains phasing, and gains fly (hover) 8 until the end of its next turn.

Spirit Retinue
An oni spiritmaster starts combat with four howling spirits. These four spirits are part of the oni spiritmaster's XP value. An oni spiritmaster can have up to twelve howling spirits as part of its retinue, with each howling spirit beyond the first four counting toward the encounter's XP value.

Alignment Evil Languages Common, Giant
Skills Bluff +17, Religion +14, Insight +14
Str 18 (+11) Dex 20 (+12) Wis 14 (+9)
Con 22 (+13) Int 19 (+11) Cha 21 (+12)

Oni Spiritmaster Tactics

An oni spiritmaster views melee combat as lowly, and it does everything possible to avoid debasing itself by engaging in it. The oni instead sends howling spirits and other allies to occupy enemies while it uses dread fear, harassing spirits, and howling blast from a distance.

A clever and careful tactician, an oni spiritmaster often keeps at least one howling spirit out of melee. The oni withholds the creature as fuel for a power it might need to recharge. The spiritmaster waits to use spirit form in case it must make a quick escape, which the creature doesn't hesitate to do if the battle turns against it.

Howling Spirit Tactic

Howling spirits typically engage their foes at the start of combat, seeking to protect the creature that bound them. They remain in close proximity to foes, attempting to catch them in their choir of madness aura while striking with spectral strafe to achieve a tactical advantage.

Oni Lore

A character knows the following information with a successful skill check.

Nature DC 18: Oni spiritmasters build lairs in graveyards or in the vicinity of ancient battlefields. Although the spiritmasters command powers that aid them in combat, they are also masters of foul rituals that utilize bound spirits as components.

Nature DC 23: The oni spiritmaster is considered arrogant even when compared to others of its conceited race. Oni spiritmasters view their ability to bind the souls of other creatures as proof of their superiority.

Religion DC 18: Oni souleaters are oni that have traded the warmth of life for longevity in death. These undead oni retain all of their original intelligence and cunning, but they require none of the worldly necessities of mortality, such as food, water, or sleep. Instead, they feed on souls, using them as fuel to linger on in undeath.

Howling spirits are the souls of depraved oni that become trapped in the Shadowfell. Over time they grow insane and become susceptible to the binding rituals of oni spiritmasters and necromancers.

Religion DC 23: Oni souleaters consume the essence of living creatures, and in doing so they gain all the memories and languages of the victim. A souleater uses this knowledge combined with its powers of illusion to adopt the persona of its victims. Oni souleaters specifically hunt creatures that have wells of knowledge and memory, such as scholars.

An oni spiritmaster gathers howling souls and binds them through necromantic rites. Hags and rakshasas also covet these malleable spirits, using them as fuel in powerful rituals.

Encounter Groups

Though almost always accompanied by howling spirits, an oni spiritmaster often surrounds itself with other undead and weak-willed creatures. An oni souleater keeps a retinue of powerful guardians, both alive and dead, as it travels the world in search of souls.

Level 11 Encounter (XP 2,800)
- ✦ 1 oni mage (level 10 elite lurker, MM 201)

Ooze

Infused with necrotic energy, undead oozes are the congealed, slimy effluvia of living creatures that died horrible deaths.

Bloodrot

Bloodrot oozes are undead jellies that form when humanoids are melted by acid. The creature is a vaguely humanoid-shaped mass that reeks of blood.

⸸ Taint (minor; recharge ⚄ ⁞⁞) ✦ Necrotic
+12 vs. Fortitude; 2d8 + 6 necrotic damage, and the target loses a healing surge.

Split (when first bloodied; encounter)
The bloodrot splits into two Medium individuals, the second one occupying a space adjacent to the original creature. Each of the two creatures has hit points equal to one-half the original's current hit points. Both creatures act on the original creature's initiative count. Effects applied to the original bloodrot do not apply to either of the individuals after the split occurs. A bloodrot can't split if reduced to 0 hit points by the attack that bloodied it.
If out of combat for 5 minutes, the two halves combine back into one bloodrot, which has hit points equal to the combined value of the two halves.

Alignment Unaligned Languages –

Con 20 (+8) Int 1 (-2) Cha 1 (-2)

Bloodrot Tactics

A bloodrot ooze lurks in a dark corner, waiting until its prey comes close before striking. The creature then reaches out and attempts to grab a target and drain the blood from it.

Bloodrot Lore

DC 15: Bloodrot oozes crave the blood of their foes, pursuing them without any sense of self-preservation.

DC 20: Bloodrots are commonly found around the lairs of black dragons and other creatures that employ acid to slay their foes.

Blood Amniote

Blood amniotes are composed of the congealed blood of hundreds of creatures that died in close proximity. Similar to an anemone, the blood amniote has tendrils that snake out from its body in search of prey.

Blood Amniote Level 9 Elite Soldier

DERK VENNEMAN

Blood Amniote Tactics

A blood amniote creeps up and then grabs its quarry. It begins with body snatch and then uses blood call while it waits for body snatch to recharge. It tries to grab as many creatures as possible because it can sustain the grabs as a free action due to grasping tendrils. Once it has a creature in its grasp, the blood amniote uses blood drain.

Blood Amniote Lore

DC 15: Scholars debate whether the blood amniote arises spontaneously or is crafted intentionally through necromantic rites and mass sacrifices.

DC 25: Legend has it that priests of Orcus once unleashed a storm that rained burning blood on two opposing armies. The storm slew the soldiers, and from the blood-soaked ground arose blood amniotes.

Spirit Ooze

Spirit oozes are ravenous, incorporeal creatures that are created when wisps of matter from insubstantial undead congeal into a single amorphous entity.

Split (when first bloodied; encounter)
The spirit ooze splits into two Large individuals, the second one occupying a space adjacent to the original creature. Each of the two creatures has hit points equal to one-half the original's current hit points. Both creatures act on the original creature's initiative count. Effects applied to the original ooze do not apply to either of the individuals after the split occurs. A spirit ooze can't split if reduced to 0 hit points by the attack that bloodied it.
If out of combat for 5 minutes, the two halves combine back into one spirit ooze, which has hit points equal to the combined value of the two halves.

Combat Advantage
A spirit ooze deals 2d6 extra damage when it hits a target it has combat advantage against.

Phase Away (minor; while the spirit ooze has phasing; see spirit sink; at-will)
The spirit ooze shifts up to 1 square.

Slippery Phasing (while the spirit ooze has phasing; see spirit sink)
The spirit ooze gains a +2 bonus to AC and Reflex.

Spirit Ooze Tactics

A spirit ooze is at its most threatening when it has phasing. The creature instinctively knows this, and as a result it attacks without pause when confronted by foes.

Spirit Ooze Lore

DC 20: Spirit oozes have little sentience, but they are cautious and elusive enemies.

Bone Collector

Bone collectors inhabit subterranean caverns, killing and scavenging to collect bones to increase their mass.

Bone Collector Tactics

Bone collectors send out masses of tendrils to snatch opponents and drain their life.

Bone Collector Lore

DC 25: Bone collectors stalk underground tunnels. Three massive bone collectors, each rumored to be over 25 feet in diameter, inhabit the Underdark.

Encounter Groups

Oozes are sometimes encountered among creatures they find inedible, such as plants, constructs, or undead. At other times, oozes are found with the creatures responsible for their creation.

Level 8 Encounter (XP 1,800)
- ✦ 1 blood amniote (level 9 elite soldier)
- ✦ 2 crimson acolytes (level 7 skirmisher, MM 210)
- ✦ 1 deathpriest of Orcus (level 9 controller, MM 210)

PALE REAVER

Jealous of the living and hungry for their blood, a pale reaver is a predatory undead that exists on the boundary between solidity and insubstantiality. Many haunt the places where they died, attempting to lure the living to their doom. Although all but the most powerful pale reavers are soulless, they retain more cunning and intelligence than most undead.

Pale Reaver Creeper Level 6 Minion
Medium shadow humanoid (undead) XP 63

Initiative +4 Senses Perception +3; darkvision
HP 1; a missed attack never damages a minion
AC 20; Fortitude 18, Reflex 20, Will 21
Immune disease, poison; Resist 10 necrotic
Speed 6; phasing

⊕ Deadly Mane (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
Reach 2; +11 vs. AC; 5 necrotic damage, and if another deadly mane attack has hit the target since the end of the target's last turn, the creature is immobilized until the end of its next turn.

↓ Blood Drain (standard; recharges when an adjacent creature becomes bloodied)
Reach 2; targets an immobilized creature; +9 vs. Fortitude; the target loses a healing surge.

Image of Life (standard; encounter) ✦ Illusion
The pale reaver adopts the appearance of a living humanoid until it attacks or is hit by an attack.

Alignment Evil Languages Common
Skills Stealth +9

Con 14 (+5) Int 10 (+3) Cha 16 (+6)

Pale Reaver Creeper Tactics

Pale reaver creepers stalk their prey until they see a good opportunity to attack. The reavers then engage their quarry, using a combination of reach and immobilization to remain in a defensive stance while still attacking foes.

Pale Reaver Level 5 Lurker
Medium shadow humanoid (undead) XP 200

Initiative +9 Senses Perception +7; darkvision

⊕ Deadly Mane (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
Reach 2; +10 vs. AC; 1d8 + 6 necrotic damage.

↓ Blood Drain (standard; recharges when an adjacent creature becomes bloodied) ✦ Healing
Requires combat advantage against the target; reach 2; +8 vs. Fortitude; 2d12 + 6 damage, and the target loses a healing surge and is weakened (save ends). In addition, the pale reaver regains 12 hit points.

Image of Life (standard; encounter) ✦ Illusion
The pale reaver adopts the appearance of a living humanoid until it attacks or is hit by an attack.

Insubstantial Transformation (minor; at-will) ✦ Polymorph
The pale reaver becomes insubstantial and gains fly 6 (hover) and phasing until it attacks or becomes dazed, stunned, or unconscious.

Alignment Evil Languages Common
Skills Stealth +10
Str 6 (+0) Dex 16 (+5) Wis 10 (+2)
Con 13 (+3) Int 10 (+2 ) Cha 17 (+5)

Pale Reaver Tactics

Pale reavers are stealthy combatants that become insubstantial when moving about the battlefield. They tempt attackers into wasting attacks against them before returning to solidity. If seriously injured, a pale reaver attempts to escape by phasing through a wall. Usually they rely on blood drain to regain health.

Pale Reaver Lord Level 8 Elite Controller
Medium shadow humanoid (undead) XP 700

Initiative +7 Senses Perception +10; darkvision

⊕ Deadly Mane (standard, at-will) ✦ Necrotic
Reach 2; +13 vs. AC; 2d6 + 6 necrotic damage.

↘ Entrapping Gaze (minor; encounter) ✦ Charm, Gaze
Ranged 10; +12 vs. Will; the target is dominated (save ends).

↓ Blood Drain (standard; recharges when an adjacent creature becomes bloodied) ✦ Healing
Requires combat advantage against the target; reach 2; +11 vs. Fortitude; 2d12 + 8 damage, and the target loses a healing surge and is weakened (save ends). In addition, the pale reaver lord regains 29 hit points.

↓ Terrifying Shriek (standard; encounter) ✦ Fear, Psychic
Close burst 5; targets enemies; +12 vs. Will; 2d8 + 3 psychic damage, and the target is immobilized (save ends).

Image of Life (standard; encounter) ✦ Illusion
The pale reaver lord adopts the appearance of a living humanoid until it attacks or is hit by an attack.

Insubstantial Transformation (minor; at-will) ✦ Polymorph
The pale reaver lord becomes insubstantial and gains fly 8 (hover) and phasing until it attacks or becomes stunned or unconscious.

Str 8 (+3) Dex 17 (+7) Wis 12 (+5)
Con 13 (+5) Int 14 (+6) Cha 19 (+8)

Pale Reaver Lord Tactics

Pale reaver lords are cunning and deceitful foes that delight in tricking and misleading the living before devouring them. A pale reaver lord uses image of life and entrapping gaze to lure prey into an isolated place where it can drain the victim of blood. In battle, a pale reaver lord uses terrifying shriek to immobilize foes. The creature then uses insubstantial transformation to safely negotiate the battlefield as it seeks opportunities to gain combat advantage and use blood drain.

Pale Reaver Lore

DC 14: Pale reavers are the undead spirits of humanoids that were killed because they betrayed a person or organization who trusted or relied upon them. In death, they are angry, cursed creatures that seek to trick and betray the living.

DC 19: Pale reavers disguise themselves to look as they did in life, though they remain only semi-substantial and feel unnaturally light. They can mimic normal movement despite the fact that they hover just above the ground. Pale reavers are intelligent undead that excel at trickery. Pale reavers can become temporarily insubstantial and gain the ability to move through solid objects.

Pale reavers attack with their long hair, which stretches out like long, vampiric tendrils. They use the blood they drain to heal themselves. When they drain blood, their hair turns from white to red and remains this way for several hours. A pale reaver retains its blood-red hair after feeding even when disguised as a living creature.

DC 21: Pale reavers have only partial memories of their lives and must remain within a few miles of the location where they were killed. Even when disguised as living humanoids, the creatures have an eerie quality. Unlike lesser pale reavers, pale reaver lords retain their souls and remember the details of their lives. They are not bound to any location and travel abroad in search of blood.

Encounter Groups

Pale reavers associate with other undead. They tend to ally with large, physically powerful undead that complement their abilities. Weaker pale reavers are typically part of a band of ravenous undead. Pale reaver lords tend to organize bands of evil creatures to act as servants, guards, and soldiers.

Reaper Tactics

A reaper sweeps in toward its victims, using reap and fade. The reaper throws back its hood in combat, unveiling its bleak visage. Each round, it uses eye of impending doom on a nearby foe. Reapers are devoted servants of Vecna and his followers, and the creatures obediently follow the commands of their masters, even when confronted with overwhelming odds or potential destruction.

| Entropic Reaper | Level 15 Elite Lurker |

| ✧ Entropic Assault (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic, Psychic, Weapon | |
| Requires scythe; close burst 2; 4d4 + 5 necrotic damage, the target is dazed (save ends). First Failed Saving Throw: The target is instead stunned (save ends). Second Failed Saving Throw: The target takes ongoing 10 psychic damage and is stunned (save ends both). | |
| ✧ Eye of Impending Doom (minor 1/round, at-will) ✦ Fear, Gaze, Psychic | |
| Close burst 3; targets one creature; +18 vs. Will; the target takes 10 psychic damage if it attacks the entropic reaper (save ends). | |
| Shift Into Nothing (standard; at-will) | |
| The entropic reaper disappears, negating line of sight and line of effect to it for all creatures. At the start of its next turn, it returns to a square within 5 squares of the square it occupied when it last used shift into nothing. | |
| Alignment Evil | Languages Common |
| Skills Intimidate +14 | |
| Str 23 (+13) | Dex 18 (+11) Wis 17 (+10) |
| Con 20 (+12) | Int 16 (+10) Cha 14 (+9) |
| Equipment robes, scythe | |

Entropic Reaper Tactics

An entropic reaper fades in and out of view using shift into nothing as it approaches its foes. The creature uses that power to position itself among multiple enemies, where it can best utilize entropic assault and eye of impending doom. After a turn in which the entropic reaper attacks, the creature retreats using shift into nothing. If greatly threatened, an entropic reaper attacks and then spends an action point to immediately use shift into nothing.

Abhorrent Reaper Tactics

The abhorrent reaper—sometime called the harbinger of hate—doesn't waste time engaging its foe. The reaper opens combat with hateful charge, moving headlong into its enemies. On its next turn, the reaper positions itself among multiple enemies and uses hate's cleave. If the creature finds an optimal position for the attack, it spends an action point to repeat the power. An abhorrent reaper typically fights alongside a skirmisher, a brute, or another soldier so that its ally or allies can take advantage of aura of ruin and bloodthirst.

Reaper Lore

DC 15: Common folk regard reapers as embodiments of death that escort souls to the Shadowfell, but their true nature is more sinister. Reapers are servants of Vecna, and they are sent out by the god and his followers to collect souls for profane rituals.

DC 20: Reapers are failed undead imitations of the Raven Queen's sorrowsworn. Although Vecna did not succeed in copying the powerful servants, he has nonetheless found use for reapers. Many reapers are also in the service of demon lords, especially Orcus, who uses them for the same foul purpose as Vecna does.

DC 25: An abhorrent reaper is a paragon of its kind. The creature collects souls of only the most powerful creatures. Abhorrent reapers also serve as guardians for powerful undead.

DC 30: The Raven Queen despises reapers and dispatches sorrowsworn and other powerful servants specifically to eradicate them. Her followers have been known to reward individuals who dispatch reapers.

Encounter Groups

Reapers rarely accompany living creatures, preferring soulless companions that share a similarly grim purpose. Reapers in the service of demons are sometimes encountered among elementals.

SKELETON

All skeletons arise from the bones of once-living creatures. That basic truth says little about the details of a particular skeleton, however. The character of the living creature, the manner of its death, the requirements of a necromancer, and the deceased's former relationships—all these factors affect the nature and purpose of a skeleton.

Skinwalker Skeleton Level 2 Brute
Medium natural animate (undead) XP 125

Speed 5

⨁ Putrefying Pummel (standard; at-will) ✦ Disease
+5 vs. AC; 1d8 + 7 damage (crit 15 damage, and the target contracts skinrot; see below).

Skin Case (until first bloodied)
A skinwalker skeleton's fleshy exterior grants it a +2 bonus to AC and Fortitude (already included), negates its vulnerable 5 radiant, and infects a target with skinrot (see below) when the skinwalker skeleton scores a critical hit. These benefits end when the skinwalker skeleton is first bloodied.

Stone Shunt (standard; recharge ⚅)
+11 vs. Fortitude; 2d6 + 9 damage, and the target is restrained (save ends).

Merge With Stone (move; at-will)
The stonespawned skeleton merges with an adjacent stone surface of equal or greater size and then shifts up to 3 squares. The stone blocks line of sight and line of effect to the stonespawned skeleton. The skeleton can remain merged with stone indefinitely, but it can take only move actions while merged. A creature can attack a square in which the stonespawned skeleton is merged with the stone, but the skeleton has resist 20 to all damage while merged.

Stonespawned Skeleton Tactics

A stonespawned skeleton lurks inside a stone surface, waiting for a living being to pass it. When it senses prey in the vicinity, it emerges from the wall and attempts to entomb the creature with stone shunt. If that power recharges, the skeleton presses the attack against other creatures. Otherwise, it retreats into the stone using merge with stone while it waits for stone shunt to recharge.

+15 vs. AC; 1d8 + 4 damage, and the target takes ongoing 5 necrotic damage and is slowed (save ends both). After the shattergloom skeleton uses shadowy rejuvenation, on a hit, the target takes ongoing 10 necrotic damage and is immobilized (save ends both) instead of slowed.

Shadowy Rejuvenation (when first bloodied; encounter) ✦ Necrotic, Zone
Close burst 2; 2d6 + 4 necrotic damage (no attack roll required); the power creates a zone of darkness that lasts until the end of the encounter. The zone blocks line of sight (creatures that have darkvision ignore this effect). All effects on the shattergloom skeleton end, and the skeleton's shadowy claws attack deals ongoing 10 necrotic damage instead of ongoing 5 necrotic damage, and the attack renders a target immobilized instead of slowed.

⊕ Claw (standard; at-will)
+15 vs. AC; 2d8 + 4 damage, and the target is pushed 1 square and knocked prone.

⸸ Swoop and Claw (standard; recharge ⚅ ⚄ ⚃)
The giant skeletal bat shifts up to 6 squares and can move through occupied squares as it moves. It makes a melee basic attack against any creature whose space it enters. The skeleton cannot attack a single target more than once in this fashion, and it must end its movement in an unoccupied square.

⸸ Swoop and Drop (free, when the giant skeletal bat attacks a creature with swoop and claw; at-will)
The attack deals no damage. Instead, the target is grabbed. When the giant skeletal bat moves, the grabbed creature slides along with it, remaining in the same space relative to the bat.

Spine Creep Skeleton Tactics

Spine creep skeletons tie down melee characters at the center of the battlefield. They slide opponents to gain combat advantage or to keep them at a distance so the creatures can't retaliate with shorter-reach weapons.

Marrowshriek Skeleton Level 12 Lurker
Medium shadow animate (undead) XP 700

Initiative +16 Senses Perception +9; darkvision
HP 95; Bloodied 47

⊕ Osseous Thrust (standard; at-will)
+17 vs. AC; 1d8 + 9 damage.

⸸ Marrow Feast (standard; recharge ⚅ ⚄ ⚃)
Requires combat advantage against the target; +17 vs. AC; 2d8 + 12 damage, and the target is grabbed. Each round that the marrowshriek skeleton sustains the grab, the target takes 15 damage and is weakened until the end of the marrowshriek skeleton's next turn.

⇖ Marrowshriek (minor 1/round; at-will)
Close burst 3; targets living creatures; +15 vs. Fortitude; the target is dazed until the end of the marrowshriek skeleton's next turn. If the target is grabbed by the marrowshriek skeleton, it is stunned until the end of the marrowshriek skeleton's next turn instead of dazed.

Shadowrought (standard; at-will)
The marrowshriek skeleton becomes invisible until it attacks.

Str 18 (+10) Dex 22 (+12) Wis 16 (+9)
Con 17 (+9) Int 6 (+4) Cha 9 (+5)

Marrowshriek Skeleton Tactics

Marrowshriek skeletons skulk in the darkness, remaining invisible until they are ready to strike. The creatures look for opportunities to gain combat advantage, allowing them to use marrow feast. When battle is joined, each one uses marrowshriek constantly, filling the area with a horrifying cacophony that inhibits opponents.

Skeleton Lore

DC 15: Skinwalker skeletons are produced when a necromancer grafts skin to animated bones. They are used as servants because their appearance is less gruesome than that of most skeletons. A skinwalker skeleton's fleshy casing is ridden with infectious disease, making it a dangerous combatant as well.

Over a period of several weeks, skeletons can be trained in the use of bows to produce skeletal archers.

Bonewretch skeletons are implike creatures that sometimes inhabit graveyards. These child-sized skeletons scurry about, biting opponents' ankles. Bonewretches sometimes carry tokens of their former lives, such as a ragged doll or a bracelet.

Stonespawned skeletons are created when humanoids are crushed under tons of rock and left entombed in stone. Stories of haunted mines often arise due to the presence of stonespawned skeletons.

When seriously wounded, shattergloom skeletons explode in clouds of cloying darkness. After this explosion, the skeleton is infused with a reservoir of necrotic energy that makes its attacks even more dangerous. Shattergloom skeletons are created in dark chambers where natural light cannot reach.

DC 20: Death kin skeletons are siblings, kin, or lovers who died in a suicide pact or similar circumstance. They usually come in pairs or packs, which makes them more dangerous.

Giant skeletal bats are the remains of riding bats that were abandoned by their masters in battle. They are sometimes ridden by other undead.

Skeletal haulers are the remains of humanoid slaves and physical laborers. They haul heavy objects and also make effective fodder.

Spine creep skeletons are the result of unjustly beheaded humanoids or those torn to pieces by an angry mob. Each of these monstrosities rips out its own spine and wields it like a flail, striking with the skull. These spinal flails allow the skeletons to strike opponents from a distance and knock them around the battlefield.

Marrowshriek skeletons arise from victims of malnutrition and neglect, and they crave the marrow of the living. Marrowshriek skeletons have the ability to turn invisible, which they use to sneak up on an opponent. The creatures grab unwary prey and suck the marrow from their bones.

Encounter Groups

Skeletons often serve more powerful undead masters or travel in packs of their own kind.

Level 3 Encounter (XP 725)
- 1 deathlock wight (level 4 controller, MM 262)
- 2 skeletal archers (level 3 artillery)
- 2 skinwalker skeletons (level 2 brute)

Level 6 Encounter (XP 1,350)

- 2 spine creep skeletons (level 11 soldier)
- 4 vampire spawn bloodhunter (level 10 minion, MM 259)

Undead Aviary

Most undead are land-bound, but a few can take to the skies, spreading corruption and death on the wing.

Skin Kite

This creature looks like a gliding mass of skin, akin to a manta ray made of humanoid flesh. Sharp corrugations of calcified tissue line the creature's underbelly and wings.

Skin Kite Level 3 Skirmisher
Small aberrant beast (undead) XP 150

Initiative +8 Senses Perception +2; darkvision

Immune disease, poison
Speed fly 5 (hover); see also flyby attack

⊕ Bite (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
+8 vs. AC; 1d4 + 3 necrotic damage.

⸸ Blinding Grab (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
+6 vs. Fortitude; 1d4 + 3 necrotic damage, and the target is grabbed. The target is blinded until the grab ends. A skin kite can have only one creature grabbed at a time.

⸸ Flyby Attack (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
The skin kite moves up to 5 squares and makes one melee basic attack at any point during the movement. A skin kite doesn't provoke opportunity attacks from the target of its attack when moving away from the creature.

Kite Spawn (free, when the skin kite reduces an enemy to 0 hit points or fewer; at-will)
The skin kite splits, and a new skin kite appears in a square adjacent to the original skin kite. The new skin kite has the same current hit points as the original skin kite but is otherwise a new creature. The new skin kite acts immediately after the original skin kite's initiative count.

Skills Stealth +9
Alignment Evil Languages –
Str 10 (+1) Dex 16 (+4) Wis 12 (+2)
Con 11 (+1) Int 2 (-3) Cha 6 (-1)

Skin Kite Tactics

A skin kite lurks in the shadows until descending on its prey. It then attaches to a target and bites down, eating the creature's flesh until it feasts on enough flesh to split and produce another of its kind.

Skin Kite Lore

DC 15: Skin kites consist of skin flayed from torture victims that is spontaneously or intentionally animated.

Accipitridae

Accipitridaes resemble gaunt, rotting vultures. They have no feathers, and their eyeballs hang from their skulls. The cruel beasts harass and kill creatures for no other reason than malign entertainment.

Accipitridae Level 5 Skirmisher
Medium natural beast (undead) XP 200

Initiative +7 Senses Perception +2; darkvision

Speed fly 7 (hover); see also screeching retreat

⊕ Rake (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
+8 vs. Reflex; 1d6 + 2 necrotic damage, and the target is blinded until the end of the accipitridae's next turn.

⸸ Bite (minor 1/round; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
Targets a bloodied enemy; +8 vs. Reflex; 1d8 + 4 necrotic damage, and ongoing 5 necrotic damage (save ends).

✧ Screeching Retreat (minor; recharge ⚅) ✦ Thunder
Close burst 5; +6 vs. Fortitude; 2d6 + 5 thunder damage, and the target is dazed (save ends). Hit or Miss: The accipitridae shifts up to 3 squares.

Alignment Evil Languages –
Str 14 (+4) Dex 16 (+5) Wis 11 (+2)
Con 15 (+4) Int 3 (-2) Cha 3 (-2)

Accipitridae Tactics

Accipitridaes use hit-and-run tactics, swooping down to peck and rake targets before flying away. When threatened, they release a high-pitched screech that dazes nearby creatures.

Accipitridae Lore

DC 15: Accipitridae are the corrupt product of vultures that feed on undead flesh. The undead flesh poisons and kills the vultures, and they reanimate as these cruel, avian monsters.

Paralyth

Made sentient through foul magic, a paralyth is the animated spine and brain of a humanoid.

Paralyth Level 9 Soldier
Small natural animate (undead) XP 400

Initiative +11 Senses Perception +5; darkvision
Paralytic Aura aura 5; any enemy that enters the aura or starts its turn within the aura is slowed until the end of its next turn.
HP 96; Bloodied 48
AC 25; Fortitude 21, Reflex 23, Will 19
Immune disease, poison; Resist 10 psychic
Speed 5, fly 8 (hover)

⊕ Pain Lash (standard; at-will)
+16 vs. AC; 2d6 + 6 damage, and the target is slowed until the end of the paralyth's next turn.

⸸ Nervous Feedback (standard; at-will) ✦ Psychic
The paralyth makes two pain lash attacks against a single target. If both hit, the target takes ongoing 5 psychic damage and is marked (save ends both).

✧ Spinal Domination (minor 1/round; at-will)
Close burst 3; targets one creature marked by the paralyth; +14 vs. Will; the target is dominated until the end of the paralyth's next turn.

Alignment Chaotic evil Languages Common, telepathy 10
Str 17 (+7) Dex 20 (+9) Wis 12 (+5)
Con 16 (+7) Int 11 (+4) Cha 13 (+5)

Paralyth Tactics
Paralyths have a strong sense of self-preservation, which makes them pause at the edge of combat.

Paralyth Lore

DC 20: Paralyths are created when necromancers extract the brains and spines from recent victims.

Fear Moth
A fear moth appears to be a single, malleable creature, though it is composed of thousands of living and dead moths that have banded together.

| Fear Moth | Level 15 Soldier |

Fear Moth Tactics
Fear moths fly directly into enemies, using wave of fear to sow confusion among foes. They then rely on winged assault to keep adversaries from escaping.

Fear Moth Lore
A character knows the following information with a successful Religion check.

DC 18: A fear moth is composed of thousands of living and dead moths that all died simultaneously from some cataclysm.

Couatl Mockery
This flying mass of scales and feathers moves about at a frenetic pace. The creature retains none of the benevolence of its namesake.

| Couatl Mockery | Level 26 Minion |

Couatl Mockery Tactics
A couatl mockery zips around the battlefield, attacking enemies with wing slash. The creatures make no effort to avoid danger.

Couatl Mockery Lore

DC 26: Couatl mockeries are masses of animated scales and feathers collected from slain couatls. They retain some of their namesake's former properties while also being infused with the necrotic energy of undead, which interferes with healing.

Encounter Groups
Although some creatures of the undead aviary animate naturally, most are produced by necromancers.

Level 7 Encounter (XP 1,600)
- ✦ 2 accipitridaes (level 5 skirmisher)
- ✦ 1 crimson acolyte (level 7 skirmisher, MM 210)
- ✦ 2 paralyths (level 9 soldier)

UNRISEN

Rituals go awry, and when the ritual is Raise Dead or a similar form of magic, the results can be grim. The ritual might appear to be a complete failure, yet the residual energy can sometimes raise the creature days after the initial attempt. When this happens, the subject emerges with its soul fragmented and corrupted. A pet comes back from the dead, but it is no longer the adorable feline the family once knew. A child returns, but it is vile and depraved, caring nothing for the people it once loved. No matter what form the creature took in its past life, it returns as a vile, twisted thing—it returns as an unrisen.

Vile Pet Level 11 Minion
Small natural animate (undead) XP 150

Initiative +10 Senses Perception +7; darkvision
HP 1; a missed attack never damages a minion.
AC 25; Fortitude 21, Reflex 26, Will 22
Immune disease, poison; Resist 10 necrotic
Speed 8, climb 6

⊕ Filthy Claws (standard; at-will)
+16 vs. AC; 1d6 + 3 damage.

⸸ Infectious Bite (standard; at-will) ✦ Disease, Necrotic
Requires combat advantage against the target; +16 vs. AC; 2d4 + 5 damage, and the target contracts cemetery rot (see below) and takes ongoing 5 necrotic damage (save ends).

Alignment Evil Languages –
Skills Stealth +15
Str 4 (+2) Dex 21 (+10) Wis 14 (+7)
Con 14 (+7) Int 6 (+3) Cha 6 (+3)

Vile Pet Tactics

Vile pets tend to run in packs, overrunning commoners in attempt to spread disease. They try to flank a target so they can use infectious bite. However, the creatures are cowardly and flee if faced with a threatening adversary.

Corrupted Offspring Level 12 Skirmisher
Small natural animate (undead) XP 700

Cemetery Rot Level 11 Disease

A disease carried by the rotting, corrupted remains of small pets and animals, cemetery rot withers away the body, leaving a empty, mindless husk that hungers for flesh.

Attack: +14 vs. Fortitude
Endurance improve 22, maintain DC 17, worsen DC 16 or lower

The target is cured.

◀ Initial Effect: The target cannot regain hit points from powers that have the healing keyword.

◀▶ The target's Fortitude is reduced by 2 until the target is cured. Each time the target fails to improve from this step, the target's Fortitude drops another 2.

▶ Final State: When the target's Fortitude reaches 0, it dies and rises as a zombie (MM 275).

Tainted Priest Tactics

A tainted priest prefers to remain at a distance, using its ranged and close powers. If approached in melee, the creature uses vile eruption to stun its opponent and then escape. Otherwise, the priest whacks the foe with its staff, gaining hit points before shifting away.

Darkhoof Tactics

A darkhoof gallops around the battlefield, knocking foes to the ground. If it has a good opportunity to charge a foe, it disengages its current opponent and uses unstoppable charge. The creature also uses lifebite whenever possible.

Unrisen Lore

DC 15: An unrisen is the corrupt result of a failed attempt to resurrect a beast or a humanoid. After the failed ritual, a short time passes after the creature is buried before it rises up to take revenge on nearby living creatures, which it views as responsible for its death.

The most common types of unrisen are children, pets, mounts, and figures of prominence in a community, such as mayors or priests. These figures are sorely missed upon their deaths, so companions of the people or creatures often go to great lengths to attempt to resurrect them.

DC 20: Unrisen are drawn to each other and can sense the presence of their kind. They sometimes travel the world, searching for others of their kind to form vile groups.

DC 25: Most unrisen are very clever. They pretend to be normal, sometimes insinuating themselves back into their former lives, convincing their friends and family that the resurrection ritual worked successfully.

Encounter Groups

Unrisen tend to travel together, though they sometimes accept the company of like-minded creatures.

Level 11 Encounter (XP 3,100)
- ✦ 2 corrupted offsprings (level 12 skirmisher)

SOUTCHAY SOUNGPRADITH

VAMPIRE

Bloodsucking undead strike fear in common folk across the world. Stories tell of vampires that turn into beasts, control vermin, or both. Similar yarns speak of vampire weaknesses and prohibitions—limitations that give peasants hope at resistance against such foul creatures. However, this folklore is little more than the fearful ravings and false hopes of desperate people.

This characteristic doesn't have to apply to your game, though. You can add powers to vampire lords or spawn that give the creatures a trait or traits from vampire myth. Such weaknesses were removed from vampire statistics to make the creatures more challenging, yet with the careful application of strengths and weaknesses, you might create a vampire that is both powerful and has features of vampire folklore. For an example of a vampire with unique strengths and weaknesses, see Strahd von Zarovich on page 210.

Beast Summoning

Vampires are reputed to call beasts to aid them, including bats, rats, wolves, and vermin. In the game, such summoning can rely solely on narrative. A vampire can simply appear alongside such creatures, or it might call them to its aid at some point in battle as a minor action. Try advancing the rat swarm on page 219 of the Monster Manual or using advanced shadowhunter bats (MM 27) or advanced wolves (MM 264).

Prohibitions

Garlic and holy symbols might hold a vampire at bay. Perhaps the undead requires an invitation to enter a home or hallowed ground. It might be unable to set foot in a temple dedicated to a good deity. Maybe salt across a doorway or running water prevents a vampire from crossing. The vampire might have to take a standard action to pick up small objects, such as kernels of grain, tossed in its path. Any of these features might be integrated into a vampire's design, though common folk and not heroes are more likely to rely on such strategies.

Holy Symbols: The folklore of holy symbols derives from the traditional opposition of heroes wielding divine power against vampires. A strong-willed individual displaying a good deity's symbol might be able to repel a vampire. Using a holy symbol in this way is a standard action and grants a Charisma attack or Wisdom attack (plus the holy symbol's enhancement bonus) against the vampire's Will. The attack deals no damage but renders the undead unable to make attacks against the holy symbol's wielder until the end of its next turn. During that time, the holy symbol forces the vampire to remain a number of squares away from the wielder equal to the vampire's reach + 1.

A vampire that has no specific agenda might move away from a person wielding a holy symbol in favor of less oppositional prey. However, vampires often keep minions that lack their aversion to holy symbols and radiant energy, and such creatures would be free to attack the symbol's wielder.

Secret Weaknesses

A vampire makes an excellent recurring villain, especially if it has a secret weakness (DMG 135). One vampire's body might have to be burned, while another succumbs to death only if an ash wood stake pierces its heart after it's slain in battle. Perhaps a specific vampire must suffer its mortal wound while exposed to sunlight, while another's body must be immersed in running water.

Shapechanging

Accounts tell of vampires that can change into bats or great wolves. Other anecdotes speak of the creatures becoming mist or moonbeams to escape their enemies. To give a vampire such a power, borrow it from another monster. The werewolf (MM 181) and Strahd von Zarovich (page 210) are excellent examples of incorporating animal powers into humanoids. The oni night haunter (MM 200) has an evasive gaseous form power, and the oni mage (MM 201) has deceptive veil, both of which offer interesting options while interfering minimally with a creature's power level.

Creating Corpse Vampires and Spirit Vampires

A living humanoid killed by the blood drain of a corpse vampire or a spirit vampire rises as a similar vampire at sunset on the following day. The new vampire has the level it had in life (DMG 174). Burning the slain creature's body, decapitating that body, or reviving the slain creature can prevent this transformation.

When a corpse vampire kills a living humanoid by a means other than blood drain, that humanoid rises as a zombie of its level (DMG 174, MM 274) at sunset the next day.

When a spirit vampire or a corpse vampire reduces a living humanoid to 0 hit points or fewer without killing it, the humanoid enters a deep coma. If treated with the Remove Affliction ritual, the humanoid can be healed normally. Otherwise, he or she dies at sunset the next day and becomes a spirit vampire.

A corpse vampire or a spirit vampire that rises in this way has free will. Raising the slain humanoid, such as with the Raise Dead ritual, destroys the vampire.

Corpse Vampire Level 8 Skirmisher
Medium shadow humanoid (undead) XP 350

Initiative +10 Senses Perception +3; darkvision
HP 88; Bloodied 48; see also blood drain
Regeneration 5 (if a corpse vampire takes radiant damage, regeneration doesn't function until the end of its next turn)
AC 22; Fortitude 21, Reflex 20, Will 18
Immune disease, poison; Resist 5 necrotic
Speed 4, burrow 1, climb 4 (spider climb); see also rending pounce

⨁ Claw (standard; at-will)
+13 vs. AC; 2d6 + 5 damage.

⨁ Blood Drain (standard; recharges when an adjacent creature becomes bloodied) ✦ Healing
Requires combat advantage against the target; +11 vs. Fortitude; 2d8 + 6 damage, and the target is weakened (save ends), and the corpse vampire regains 24 hit points.

⨁ Rending Pounce (standard; at-will)
The corpse vampire shifts up to 6 squares and makes a claw attack.

Alignment Chaotic evil Languages Common
Skills Athletics +14, Stealth +13

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Str 20 (+9) | Dex 18 (+8) | Wis 8 (+3) |
| Con 16 (+7) | Int 6 (+2) | Cha 13 (+5) |

Corpse Vampire Tactics

A corpse vampire leaps upon its prey, often from above. It springs around the battlefield with rending pounce, clawing at one enemy in an attempt to bloody that foe and recharge blood drain.

ANNE STOKES

Spirit Vampire Level 12 Lurker
Medium shadow humanoid (undead) XP 700

Initiative +14 Senses Perception +11; darkvision
HP 66 (99 if in a possessed body); Bloodied 33
AC 24; Fortitude 23, Reflex 24, Will 26
Immune disease, poison; Resist 5 necrotic, insubstantial (spirit form only); Vulnerable 5 radiant
Speed 6 (possessed body only), fly 6 (spirit form only); phasing (spirit form only)

⨁ Claw (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
Requires a possessed body; +17 vs. AC; 1d6 + 4 damage plus 1d6 + 4 necrotic damage.

⨁ Spirit Touch (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
Requires spirit form; +15 vs. Reflex; 2d6 + 6 necrotic damage.

⨁ Blood Drain (standard; recharges when an adjacent creature becomes bloodied) ✦ Healing
Requires a possessed body and combat advantage against the target; +15 vs. Fortitude; 2d12 + 8 damage, and the target is weakened (save ends), and the spirit vampire regains 16 hit points.

⨁ Possess Body (minor; at-will)
A spirit vampire's natural form is its spirit form. However, it can enter the form of a dead or unconscious Medium or smaller humanoid, possessing the body. While in a possessed body, the spirit vampire has the following traits:
- ✦ The spirit vampire loses spirit touch, fly 6, and phasing.
- ✦ The spirit vampire gains speed 6, claw, blood drain, and a +7 bonus to Strength-based checks.
- ✦ The spirit vampire loses the insubstantial quality and gains 33 temporary hit points. When the temporary hit points are gone, the body falls to the ground and the spirit vampire returns to its spirit form.
- ✦ Healing the possessed subject deals damage to the spirit vampire equal to the amount that would be healed. The subject cannot regain hit points or be awakened while it is possessed. A dying creature is considered stable while a spirit vampire possesses its body.
- ✦ A spirit vampire can be targeted by melee and ranged attacks. Close and area attacks hit the possessed subject and the spirit vampire.
- ✦ A spirit vampire can leave a possessed body as a minor action. If it leaves a body, the spirit vampire returns to its spirit form and the body falls prone in the square the spirit vampire occupies.
- ✦ Once a spirit vampire leaves a body, it cannot possess that body for the rest of the encounter.

Vulnerable to Sunlight
A spirit vampire that starts its turn in direct sunlight is dazed and cannot use possess body.

Alignment Chaotic evil Languages Common
Skills Bluff +17, Stealth +15

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Str 6 (+4 or +11) | Dex 18 (+10) | Wis 10 (+6) |
| Con 16 (+9) | Int 10 (+6) | Cha 22 (+12) |

Spirit Vampire Tactics

A spirit vampire avoids combat unless it has a body it can possess. The creature usually keeps a corpse on hand in case combat finds it. The vampire relies on its claw attack and spirit touch until it is hurt, at which point it employs blood drain at each opportunity. It rips into a single injured foe, focusing its attacks so it can recharge blood drain and potentially gain another body to possess.

Action Points 1

Muse's Touch (standard; at-will) ✦ Psychic
+14 vs. Reflex; 2d6 + 4 psychic damage, and the target is slowed and takes a -2 penalty to Will (save ends both).

Beguiling Eyes (standard; at-will) ✦ Charm, Gaze, Psychic
Ranged 20; +14 vs. Will; 2d6 + 4 psychic damage, and the vampire muse makes a secondary attack against the same target. Secondary Attack: +13 vs. Will; the target is dominated (save ends). Aftereffect: The target falls prone. The vampire muse can dominate only one creature at a time.

Song of Lovers Parted (standard; sustain minor; at-will) ✦ Charm
Close burst 10; deafened and dominated creatures are immune; +14 vs. Will; the target is pushed 3 squares and slowed (save ends). When the muse sustains the power, a target slowed by the power is pushed 3 squares.

Fey Leap (move; recharge ⚄ ⚅) ✦ Teleportation
The vampire muse teleports up to 10 squares.

Indestructible
When a vampire muse is reduced to 0 hit points, its body and possessions crumble into dust, but it is not destroyed. It reappears (along with its possessions) in 30 days within 1 square of its blood cauldron, unless the blood cauldron is also found and destroyed.

Alignment Unaligned Languages Common
Skills Bluff +16, Diplomacy +16, Insight +13, Stealth +14

| | | |

| Str 16 (+8) | Dex 18 (+9) | Wis 17 (+8) |
| Con 17 (+8) | Int 12 (+6) | Cha 23 (+11) |

Equipment book of love poems, flask of blood

Vampire Muse Tactics

A vampire muse is evasive in combat, using fey leap to maneuver out of dangerous situations and into advantageous positions on the battlefield. A vampire muse is willing to take some risks because it can rely on its indestructible quality. A vampire muse begins combat by using beguiling eyes. If it successfully dominates a foe, it spends its action point to use song of lovers parted, pushing away enemies while using the dominated creature to intercept any unaffected foes.

Vampire Lore

DC 15: A corpse vampire is a pale, feral-looking undead that appears to be slowly decaying into a horrifying form. The creature is slow unless it is bounding toward prey. Due to corpse vampires' unusual movement habits, halflings call them "pouncing vampires."

DC 20: A corpse vampire is the result when a humanoid cadaver is buried improperly, robbed of its burial possessions, or left in a place polluted by evil energy. The creature has no soul, but it retains memories of life. It can speak in bestial tones and often victimizes its one-time relatives and friends.

A spirit vampire is much like a wraith. It hungers for blood, but it can drink only while possessing a humanoid body. For this reason, it prefers to dwell where it has access to corpses. When it reanimates a body, the form grows claws and fangs. A spirit vampire in possession of a body is easily mistaken for a normal vampire. A spirit vampire often uses its original body as a tool for feeding, even fooling those who it knew in life. Because a spirit vampire can possess other corpses, though, a single spirit vampire can seem to represent dozens of different vampires. Particularly mischievous spirit vampires torment the living by affecting the behavior of a departed loved one.

A vampire muse has an eladrinlike guise of such stunning beauty that most mortals do not suspect it is undead. Vampire muses hail from the Feywild and are renowned for stimulating creativity in artists. These gifts come at a price, however. While the muse inspires an artist to the heights of creativity, it steals away the artist's blood. An artist working with a vampire muse might achieve renown for epic poems, songs, or paintings, but he or she tends to die soon afterward, a gaunt and hollow-eyed husk.

DC 25: Although it prefers to possess a corpse, a spirit vampire can possess an unconscious humanoid. It is possible to attack the spirit within the body using ranged and melee attacks without harming the subject of the possession. A spirit vampire attacked in this way can be driven out of the host.

Vampire muses are said to truly value the relationship they develop with the mortal they are inspiring. However, they equally value the blood they slowly steal. A vampire muse places this blood in an ornate cauldron in a hidden lair. This blood is the ultimate source of the vampire's power, and it acts like a lich's phylactery, restoring the creature to undeath even after its body has been destroyed. A vampire muse can be permanently eliminated only by finding its blood cauldron and destroying the object.

A Vampire's Resting Place

Corpse vampires and spirit vampires do not rest in coffins and must instead take an extended rest in a dark place, usually under the earth, each day. The creatures usually do this during daylight hours. If a vampire fails to take this rest, it is reduced to half its normal hit points and is weakened until its next extended rest. A vampire is attuned to the den where it rests. The creature can change its den by resting three consecutive times in a new location (during which time it has half its normal hit points and is weakened). After satisfying this requirement, the location becomes the vampire's new den. A corpse vampire can burrow into loose soil, and it prefers to rest in a fresh grave—usually its own. A spirit vampire uses phasing to pass through the ground and locate underground caverns or niches.

Encounter Groups

Corpse vampires and spirit vampires hunt with other undead and nocturnal creatures. Vampire muses are often accompanied by living creatures that serve it in the hope of being chosen as companions.

Level 8 Encounter (XP 1,750)
- 2 corpse vampires (level 8 skirmisher)
- 1 rot scarab swarm (level 8 soldier, MM 30)
- 2 zombie hulks (level 8 brute, MM 275)

Level 9 Encounter (XP 1,975)
- 2 eladrin fey knights (level 7 soldiers, MM 102)
- 5 human lackeys (level 7 minion, MM 162)
- 1 vampire muse (level 10 elite controller)

Level 13 Encounter (XP 4,300)
- 1 battle wight commander (level 12 soldier, MM 262)
- 2 skeletal tomb guardians (level 10 brute, MM 235)

Immune disease, poison; Resist 10 necrotic, insubstantial
Speed fly 10 (hover); phasing; see also crescent arc and lunar violation

Lunar Violation (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
The moon wraith shifts up to 2 squares before or after the attack; +12 vs. Fortitude; 2d4 + 6 necrotic damage, and the target is weakened until the end of its next turn.

Crescent Arc (standard; recharge ⚅) ✦ Necrotic
The moon wraith shifts up to 10 squares, moving through any creatures' spaces; +12 vs. Fortitude against each enemy whose space it enters; 2d4 + 6 necrotic damage, and the target is dazed (save ends). A wraith can pass through a single creature's space only once when using crescent arc. Miss: Half damage, and the target is not dazed.

Moon Wrath
When a moon wraith is in moonlight or starlight, its melee attacks deal 1d4 extra necrotic damage, and the weakened condition caused by lunar violation is ended by a save.

Spawn Wraith
Any humanoid killed by a moon wraith rises as a free-willed moon wraith at the start of its creator's next turn, appearing in the space where it died (or in the nearest unoccupied space). Raising the slain creature (using the Raise Dead ritual) does not destroy the spawned wraith.

Moon Wraith Tactics

Moon wraiths use hit-and-run tactics, flying though enemies with crescent arc as often as possible. They prefer to fight in moonlight and starlight, in which they are more powerful.

| Vortex Wraith | Level 9 Soldier |
|---|---|
| Medium shadow humanoid (undead) | XP 400 |

Spiral Strike (standard; at-will) ✦ Force
+14 vs. Fortitude; 2d6 + 5 force damage, and the target is slowed until the end of the vortex wraith's next turn.

Spectral Helix (standard; encounter) ✦ Force
Reach 2; +14 vs. Reflex; 1d6 + 3 force damage, and the target takes ongoing 10 force damage and is immobilized (save ends both). Hit or Miss: The vortex wraith shifts up to 1 square but must end adjacent to the target.

Final Vortex (when reduced to 0 hit points) ✦ Force, Teleportation
Close burst 5; targets enemies; +14 vs. Reflex; 2d6 + 5 force damage, and the target is teleported up to 5 squares and knocked prone. Miss: Half damage, and the target is not teleported or knocked prone.

Shadow Glide (move; encounter)
The vortex wraith shifts up to 6 squares.

Spawn Wraith
Any humanoid killed by a vortex wraith rises as a free-willed vortex wraith at the start of its creator's next turn, appearing in the space where it died (or in the nearest unoccupied space). Raising the slain creature (using the Raise Dead ritual) does not destroy the spawned wraith.

Vortex Wraith Tactics

A vortex wraith hovers around multiple prey, trying to catch as many victims in its aura as possible. The creature takes advantage of the slowing effect of its attacks to keep mobile creatures from escaping while its aura draws more victims within reach.

| Oblivion Wraith | Level 14 Brute |
|---|---|
| Large shadow humanoid (undead) | XP 1,000 |

Initiative +13 Senses Perception +7; darkvision
Nihil (Necrotic) aura 2; any enemy that starts its turn within the aura takes 10 necrotic damage and cannot spend a healing surge until the start of its next turn.

⊕ Nihil Strike (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
+15 vs. Reflex; 2d8 + 7 necrotic damage, and the oblivion wraith is invisible to the target until the end of the oblivion wraith's next turn.

↓ Obliviate (standard; recharge ⚅ ⚄ ⚃) ✦ Necrotic
+15 vs. Reflex; 2d8 + 4 necrotic damage, and the target takes ongoing 15 necrotic damage and a -2 penalty to saving throws (save ends both).

✧ Death Blast (when reduced to 0 hit points) ✦ Necrotic
Close blast 3; targets enemies; +15 vs. Fortitude; 2d8 + 7 necrotic damage, and the target loses two healing surges. Miss: Half damage, and the target loses a healing surge.

Shadow Glide (move; encounter)
The oblivion wraith shifts up to 6 squares.

Spawn Wraith
Any humanoid killed by an oblivion wraith rises as a free-willed oblivion wraith at the start of its creator's next turn, appearing in the space where it died (or in the nearest unoccupied space). Raising the slain creature (using the Raise Dead ritual) does not destroy the spawned wraith.

| Con 16 (+10) | Int 10 (+7) | Cha 18 (+11) |

Oblivion Wraith Tactics

Oblivion wraiths move into melee range quickly, catching multiple opponents in their nihil aura. A wraith then focuses its attacks on a few potent enemies, effectively blinding them with respect to itself using nihil strike. If a target seems particularly threatening, the wraith unleashes obliviate.

Wraith Lore

DC 15: A wisp wraith is the result of a wraith that failed to form correctly when another wraith used spawn wraith.

Moon wraiths are floating, crescent-shaped apparitions that are created when a lycanthrope dies during its transformation. They are strongest under moonlight or starlight.

DC 20: A vortex wraith creates a whirlwind of force that shuffles around objects and creatures. A vortex wraith rises when a person dies in a tornado or storm and the victim's body is never found.

DC 25: An oblivion wraith is a large, shadowy rip in reality that absorbs light and distorts its surroundings.

GORAN JOSIC

It is created when a person dies violently during an important life event, such as a wedding or a coronation.

Encounter Groups

Wraiths pollute their surroundings with necrotic energy, giving rise to other undead.

Level 2 Encounter (XP 575)
✦ 4 decrepit skeletons (level 1 minion, MM 234)
✦ 1 famine hound (level 2 skirmisher, page 158)
✦ 4 wisp wraiths (level 1 minion)
✦ 2 zombies (level 2 brute, MM 274)

Level 8 Encounter (XP 1,800)

✦ 1 pale reaver lord (level 8 elite controller, page 176)
✦ 2 vortex wraiths (level 9 soldier)

Level 13 Encounter (XP 4,400)
✦ 2 helmed horrors (level 13 soldier, MM 155)
✦ 4 horde ghouls (level 13 minion, MM 118)
✦ 2 oblivion wraiths (level 14 brute)

WRATH OF NATURE

Most people living in cities mean well, but a certain amount of pollution is inevitable. Livestock overgraze, communities log and burn forests, and cities dump waste and alchemical byproducts into the streams. The land is forgiving, but sometimes when an area is so wrought with pollution and death, nature's rage gives rise to a wrath of nature, a mindless embodiment of death.

Calvary Creekrotter

Composed of mud, excrement, rotting vegetation, dead aquatic animals, and toxic liquids, a calvary creekrotter delivers vengeance upon anything it perceives as a threat to nature.

| Calvary Creekrotter | Level 24 Brute |
|---|---|
| Huge natural beast (plant, undead, water) | XP 6,050 |
| Initiative +18 | Senses Perception +19; darkvision, tremorsense 10 |
| Deathwater Aura (Necrotic) aura 10; any creature within the aura takes a -10 penalty to Athletics checks to swim. In addition, any creature within the aura that starts its turn in contact with water takes 15 necrotic damage. | |
| HP 270; Bloodied 135 | |

| Con 20 (+17) | Int 3 (+8) Cha 20 (+17) |

Calvary Creekrotter Tactics

A calvary creekrotter prefers to attack near water, where it can use its swim speed to outmaneuver its opponents. It begins battle by using entangling execration to send out tendrils of rotting vegetation and animal corpses to grab hold of its enemies. The creature then employs snatch to grab its foes before submerging them in the foul, toxic material of its body using douse.

AMELIA STONER

Calvary Creekrotter Lore

DC 24: Calvary creekrotters arise as a result of extreme pollution in a river, lake, or part of the ocean. When the land dies away, nature rebels, animating the dead animals and vegetation to visit wrath upon civilization.

DC 29: Druids are loath to see the land polluted, yet most also believe wraths of nature are aberrations that are an unwilling reaction by the land. A calvary creekrotter is not an inherently evil creature, but druids believe it represents a threat to life and must be destroyed.

DC 31: Some evil creatures, including corrupt druids, purposefully defile bodies of water in an attempt to create these monstrosities. They dump vile substances and waste into streams and rivers, killing life and upsetting the natural order.

Cindergrove Spirit

Cindergrove spirits appear when a lush, beautiful landscape is willfully burned to the ground and all trace of life is erased. Out of the ashes arises a single wrathful spirit, an undead amalgamation of the life that once filled the area. This spirit's rage ignites a cloud fire that craves to consume civilization in its flames.

| Cindergrove Spirit | Level 27 Artillery |

Cindergrove Spirit Tactics

A cindergrove spirit is content to remain distant from the source of its rage, scouring the target with fiery wrath. The spirit ignites buildings and people, which it views as sources of destruction. The creature does not fear death, gladly consuming adversaries in its final conflagration.

Cindergrove Spirit Lore

DC 24: Cindergrove spirits arise at the edge of communities in which the verdant landscape was burned to make way for civilization.

DC 29: Druids are loath to see the land polluted, yet most also believe wraths of nature are aberrations that are an unwilling reaction by the land. A cindergrove spirit is not an inherently evil creature, but druids believe it represents a threat to all life and must be destroyed.

DC 31: Some corrupt creatures purposefully burn natural environments rich with life and beauty in an attempt to create these monstrosities.

Encounter Groups

Wraths of nature are often accompanied by the creatures that willfully created them or by creatures of a similar nature. Thus, cindergrove spirits are joined by members of fire cults and fire creatures, while calvary creekrotters draw monsters of rot, corruption, and slime.

Zombie

Inexhaustible and unreasoning, zombies are shambling semblances of life. They are heedless of their rotting flesh, and they are of almost unlimited supply, given sufficient necrotic energy. Basic zombies grab and maul an enemy, but some are more carefully designed, having the ability to swim, sneak, exude potent fumes, and rise again time after time.

Zombie Throng Tactics

Zombie throngs close in on their enemies quickly and use zombie grab and zombie mass grab to keep the creatures in place. Creatures unable to move away are pummeled by the throng's aura. If enemies try to escape, the throng relentlessly pursues, even ignoring potential opportunity attacks against it.

Zombie Lore

DC 15: Dread zombies are created by powerful necromancers for war. A dread zombie keeps getting back up after it has been "killed." Several varieties of dread zombies exist, but even necromancers think twice before creating them. Only radiant or fire attacks can permanently send a dread zombie to the grave.

Drowned ones are zombies that have been underwater for some time; their bloated and discolored flesh drips with foul water. Drowned ones are usually the animated corpses of humanoids who died at sea.

A skulk zombie's limbs move in an exaggerated manner, sometimes contorting its body in ways no living humanoid could duplicate. Skulk zombies are stealthy, nimble undead that have the ability to climb walls and ceilings without needing handholds. They are rumored to be animated by the will of Vecna, which gives them an abiding hatred for the living.

A carcass eater is a small gore-streaked creature, resembling a cross between an oversized rat and a desiccated wolf. It is the result of a rodent that gorges on the rotting, necrotic flesh of a canine.

Putrescent zombies are created when necrotic energy mixes with abandoned or lost corpses. Also, a necromancer can use a dedicated ritual to create putrescent zombies. The creature has a revolting discharge that it releases upon death.

DC 20: A mass of hundreds of undead rats is called a corpse rat swarm. The bite attacks of a zombie rat swarm infect a creature with the filth fever disease. A corpse rat swarm is created when vast quantities of rats die together and are then infused with necrotic energy.

Blood sea zombies are believed to have been a creation of the demon prince, Demogorgon. Once occupants of only the Abyss, these zombies have spilled over into the world and now lurk in polluted waterways.

A wrathborn is a decaying and ravaged victim of homicide. Wrathborn are undead avengers, returned from the grave to track down and kill their murderers. A wrathborn's eyes, normally sunken and lifeless, blaze with unnatural light when the creature faces its killer. Unlike a true zombie, a wrathborn has a soul. Once the creature has achieved vengeance on its killer, its form crumbles away.

A zombie throng is composed of multiple corpses that cling together in a tightly knit group. The throng consists of the body parts and whole bodies of people killed en masse, often as a result of a disease outbreak.

Encounter Groups

Zombies are often encountered with other undead under the control of a necromancer or an evil cleric.

Undead Hall of Infamy

Many of the luminaries that follow need no introduction to veteran players—they've been around so long that it seems as though they're destined to live forever.

Acererak

In a far reach of the world, under a grim, lonely hill, lies a crypt filled with terrible traps and ferocious guardians. Treasures fill the tomb, guarded by the lair's keeper, the demilich Acererak. Having escaped death through lichdom, he houses his intelligence in a bejeweled skull and his soul in a hidden phylactery. Acererak quickly dispatches trespassers, relieving the victims of any magic trinkets or tomes they might have.

Ranged 20; +31 vs. Will; the target takes ongoing 10 psychic damage and is slowed (save ends both).

Prismatic Burst (standard; expends a trapped soul; recharge ⚅) ✦ Cold, Fire, Lightning, Thunder
Area burst 3 within 10; +31 vs. Reflex; 3d8 + 8 cold, fire, lightning, and thunder damage, and the target is stunned until the end of Acererak's next turn.

Soul Shriveling Pulse (immediate reaction, when a creature fails a saving throw against drain soul; at-will) ✦ Fear, Necrotic
Close burst 5; +31 vs. Will; 4d6 + 6 necrotic damage, and the target is immobilized and takes a -2 penalty to saving throws (save ends both).

Consume Soul (minor; expends a trapped soul; recharge ⚅) ✦ Healing
Acererak regains 250 hit points.

Soul Gems
Acererak's eight soul gems can each hold the soul of one of his victims. At the beginning of an encounter, the soul gems contain three souls. Crushing a gem after Acererak is defeated releases the soul to the Shadowfell.

Indestructible (when reduced to 0 hit points)
Acererak's skull (but not the soul gems) crumbles to dust, but Acererak is not destroyed. He reappears in 1 day adjacent to his phylactery, unless the phylactery is also found and destroyed.

Acererak Tactics

Acererak takes advantage of his speed to maneuver around the battlefield, attempting to stay out of range of enemies' attacks while bombarding foes. Acererak opens combat with prismatic burst, then attacks with azure eye and shadow drain each round, attempting to keep his foes scattered and immobile. He saves a trapped soul for consume soul, even if his prismatic burst recharges quickly. As long as Acererak knows that his phylactery is stowed safely away, he does not fear fighting to "the death."

Acererak Lore

A character knows the following information with a successful Religion or Arcana check.

DC 20: Dozens have tried to plumb the depths of Acererak's tomb, usually with disastrous results. Over time, the so-called Tomb of Horrors has become a point of interest for necromancers because of Acererak's renowned knowledge of necromancy. This interest gave rise to a city near the tomb called Skull City.

DC 22: Acererak is a demilich. The inhabitants of Skull City are obsessed with the power of the dark arts, and they revere the demilich, whom they have named "The Devourer." Idolatry of Acererak has inspired the construction of a massive academy over Acererak's tomb. This school of magic and religion, named the Bleak Academy, harbors cultists who perform ceremonies to garner the attention and favor of Acererak. The inhabitants have left the tomb sacrosanct, though they allow groups of treasure-seeking adventurers to enter, regarding such allowances as offerings to the Devourer.

DC 27: The leaders of the Bleak Academy fear that in spite of their attempts to commune with the demilich, they know only a glimmer of Acererak's true motives. They wonder whether Acererak's skull, which lies within the Tomb of Horrors, is Acererak's true guise.

DC 29: Acererak's skull, which dwells in the mithral vault of the Tomb of Horrors, is a construct created by the demilich. Acererak designed the skull to facilitate an elaborate plot that involves the collection of souls. If the construct is destroyed, the demilich arranges for a new skull. The real demilich resides in the Fortress of Conclusion, a stronghold hidden in the Shadowfell. For centuries, Acererak has plotted a terrible apotheosis to merge his consciousness with undead everywhere. He need only acquire sufficient power and ample souls.

Fate of Drained Souls

When a victim of the drain soul attack fails its second saving throw, the victim's soul is trapped in one of the demilich's skull's gems. The soul's former body crumbles into dust at the end of the creature's next turn. If the skull is destroyed, each creature trapped in a gem is targeted by an attack: demilich's level + 5 vs. Will; the soul is destroyed. On a miss, the soul remains intact but is trapped in a gem. If a target's soul remains intact within a gem, then the gem glows with a faint inner light and reveals an image of a tiny figure inside. This gem can be used as part of the Raise Dead ritual, reducing the component cost by half. A target whose soul is destroyed can still be brought back by the Raise Dead ritual.

Encounter Groups

Acererak willingly supplements his power with the aid of other creatures, particularly undead. The demilich also places guardians with the Acererak construct.

Ctenmiir Tactics

Bound to obey his master, Ctenmiir is a stalwart guard. He employs dominating gaze when battle begins and uses it at each subsequent opportunity. Once he discovers the most dangerous adversary, he uses thunder smite on that creature. Once he has been hurt and spent his action point, he uses blood drain. He then focuses his attacks on one or two opponents, attempting to bloody a creature and recharge blood drain. He recognizes when a battle is lost and uses mist form to retreat.

Ctenmiir Lore

DC 15: Ctenmiir is a vampire. He has increased physical prowess, powers of domination, and can drain the blood of his foes.

DC 20: Ctenmiir was a paladin who chose to become a vampire in the pursuit of longevity. However, Ctenmiir's immortality became a curse when the wizard Keraptis wrested control of the vampire's will. Ctenmiir now serves as an unwilling guard for some of Keraptis's most valuable treasures.

DC 25: Ctenmiir wields an ancient warhammer known as Whelm. Whelm is one of several artifacts in the possession of Keraptis.

Encounter Groups

Ctenmiir is sometimes joined in his duties by several of Keraptis's other undead guardians.

Level 14 Encounter (XP 5,200)
- ✦ 2 blaspheme disciples (level 13 artillery, page 135)
- ✦ 2 blaspheme knights (level 14 soldiers, page 136)
- ✦ Ctenmiir, human vampire (level 13 elite soldier)

Whelm

Whelm is appropriate for paragon-level characters.

Whelm Paragon Level

An anathema to goblins, trolls, and giants, Whelm is a war hammer of noble bearing originally crafted by dwarves. Its spirit is a born hunter, driving its wielder to slay the weapon's enemies.

Whelm is a +3 magic warhammer with the following properties and powers.
Enhancement: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +3d6 damage, or +3d10 damage against creatures larger than Medium size.
Property: Gain a +2 item bonus to Perception checks.
Property: You can make a ranged basic attack with Whelm as if it has the heavy thrown property and a range of 5/10.
Power (At-Will ✦ Weapon): Standard Action. As the paladin's valiant strike power (PH 92).
Power (Encounter ✦ Thunder, Weapon): Standard Action. As the paladin's thunder smite power (PH 94).
Power (Daily ✦ Healing, Weapon): Standard Action. As the paladin's bloodied retribution power (PH 95).

Goals of Whelm

✦ Hunt and slay goblins, trolls, and giants.

Roleplaying Whelm

Whelm communicates empathically with its wielder, expressing a constant desire to hunt. The weapon is terse in expressing its wishes. When the wielder has gone a long time without hunting and ignores Whelm's appeals, the weapon might take over, seeking another to take it hunting or flying from the wielder's hand when he or she least expects it. Whelm is desperately unhappy serving the joyless Ctenmiir, who, because of his curse, never goes hunting.

CONCORDANCE

|---|---|
| Starting score | 5 |
| Owner gains a level | +1d10 |
| Owner is a dwarf | +2 |
| Owner kills a goblin, troll, or giant (maximum 1/day) | +1 |
| Owner fails to kill a goblin, troll, or giant within 1 week | -1 |
| Owner is a goblin, troll, or giant | -5 |

Pleased (16–20)

"Through my efforts, a new dawn is rising, bringing a day without goblins, trolls, and giants."

Whelm and the wielder fight in unity against their foes. Each understands the other's desires, and they are of one mind. They have begun a personal war against goblins, trolls, and giants.

Whelm becomes a +4 magic warhammer
Critical: +4d6 damage, or +4d10 against creatures larger than Medium size.
Property: Gain a +2 item bonus to initiative checks
Power (Daily ✦ Weapon): Standard Action. As the fighter's dragon's fangs power (PH 82).

Satisfied (12–15)

"I am the hunter, and they are my prey."

Whelm is content with its wielder but still believes that a better hunter is out there. The weapon accepts the wielder, continuing to express a desire to hunt while also searching for an owner more devoted to its cause.

Property: Whelm's bonus to Perception checks becomes +3.
Power (Daily): Standard Action. As the paladin's turn the tide power (PH 95).

Normal (5–11)

"I sense that I have a great fate with this weapon."

When Whelm first comes in contact with the wielder, it expresses a hatred of giants, trolls, and goblins. If the hammer senses that it is well received, Whelm encourages the wielder to take steps to accomplish its goal. Otherwise, the weapon looks for a new wielder.

Unsatisfied (1–4)

"Whelm's purpose is too narrow, and I have a greater destiny."

Whelm believes its wielder has little chance of achieving its goals. It actively searches for another wielder and even undermines its owner's activities.

Property: You take a -2 penalty to initiative checks.
Special: You take a -2 penalty to attack rolls against targets that are not goblins, trolls, or giants. This applies whether you are using or even holding Whelm.

Angered (Below 1)

"I can no longer abide Whelm's selfish pursuits."

Whelm is fed up with its wielder and seeks any reasonably suited creature to own it. The weapon defies its wielder, thrusting him or her into situations with little hope of success.

Whelm becomes a +2 magic warhammer.
Critical +2d6 damage, or +2d10 against creatures larger than Medium size.
Special: You take a -5 penalty to attack rolls against creatures that aren't goblins, trolls, or giants. This applies whether you are using or even holding Whelm.

Moving On

"Whelm believes its destiny lies elsewhere, so I surrender the weapon to fate."

Whelm knows it can accomplish nothing more with its current wielder. When the character next gains a level, the weapons disappears. If the weapon is at least satisfied, it leaves behind a +3 magic warhammer.

Kas the Betrayer

Long ago, when Vecna was still mortal, Kas was Vecna's most trusted lieutenant. He served Vecna faithfully for centuries, first as an evil human paladin and later as a vampire lord. Over time, Kas came to envy Vecna's power and began plotting against him. In the final ritual of Vecna's apotheosis, Kas struck out, hoping to become a god in Vecna's stead. Kas's attempt to destroy Vecna failed, but he did manage to sever Vecna's hand and cut out one of his eyes in the epic battle. So great was the fight that it destroyed Vecna's tower and flung Vecna and Kas across the planes. Kas's plot failed, though he retains his power.

Kas Tactics

Kas has a twisted sense of honor that compels him to offer the appearance of a fair fight to any creatures he considers equals. He quickly dispatches challengers of obvious inferiority. Kas usually strikes first and without warning, and he attempts to subdue an opponent rather than kill it. He has no reservations about attacking an unarmed opponent, but the creature must have access to a nearby weapon. If a combatant proves a good challenge, Kas transforms the creature into a vampire spawn under his control after he defeats it.

Kas is cunning, having learned much of his craft from Vecna. He prefers to fight opponents in areas of darkness, where he has no risk of losing his regeneration. Kas revels in combat and tries to engage as many opponents as possible. However, even while engaging multiple foes, he retains wisdom and cunning. Kas is confident of his abilities but makes strategic retreats if necessary. In melee, he disengages with an enemy

Kas Lore

DC 25: Kas is one of the most powerful humanoids who is not a deity. He is a powerful vampire lord and is rumored to have defeated several lesser deities and primordials. He commands armies of living and undead followers, and is worshiped and revered by vampires and debased mortals.

DC 30: Kas is known also as Kas the Betrayer and is the sworn enemy of Vecna. He was originally Vecna's trusted lieutenant, but he betrayed Vecna in an effort to become a god in Vecna's stead. Kas severed Vecna's hand and eye, and though both survived the battle, each now seeks the other's destruction. Kas was once an evil paladin, and he still values some knightly principles. He is exceptionally proud and never forgets or forgives insults to him or his honor.

Two artifacts are associated with Kas, the Sword of Kas and the Silver Mask of Kas (both described in Chapter 2). These items are no longer in his possession and now filter through the planes, corrupting those who are unfortunate enough to find them.

DC 35: Kas regularly travels the planes, but he has two primary bases of operation. He commands a kingdom in the Shadowfell, where vampires rule over the living. Kas spends little time there, but he ensures that his vampire lords rule with an iron fist. This kingdom is tolerated by the Raven Queen, whom Kas has appeased by the sharing of information regarding Orcus and Vecna. Kas also spends time in a hidden dominion within the Astral Sea. The dominion is a realm of near total darkness with structures made from finely polished obsidian. Within this realm, the lakes and rivers flow with blood. Some of the prisoners from Kas's kingdom within the Shadowfell are brought to the dominion as food for Kas and his allies who dwell there.

Blackstar Knight

Blackstar knights are undead spirits housed in vessels of animate black stone. Each knight serves Kas unswervingly, though stories of similar beings under the control of other creatures have begun to surface.

Blackstar Knight Level 23 Soldier

Blackstar Knight Tactics

A blackstar knight usually fights alongside its allies, beginning combat by marking a foe. The blackstar knight then uses deathsword and no escape to hound the marked enemy.

Blackstar Knight Lore

DC 30: These blank-faced stone warriors house souls bound to their rocky forms. The ritual for creating them remains a deeply guarded secret, and possibly one that Kas no longer controls. The presence of blackstar knights and similar beings in the service of other masters aside from Kas supports the possibility that Kas's defenses have been compromised and his secrets revealed.

Encounter Groups

Kas is usually encountered alone, but he sometimes permits the company of powerful undead servitors.

Level 28 Encounter (XP 69,200)
- ✦ 2 blackstar knights (level 23 soldier)
- ✦ 1 death knight, dragonborn paladin (level 25 elite soldier, MM 51)

KYUSS

The elder entity Kyuss is known as the Bonemaster, Spawner of Corruption, and Lord Betrayer. Kyuss began as a mortal and attained such power and stature that he has become a legendary being. He leveraged his way to a corrupt apotheosis through powerful rituals and a series of deadly betrayals. Kyuss dwells in a dark corner of the Underdark, plotting to expand his influence into the rest of the world and other planes of existence.

Kyuss Level 31 Solo Controller

Con 29 (+24) Int 21 (+20) Cha 24 (+22)

Kyuss Tactics

Kyuss deigns to enter combat only when it suits him. When attacked unexpectedly, he halts enemies with the visions of worms aura and Kyuss's fearful hold before retreating through a nearby crack using squeezing swarm. If Kyuss is prepared for a fight, he uses squirming assault regularly while waiting for the perfect opportunity to unleash Kyuss's fearful hold. Early in battle, Kyuss uses mind worm to force an opponent to attack its allies with its most potent attack. Kyuss utilizes eye of Kyuss each time it recharges, and he retreats if a battle turns against him.

Kyuss Lore

A character knows the following information with a History check.

DC 25: Kyuss is attended by a host of putrescent creatures that he created. Kyuss was among the first of the larva mages, and now, larva creatures know and revere him. These larva creatures often serve him as warriors and assassins.

Kyuss's schemes evoke his affinity for corruption. His operatives subvert organizations and even create false cults to further his schemes. Sometimes societies tear themselves apart under Kyuss's corrupting influence.

DC 30: Kyuss dwells in a deep corner of the Underdark, lounging on a throne made from the bones of the enormous creatures he has consumed. He sometimes writes messages on scrolls, which his servants distribute throughout the world. It is said that the minds of any who read these messages are infiltrated by psychic worms that bring the reader under Kyuss's influence.

DC 35: Kyuss was born a mortal in a city where evil walked freely, and where sacrifices were made nightly to honor dark gods. The boundaries between life and death were blurred in this place, and the living and unliving mingled freely. As the seventh of seven children, Kyuss was despised and brutalized by his family. They called him "the worm," and Kyuss fed on their contempt, turning it into dark resolve.

Gradually and imperceptibly, Kyuss drove the members of his family to self-destruction. When all were dead, he took on the identity of a cleric serving the Raven Queen. Aided by alliances with undead ecclesiasts and an instinct for betrayal, he rose through the temple hierarchy, eventually becoming a high priest who attracted followers from far and wide. When his congregation was bloated with followers, Kyuss performed a great ritual that he promised would bring power over neighboring realms. Instead, the ritual slew them all, rotting the flesh from their bones. Kyuss, too, was consumed, but days later, as the maggots and insects fed on the rotting bodies, they came together to form a writhing larva mage—Kyuss's new form.

Kyuss's ultimate objective is the prophesied Age of Worms. One day he plans to send a massive army of larva undead and Underdark creatures to consume the world.

Wormspawn Praetorian

Ponderous warriors crafted from the cast-off maggots and vermin of Kyuss and similar large larva creatures, wormspawn praetorians fight with unflinching devotion to their creator. Armored in an ever-shifting carapace of gleaming chitin fragments, a wormspawn praetorian lashes out at foes with enormous, clacking mandibles.

Speed 6; see also swarm-through and squeezing swarm

⊕ Clacking Mandible (standard; at-will)
+31 vs. AC; 4d8 + 4 damage.

Swarm-Through (move; recharge ⚅) ✦ Poison
The wormspawn praetorian shifts up to 5 squares and can move through enemies' spaces when doing so. When it enters an enemy's space, it makes an attack: +31 vs. AC; 3d12 + 4 poison damage. The wormspawn praetorian can make no more than one attack against a single creature when using this power.

Swarm Split (when first bloodied; encounter)
The wormspawn praetorian splits into two Large individuals, the second one occupying a space adjacent to the original creature. Each of the two creatures has hit points equal to one-half the original's current hit points. Both creatures act on the original creature's initiative count. Effects applied to the original wormspawn praetorian do not apply to either of the individuals after the split occurs. A wormspawn praetorian can't split if reduced to 0 hit points by the attack that bloodied it.
If out of combat for 5 minutes, the two halves combine back into one wormspawn praetorian, which has hit points equal to the combined value of the two halves.

Squeezing Swarm
By altering its shape, a wormspawn praetorian can squeeze as if it were a Tiny creature.

Wormspawn Praetorian Tactics

In combat, the wormspawn praetorian engages the nearest available target. It uses swarm-through as often as possible, shifting into advantageous attacking positions. Until first bloodied, the praetorian makes no great effort to move out of positions that allow enemies to damage or flank it. After it splits, the new praetorians adopt more conventional defensive tactics.

Wormspawn Praetorian Lore

DC 25: Wormspawn praetorians typically serve Kyuss, the Spawner of Corruption, but they are also found in the service of other powerful undead and Underdark creatures.

Encounter Groups

Kyuss usually keeps undead and larval creatures in close proximity. He has no reservations about leaving such servitors to face opponents alone, however.

Osterneth, the Bronze Lich

Known as the Supreme Seed of Darkness and the Heart of the Whispered One, Osterneth is Vecna's mightiest servant. Osterneth is tasked with subverting governments, corrupting good people, and spearheading Vecna's takeover of the world.

In public, Osterneth appears as a seductive, aristocratic human female in her late twenties with dark hair and bronze skin. Her look of demure gentility is emphasized by a rich wardrobe and a charming smile that melts men's hearts. Claiming nobility from a distant land, Osterneth uses her guile and charisma to gain favor among the scions of high society. With their interest peaked, the Heart of the Whispered One then seduces the world's greatest leaders, bringing them willingly into the worship of Vecna.

In actuality, Osterneth is an ancient lich from a kingdom lost to memory; her true form is a fleshless skeleton of bronzed bones inlaid with soul gems. Within the empty cavity of her chest pulses the heart of Vecna, a shriveled relic preserved from the desiccated remains of Vecna's original body. The eyes of Osterneth's naked skull blaze with a prismatic radiance that creates a powerful glamour effect, hiding her true appearance from all but her most trusted servants.

Osterneth Tactics

In combat, Osterneth is aggressive, domineering, and fearless. After sending in her allies, she employs luring glare to draw an enemy toward her so she can use trap the soul to take the victim out of combat. Osterneth then spends an action point to use withering domination on another adversary. She maintains her illusory form in combat, though an opponent might be entitled to Insight checks after she utilizes some of her necrotic powers.

While bloodied, Osterneth uses consume soul to regain hit points. She does not flee unless the battle looks lost and she has exhausted her cache of souls.

Osterneth Lore

A character knows the following information with a successful History check.

DC 25: Osterneth is a beautiful, charming noblewoman educated in the arcane arts. She rarely speaks of her past, but claims descent from a distant family of aristocrats in a far-off kingdom.

DC 30: Osterneth is very evasive when pressed for details of her past. A veil of mystery surrounds her, and some suspect she is more than she appears.

Secret Lore

The following information is lore that Osterneth works hard to keep concealed. As DM, you can make this available with a difficult History check or can provide the information as part of an adventure in which Osterneth is a villain. Rewarding the players with clandestine information can be as satisfying as treasure in the right circumstances.

Osterneth grew up as a child of nobility in a kingdom that has long since been forgotten. When she reached maturity, she was married off to the king of an allied nation in a marriage of convenience.

Osterneth's new husband was heavy handed and cruel, and she suffered quietly through his beatings and humiliations. Unknown to her husband, though, Osterneth acquired skill with arcane magic under the tutelage of the king's covetous brother.

Beautiful and charismatic, Osterneth quickly mastered court politics, bringing many young nobles into her fold. Her laughter was infectious and her smile charming. Everyone delighted in her presence except the king, who became increasingly callous and ill-tempered.

When possible, Osterneth escaped court intrigues by slipping out of the castle to masquerade as an adventurer of mediocre arcane talent. She enjoyed these fanciful outings until one day she and her companions stumbled upon a den of cultists dedicated to the worship of Vecna, who was then still a new god. Osterneth watched in horror as her companions were brutally murdered. She was kept as a prisoner of the cult for months until inexplicably set free by her captors.

Within weeks of returning to her husband, the king grew ill and died. Members of the court whispered that the king had been poisoned, but such rumors were squelched when the rumormongers went missing.

Osterneth was crowned queen, and at first was a benevolent but aloof ruler. As she became increasingly distracted by her study of eldritch rituals and arcane relics, she withdrew from the public eye. With each passing year, she deferred more of her duties to the lords and ladies of the kingdom.

So absorbed was Osterneth in magical research that she didn't notice the mounting aggression from her nation of origin. The war with her homeland raged for three years until Osterneth's capital city was taken and her forces were defeated.

Osterneth had a surprise for the invaders, though. In her quest for eldritch might, the queen had tracked down and slain the leader of the cult that had captured her. From the fallen cultist she claimed the Heart of Vecna, a powerful relic that granted everlasting life. Through a secret ritual, she placed the heart inside her chest cavity, and, with its power, became a powerful lich in the service of Vecna. With this newfound power, she obliterated her enemies by raising legions of the dead to oust the would-be conquerors.

Touch of Death (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
+34 vs. AC; the target gains ongoing 15 necrotic damage (save ends).

Shadow Ray (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
Ranged 20; +32 vs. Reflex; 3d8 + 7 necrotic damage.

Trap the Soul (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
Ranged 20; +32 vs. Fortitude; the target is stunned (save ends). First Failed Saving Throw: The target loses 1d4 healing surges and is stunned (save ends both). Second Failed Saving Throw: The target dies and its soul is trapped within one of Osterneth's soul gems. Osterneth can have up to six souls trapped in her soul gems at any time. A body made soulless by this attack is reduced to dust.

Void Lightning (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic, Lightning
Ranged 20; +32 vs. Reflex, 3d8 + 7 necrotic and lightning damage, and the target is dazed (save ends), and Osterneth makes a secondary attack. Miss: Half damage, and the target is not dazed. Secondary Targets: Two creatures within 5 squares of the primary target. Secondary Attack: +28 vs. Reflex each; 2d8 + 7 necrotic and lightning damage each.

STRAHD VON ZAROVICH

Strahd calls himself the "first vampire," but the claim is likely untrue, given the diffusion of vampires across the world. However, he might have been the first vampire in Barovia, the land he rules with an iron fist. His repressed subjects refer to him in whispers as "Bloody Strahd" or "the devil Strahd," though few know the truth of his vampiric nature.

Count Strahd von Zarovich Level 20 Solo Skirmisher
Medium natural humanoid (shapechanger, undead) XP 14,000

Initiative +17 Senses Perception +18; darkvision, blindsight 10

Speed 6, climb 4 (spider climb); see also animal form, crippling strike, and mist form
Action Points 2

Crippling Strike (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
+23 vs. Fortitude; 3d10 + 5 necrotic damage, and the target is slowed until the end of Strahd's next turn. Hit or Miss: Strahd shifts up to 2 squares.

Blood Drain (standard; at-will) ✦ Healing
Requires combat advantage against the target; +23 vs. Fortitude; 3d10 + 5 damage, and the target is weakened (save ends), and Strahd regains 20 hit points.

Dominating Gaze (minor; at-will) ✦ Charm, Gaze
Ranged 5; +23 vs. Will; the target is dominated and takes a -2 penalty to saving throws against being dominated (save ends both). Aftereffect: The target is dazed and takes ongoing 10 psychic damage (save ends both). Strahd can have only one creature dominated at a time.

Strahd's Choking Fog (standard; sustain minor or move; encounter) ✦ Poison, Zone
Area burst 5 within 10; the burst creates a zone of poisonous vapors that lasts until the end of Strahd's next turn. A creature that enters the zone or that starts its turn in the zone takes 1d10 + 5 poison damage, and ongoing 5 poison damage (save ends). Sustain Minor: The zone persists. Sustain Move: The zone persists, and Strahd can move it up to 5 squares.

Animal Form (minor; at-will) ✦ Polymorph
Strahd transforms into a swarm of bats or a black wolf. He cannot use crippling strike or choking fog, though he gains new powers and statistics in addition to those he regularly has. Strahd can revert to his normal form as a minor action.

Mist Form (standard; sustain minor; encounter) ✦ Polymorph
All conditions affecting Strahd end, and he becomes insubstantial and gains fly (hover) 12 until the end of his next turn. Strahd cannot attack while in this form.

Scent of Blood
Strahd gains combat advantage against living, bloodied foes.

Second Wind (standard; encounter) ✦ Healing
Strahd spends a healing surge and regains 232 hit points. Strahd gains a +2 bonus to all defenses until the start of his next turn.

Indestructible (when reduced to 0 hit points)
Strahd's mist form power recharges, and he uses it immediately. Strahd does not die, but he must reach his coffin within 2 hours or be destroyed.

Alignment Evil Languages Common, Supernal
Skills, Bluff +23, Insight +18, Intimidate +23, Stealth +20
Str 18 (+14) Dex 20 (+15) Wis 17 (+13)
Con 18 (+14) Int 23 (+16) Cha 26 (+18)

Strahd gains the following statistics and powers when he assumes the corresponding animal form.

Strahd's Wolf Form
Speed 8

Savage Bite (standard; at-will)
+26 vs AC; 2d12 + 8 damage, and the target is knocked prone.

Combat Advantage
Strahd gains combat advantage against a target that has one or more of Strahd's allies adjacent to it. If Strahd has combat advantage against the target, the target is also knocked prone on a hit.

Strahd's Swarm of Bats Form
Swarm Attack aura 1; Strahd makes a swarm of vampiric teeth attack as a free action against any enemy that starts its turn within the aura.
Resist half damage from melee and ranged attacks; Vulnerable 10 against close and area attacks

Swarm of Vampiric Teeth (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
+26 vs AC; 2d6 + 8 necrotic damage, and the target is weakened until the end of Strahd's next turn.

Strahd's Tactics

Over four hundred years as a vampire have taught Strahd the value of patience. Today, he is more cold and calculating than he once was. Strahd supplemented his martial skills with a study of the necromantic arts. With his vampiric abilities and access to a vast library of spells and rituals, Strahd is a formidable opponent.

In combat, Strahd uses dominating gaze, blood drain, and crippling strike while he looks for a good opportunity to unleash Strahd's choking fog. As combat unfolds, Strahd develops strategies to incapacitate the characters most dangerous to him, such as those wielding radiant attacks or who can immobilize him. He attempts to delay or harass PCs by sending his allies to engage them. He can summon these allies with a mental command, and he usually has at least

The Origins of Strahd

Count Strahd von Zarovich is a signature villain in the highly popular Advanced Dungeons & Dragons adventure, I6 Ravenloft and its sequel I10 Ravenloft II: The House on Gryphon Hill. In years subsequent to the modules' publication, Strahd and his world were explored in novels and a campaign setting called Ravenloft. Strahd was named as one of the greatest villains in D&D history in Dragon Magazine #360.

a few creature available. Strahd uses second wind once he becomes bloodied, and he employs his animal form only if it offers a new advantage. Strahd is aware when a fight turns against him or when he has lost the advantage, and he usually has a contingency plan.

Encounter Groups

Strahd almost always has a few allies on hand, and he gladly sends them at foes if it benefits him.

Level 22 Encounter (XP 19,800)
- Count Strahd von Zarovich (level 20 solo skirmisher)
- 12 Strahd's dread zombies (level 16 minion, page 198)
- 1 tombstone golem (level 17 elite soldier, page 156)

Level 22 Encounter (XP 19,800)
- Count Strahd von Zarovich (level 20 solo skirmisher)
- 2 death knight, human fighters (level 18 soldier, MM 50)
- 2 slaughter wights (level 18 brute, MM 263)
- 8 Strahd's dread zombies (level 16 minion, page 198)

Strahd Lore

A character knows the following information with a successful History check.

DC 22: Before coming to rule Barovia, Strahd von Zarovich was a ruthless warlord who led great armies to war. Discontent to lead from behind his troops, Lord Strahd often charged into combat alongside his soldiers. For twenty-seven years Strahd warred against the savage and barbaric Tergs, leading his troops with a combination of bravery, tactical genius, and unrivaled charisma. Years of service took their toll, however, and by the time he reached middle age, Strahd came to believe that he had squandered his life and his youth. In this brooding mood, he claimed an enemy stronghold as his residence and renamed it Castle Ravenloft in memory of his mother, Ravenia. From this position of power and security, he called for his brother Sergei to join him in the castle.

A year later, Ba'al Verzi assassins made an attempt on the Count's life. They failed, however, and their masters were never exposed. A few years afterward, tragedy struck at the wedding of Strahd's brother, who was murdered along with his bride and all the wedding guests. Strahd was shot down by traitorous castle guards. According to legend, the monstrosity of this event cast the land of Barovia into an accursed shadow from which it has never escaped.

Today, Barovia is ruled by Count Strahd von Zarovich XI, the most recent heir to both the title and the name in a long and tyrannical rule.

ANGGA SATRIOHADI

DC 27: The true story of Castle Ravenloft is more tragic than even the commonly recounted tale. Filled with despair, jealousy, and a growing hatred for his younger brother Sergei, Strahd sought magical means to restore his youth in the hope of earning the love of Tatyana, his brother's betrothed. In a moment of desperate frustration, he performed a powerful necromantic ritual that exchanged his mortality for enduring youth in a state of undeath: Strahd became a vampire.

On the day of Sergei and Tatyana's wedding, Strahd murdered his brother and pursued the grieving Tatyana until she flung herself from the battlements of Castle Ravenloft. The death of Tatyana and murder of his brother plunged Strahd into an existence of sinister plots and evil impulses. Strahd never sired a descendant and is instead cursed to forever mourn his beloved Tatyana from behind the cold walls of Castle Ravenloft.

VECNA

VECNA IS KNOWN BY MANY NAMES: The Whispered One, Master of the Spider Throne, The Undying King, Lord of the Rotted Tower, and the Maimed God. These titles are but a few that describe the secretive and incomparably ambitious god. Little is known about Vecna's current ambitions, but that doesn't stop his cultists from developing their own plots.

VECNA'S TACTICS

For a being of godly intelligence and power, Vecna's tactics are fairly simple. Vecna uses his recharging powers as frequently as he can. While he waits for those powers to recharge, he uses ray of death and paralyzing touch. He focuses his attacks on one target, attempting to reduce the creature to 0 hit points so he can regain an action point through Vecna's ambition. He employs necrotic web and banish to the dread realm powers to isolate dangerous opponents. He saves at least one action point for when he must use esoteric action. Vecna is a pragmatic combatant, and if he senses danger to his existence, he flees. However, if he knows he can rely upon discorporation (see sidebar) to keep him safe, he fights on.

VECNA LORE

DC 15: Vecna is the lord of undead, god of secrets, and patron of necromancers. He has tried many times to take over the world.

DC 20: Two of Vecna's chief rivals are the Raven Queen and Orcus. Both claim dominion over death, though each, including Vecna, has a different vision of what the afterlife should be. Vecna believes that creatures should serve him in both life and death.

DC 25: Vecna once had a powerful lieutenant known as Kas. He was originally Vecna's trusted lieutenant, but he betrayed Vecna in an effort to become a god in Vecna's stead. Kas severed Vecna's hand and an eye, and though both survived the battle, each now seeks the other's destruction.

DC 30: Vecna's hand and eye are powerful necromantic artifacts. To be used, the hand must be grafted to a humanoid's wrist where the hand has been severed. The eye must be placed in an empty humanoid eye socket.

Unlike many deities, Vecna has no fixed domain or location. He prowls the planes, searching for secrets. Most often, though, Vecna travels the Astral Sea, visiting the dominions of dead gods.

DC 35: Vecna's cult constantly searches for the hand and the eye. They are also on the lookout for the sword of Kas, fearing that the artifact might be used to slay their lord. Recently, the cult has experienced a resurgence under the banner of an enigmatic and charismatic leader known as Mauthereign.

+39 vs. Reflex; 3d6 + 14 necrotic damage, and the target is restrained and weakened (save ends both).

Banish to the Dread Realm (standard; recharge ⚅ ⚄ ⚃) ✦ Psychic
Ranged 10; +39 vs. Will; 2d10 + 9 psychic damage. The target is banished to a demiplane, disappearing from sight. The target cannot be targeted and cannot take actions until the start of its next turn, at which time the target reappears in the original space it occupied or in the nearest space of Vecna's choice if that space is occupied. The target immediately makes a melee basic attack as a free action against the nearest creature. In addition, the target treats its allies as enemies for the purpose of making opportunity attacks, and if an ally performs an action that would normally provoke an opportunity attack from an enemy, the target makes an opportunity attack against the ally (save ends).

Ray of Death (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
Ranged 20; +39 vs. Reflex; 2d8 + 15 necrotic damage, and the target loses a healing surge.

Area burst 3 within 20; targets living creatures; +39 vs. Reflex; 2d6 + 12 necrotic damage, and the target is restrained and takes ongoing 20 necrotic damage (save ends both). The burst creates a zone of webs that lasts until the end of the encounter. The zone is difficult terrain, and a living creature that ends its move in the web is restrained and takes ongoing 20 necrotic damage (save ends both).

Divine Discorporation (when first bloodied; encounter)
Vecna discorporates (see "Discorporation" sidebar).

Esoteric Action (immediate interrupt, when an enemy within sight spends an action point; at-will)
Vecna spends an action point and takes an extra action.

Immortal Resistance (when Vecna gains an effect that a save can end; at-will)
Vecna makes a saving throw. On a save, Vecna is unaffected by the effect.

Aspect of Vecna Lore

DC 25: Though usually called to aid its summoner in the search of lost knowledge, the aspect of Vecna can also serve as a dangerous combatant.

DC 30: Although Vecna wields no control over his aspect, he does see everything the aspect sees and knows everything that it learns during its existence.

Discorporation

When a deity is bloodied, the deity's mind leaves its body and the deity is unable to assume physical form for some time. The discorporation usually lasts at least a few months, and it can last up to several years. During this time, the deity's power is weaker, but it is far from negligible.

If PCs wish to truly kill a deity, they must fulfill one or more conditions specific to that deity. This could require destroying the deity's most prominent temple, or finding an artifact that can deliver the killing blow. If the specific conditions are satisfied, the deity cannot discorporate and instead becomes bloodied as normal. Here are some sample quests.

Sword of Kas: The sword of Kas (page 44), the ancient weapon of Vecna's treacherous former lieutenant, must be used to fight or kill Vecna.

Heart of Vecna: Osterneth, the bronze lich, must be found and destroyed, and Vecna's heart must be recovered from her body and then also destroyed.

Eye and Hand of Vecna: The hand of Vecna and eye of Vecna must be found and destroyed.

Cult of Vecna

Cults of Vecna abound throughout the world. Their members are self-serving arcanists, priests, nobles, and scholars. These cults are highly secretive, gathering in secret libraries and hidden laboratories.

A new Vecna cult has recently arisen. The cultists believe that they are good and that they must commit evil to show the depravity and carelessness of all gods other than their lord. The cult is currently in hiding, biding its time until Vecna has enough strength to make a play for power.

The leader of the cult, a priest known as Mauthereign (page 102), has gathered followers from among the downtrodden. He fills their heads with twisted dogma that paints Vecna as a champion of the people.

The cult has begun gathering the ancient artifacts of Vecna, and so far it has accumulated five of seven pieces. The only artifacts that elude the cult are the hand of Vecna and the eye of Vecna.

Undead Vecna Cultist Lore

DC 25: Cultists of Vecna often undergo profane rites that transform them into undead. These cultists are the most dedicated followers of Vecna,

Master Enigma of Vecna

An enigma of Vecna is the shell of a petitioner who has angered Vecna by sharing secrets or otherwise failing its god. This creature was described in the H1: Thunderspire Labyrinth adventure. The enigma described here is a more powerful version of that monster. A master enigma of Vecna is created from one of Vecna's powerful servitors who violates the god's commandments.

In its normal form, an enigma of Vecna is a bald human with vague features. Enigmas usually wear simple robes, and each carries a dagger. Once bloodied, they undergo a horrific transformation. They sprout long claws and reveal a fanged, twisted visage as the skin falls away, leaving behind a flayed form.

Flesh Ripper Rage
Once a master enigma of Vecna has been bloodied, it gains regeneration 5 and cannot use any power except rend flesh until the end of the encounter.

⨺ Rend Flesh (standard, usable only after flesh ripper rage; at-will)
+25 vs. AC; 4d8 + 5 damage.

Master Enigma of Vecna Tactics

In its initial form, the enigma uses memory ripper to suppress a target's knowledge, leaving the target with a limited arsenal of powers.

Enigmas keep away from the fray, using ranged attacks to wear down foes. When a bloodied enigma displays its horrific visage, the horror of witnessing the gruesome change causes enemies of Vecna to recoil, allowing the enigma to leap forward and engage them.

Master Enigma of Vecna Lore

DC 20: Many temples of Vecna are guarded by mages called enigmas. They have the ability to shock an enemy and leave him or her shaken up.

DC 25: Enigmas are actually horrid fiends bound in human form. If pressed in battle, they transform into shrieking, clawed berserkers.

Encounter Groups

Vecna and his aspect are usually surrounded by devoted followers and powerful undead denizens.

THE SCROLL OF MAUTHEREIGN

The Scroll of Mauthereign is a secret manifesto of Vecna's cult. It depicts Mauthereign's twisted version of Vecna's past and sets down the guiding principles of the organization. The following is an excerpt from the scroll.

In the beginning, there was learning, and Vecna was a paragon among the learned. A student of magic, Vecna was a benevolent teacher who gave his time and his knowledge to his students. Working with Kas, his apprentice, Vecna ministered to the needs of commoners and scholars alike. And yet the people asked for more. They cried out for a leader, a visionary presence who would help lead them against their tyrannical leaders and draconian gods. Out of humility, Vecna initially refused. After time, though, he came to understand their suffering and could not stand idly by.

Vecna taught the people to stand up against tyranny. He advised them to march in peaceful displays—nonviolent protests that showed the rulers of the land that their oppression would be resisted. However, the rulers quelled the protests, arresting and torturing the followers and imprisoning Vecna. Those who supported Vecna were rounded up and made into examples, their heads staked upon rusted pikes along the roads.

Vecna's enemies tried to pry his secrets from him; they sought the names of his allies. They starved Vecna and imprisoned him alone in a filthy cell, but Vecna remained resolute. He never gave up hope that justice, reason, and compassion would triumph. And yet these hopes were slowly eroded by the passing of time. Then, in an attempt to acquire Vecna's secrets and learn the name of his allies, these enemies of free thought turned to Kas—Vecna's most trusted ally—who willingly answered the inquisitors' questions. He surrendered the secrets of Vecna to the enemy, betraying our Lord and all his friends.

Vecna survived eleven years without food and water, kept alive by his passion and mental clarity. No, I do not lie! His flesh stretched taut to the bone, growing sallow and sunken. When the torturers grew angry at his determination, they maimed him, severing his hand and cutting out his eye.

Yet Vecna lived on for us! His soul remained rooted to his dying body out of the hope of salvation. But this was not to be. When starvation and inhumanity did not kill our lord, the defilers decided that his time was at an end.

They cut Vecna limb from limb and scattered the parts of his body throughout the world. We did not abide this desecration. Time and again, we attempted to assemble his parts, but the powers of darkness thwarted our every attempt, and it was only through the purest magic that we finally succeeded.

Vecna rose up and smote ruin upon the usurpers and the pretenders. They squealed in cowardice before us. Yet Vecna has mercy even for cowards and tyrants. Under Vecna's rule, the transgressors were banished, and a peace settled over the land. But alas, it was not to last.

Vecna's enemies plotted and schemed, discontent with their lot, generous as it was. He could have killed them! But he did not, instead granting them their own dominions where they could rule. However, this was not enough.

Gathering their powers, these exiles returned in a slavering mob of savagery. They trampled Vecna's idyllic domain, slaughtering the people and mutilating the land. They cornered Vecna in his meditation chamber, and though he pleaded with them to see reason—to look with open eyes and see the wonder his rule had brought to the world—they destroyed him, scattering his parts across the planes.

The miscreants took credit for his achievements, and they used Vecna's secrets to ascend to godhood in a corrupt apotheosis. Now, these immortal swine have renewed their reign of oppression, crushing the spirits of the people under the heel of repugnancy and false religions.

Yet we have not forgotten. The time for benevolent demonstration is over. Vecna's legacy demands true rebellion. These deities have massacred every belief we hold dear. They have banished our lord and despoiled his name. The only way to show them the nature of their evil is to commit our own acts of despicable villainy. Then they will see their own evil reflected in our actions.

When you slay a commoner, it is their evil. When you maim an innocent blacksmith, it is they who wield the knife. We commit these acts as a demonstration of his goodness. We perform these debasements as proof of the degeneration of the gods. When we reassemble our lord's missing parts, our Vecna will return to rule us, and his rule will be good. All that has happened is part of a mysterious and grand design leading to a bright future of unity and peace. Only through our lord can this be achieved, and though you might not understand now, you will soon.

Our souls are dead and we are empty. When he was violated by the usurpers, so too were we violated. When he was betrayed by Kas, so too were we betrayed. Know that all we do is done for a good that is to come. In the world of the future, all that you have lost will be returned to you a thousandfold.

Undead come in as many varieties as there are phobias and nightmares. The templates here transform living creatures into servants of undead and adapt existing undead into even more horrifying and potent creatures.

Ascetic of Vecna

Wearing only a death shroud, the ascetic of Vecna is a true devotee of the Undying King. An ascetic of Vecna spends its existence contemplating the Maimed God's secrets. The only break from its meditation occurs when the ascetic ventures into the world to collect esoteric knowledge. An ascetic of Vecna is so devoted to the acquisition of knowledge that it fights or kills others to obtain even a minor piece of information. One of these creatures gladly exchanges its life to uncover knowledge for its sinister master.

"Ascetic of Vecna" is a template you can apply to any humanoid or magical beast to represent the creature's devotion to Vecna. This template works best with classes that have high Intelligence and Wisdom requirements, such as wizards and clerics.

Prerequisites: Humanoid or magical beast, level 11

| Ascetic of Vecna | Elite Artillery |
|---|---|
| Humanoid or magical beast | XP Elite |

Defenses +2 Fortitude, +4 Will
Saving Throws +2
Action Points 1
Hit Points +6 per level + Constitution score
Powers

Creeping Rot (standard; recharge ⚄ ⚅) ✦ Necrotic
Area burst 2 within 10; ascetic of Vecna's level + 3 vs. Fortitude; 3d6 + Wisdom or Intelligence modifier (whichever is higher) necrotic damage, and ongoing 5 necrotic damage (save ends). Failed Saving Throw: Make an attack that targets a creature adjacent to the creature that failed its saving throw; ascetic of Vecna's level + 3 vs. Fortitude; 3d6 + Wisdom or Intelligence modifier (whichever is higher) necrotic damage

Master Scholar (minor; encounter)
Recharge creeping rot or an encounter power.

Master's Trick (minor; daily)
Regain an action point.

Deathhunger

Deathhunger creatures have an insatiable appetite for death that drives them to consume their prey either physically or psychically. A deathhunger creature grows in power with each creature it slays. Deathhunger increases a creature's toughness and ferocity. Most creatures consider deathhunger to be a curse even for undead because it drives the afflicted into a mindless rage.

"Deathhunger" is a template you can apply to an undead. The template works best with a creature that has the soldier or brute role.

Prerequisites: Undead

| Deathhunger (undead) | Elite Brute XP Elite |
|---|---|

Defenses +2 AC; +2 Fortitude, +2 Will
Saving Throws +2
Action Points 1
Hit Points +10 per level + Constitution score

Consume (immediate reaction, when an adjacent creature is reduced to 0 hit points or fewer; recharges when first bloodied) ✦ Healing
The triggering creature is killed, and the deathhunger creature either regains hit points equal to one-quarter of its maximum hit points, or gains a +2 bonus to any defense until the end of the encounter; see also fast healing.

Bloodied Ferocity (while bloodied)
The deathhunger creature gains a +2 bonus to damage rolls. This bonus increases to +4 at 11th level and +6 at 21st level.

Fast Healing
When the deathhunger creature regains hit points, it regains 10 additional hit points. These additional hit points increase to 20 at 11th level and to 30 at 21st level.

Guardian of the Dead

Guardians of the dead take a variety of forms, but each is tasked by way of curse, hex, or sacred promise to guard a tomb, treasure, or resting place from would-be grave robbers and adventurers.

"Guardian of the dead" is a template you can apply to any creature. If you are modifying a nonplayer character, this template works best for fighter, paladin, and warlord classes.

Prerequisites: Level 11

| Guardian of the Dead | Elite Soldier XP Elite |
|---|---|

Defenses +2 AC; +2 Fortitude, +2 Will
Saving Throws +2
Action Points 1
Hit Points +8 per level + Constitution score

Death Mark (minor; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
Close burst 5; targets one creature; the target is marked (save ends). If a creature marked by this power makes an attack that does not include the guardian of the dead, it takes ongoing 10 necrotic damage (save ends). The guardian of the dead can have only one creature marked by this power at a time.

Entombing Eye (standard; recharge ⚄ ⁞⁞) ✦ Gaze, Psychic
Close burst 5; targets one creature marked by the guardian of the dead's death mark; guardian of the dead's level + 2 vs. Will; 2d6 + Charisma modifier psychic damage, and the target is immobilized and takes ongoing 10 psychic damage (save ends both).

Curse of Sacrilege (standard; encounter) ✦ Psychic, Zone
Area burst 3 within 20; targets enemies; guardian of the dead's level + 2 vs. Will; 3d8 + Charisma modifier psychic damage, and the target is marked. In addition, the burst creates a zone of cursed terrain that lasts until the end of the encounter. A creature marked by the guardian of the dead that starts its turn within the zone takes 10 psychic damage. The guardian of the dead can move the zone up to 3 squares with a move action.

Infected Zombie

When a virulent plague rips though the land, sometimes the plague's victims rise up from death. These creatures become agents of the plague, spreading infection through their diseased bite.

"Infected zombie" is a template you can apply to any zombie. The template represents a specialized kind of zombie that spreads sickness and disease.

Prerequisites: Zombie

| Infected Zombie (undead) | Elite Brute XP Elite |
|---|---|

Initiative -2
Defenses +2 AC, +4 Fortitude
Immune disease, poison
Resist 5 necrotic at 1st level, 10 necrotic at 11th level, 15 necrotic at 21st level
Vulnerable 5 radiant at 1st level, 10 radiant at 11th level, 15 radiant at 21st level, 20 against critical hits
Action Points 1
Saving Throws +2
Hit Points +12 per level + Constitution score

Infectious Bite (standard; at-will) ✦ Disease
Zombie's level + 2 vs. AC; 2d8 + Strength modifier damage, and the target contracts zombie plague (see below).

Death's Hunger (when an adjacent enemy is reduced to 0 hit points or fewer)
The infected zombie is dazed and can make only coup de grace attacks against the triggering creature until the triggering creature is dead or the infected zombie is attacked. Each time the zombie hits the triggering creature with a coup de grace, it regains 10 hit points.

Mindless Attacker
An infected zombie cannot use attacks that have the weapon keyword.

Relentless Killer

Relentless killers come from creatures so twisted and deranged that their desire to kill cannot be sated. These individuals thrive off violence and the slaughter of living creatures.

"Relentless Killer" is a template you can apply to any living creature to represent its compulsion to kill.

Prerequisites: None

| Relentless Killer | Elite Soldier XP Elite |
|---|---|

Defenses +2 AC, +2 Fortitude, +2 Will
Saving Throw +2
Action Points 1
Hit Points +10 per level + Constitution score

Mark of Death (standard; recharge ⚄ ⁞⁞) ✦ Fear
Close burst 5; targets one creature; the target is marked and grants combat advantage to the relentless killer (save ends)

Death's Release (when the relentless killer is reduced to 0 hit points or fewer) ✦ Necrotic
Close burst 3; relentless killer's level + 2 vs. Fortitude; 2d6 + Constitution modifier necrotic damage, and the target is knocked prone. Increase to 3d6 + Constitution modifier at 11th level and 5d6 + Constitution modifier at 21st level.

Combat Advantage
The relentless killer deals 2d6 extra damage when it hits a creature it has combat advantage against. This extra damage increases to 3d6 at 21st level.

Shadow Spirit

In the bleak, desolate corners of the Shadowfell, and in parts of the world where the Shadowfell bleeds over, sometimes death doesn't represent the end of a creature's existence. When a creature dies in one of these places, its soul is trapped, transforming the creature into a shadow spirit.

"Shadow spirit" is a template you can apply to any living beast, humanoid or magical beast.

Prerequisites: Living beast, living humanoid, or living magical beast

| Shadow Spirit (undead) | Elite Lurker XP Elite |
|---|---|

Initiative +2
Defenses AC +2; Reflex +4, Will +2
Immune disease, poison
Resist 5 necrotic at 1st level, 10 necrotic at 11th level, 15 necrotic at 21st level, insubstantial
Vulnerable 5 radiant at 1st level, 10 radiant at 11th level, 15 radiant at 21st level
Saving Throws +2
Action Points 1
Speed fly 8 (hover)
Hit Points +6 per level + Constitution score

Shadow's Embrace (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
Shadow spirit's level + 2 vs. Reflex; 1d10 + Charisma modifier necrotic damage, and the target is weakened until the end of the shadow spirit's next turn and blinded (save ends).

Step Through the Shadows (move; recharge ⚄ ⁞⁞) ✦ Teleportation
The shadow spirit teleports up to 3 squares. The origin and destination space must be in dim light or darkness.

Skills +4 Stealth

Spawn of Kyuss

A spawn of Kyuss is created when an infection from a particular species of necrotic burrowing worms kills its host and transforms the creature into an undead monstrosity.

Akin to larva undead, spawns of Kyuss were the Bonemaster's first experiments in the creation of larva- and worm-infused creatures. These larval zombies typically lack the subtlety and power of larva undead, but the strength and virulence of their attacks makes them nonetheless formidable.

"Spawn of Kyuss" is a template you can apply to any beast, humanoid, or magical beast. Although the template is most often applied to living creatures, this is not a prerequisite. The infection can afflict virtually any kind of creature, but it typically infects strong subjects that can best spread the disease.

Prerequisites: Level 11, and beast, humanoid, or magical beast.

| Spawn of Kyuss (undead) | Elite Soldier XP Elite |
|---|---|

Defenses +2 AC; +2 Fortitude, +2 Will
Resist 5 necrotic at 1st level, 10 necrotic at 11th level, 15 necrotic at 21st level
Immune disease, poison
Saving Throws +2
Action Points 1
Hit Points +8 per level + Constitution score
Regeneration 10 (if a spawn of Kyuss takes radiant damage, regeneration doesn't function until the end of its next turn)
Fear of Worms (Fear) aura 3; any living creature that starts its turn within the aura takes a -2 penalty to attack rolls against spawn of Kyuss, larva undead, wormspawn praetorians, and Kyuss.

Touch of Kyuss (standard; recharge ⚄ ⁞⁞) ✦ Disease, Necrotic
Spawn of Kyuss's level + 3 vs. Fortitude; 2d6 + Constitution modifier damage, and ongoing 10 necrotic damage (save ends). First Failed Saving Throw: The target contracts worms of Kyuss (see below).

Spirit Possessed

Some spirits can inhabit and control living creatures. These creatures hide among the living, aping the actions of the host. Under this guise, a spirit works covertly toward its malicious goals.

"Spirit possessed" is a template you can apply to a living creature to represent a subject whose body is possessed by an undead spirit.

Prerequisites: Living creature, level 11, Charisma 13

| Spirit Possessed (undead) | Elite Controller XP Elite |
|---|---|

Defenses Will +4
Resist 10 necrotic at 11th level, 15 necrotic at 21st level
Vulnerable 10 radiant at 11th level, 15 radiant at 21st level
Saving Throws +2
Action Points 1
HP +8 per level + Constitution score

Psychic Assault (minor 1/round; at-will) ✦ Psychic
Close burst 10; targets one creature; spirit possessed's level + 2 vs. Will; 1d6 + Charisma modifier psychic damage, and the target is dazed until the end of the spirit possessed's next turn.

Spirit Barrage (standard; recharge ⚄ ⁞⁞) ✦ Psychic
Close burst 2; targets enemies; spirit possessed's level +3 vs. Fortitude; 2d6 + Charisma modifier damage, and the target is knocked prone.

Spirit Transfer (when the spirit possessed is reduced to 0 hit points) ✦ Charm, Psychic
Close burst 3; targets one creature; spirit possessed's level + 3 vs. Will; 3d6 + Charisma modifier psychic damage, and the target is dominated and takes 20 ongoing psychic damage (save ends both; also see below). If the target of the attack is reduced to 0 hit points or fewer by the attack or the ongoing damage, the target spends a healing surge to regain half its maximum hit points. The target is dominated (no save) by the spirit and gains all the characteristics of the spirit possessed template. In addition, all the powers associated with the template are recharged. Successful Saving Throw: The spirit possessing the subject is destroyed. Miss: Half damage, no ongoing psychic damage, and the target is not dominated. In addition, the spirit possessing the subject is destroyed. Hit or Miss: The spirit's former host falls prone and is unconscious at 1 hit point until it takes a short rest.

Swarm Shifter

Beetles, roaches, and scorpions—these are some of the vermin occupying the insides of a creature that has this template. Whether the victim of a scarab infestation or the target of a nefarious ritual by larva undead, a creature with this template gains the benefits of being a vermin, including a new physical form, enhanced mobility, and a poisonous bite.

| Worms of Kyuss | Level 11+ Disease |
|---|---|
| Delivered by the infectious touch of a spawn of Kyuss, this disease transforms its victim into a malicious undead, larval creature. | Endurance improve DC 15 + two-thirds spawn of Kyuss's level, maintain DC 10 + two-thirds spawn of Kyuss's level, worsen DC 9 + two-thirds spawn of Kyuss's level or lower |

The target is cured.

Initial Effect: The target regains only half the normal hit points from healing effects.

Final State: The target regains only half the normal hit points from healing effects. In addition, each time the afflicted creature fails to improve, it takes 5 necrotic damage that cannot be cured until the disease is removed. If the afflicted creature dies, it immediately rises as a level-equivalent spawn of Kyuss.

"Swarm shifter" is a template you can apply to any creature. Creatures that can take advantage of enhanced mobility are the ideal recipients of this template.

Prerequisites: None

Swarm Shifter (swarm) — Elite Skirmisher XP Elite

Defenses Fortitude +2, Reflex +4
Resist half damage from melee and ranged attacks
Vulnerable 5 against close and area attacks at 1st level, 10 against close and area attacks at 11th level, 15 against close and area attacks at 21st level
Saving Throws +2
Action Points 1
Hit Points +6 per level + Constitution score
Swarm Attack aura 1; the swarm shifter makes a poisonous bite attack against an enemy that starts its turn within the aura.

Poisonous Bite (standard; at-will) ✦ Poison
Swarm shifter's level + 2 vs. Fortitude; 1d8 + Constitution modifier poison damage. Increase to 2d8 + Constitution modifier at 21st level.

Squeezing Swarm
By altering its shape, the swarm shifter can squeeze through small openings as if it were a Tiny creature (see "Squeeze," PH 292).

Tomb Tainted

Whether born under a dark star or touched too many times by the hand of the undead, this creature has been tainted by the grave. The creature has sallow skin, receding gums, bloodshot, watery eyes, and elongated yellow fingernails—all signs of its connection to the dead.

"Tomb tainted" is a template you can apply to any living creature to represent its connection to death and the undead.

Prerequisites: Living creature

Tomb Tainted — Elite Brute XP Elite

Defenses AC +2; Fortitude +2, Reflex +2
Resist 5 necrotic at 1st level, 10 necrotic at 11th level, 15 necrotic at 21st level
Saving Throws +2
Action Points 1
Hit Points +10 per level + Constitution score

Necrotic Claws (standard; at-will) ✦ Necrotic
Make 2 attacks against the same target: tomb tainted's level + 5 vs. AC each; 1d10 + Strength modifier damage each. If both attacks hit, the target takes ongoing 5 necrotic damage (save ends).

Death's Breath (minor; encounter) ✦ Necrotic
Close burst 5; tomb tainted's level + 2 vs. Fortitude; 1d8 + Constitution modifier necrotic damage, and the target is immobilized (save ends). Increase damage to 2d8 + Constitution modifier at 11th level, and 3d8 + Constitution modifier at 21st level.

Power of the Grave
The template recipient's melee attacks deal 1d8 extra necrotic damage and gain the necrotic keyword. This extra damage increases to 2d8 at 21st level.

Vampire Thrall

Vampire spawn are useful servants, but sometimes a vampire requires servants that are more hardy and subtle. By feeding on a subject's blood over an extended period of time, a vampire can condition a creature to be a strong yet obedient servant.

"Vampire thrall" is a template you can apply to any living humanoid to represent that creature's service to a vampire lord.

Prerequisites: Living humanoid

Vampire Thrall (shapechanger, undead) — Elite Brute XP Elite

Defenses AC +2; Reflex +2; Fortitude +2; Will -2
Saving Throws +2
Action Points 1
Immune disease, poison
Resist 5 necrotic at 1st level, 10 necrotic at 11th level, 15 necrotic at 15th level
Vulnerable 5 radiant at 1st level, 10 radiant at 11th level, 15 radiant at 21st level
Hit Points +10 per level + Constitution score

Blood Drain (standard; recharges when an adjacent creature becomes bloodied) ✦ Healing
Requires combat advantage against the target; vampire thrall's level + 2 vs. Fortitude; 1d12 + Charisma modifier damage, and the target is weakened (save ends). In addition, the vampire thrall regains hit points equal to one-quarter of its maximum hit points. Increase damage to 2d12 + Charisma modifier at 11th level.

Telepathic Link
The vampire thrall's master can speak and be spoken to by the vampire thrall as if both had telepathy 20.

Wolf Form (standard; daily) ✦ Polymorph
The vampire thrall takes the form of a Medium black wolf, gaining speed 8 and the savage bite power, described below.

Wolf Form

Savage Bite (standard; at-will)
Vampire spawn's level + 4 vs AC; 1d10 + Strength modifier damage, and the target is knocked prone. Increase damage to 2d10 + Strength modifier damage at 11th level.

Alternative Powers

The powers attributed to undead described in the Monster Manual are typical of those creatures, yet they are by no means exclusive. This section presents alternative undead powers that you can substitute for others to make new and interesting undead opponents.

Bodak Power

Bodaks are ruthless killers that exist for no other purpose than to slay the living. Nightwalkers create bodaks and use them as assassins. The gaze of a bodak kills or drains the life of anyone recently touched by the creature. When a bodak's gaze fails to slay a creature, the creature instead causes an adversary to witness an unsettling vision of his or her own death.

Debilitating Gaze

A bodak can have this power instead of agonizing gaze.

Debilitating Gaze (Gaze) aura 2; any enemy that starts its turn within the aura takes a –2 penalty to Fortitude.

Boneclaw Power

Boneclaws are vicious undead created by dark powers to hunt the foes of their creators. The ritual to create boneclaws is jealously guarded by the few casters that know it. Some boneclaws use pulses of necrotic energy to heal undead allies, and some instead have the power to release sharp spikes of bone that burrow into the flesh of their targets. These boneclaws are constructed to maim enemies rather than heal allies.

Bone Spray

This power replaces a boneclaw's necrotic pulse.

Bone Spray (when first bloodied; encounter) ✦ Necrotic
Close burst 5; targets enemies; boneclaw's level + 2 vs. Reflex; 2d6 + 4 necrotic damage, and ongoing 5 necrotic damage (save ends).

Death Knight Power

Death knights are warriors that accepted undeath as a way to circumvent mortality. They wield a soul sword that disrupts the life force of their opponents. The following power is a good substitution for a death knight that is more concerned with the glory of vanquishing foes in personal combat than leading troops.

Terrifying Presence

A death knight can have this power in place of marshal undead.

Terrifying Presence (Fear) aura 1; any enemy within the aura takes a –2 penalty to attack rolls.

Ghost Power

Ghosts are forlorn spirits doomed to repeat their greatest regrets or to seek to rectify irreparable mistakes. Some ghosts die young, victims of terrible tragedies that robbed them of life. The most potent ghosts have a palpable psychic presence that can fracture the minds of those they touch.

Touch of Insanity

A ghost can have this power instead of spirit touch.

Touch of Insanity (standard; at-will) ✦ Psychic
Ghost's level + 3 vs. Reflex; 1d8 + Charisma modifier psychic damage, and the ghost is invisible to the target (save ends).

Ghoul Power

A ghoul's appetite can be sated only by ingesting humanoid flesh. Once a ghoul catches a target, it immobilizes and consumes the prey. Some ghouls prefer to weaken a target so the prey puts up less of a fight.

Weakening Claws

A ghoul can trade its normal claws attack for this one.

Weakening Claws (standard; at-will)
Ghoul's level + 5 vs. AC; 1d6 + Strength modifier damage, and the target is weakened until the end of the ghoul's next turn.

Lich Powers

Most undead animate spontaneously or arise through profane rituals. A few mortals willingly become undead, though, viewing the condition as a form of immortality. These liches gain resilience from the transformation, yet some instead gain the power to teleport. A few liches give up the ability to paralyze their foes for the power to bestow weakness so that they can enjoy the foes' feeble attempts at resistance.

Lich Step

A lich can have this power instead of second wind.

Lich Step (move; recharge ⚄ ⚅) ✦ Teleportation
The lich teleports up to 8 squares and recharges one encounter or recharge power (including lich step).

Mind Spike

A lich made from the template in the Dungeon Master's Guide can have this power in place of spellmaster.

Mind Spike (standard; recharge ⚅) ✦ Psychic
Ranged 5; lich's level + 2 vs. Will; the target loses the use of one randomly determined encounter power. If the target has no remaining encounter powers, it instead takes 1d12 + Intelligence modifier psychic damage.

Mummy Powers

Mummies are guardians that watch over tombs, temples, and other sacred places. Powerful members of cults and secret organizations are responsible for their creation. Most are mindless servitors, but a few are quite intelligent. All mummies exude negative energy that affects creatures around them, though the form of this aura varies. Some mummies infuse nearby foes with despair, while others cause creatures' skin to wither away. Also, most mummies are able to bestow curses upon trespassers, yet the effect and severity of this curse varies.

Tomb Rot

A mummy's despair aura can be replaced with this power.

Tomb Rot (Necrotic) aura 5; any enemy that starts its turn within the aura takes 10 necrotic damage.

Cursing Word

A mummy can exchange mummy's curse for this power.

Cursing Word (standard; recharge ⚅) ✦ Disease
Ranged 10; mummy's level + 2 vs. Will; the target contracts mummy rot (DMG 49) of a level equal to the mummy's level – 2.

Specter Powers

Specters are depraved spirits that lack any semblance of humanity. They hate all living things and seek to snuff out the life of each humanoid they encounter. Found in places of darkness and evil, most specters exude a biting aura of cold that chills the souls of nearby creatures. Specters that arise from slain mortals twisted by insanity often produce auras that outwardly manifest the fragmented condition of their minds.

Spectral Madness

A specter can have this power instead of spectral chill.

Spectral Madness aura 1; any enemy that starts its turn within the aura is dazed until the end of its turn.

Spectral Insanity

This power, designed for a voidsoul specter, replaces spectral cold.

Spectral Insanity (Psychic) aura 1; any enemy that starts its turn within the aura takes 10 psychic damage and is dazed until the end of its turn.

Vampire Powers

Vampires are decadent undead that dream of ruling over mortals. Dark and depraved, they consider mortals to be pawns and playthings at best and sources of food at worst. Most vampires create thralls by bending weak-minded mortals to their will. They use these thralls as servants or soldiers. Some vampires, however, dominate mortals and then use that influence to sow chaos among them. These vampires are the torturers, plotters, and purveyors of sedition.

Betraying Gaze

A vampire lord can have this power in place of dominating gaze.

Betraying Gaze (standard; recharge ⚄ ⚅) ✦ Charm, Gaze
Area burst 3 within 10; vampire's level + 2 vs. Will; the target is immobilized and makes a melee basic attack against an adjacent ally of the vampire's choice. Miss: The target is immobilized but does not make an attack.

Vampire Step

A vampire lord can exchange mist form for this power.

Vampire Step (move; recharge ⚄ ⚅) ✦ Teleport
The vampire lord teleports 6 up to squares and becomes insubstantial until the end of its next turn.

Wight Power

A wight is a hateful, empty creature that seeks to fill the void left by its lost soul with slaughter and carnage. More intelligent than many undead, wights approach battle with cunning, setting ambushes and employing advanced tactics. Most wights suck the life force from their victims. However, a few savor violence so much that they bestow weakness upon victims instead of draining life.

DAMAGE NUMBERS

When it comes to template powers and alternate powers, attack bonuses fall within a fairly reliable range. The damage rolls for powers tend to vary more and require some finesse. The damage numbers rely as much on good judgment as mathematical calculation. The damage numbers presented in these alternative powers work well when applied to the most basic form of the creature. For example, the alternative ghoul power can be applied to the ghoul from the Monster Manual for maximum effect. If you want to apply the power to an abyssal ghoul, which is eleven levels higher, you might need to raise the damage. The damage numbers of some templates automatically adjust according to a monster's level, but you still should give consideration to the results. You can compare the damage output of a templated creature to the numbers presented on page 185 of the Dungeon Master's Guide.

Draining Attack

A wight that has an attack that causes the target to lose a healing surge can have this power instead of the ability to negate the healing surge.

Draining Attack
Instead of the target losing a healing surge, the target is weakened until the end of its next turn.

Wraith Power

Wraiths are hateful spirits that thirst for the souls of the living. Most wraiths spawn more of their kind when they murder a humanoid. However, some wraiths prefer to absorb the souls of their victims, gaining vitality from the creature's essence.

Soul Spike

Instead of spawn wraith, a wraith can have this power.

Soul Spike (free, when the wraith reduces a creature to 0 or fewer hit points; at-will) ✦ Healing
The wraith can spend a healing surge to regain hit points equal to one-quarter its maximum hit points.

New Monsters

Unearth the Evil

Whispered tales speak of an eldritch tome crafted by necromancers and filled with spine-chilling facts about a vile menagerie of undead horrors–unnatural things known to haunt the gloom-filled corners of the world and beyond. Beware! This is that tome.

This supplement for the Dungeons & Dragons® Roleplaying Game explores the origins, tactics, myths, and lairs of undead creatures. Along with encounters and hooks for your campaign, it presents a host of undead threats, including new varieties of ghouls, skeletons, vampires, wraiths, and zombies. It also introduces new kinds of undead and provides statistics for unique undead villains such as Acererak and Vecna.

CHAPTER 1

Into the Maelstrom

MUCH SPECULATION exists regarding a vast reservoir of magical power said to be hidden in the depths of the Elemental Chaos. Its signs are everywhere. One doesn't have to look hard to understand the energy emanating from the Plane Below, filtering into the other planes through the magic of mortals and immortals alike. A fireball spell harnesses elemental flame, and the evocations of druids and shamans tap into a power even greater than the primal magic that controls it.

Some sages believe that elemental power encompasses the might that is expressed in every other magical tradition, from the dread cold of shadow magic to the unpredictable spells used by chaos sorcerers. Others maintain that elemental power can be harnessed, shaped, and used as a mystical energy separate from the other systems of magic. In the end, both theories might be true.

This chapter explores the fundamentals of elemental power, and includes the following sections.

- Elemental Magic: A discussion of the nature of elemental magic, and who can call on its power.
- Elemental Influence: An overview of how the Elemental Chaos influences the other planes, particularly the natural world.
- The Elemental Chaos: A look at the Plane Below, the font from which all elemental heroes draw their magic, and some major sites within it.
- Elemental-Touched Races: Several races and cultures have been affected by elemental power in distinctive ways.
- Gaining Elemental Power: A discussion of the processes by which characters tap into elemental power, and a survey of the primordials that can serve as patrons for such characters.
- The Primordials: An extensive look at the entities that are the champions of chaos and the epitome of elemental mastery.
- Elemental Power in Your Game: Tips for players and DMs who want to introduce elemental power into a campaign.

Elemental Magic

In the beginning was possibility. Untamed energy roiled and vied in a clashing storm of raw and utter chaos. Formless substance swelled and shrank in the emptiness as fountains of energy burst from its surface. New worlds were born with each passing moment, then were just as quickly consumed in the cosmic maelstrom.

Theology records a host of myths regarding the world's formation. Many temple ceremonies celebrate the divine victory over the elemental hosts, capturing the desperate struggle of gods and primordials in the frescoes and paintings adorning their walls and domes. In the eyes of the faithful, the primordials are perilous monstrosities best forgotten. The gods ended their threat and secured the future.

History is written by the victors, however. Attitudes and beliefs regarding the ancient primordial entities and their failed war against the denizens of the heavens have been shaped by the gods and their servants over millennia. The gods point to their victory as proof they were right in their cause, and they claim that the world is now as it was intended to be. The primordials have been checked in their desire to control and shape the planes, and the faithful of the gods give thanks for a world free of the raging chaos that once overwhelmed it. However, to say that the primordials' elemental power is vanquished is to propagate a dangerous lie.

The primordials are very much alive. Their bodies are imprisoned—weighed down by chains, sealed in inescapable vaults, or clouded by sleep. However, their minds and spirits still endure. They think. They plot. They hate. And as they do, elemental magic flows from the primordials and the Elemental Chaos that is their legacy, spreading insidiously across the multiverse.

The Nature of Elemental Magic

Major and minor magical traditions can be found across the world and the planes. Arcane, divine, and primal magic are the most ancient and storied of these traditions, their origins tied to the greatest and darkest moments the world has ever known. Less well known but just as powerful, psionic magic waxes and wanes—a mysterious force protecting the world from the alien threat of the Far Realm. Shadow magic pollutes the other traditions it touches, demanding the energy of one's mortal soul as the price for its power.

Because elemental magic manifests within all other traditions, it resists easy categorization. In fact, many theorize that elemental magic does not exist in its own right, claiming that since it is the product of so many other systems of magic, it cannot be a source of magical power in and of itself.

A Scholarly Debate

The issue of elemental magic as a distinct force in the cosmos has occupied scholars since antiquity. Most magical traditions provide ways of wielding elemental energy. Spells and prayers of lightning, thunder, acid, fire, and cold embody elemental power. No one denies that such energy exists. What remains a point of contention is whether elemental energy can be employed independent of the magical systems used to harness it.

Proponents on both sides of the issue wrestled with the cosmological problems posed by elemental magic, relegating the matter to philosophical debates over hundreds of years. Then the archmage Mordenkainen became determined to settle the dispute. In a lecture to his students, the wizard posited that elemental power is, in fact, the root of all magic—and the underpinning that allows magic to exist in the world. Elemental power underlies every magical tradition, and the methods used to wield it segregate magic into the traditions of the arcane, the divine, the primal, and more.

Not everyone agreed with Mordenkainen's radical interpretation. Rigby, a high priest and a member of the Circle of Eight, conceded that some magic might originate in the Elemental Chaos. However, he argued that such power could not be the foundation of divine magic. Clearly, the primordials did not create the gods, even as the gods used their power apart from the primordials to shape the astral dominions. If divine magic was an exception, then Rigby believed that Mordenkainen's theory was void.

Mordenkainen, never one to back down from a debate, countered in a now-famous letter to the priest, writing, "If the gods are of our reality, then they cannot logically predate the primordials. There was no form or substance prior to the primordials' emergence. Therefore, if the gods were not created by the primordials, they are intruders into this reality from somewhere beyond. It is my belief that upon entering this reality, the gods used the raw energy generated by the Elemental Chaos to establish their immortal forms. Elemental power is the definitive source for the creation of magic, and the traditions we see in the world today are but variations of that single source, colored by the methods used to access it."

Although the Circle of Eight argued over the nature and origin of elemental magic, the definitive voice on the subject came from the renegade wizard Emirikol the Chaotic. Rejecting Mordenkainen's theory as naive and Rigby's response as delusional, Emirikol argued that elemental magic did, in fact, exist as a separate force in the cosmos. Arcane magic, divine magic, primal magic, and elemental magic were discrete forms of energy. The difference was simply one of scope.

Emirikol believed that most forms of magic have no meaning outside their users, and that such magical systems depend on their practitioners to give them context in the cosmos. What is arcane power without a mage to cast a spell? What is divine magic absent clerics to channel the gods' power? In Emirikol's view, elemental power exists apart from its practitioners. The Elemental Chaos offers the proof. That plane a place of is raw elemental magic, and the creatures populating it embody that power.

Emirikol also believed that elemental power is not discrete, observing that other magical systems access its underlying energy at all times. A wizard's cone of cold spell calls forth elemental cold, just as fireball releases a burst of elemental fire. However, these spells do not use elemental power to drive them, instead employing an arcane process that shapes that energy. Such magic does not originate in some personal connection to elemental power. Emirikol observed that many spells, disciplines, evocations, and prayers create or manipulate elemental energy, even as they retain their tradition's characteristics.

Elemental Expressions

As Emirikol realized, practitioners of magic can use the power of the Plane Below without being aware they are doing so. Elemental power adopts the characteristics of the magic used to harness it. Elemental fire called forth by a wizard's spell becomes arcane, while a tide of elemental earth created by a prayer becomes divine.

Any power, regardless of its source, harnesses elemental energy when it deals an elemental damage type—acid, cold, fire, lightning, or thunder. Whether a wizard casts a fireball or a druid uses flame seed, any elemental spell, prayer, or evocation gathers the energy of the Plane Below and releases it into the world.

Arcane Magic

Many have questioned Corellon's motives for revealing arcane magic to the eladrin. Surely the god of the fey must have anticipated that the arcane secrets would spread beyond his favored children. Perhaps he accepted that risk against the necessity of arming his people against their enemies. Perhaps he sought to reduce the primordials' strength by allowing mortals to siphon off the elemental power that was

DAVE ALLSOP

A sha'ir brings forth an air elemental, taking the fight to a vrock demon high overhead

their lifeblood. Whatever his reasons, arcane magic is the tradition most strongly connected to elemental energy, and its practitioners are among the most potent shapers of destructive elemental power.

Elemental energy is a cornerstone of every wizard's arsenal. Few combat spells can equal the potency and effectiveness of those that draw on elemental power. In fact, an entire school of magic—evocation—allows wizards to control and direct that power, shaping it into controlled bursts, arcing lightning, and countless other forms.

The potency of arcane elemental power is not restricted to wizards. Swordmages, warlocks, binders, hexblades, and even artificers and bards can incorporate elemental energy into their spells. Certain warlocks forge pacts with bound primordials, accessing the power held within their timeless prisons. Of all the arcane casters, the sorcerer comes closest to wielding elemental power in its purest state. Chaos sorcerers (Player's Handbook 2), storm sorcerers (Arcane Power), and elementalists (described in this book) learn how to channel elemental power into the raw arcane fury that fuels their attacks.

Divine Magic

Elemental power is also present in divine magic, though few practitioners of divine magic openly acknowledge this connection. After defeating the primordials, many gods used their victory to add elemental interests to their portfolios. Moradin claimed earth. Khala (and later the Raven Queen) stole winter's cold, while Melora claimed dominion over the seas. The gods' power grants their followers a measure of control over these elemental forces, arming their clerics, paladins, and others with a portion of the destructive power of the Elemental Chaos.

Primal Magic

The primal spirits absorb and contain the excess elemental energy that bleeds into the world from the Elemental Chaos. In doing so, these spirits often acquire characteristics that make apparent their connection to elemental fire, water, earth, and air. The nature magic that is the common thread connecting primal characters allows them to access elemental power through the spirits with whom they associate. The legendary breach wardens (see "Cinderheart," page 13) blend elemental energy into their evocations to better staunch the intrusive power of the Elemental Chaos where it boils into the world.

It is said that the primal spirits exhibit their strong connection to elemental power because the world has yet to shed the elemental influence of its birth. The ties between primal magic and elemental power lead some to suggest that primal magic is elemental magic in a refined and evolved form. Perhaps the primal spirits are echoes from the earliest days of creation—ideas evolved into quasi-real forms, personalities, and identities who owe their existence to the primordials whose power gave them form and permanence.

Psionic and Shadow Magic

Even the minor power sources grant access to elemental energy. Psionic characters are freely able to use the power of the mind to apprehend and shape elemental energy, as pyrokinetics and mountain devotees demonstrate. Since elemental energy flows into the world and its inhabitants, some psionic characters are able to access the elemental power within by targeting it with their thoughts.

Of all the power sources, shadow magic involves the subtlest manipulation of elemental power. Most hexes focus on darkness, fear, and undeath. However, others weave necrotic energy with elemental power that can destroy both body and soul. Shadow wizards such as nethermancers and necromancers most often use elemental magic, though one can find elemental power in the magic of blackguards, assassins, and other dark adventurers.

Mastering Elemental Magic

Even as other power sources grant access to and control over elemental magic, the traditions of those forms of magic distract from the question of whether elemental power can be mastered in its own right. Elemental power is widespread and abundant, but how can one tap into its magic, awakening that power and controlling it as the primordials once did?

ELEMENTAL VIEWPOINT: EVELENNA, PYROKINETICIST

Those who observe me as I wield my powers naturally assume that I am summoning or controlling fire in some way. That is, of course, inaccurate. I have no font of elemental energy in my mind. What I do have is the ability to perceive the latent elemental energies that are locked inside matter. Even the most ordinary rock holds the memories of the deep fires in which it was born countless ages ago. My training in the psionic arts allows me to unlock the hidden fire sleeping in the world around me.

I do not create the fire; I simply let it out.

Emirikol believed it was possible to access elemental magic without an intercessor power source. After a lifetime spent studying the mysterious energy welling up from the Elemental Chaos, he concluded that harnessing elemental power in its purest state required that one become an elemental creature. Elemental creatures are the living extensions of the Plane Below—beings formed wholly of elemental magic and granted life. Emirikol believed that when an elemental creature uses elemental magic, it is in fact drawing that power from itself. The elemental expands its own magical presence to achieve a desired end, whether a frost titan freezing enemies in a wintry blast, or fire giants calling up columns of flame to scorch their foes.

Perils of Elemental Magic

To transform into an elemental creature is a path that few mortals are willing to tread. Even Emirikol, fascinated as he was by elemental magic, was unwilling to sacrifice his mortality to access the power he coveted. Perhaps more than most, he understood the risks of such a transformation.

The anger of the gods is the greatest danger elemental creatures face. The deities and their servants have no love for elementals, and many still bear grudges from the Dawn War. A creature that transforms into an elemental forfeits the gift of life granted by the gods, and might be shunned or hated by the servants of the divine. Such animosity is not absolute, however. The elemental race of the genasi sometimes serve the gods as paladins, clerics, and invokers.

Elemental transformation strengthens an individual's ties to the Elemental Chaos, and can also attract the attention of the powers residing there. Titans, djinns, and other powerful creatures enslave lesser elementals, using them as servants and soldiers in their interminable wars. Moreover, the process of transformation is not something a mortal can accomplish alone, and often requires outside assistance. An unscrupulous elemental might offer the needed power, only to later bind a mortal supplicant as its thrall.

Worse than a lifetime spent enslaved to an elemental master is the demonic corruption that spills out from the wound at the heart of the Plane Below. Lodged in the depths of the Abyss is a shard of darkness that burrows into the very fabric of reality, allowing the realm of the demons to consume more and more of the Elemental Chaos to feed its insatiable appetite. Elemental creatures caught up in this ageless feeding are transformed and warped into demons. However, all elemental creatures are vulnerable to lesser forms of corruption, and ceding one's mortality reduces a character's natural protection against it.

The Basic Elements

The Elemental Chaos is a tumultuous storm of energy that constantly demolishes and rebuilds itself. Though the plane mixes the elements, certain major forces remain separate from each other by their very nature. These forces represent pure and unmixed elemental air, earth, fire, and water—the so-called basic elements, the most fundamental and necessary substances in the multiverse.

Air

Elemental air is the dominion of the gusting winds and the endless blue of the world's skies. Powers associated with this province provide flight, the ability to call up and manipulate winds, or the wherewithal to freeze enemies with bitter cold. Characters who have ties to elemental air are mercurial, whimsical, and free-spirited. Their emotions swing from mild to intense with little warning.

Earth

From towering mountains to shifting sands, from unyielding stone to the loamy earth that fosters life, elemental earth embodies strength and resilience. Powers that call on elemental earth can send tremors through the ground, shelter creatures within stone and dirt, speed transport through earth or rock, or bolster one's ability to withstand punishment. Characters connected to elemental earth are thoughtful, patient, and slow to change their emotions. If roused to violence, their fury is terrible indeed.

Fire

Fire represents passion, inspiration, fury, and destruction. Powers drawing on this element create and manipulate flames, provide insight, and intensify emotions. A wielder of elemental fire might blast enemies with flame or whip up allies' anger to push them beyond their limits. Elemental fire inspires its users to be passionate in all they do. Emotions can cloud such a character's judgment, leading to rash action when caution might be the better course.

Water

Just as water flows through and around barriers, so do those who call on its power evade enemies with ease. Elemental water also controls the power of healing, and its soothing touch can remove injuries and afflictions. Water is the element of motion, communication, and transformation. Characters who identify with elemental water adapt well to circumstances, offering a voice of reason or a call for destruction as the situation demands.

Elemental Influence

Creation could not have come into being without the Elemental Chaos and the entities that ruled its endlessly changing landscape. The natural world and the other planes bear their creators' fingerprints, and the denizens of all those planes can still sense the power that was used to bind untamed substance into its present forms. One hears their voices in the rumbling earth, in the churning seas, and in the storms that unleash destruction across the land. The primordials—or at least the echoes of their power—are very much alive in the world.

Residual Energy

The most widespread influence of the Elemental Chaos in the natural world is found in the residual energy left behind from creation, and from the subsequent wars of gods and primordials. The artistry of creation is evident in the world. Majestic mountains, vast oceans, primeval forests, the blue dome of the sky—all were made by the primordials, and their power lingers in their creations.

Residual energy pervades the world, not unlike air. Most creatures live their lives without ever encountering raw elemental energy. As with air, however, its effects can be felt even when it is not seen. Magic in all forms connects to this latent energy and uses it to produce miraculous events, from healing the dying to laying waste to whole armies with ice and fire.

Elemental Beings

The primal ban prevents the primordials from taking a direct hand in the world's events. However, this ancient pact can do little to stop elemental creatures of lesser stature from crossing over to the world. Across all lands, ancient titans lurk under mountains or in fortresses built atop volcanoes. Elemental lords rule vast ice castles from which they expel glaciers to threaten settled lands. Reckless conjurers call forth elementals, djinns, and other destructive creatures into the mortal realm. From time to time, an ancient relic of the Dawn War is unearthed, enabling elemental monsters dormant for millennia to roam once more. Set free in the world, such creatures unleash chaos and destruction wherever they go. The most powerful among them might turn their attention to unraveling the mortal realm, in accordance with the wishes of their ancient primordial masters.

THE PRIMAL BAN: KEEPING THE WORLD SAFER

The primal ban is the manifestation of an old, deep magic that lies beyond mortal awareness or understanding. Even the spirits whose existence sustains and reinforces it have little sense of its true nature. The ban is embodied in the existential barriers that surround the natural world and wall out all other planes. It is graven in every rock, every breeze, every living mortal creature, and every tiny mote of substance that is part of the natural world. By means of this deep, ancient warding, beings of other planes—even the mightiest gods and primordials—can be expelled or hedged out by those with sufficient power and knowledge to do so, because their substance is not of the mortal world.

The ancient wardings of the primal ban are continually renewed by the world's primal spirits. These mysterious entities came into existence in the early days of creation, when the gods began to sculpt and bind the raw structure forged by the primordials and populate it with their own works. A portion of the gods' essence lingered in everything they touched, imbuing the world and all things in it with souls. During the timeless era of the world's youth, these souls became aware. Some of these spirits chose sides in the Dawn War, others fought to defend the places and creatures from which they came, and still others silently healed the world's wounds when the conflict moved to some other place. As the primal spirits grew older and stronger, the primal ban began to take shape and grow with them. They became able to protect more and more of the world, hedging out the rampaging primordials and mitigating godly efforts to change the world from its current shape.

Some scholars assert that the primal spirits crafted the ban to guard their newborn world from the ravages of the Dawn War. Others believe that the laws of the natural world governing seasons, weather, and life that are ingrained in the primal spirits came to develop an inherent strength of their own that resists the caprices of god and primordial both.

The primal ban is not absolute, nor is it impervious. The most powerful primordials and gods can resist or defy its effects with great effort. Many lesser elemental powers can do so in places where elemental influence is naturally strong in the world, or when the proper conditions lend them the strength to act. However, the surest way to circumvent the ban is to work through mortal creatures. The warding does not constrain the acts of creatures native to the natural world, so mortals who call upon divine aid or elemental energy can bring these forces into the world much more easily than gods or primordials can make their way in from outside.

Primordial Cults

Among the greatest threats to the delicate balance that the primal spirits fight to preserve are the primordial cults. The idea of devoting oneself to a primordial power is anathema to most of those who consider themselves right-thinking people. For them, the gods defeated the primordials in a just and fairly conducted war, and if they had failed, creation itself would have been undone.

Primordial cultists see history differently. In their view, the primordials are more worthy of veneration than are the gods, who staked their claim on creation only after the primordials had finished their own work. If mortals have anyone to thank for their lives, it is the ancient elemental powers that fabricated the world.

Most individuals who pledge their lives in service to a primordial are outcasts, misfits, and enemies of light and goodness. For this reason, primordial cults attract the worst kind of followers. Criminals, deviants, and the insane fill their ranks, searching for something they cannot find in the worship of the gods.

Some people become primordial worshipers to find legitimacy for their own dark desires. Imix would never condemn a mortal for burning innocents, just as Ogrémoch looks favorably on servants who bury their enemies alive. Other cultists are drawn to raw elemental power, hoping to attain it by freeing the primordials from their prisons.

Pressure from religious institutions and widespread intolerance have driven primordial cults underground. Members keep their loyalties to and associations with such entities a secret, fearful of attracting the interest of the authorities. Cults gather in secret places where they can perform their profane ceremonies away from suspicious eyes, or remain hidden in the depths of the wilderness, worshiping at ancient altars raised before the first humanoid cities were constructed. Iktha-Lau, Heur-Ket, and Mual-Tar are common patrons of these groups, and great evil is done in their names.

Though primordial cults can weaken the social order and undermine civilization, the greatest threat they represent is freeing a primordial from its prison. Such an act would have widespread repercussions. Eons spent in chains have driven many primordials mad, reducing them to bestial terrors. Calling such a being into the natural world—an end that many cults seek—might shatter the primal ban that protects the world from extraplanar exploitation. Such an event could trigger a new Dawn War.

A cultist devoted to the Elder Elemental Eye performs a rite that gives her control over a surging torrent

As dire as primordial cults are, not all seek evil ends. Certain cults are founded to honor worthy primordials—entities that either took no part in the Dawn War or fought alongside the gods. From the perspective of their followers, these primordials are more worthy of mortal adoration than are the gods with whom they shared their creation. The primordials are the rightful rulers of the world, usurped by beings whose lesser power is proven by their inability to destroy those they defeated.

The Cult of the Elder Elemental Eye

The danger posed to the world by any other primordial cult pales in comparison to the Cult of the Elder Elemental Eye. The cult is most often associated with the princes of elemental evil (page 24), but they are merely stewards for a vast and unknowable entity. The Elder Elemental Eye is believed to be an ancient primordial being that was cast out from the Elemental Chaos by its fellow primordials. It works to regain a foothold in the planes and resume efforts toward the goal it once sought—the end of all things.

Throughout history, the cult has threatened civilization by raising armies and dark temples, whose priests scour the world for the keys needed to free their master. What gains the cult makes are often sabotaged by infighting and betrayal. Factions rule the cult, each seeking to gain dominance over the others—even if doing so means destroying everything they work toward.

Compounding these troubles are other powers who seek to exploit the cult. At various times, Zuggtmoy, Graz'zt, Iuz the Evil, and Lolth have all manipulated the cult into advancing their own agendas.

Planar Breaches

A planar breach is born in an area where the bounds of reality are tested to the point of breaking. One can be created by a powerful ritual, the appearance of an elder evil, or the awakening of a primordial. In addition, certain locations spawn planar breaches on their own, causing bubbles to form and burst in reality, spewing the stuff of one plane into another.

THE ELDER ELEMENTAL EYE

The Elder Elemental Eye does not exist—or at least that's what a few unhinged minds claim. To them, the Eye is nothing but a fabrication created by four powerful princes of elemental evil. Their goal in doing so is to conceal their true master, the dreaded Chained God. The creator of the Abyss, the Chained God embodies an evil so dark that few mortals dare utter his name for fear of inviting his insane attention.

Such theories are often discounted, and with good reason. No records confirm that the Chained God ever existed. The priests of other faiths are silent regarding this absent deity, and no legitimate holy books or scriptures mention this dark being. Yet it is the absence of proof wherein the Chained God can be found, hidden between the words and invocations that glorify the powers of light and good. He is the shadow that lurks within the dawn, and the pall across creation that sparked the war between above and below. He is the madness promised to those who dare examine the forbidden texts bearing his sigil—a rune-etched arrowhead whose significance has survived despite the silence of the god himself.

No prayers offered to the Chained God are ever answered. No power flows from this inscrutable being. The only hints of his existence are scattered in dubious writings unearthed in blasphemous temples, and preserved by the insane cabal who call themselves the Doomdreamers. Does the Chained God exist? Perhaps. What does this monstrous deity want? None dare say.

ANNA CHRISTENSON

A planar breach builds before it completely forms. As it threatens to explode, a bulge forms in reality, causing the area of the breach to distort and assume a stretched or compacted appearance. A few moments after the event begins, the bulge explodes outward, causing a portion of one plane and its inhabitants to fall into the other plane. The breach and the area all around it fuse into a bizarre amalgamation of realities, gaining the traits of both planes, and allowing passage from one plane to the next.

Planar breaches can cause widespread damage and destruction. (For example, one might expect catastrophe when an ocean of boiling water pours into the natural world from the Elemental Chaos.) Some planar breaches spawn elemental motes, free-floating chunks of earth, water, or some other fundamental element, that careen through the skies. Other planar breaches erase vast sections of lands, pulling them into some other world.

Cinderheart

Breaches spread devastation in a wide area around them. However, in a few instances, primal champions can move fast enough to contain and control a breach, curbing its destructive power. The fortress known as Cinderheart is the most famous elemental breach to threaten the world in modern times. Set against the slopes of an active volcano, the site sits within a haze of black clouds and ash that fill the air like a constant storm. The breach to the Elemental Chaos found within the volcano's caldera is a conduit to the fires of creation. The breach's continued quiescence is a testament to the stalwarts who dwell there, known among themselves and to others as the wardens of the breach.

In the aftermath of the fall of Nerath, the druids and wardens who dwelled in Cinderheart opened their doors to refugees being hunted by a demonic host. Thanks to the magma elementals conjured by the druids' magic, the pursuing gnolls and other fiends gained no ground against the remote fortress, and the refugees were given a chance at a new life. Their descendants make up much of the fortress's present-day population.

The wards prevent the breach from spreading, but not even these potent rituals can prevent elemental energy from contaminating the nearby landscape and the creatures and spirits populating it. Primal champions charged with monitoring the ward soon discover the primal spirits with whom they are allied acquire many of the traits and characteristics of the breach. These spirits become wilder, aggressive, and more dangerous. Many guardians work to cleanse the affected spirits, but a few manage to find a way to use their extraordinary qualities for the benefit of Cinderheart and all those who help to hold the breach.

The Elemental Chaos

No traveler to the Elemental Chaos could mistake it for any other plane or world in the infinity of existence. The "ground" might be bare elemental rock, hardening magma, a smooth sheet of ice or glass, or a field of jagged crystals or crumbling ash. Mountains of stone drift through the air or float on currents of lightning, while storm clouds collide with sheets of flame. Not far away, a sheer cliff drops into a bottomless crevasse, or a river of magma cuts across the landscape. Another island might drift nearby, perhaps far below or just above—but sometimes on a collision course. The resulting cataclysm annihilates both landforms and creates something entirely new.

The substance of the Elemental Chaos is raw matter, unworked and unrefined. Air fills most expanses between masses of other elemental material, making the majority of the plane theoretically hospitable to travelers from the world.

In places, though, the air itself is a hazard—swirling in ceaseless whirlwinds that grasp and never let go, or flowing as a liquid, cold enough to freeze fire.

Rock, iron, ice, crystal, and sand provide surfaces to stand on. Magma, molten metals, and even running flame stream through rivers or pool in great blazing lakes. Sometimes stone moves like water even without the heat of magma—an earthflow can carry away anything built on apparently solid ground.

Water flows in valleys cut in rock, but it can also course through empty space. It churns in tumultuous seas, floats in clouds of scalding vapor, blows in storms of snow or hail, or drifts along in the form of majestic icebergs.

Raw energy defies the constraints of material form. Sheets of fire dance across the sky, and liquid flame flows in canals through the City of Brass. Lightning flashes so constantly that those suitably protected find it to be solid footing. Thunder rolls like tidal waves across the expanse of the plane, flowing about or shattering whatever stands in its path.

All these substances and forces are in constant motion, subject to collisions, tides, and storms of raw chaos energy. Within all this instability are islands (some as large as continents) that enjoy a temporary reprieve—places where communities thrive and monsters dwell. Here, in these drifting realms, adventures in the Elemental Chaos typically unfold.

ADAM PAQUETTE

Reaching the Plane

The world was formed out of the Elemental Chaos, and in places it remains close to its origin. In the crater of an active volcano, at the eye of a mighty storm, among the churning of an ocean maelstrom, or from the heart of an ancient glacier, the Elemental Chaos spills into the world in destructive glory.

Adventurous souls might seek out such a location to see if it contains a portal, or might be drawn to such a site to combat creatures native to the Elemental Chaos that spill into the world. In their efforts to put a stop to an angry storm titan or a marching army of fire archons, the characters might pass involuntarily from the natural world to the Elemental Chaos.

The Elemental Chaos is home to a metropolis that rivals any other in grandeur: the City of Brass, capital of the efreets. It is a hub for trade across the Elemental Chaos and to worlds beyond. Several permanent teleportation circles within and just outside the City of Brass are well-known destinations for the Planar Portal ritual, making it easily accessible to travelers seeking an entry point to the Elemental Chaos.

Permanent circles are also located in many of the githzerai monasteries found in the Elemental Chaos, and their sigils are catalogued in certain worldly monasteries. The fortress of the Ninth Bastion (page 16) also has a well-guarded circle. Many tomes of foul lore concerning demons and the Abyss contain sigil sequences that can be used in a Planar Portal ritual, but these sequences more often than not lead to traps, prisons, or regions of the uppermost Plain of a Thousand Pits that are more than likely fatal.

Travelers who can't find a naturally occurring portal or the sigil sequence of an existing teleportation circle can use the Elemental Transference ritual (Manual of the Planes). This method is risky, since the travelers arrive in a random place and can find it difficult to return.

The Abyss

At the deepest point of the Elemental Chaos lies the realm of demons and their vile works, the place where evil takes physical form and seethes with its own baleful energy. As one draws near to the Abyss, the tides of churning matter found in the Elemental Chaos take on a different character. Their slow seething grows faster and more violent. Storms gather in the skies as a great spiraling cataclysm takes shape, dragging matter into its maw. All but the most reckless travelers turn back at this sight, for beyond lies a nightmare of destruction and eternal malice.

In the Abyss, the raw potential of the elements is turned toward its darkest and most corrupt form. The realms of this plane within a plane are created in mockery of the mortal world and the dominions of the gods. The Abyss consists of hundreds of layers, most in the form of islands of earth adrift in storm-filled skies, inexorably circling toward annihilation in the region's black heart. Only a few of these terrible places are commonly known among the people of the mortal realm. The Plain of a Thousand Portals. The steaming jungles of Abysm. The vast, strand-filled void known as the Demonweb. The ashen realm of Thanatos, where the demon prince Orcus rules.

Few mortals gain demonic power without becoming the worst sort of villains and monsters. Still, a few locales within the Abyss are home to living mortals. Azzagrat, the demesne of the demon lord Graz'zt, draws bold and wicked merchants from across the planes, and many demon lords keep mortal captives and slaves for their amusement.

Elemental Realms

At first examination, the Elemental Chaos appears to be a magnificent but lifeless wasteland—a realm of inanimate matter in countless forms. Appearances can be deceiving, however. In the most stable and hospitable locations on the plane, humanoids and other creatures of the world make homes of one sort or another. The Elemental Chaos is raw matter waiting to be shaped, and an ordinary mortal mind can impose order on the shifting conditions in the immediate area. Exceptional mortals—those of great intelligence, deep resolve, or unusual heritage—can achieve correspondingly more expansive results.

The ascetic githzerai build islands of stability to house their monasteries and strongholds in the Elemental Chaos. Ambitious mortals travel here from the world to forge outposts such as the Ninth Bastion, establish mining camps and trade towns, or create secret towers and refuges amid drifting mountains and radiant seas. Many of the most powerful mortal wielders of elemental magic are natives of these fantastic realms and retreats.

As spectacular as the fortresses of the githzerai and the strongholds of mortal wizards might be, they are nothing compared to the domains of the true elementals. The Elemental Chaos is home to an endless variety of creatures, many of which have little in common with mortals and no interest in their concerns. All a xorn knows about the humans it might encounter in the Elemental Chaos is that cracking their soft shells yields up delicious gemstones. Other elemental races, such as efreets, djinns, and frost giants, strive for power, riches, and influence just as the people of mortal domains do.

Heroes native to the Elemental Chaos might hail from any of a thousand cities, realms, or strongholds. Whether mortal or elemental in nature, they have come of age in a place very different from the lush, orderly, and unchanging lands of the mortal realm.

The Sultan of Brass, lord of efreets and ruler of the City of Brass

The City of Brass

The most spectacular of the elemental realms, the City of Brass is the capital of the mighty efreet empire—a metropolis built on a basalt island surrounded by a sea of fire. Members of the mortal races find the city blisteringly hot, but the conditions here are seldom a threat to survival. Visitors must avoid places of obvious danger, such as the great canals filled with flowing fire that crisscross the city's districts and neighborhoods.

As the largest city in the Elemental Chaos, and perhaps the largest settlement on any plane, the City of Brass is a nexus for planar travelers. Portals leading to fiery regions throughout the multiverse can be found here, along with docks for planar dromonds, great mercantile gates, and caravan yards where the traders of a hundred realms gather.

Efreets are a cruel and domineering race, grasping and quick to anger. They are also highly intelligent and understand the value of law and order. The laws of the city permit efreets to do as they please, even as they lay down harsh standards for the conduct of other races.

Though most of the city's inhabitants are efreets and other elemental creatures, a significant number of mortals also live in the efreet capital. Uncounted humans, dwarves, genasi, and other humanoids have been enslaved over the centuries by efreets and their minions, and their descendants now make up about two-thirds of the city's population.

Kaltenheim

The greatest kingdom of the frost giants in the Elemental Chaos, Kaltenheim is the domain of the mighty frost titan Thrym. The halls of Thrym's jarls are scattered across vast plains of snow-covered tundra, jagged icebound mountains, and frozen seas. No members of the mortal races live here of their own free will, but the jarls hold hundreds of mortal thralls. Frost giants have little skill at creating fine or delicate craftwork, or at building any but the crudest structures. Likewise, they have no patience for tending herds or gathering what little food can be found in Kaltenheim. Instead, they set their slaves to such menial tasks as these.

Even compared to the efreets, frost giants are brutal and capricious masters. Still, even a frost giant understands that a talented crafter is hard to replace, and some thralls are valued more than others. Few mortals thrive in Kaltenheim, but some of those who do come to master the elemental magic of the frost giants over time. A few of these earn preferential treatment, or find the opportunity to escape and make their way to more hospitable lands. Mortal heroes who come of age as thralls of giants are a grim and hardened lot, survivors of the most heartless captivity imaginable.

The Ninth Bastion

This fortress-city is the realm of the knightly order known as the Heirs of the Lawbringer. It stands on a great plinth of rock overlooking a barren stony plain beneath a sky illuminated by drifting luminous orbs of metal and stone. Home to some fifteen thousand people, mostly humans and dwarves, the city is protected by towers and battlements of iron set beneath a great dome of elemental lightning.

The Ninth Bastion is a prime example of an elemental realm founded by the mortal races. Few people have ever attempted such an ambitious task, and most such domains consist of small towers or strongholds that house no more than a few hundred people. The Ninth Bastion is an exception. The Heirs of the Lawbringer are committed to expanding and ordering their realm over time, eventually establishing a fertile, stable kingdom in the depths of the Elemental Chaos. The Bastion has been besieged by giants, demons, titans, and other elemental powers since its creation. Eight times, it is said to have fallen to its foes and then been regained. Its current incarnation has stood for centuries.

When the Ninth Bastion is not under attack or imminent threat, its knights and the other heroes of the city fight to keep lines of communication open with nearby settlements. The Bastion is scarcely able to support itself; its survival depends on a steady flow of supplies from more fertile regions of the plane. Residents of the Ninth Bastion greet elemental creatures with suspicion and distrust, and are always on guard against attacks from the denizens of the Plane Below. However, the residents of the fortress sometimes permit freed azers to find new lives here, and efreet merchant princes are given permission to peddle their wares in the stronghold's markets.

Rheilvalt

A trade city in the network of elemental rivers and streams known as the Riverweb, Rheilvalt stands on a small archipelago of rocky islets linked to each other by arched bridges. Home to several thousand human and genasi, as well as a number of halfling clans, the city serves as a primary port of call for merchants from across the planes. Rheilvalt's location at a confluence of mighty rivers provides access to a vast territory spanning thousands of miles of elemental water.

Commerce is king in Rheilvalt, and its merchants roam far across the Elemental Chaos and into the seas and waterways of the mortal realm. Many Rheilvaltan heroes find their way to the world to seek their fortunes—some willingly, some through misfortune or the actions of enemies.

Zerthadlun

The greatest stronghold of the githzerai race, Zerthadlun is a walled city home to more than twenty thousand people. It stands in the middle of a wide, dusty plain created and maintained by the ceaseless meditations of a select group of monks. Most residents of Zerthadlun are githzerai ascetics who share in the communal life of the city. Although Zerthadlun is larger than Rheilvalt, few mortal travelers seek it out. The githzerai are unconcerned with amassing wealth through trade, though they welcome any who visit their realm in peace.

Many githzerai heroes are natives of the Elemental Chaos and Zerthadlun. The githzerai maintain smaller strongholds and monasteries across the plane, but most of these exist to serve Zerthadlun's needs. Many strongholds are built in fertile regions to supply the great city with crops that cannot easily be grown in its local environs. Others serve as watchtowers to protect Zerthadlun's hinterlands against the raids of slaads or githyanki.

Elemental-Touched Races

A connection exists between living creatures and the Elemental Chaos—a bond born at the world's creation. All mortal races thus exhibit an inexorable attraction to elemental magic, even if only a handful of the heroes and villains of those races ever learn to fully master that power.

This section provides an overview of several major races and how elemental power influences their cultural identity, their legends, and their societies.

Dragonborn

Arrogance alone is not why the dragonborn believe they have dominion over elemental magic. True children of Io, dragonborn harbor the power of fire and ice, thunder and lightning within them. Their hearts draw energy from the Elemental Chaos, allowing them to focus this power as a potent blast of elemental fury. Most dragonborn believe that Io gifted them with elemental power as a sign of his favor and as a symbol of his authority over the primordials. Some sages believe that this act was integral in fomenting the hatred between the primordials and the gods as they vied for dominance.

History recognizes Arkhosia as a nation made mighty through martial and magical achievements. Dragonborn sorcerers outstripped their rivals when it came to manipulating elemental energy, using arcane magic to shape that power in the interminable war against Bael Turath. Arkhosia's destruction took with it much of the magical lore regarding the Elemental Chaos, and the most powerful methods for harnessing the power of the Plane Below have been lost to legend and myth. Still, the descendants of the once-mighty dragonborn empire sometimes stumble across the ancient knowledge of their people, discovering the means to control elemental power as the heroes of old did.

The Crucible

The dragonborn pride themselves on their legacy—a history crowded with honorable and noble champions. However, for every bright light, there stands an opposite shadow. The Crucible's ascent signals a grim point in dragonborn history, and one that most do their best to forget. An order of warriors arising from the ruins and bitter grief of a fallen empire, the Crucible dedicated its efforts toward vengeance against the despised tieflings. The masters of the order sought a way to destroy the tiefling race, erasing it from the world by fully embracing the elemental nature that all dragonborn shared. Rather than controlling this power, the dragonborn lost themselves in its fury, becoming agents of destruction and chaos.

Throwing off restraint and drawing greater and greater energy into themselves, the dragonborn of the Crucible became living portals to the Elemental Chaos. The power of absolute destruction was theirs to command, and it was used to scourge the tieflings. Before their vengeance could be completed, however, the dragonborn following this path were themselves destroyed—consumed by the unchecked power they sought to control.

Rumors persist that some Crucible members survived by becoming elemental creatures. That transformation caused them to shed their draconic characteristics and take on forms unknown to their race, akin to how catastrophic dragons differ from chromatic and metallic dragons.

Drow

Their exile from the lands of light has driven the dark elves to embrace any means of protecting themselves against the Underdark's horrors. Most dark elves living in the enclaves and settlements scattered throughout the subterranean world offer fealty to Lolth, since doing otherwise invites retribution from the Demon Queen's most zealous faithful. When they are not pandering to the priestesses, though, the bold and unhinged among the dark elves sometimes serve even darker powers, hoping to advance their standing and status through secrecy. Elemental magic is one avenue by which disenfranchised and oppressed drow gain power in the dark elf realms.

Lolth and her priestesses regard elemental magic as a threat to their authority. As a result, they hunt down and destroy anyone suspected of consorting with elemental powers. Foremost among their enemies are the followers of the mysterious Elder Elemental Eye, who have at times grown powerful enough to threaten the priestesses' reign.

Lolth's priestesses make concessions when it comes to learning elemental magic. They sometimes encourage males to study sorcery and other arcane spellcraft in the hope of controlling such magic in Lolth's name. Those who show talent in arcane magic are watched and tested for loyalty. Any who falter or cause suspicion that they are seeking power for their own ends are quickly made examples of.

House Eilservs

Even with the threat of death looming over anyone who breaks from Lolth's worship, cultists dedicated to the Elder Elemental Eye have always infested drow society. Most such cults are small, consisting of a few desperate and deranged castoffs and exiles. Death squads sweep through the cities, rounding up these miscreants and executing them with little fanfare. At times, powerful drow have found strong allies in these cults, and have used cult magic to advance their own aims.

House Eilservs of Erelhei-Cinlu had benefited from Lolth's favor for decades. Using its exalted status to amass power and influence, the house prepared to elevate its matriarch Eclavdra to become queen of all drow. When Eilservs made its move, however, rival houses rose up in opposition. The priestesses feared that a strong queen would weaken their authority, and thus they threw their weight behind the rival houses to block Eilservs' bid for power.

In response, House Eilservs abandoned its designs on ruling the drow and instead pledged itself to the Elder Elemental Eye. While replacing fallen soldiers with elemental servants, Eclavdra turned her attention to the surface world, where Eilservs planned to spread its vile religion and establish a new force to rival the priestesses.

A combination of factors unraveled Eclavdra's designs. The house's machinations in the surface world stirred up several giant tribes, driving them to attack civilization's outposts. In response, adventuring bands stormed the giants' strongholds and defeated them one by one, eventually discovering that drow agents were behind the attacks. This in turn led heroes into the Underdark, where they fought against the drow and breached the Great Fane of Lolth. The attack threw Erelhei-Cinlu into chaos. The other houses turned against Eilservs, driving its members from the city for years. In the end, Eclavdra returned to Lolth's service, reestablished her house, and was chosen to become Lolth's most prized exarch.

Na'Dhaunxutal, Eilservs' current matriarch, has worked hard to erase the house's sordid history and remain firmly in Lolth's favor. However, whispered rumors suggest that the Elder Elemental Eye continues to have an interest in Eilservs. It is said that certain sons and daughters of the house still perform forbidden rites and ceremonies to that unknowable power, continuing the work Eclavdra began.

Dwarves

In the time known by the dwarves as the Age of Chains, the primordials enslaved the dwarves and forced them to toil for the giants the primordials had created. Even in their torment, many dwarves managed to learn the secrets of elemental magic from their masters. The price that such knowledge exacted is demonstrated by the azers and the galeb duhrs, who lost their natural heritage and became elemental creatures in thrall to their giant lords.

As their legends recount, the dwarves broke their chains and won their freedom in time. This victory was achieved in part through their own boldness and Moradin's divine aid, and also by the use of the elemental magic that had once enslaved and tortured them. The dwarves called forth fire to incinerate their overseers, conjured earth to seal off passages and cover their retreat, and triggered quakes to topple the giants' fortresses. These lessons formed a foundation for an important part of dwarven culture. Today, those who excel in the arts of elemental magic are among the most respected in their clans.

Their time as slaves hardened the dwarves, and many think nothing of venturing into the Elemental Chaos. Dwarf miners follow mithral veins through portals to the Plane Below without slowing their work, whether their tunnels take them into floating earth motes or great rocky bergs adrift on lava floes. The dwarves fortify these elemental mines within vast strongholds, building towering walls and stout turrets strong enough to repel any attack. Conscious of the fate of the azers and the galeb duhrs, most dwarves do not dwell for long in the Elemental Chaos, returning to the natural world periodically to avoid overexposure to the plane's influence.

Forgeborn

Not every dwarf clan that escaped the giants did so without incurring scars. Proximity to elemental power transformed many dwarves, including those now known as the forgeborn. Although they were changed by elemental power, the forgeborn halted their transformation soon enough to preserve their dwarven identity. They now use their gift for elemental power to wage war against the giants, ogres, and orcs that wronged them so long ago and continue to do so.

Forgeborn dwarves bear an elemental mark on their souls. They pride themselves on escaping the giants, but mourn the kin they left behind. They regard the fire burning in their hearts as both a boon for the strength it gives them and a bane for what it could do to them if they surrender to its influence. Every forgeborn dwarf must harness the elemental power that flows in his or her blood or risk being transformed into an azer—a fate that all dwarves fear.

A singular focus on avenging the atrocities against their people helps the forgeborn dwarves control their elemental heritage. More so than most of their kin, the forgeborn seek out opportunities to slay giants and destroy elementals. Facing a titan in mortal combat is the fate that every forgeborn dreams of. The energy within gives rise to the legendary fury of their kind. In the thick of battle, when their control begins to slip, flames might dance across forgeborn weapons while thunder booms in the cadence of their battle chants.

A restlessness infects the forgeborn, and young warriors often leave their clans to become defenders of their race. Forgeborn dwarves rarely mingle with other dwarves, however, believing that their kin lack their zeal and hatred, and that non-forgeborn pander too often to the gods who allowed the primordials to enslave them.

Genasi

The truth of the race's beginning is lost to history, and as a result genasi have a large number of contradictory creation myths. Many legends claim that the genasi were once humans who became infused with elemental power. The most popular and widely accepted story states that a group of human wizards called sha'irs worked closely with powerful elemental beings and eventually became so steeped in elemental power that their children were infused with it—becoming the first genasi.

Other stories abound. Perhaps the genasi developed from human agents of the primordials who were twisted by dark elemental energy, or they were brave champions who stole power from the primordials. Perhaps they were simply trapped in the Elemental Chaos and absorbed its ambient power.

A number of genasi resent the implication that they must have grown from human stock. They seek to distance themselves from humans and establish themselves as a unique race. A popular tale told in this camp claims that the genasi were the first humanoids created. The primordials made the cosmos long before the gods arrived, and as they spun the raw stuff of existence from the void, their great generative power gave life to some of it. Thus were the first elemental creatures born. The primordials soon became aware of these bits of elemental conglomerate that did not act randomly or naturally. They were pleased with the results and experimented with creating additional forms of life. Many of these did not survive, but djinns, efreets, giants, and genasi are all results of the primordials' efforts.

The merciless environment and fierce competition with the other offspring of the primordials weeded out the weakest of the genasi stock, so that only the cleverest remained. Even though the survivors were able to hold their own, their numbers were few, and as a group they were still no match for the other new races.

Teetering on the brink of extinction, the genasi gathered together for one last desperate try at protecting their race: They struck at the primordials. Most died in this heroic attempt, but a few survived, coming away with small fragments of their creators' power. Employing arcane means to harness this essence, they created the first archon forges. Then, with armies of elemental soldiers at their disposal, the genasi carved out domains for themselves and multiplied, until other servants of the primordials stole the forges, claiming them as their own creations.

For genasi, elemental magic is less a process of study and learning than it is an awakening of natural abilities. For this reason, genasi favor elemental powers reflecting their particular elemental heritage. Firesoul genasi often explore fire magic, while watersoul genasi choose powers granting control over water. Primordials and powerful genies sometimes bestow elemental power to genasi who prove their worth.

Half-Orcs and Orcs

The orcs have strong ties to the Elemental Chaos. They are a wild and wrathful race, driven by a dark god to commit violence against the civilized world. With no desire to cultivate, build, or create, orcs are content to seize and destroy.

The madness and savagery of the orcs flows from their vicious gods, whose worship infects their race with chaos and evil. Most orcs follow the mad god Gruumsh, but the race's religion includes a host of other entities, from wicked exarchs to primal spirits, and even the lost primordials. Orcs are superstitious by nature, and with good reason. They haunt the wild places—those lands that the civilized races have not yet conquered, or which they ceded long ago. The old powers still rule these realms, and one can find altars here to strange beings of rock and fire, wind and rain. From these sources, the orcs bolster their dark magic, calling on the fury of the Elemental Chaos to prepare the way for their warriors' charge.

As for half-orcs, their human heritage has done nothing to dilute their connection to elemental power. They might escape the dread attention of the one-eyed monster worshiped by their kin, but many half-orcs retain their people's reverence for both the primal spirits and the primordials. Such worship grants them a much-needed outlet for their darker impulses. As a way to bleed off the anger and rage that clouds their minds, elemental magic proves useful to this end.

A Giant Legacy

Orcs are often lumped in with ogres and the giant races, thanks to their god's association and alliance with the primordials. Orcs use the same tongue the giants speak, hearkening back to common origins and alliances in a previous age.

This connection extends to half-orcs as well. No matter how much half-orcs might try to distance themselves from their savage kin, those brought up in orc society suffer through horrific lives. For these wretches to survive, they must turn to sources of power other than the brute strength of the orcs that they cannot match. The human cleverness in their nature makes many half-orcs suited for dabbling in magic, particularly of the primal variety. However, rather than harnessing force directly from nature, half-orcs use primal magic to draw elemental energy into themselves, emulating the primordials. The best of these warriors sometimes win prominent positions within their tribes, and might act as battle leaders or advisors to chieftains.

Stonechildren

One of the origin stories of the half-orcs stems from an ancient eladrin myth. It claims that half-orcs arose from the contest between Corellon and Gruumsh, created from blood spilled when the god of the fey put out the dark god's eye. Some dismiss such tales as fancy, but the half-orcs known as the stonechildren use this myth as the foundation of their existence.

The stonechildren believe that the first half-orcs were hated and reviled, shunned by both orcs and humans because of their mingled blood and strange aspect. The gods offered no succor to this accidental race, and thus the half-orcs were driven into the wilderness, forced to fend for themselves. For decades, they wandered, homeless and persecuted, searching for a place of their own. Their refusal to surrender to the elements paid off when they came to True Stone—the Mountain of the Lode Mother, where the primordial Sunnis and her earth titan consort Entemoch reigned long before the Dawn War.

Instead of turning them away, the primordial welcomed the refugees into her realm. She made a place for them in the tunnels below, providing them with iron for weapons and armor, and giving them shelter against the raging storms. In exchange, these half-orcs worshiped Sunnis as a god, pledging their bodies and souls to her forever.

Long service to Sunnis transformed these half-orcs. Though they share the same traits as others of their kind, their mixed heritage has all but vanished behind their elemental facade. Gone is the olive complexion and dark hair typical of half-orcs. In its place, the stonechildren have craggy features and pale skin the color of marble. They display an incredible talent for elemental magic and are among the best in the world at shaping stone and rock. The stonechildren do not mingle with other races. However, because their primordial mistress has been silent over the long ages since they first settled in the True Stone, some have emerged to seek their fortunes in the world beyond their mountain home.

Other Races

Elemental power is the foundation for all magical traditions, from the arcane spells used by wizards to the psionic disciplines that monks and battleminds master. All races have thus encountered elemental power in some form or fashion. How the members of each race regard such power reflects their prevailing attitudes about magic in general.

Eladrin and Elves

Corellon revealed the secrets of magic to the world, giving his favored children the knowledge of arcane power. His teachings enabled the eladrin to call forth elemental energy to be directed as they saw fit. Although eladrin magic has long since come to focus on the school of enchantment and the other traditions of the fey, one can still find elemental roots in the magic wielded by the eladrin nobility. The bralanis, for example, have power over elemental wind, while the ghaeles can call forth elemental cold.

When the elves broke from their eladrin kin, they brought the secrets of arcane magic with them. Nature magic, however, proved more suited to their needs, and thus the old traditions fell out of favor. Still, the magic of the elves evokes elemental power as they shape and defend their natural environment.

Githzerai

The githzerai fled to the Elemental Chaos to escape war with their githyanki kin. Desperate to cast aside the violence bred into them by their former illithid masters, the githzerai sought freedom from the purpose for which they were created. Though dangerous and unpredictable, the Elemental Chaos held the freedom the githzerai sought—the plane's roiling turmoil reflecting the upheaval in their minds and hearts. Studying chaos taught the githzerai to master their rage and achieve a true and lasting peace with themselves. Githzerai heroes take such mastery to the next level, seeking to control the chaos around them just as they control the chaos within.

Gnomes

Gnomes are born with a talent for magic. Most favor arcane power, tapping into the arts of illusion that helped free them from their fomorian masters. The escape from the fomorians saw the gnomes seek refuge wherever they could find it, from the deep forests in the Feywild to the defiles and chasms of the most remote mountains. These mountain-dwelling gnomes, sometimes called rock gnomes, applied their magical talents to communing with the elemental spirits of their adopted homeland. Rock gnomes have learned to meld their bodies into stone to conceal their presence, and to call up elemental servants and power to protect them from threats.

Goliaths

The goliaths see spirits in all things, from the rocky mountaintops where they make their homes, to the trees blanketing the lower slopes, to the clouds that scour the heavens above them. Many of these are primal spirits—entities that personify an aspect of the natural world. However, the spirits acknowledged by the goliaths sometimes represent an older power. A slumbering primordial might lurk beneath a mountain, while wild storm elementals rage atop its high peaks. Goliaths see no difference between these elemental presences and the primal spirits of their homelands, and they are content to make offerings to any spirits of the land and receive power in exchange.

Halflings

Halfling communities follow the world's roads and waterways, making elemental magic useful both for protection and to expedite travel. Halflings who channel elemental power can coax more speed from a clan's boats, communicate with kin over long distances, or use the power of water and storm against their enemies. Although gifted in elemental magic, halflings guard their lore carefully, always fearing that the power they master might be used against them. Within a clan, elders teach the secrets of elemental power only to the most promising and dedicated candidates.

Humans

Ingenuity is the human race's greatest asset. Cursed with a short life span, humans must make do with the years available to them, and they are more than equal to the challenge. This innate drive and resourcefulness reveals itself in their advances in the study of arcane magic, the grand temples they raise to the gods, and the mighty nation-states they have raised across the world. It comes as no surprise, then, that humans as a group have learned more about elemental magic and have delved further into its secrets than any other race.

Humans can be found in practically any elemental venue or realm, except for those populated entirely by some other race, or those whose residents are anathema to humanity.

Gaining Elemental Power

The ability to wield elemental magic in its purest state is exclusive to elemental creatures, which channel the raw energy of the Elemental Chaos through themselves when they call on that plane's power. A number of ways exist for adventurers to transform themselves into elemental creatures, and to thus begin the process of mastering the power of the Plane Below.

This section explores the ways your character might come across elemental power, examines how you can transform yourself into an elemental creature or attune yourself to elemental energy, and looks at elemental patrons that might provide your character with the power he or she seeks.

Elemental Exposure

The boundaries between the planes are not as secure as many imagine. Portals bridge unimaginable distances, allowing instant transport to another reality. The planes can overlap in places, so that unwary travelers in the world might find themselves stumbling into the Feywild or Shadowfell without warning. Planar breaches and reality rips can damage a plane's integrity, delivering strange monsters and weird weather to unsuspecting communities. Portals remain common, and more spectacular planar phenomena might occur only once in a century. Regardless, these events can and do have lasting consequences to people near them.

Most portals to the Elemental Chaos carry no risk of transformation. Passing through such a doorway whisks the character to whatever destination lies on the other side. However, the magic powering a portal can break down over time, allowing the destination to leak through. Decaying portals to the Elemental Chaos are not sufficient to transform people living nearby all at once. After a few generations, however, the children of a settlement in proximity to a malfunctioning portal might develop unusual traits or become genuine elemental creatures.

The most violent planar phenomena change the landscape more swiftly. Planar breaches can have devastating effects. When the Elemental Chaos breaches the world, the energy of the plane shatters and transforms the terrain around it in the blink of an eye. Creatures not killed outright might find themselves transformed into elemental creatures by such events.

A rare few creatures experience transformation into elemental creatures by acclimating to the Elemental Chaos. Humanoids who migrate to the Plane Below and remain there find that their minds and bodies change over time. The natural characteristics of a mortal creature's race are supplanted by those common to elemental creatures. Such changes might be immediate or might take generations to surface. No one can predict what might happen in the Elemental Chaos.

Primordial Shards

Primordial shards provide another method for acquiring elemental power. These strange rocky growths can appear anywhere, from the depths of the Underdark to the most windswept mountain peaks. The origin of these multicolored crystals is a matter of great debate. Some have claimed they are the remnants of fallen primordials and other powerful elemental creatures. Others believe that primordial shards are crystallized ichor left behind wherever a primordial's blood stained the ground during the Dawn War. It could be these shards are nothing more than remnant energy left over from creation, solidified into their present form. Origins aside, primordial shards are known to be reservoirs of elemental energy. Those who find a shard can access its power—and might be transformed by it.

Each primordial shard is associated with a specific elemental essence, or combination of essences, revealed by its color. Air shards are clear, earth shards are brown, fire shards are red, and water shards are blue. Some primordial shards combine those raw elements, such that fire and earth traits create a shard linked to magma, while air and fire combine to create a smoke shard.

Some primordial shards are akin to naturally occurring magic items, possessing powers that a wielder can choose to call on. Others offer a different sort of power, holding the ability to bond with a mortal creature and transform it into an elemental being in part or in whole. Such shards can bestow a potent elemental property or power of some kind, but bonding with a mortal creature usually discharges the power of the shard. A shard that loses its potency becomes an ordinary crystal, albeit a valuable one.

Elemental Scholarship

A character can also embrace elemental power through research and scholarship. Writings on the Elemental Chaos vary in quality and availability. Most are guides to the plane, offering insights into the creatures dwelling there and unreliable accounts of locations, societies, and the like. Other writings might contain potent rituals enabling short-term or permanent transformation, along with the fundamental methods for manifesting elemental power while in this state.

The study of elemental power lies outside the bounds of accepted magical tradition. Major institutions of magical learning take a dim view of such scholarship, and characters who pursue elemental power can find themselves ostracized. Many religious orders enshrine the animosity between their gods and the primordials by maintaining an open hostility toward characters who pursue elemental power. The agents of such orders scour the planes for legends and lore related to mastering and using elemental magic. A prized manuscript recovered from a shrine to a primordial could attract the attention of crusading zealots eager to consign the tome—and its researcher—to purifying fires.

More ominously, elemental magic often leads to dark changes in those who master it. The attentions of demons and powerful elemental creatures are always a threat for those dabbling in banned works, whose powers and rituals fail to distinguish between demons and the elementals from which they were spawned. The most important lore regarding elemental magic comes from the devotees of the Elder Elemental Eye. This forbidden cult deals with the so-called princes of elemental evil, who offer power to tempt those of flawed morality. Many who have delved into elemental lore have found themselves enthralled by these dark powers.

Elemental Patrons

For most mortals, there can be no greater betrayal than to pledge service to a primordial. These beings once sought the world's destruction, emerging from the Elemental Chaos to lay siege to the mortal realm and the astral dominions alike. The cosmic struggle between god and primordial is laid down in sacred scrolls and annals preserved from ancient times, guarded by devout and dedicated servants. In those texts, dire warnings can be found of what will happen if the primordials break their chains or awaken from their slumber. Doom. Destruction. Apocalypse.

Yet across the world, gathering in secret cellars and shrines hidden in the deep wilds, an increasing number of mortals willingly serve these catastrophic beings, worshiping them as gods. Despite the actions of hunters and inquisitors whose purpose it is to stamp out these cults wherever they are found, the faithful of the primordials persist in their misguided beliefs. And as the world decays, sliding deeper into darkness, more and more people turn from the gods' temples in the hope of seeking a better future.

The reputation for evil and destruction carried by the primordials is not always warranted. Certainly, wicked powers can be found in their ranks. Erek-Hus, the King of Terror, was known for his lust for destruction. Haemnathuun the Blood Lord committed unspeakable atrocities when the elemental host invaded the Astral Sea, before the gods cut him down. But though many primordials craved nothing more than the utter destruction of the gods and the unraveling of the world they themselves had forged, others were too vast or self-absorbed to be concerned with the Dawn War.

A few primordials fostered life in the world, seeing the gods as partners in shepherding creation to its true potential. Then the Dawn War severed the ties between those powers, making enemies of allies and casualties of those who stood apart. Since certain gods proved indiscriminate regarding whom they named as foes, the good primordials were drawn into the conflict, swept up in the world-shattering events that destroyed everything for which they had worked. Whether good or evil, all primordials faced divine judgment before being locked away in dark oubliettes, bound in chains, and forgotten.

In noting the primordials' role in creation, one might argue that they deserve worship more than the gods who usurped them. Without their efforts, there would be no mortal realm. No time or history. Nothing but endless chaos. As such, it is easy to understand why some mortals find themselves turning away from the heavens and searching elsewhere to place their faith. Too often, though, mortals with evil beliefs, deviant interests, and other less-admirable qualities turn to the primordials only in search of the power and chaos that is their legacy. For every well-intentioned wisdom seeker who communes with the likes of Sunnis or Ben-hadar, a vile arsonist burns homes in the name of Imix, even as a foul cultist of Olhydra drowns the young as sacrifices to that mercurial mistress.

Serving a Patron

The surest route to accessing elemental magic is to serve an elemental patron. In this case, service is not the same as worshiping a deity. The primordials are distant masters. They have little interest in—or awareness of—the drama unfolding in the world. Some primordials are too vast to consider the minuscule specks roaming across the surface of creation. Others pass the long centuries slumbering in vaults buried deep in the Elemental Chaos, or are otherwise prevented from acting by the adamantine shackles that bind them in place and diminish their power.

A freshly summoned earth elemental tears free from the ground in the center of a ritual circle

Instead of dealing with your primordial patron on a personal level, you work through proxies who act on the primordial's behalf. These lesser powers can be anything from genies to slaads, elementals, or spirits touched by elemental power. The proxies receive your patron's dreams or carry messages from your primordial's dark prison, offering guidance or instruction in accordance with the proxy's interpretation. You must trust that the agent acts in your best interest and in the interest of the being you serve.

Many who worship the primordials convene with their proxies only infrequently, and you might need to draw your own conclusions regarding your master's plans for you. As a result, some followers of otherwise peaceful or beneficent primordials are led to commit terrible acts in their names, even as others do good works on behalf of a malicious patron. Serving an elemental patron has no specific requirements or prerequisites. The greater the access to the Elemental Chaos, the more power these patrons provide as reflected in your theme, class, and other mechanical options.

The Primordials

The primordials described in this section represent a small selection of the major known primordials that an adventurer might choose as a patron. As with the primal spirits in the natural world, the primordial powers are open to expansion, and DMs should feel free to add new primordials important to their individual campaigns. Likewise, a player might suggest a new primordial to best fit a character's selection of class features and abilities.

Elemental Princes

To many mortal minds, even those steeped in religious lore and ancient history, the primordial host consists of nothing but figures vast and terrible—violent, warlike beings whose role in creation has ended and who now remain hidden away in the deepest recesses of the Elemental Chaos, wrapped in chains, sealed in inescapable vaults. They evoke fear and misgivings about what calamities they might bring about if freed—yet as dangerous as these beings might be, to conceive of them as an extended family is a foolish simplification. It does not account for the tangled alliances and grudges that pervade these ancient elemental powers and persist to this day despite their status as prisoners, exiles, and dormant monstrosities.

One group, known as the archomentals, is often included in the primordials' ranks but stands apart from the others in many ways. Some lore suggests that these figures played little or no part in the world's creation and arose at some point afterward. The archomentals might have been the first servants crafted by the primordials, infused with such chaotic power that they held sway over all other elemental beings beneath them.

Regardless of their origin, the archomentals have only grown in power since the end of the Dawn War, and today they exert influence in the mortal world. Most mortals refer to these entities as the elemental princes. The evil princes Imix, Ogrémoch, Yan-C-Bin, and Olhydra, among others, form a wicked pantheon of sorts, gathering followers and servants from across the planes for some dark and despicable end.

Countering their depredations is the group of archomentals known as the princes of elemental good. These include Ben-hadar, Chan, Sunnis, Zaaman Rul, and more. Although they are characterized as good, their virtue stems from their opposition to their evil counterparts and not from any moral code. If these entities have good intentions, they express them on behalf of the elemental creatures that dwell in their realms.

JIM NELSON

The good archomentals, for the most part, opposed the Dawn War and either fought alongside the gods or abstained from the conflict. Their refusal to participate ultimately enabled them to retain their freedom, because the deities did not subject them to the fate of their defeated kin. But that freedom comes at a price—the good archomentals are the objects of scorn and hatred from the primordials that are bound or locked away. As a result, the princes of elemental good sequester themselves in great fortresses, daring not to stray too far from their realms lest they face reprisals from the cultists and elemental creatures that are still loyal to the dead, dormant, or otherwise imprisoned primordial powers.

Ben-hadar

Of all the good archomentals, Ben-hadar, the Valorous Tempest, called Prince of the Emerald Tide and Coral Lord, has withdrawn the most and remains cloistered in his fabulous coral palace beneath the Elemental Chaos's briny sea.

Owing to his arrogance and self-absorption, Ben-hadar is seldom stirred from his constant brooding. Only if some threat from beyond his realm imperils those who live under his rule will he stir from his throne. Even then, his time beyond his stronghold's walls is brief—long enough to hurl tidal waves and whirlpools against the invaders until nothing remains but corpses—before he swims back to his palace.

Ben-hadar's self-imposed isolation wins him few friends in the Elemental Chaos. The Coral Lord cares for nothing beyond what happens in his realm, and thus both Chan and Zaaman Rul despise him for his perceived reticence. Ben-hadar's introspective tendencies run so deep that he has abandoned the ancient struggles against his malicious counterpart, Olhydra, and the two have not clashed in centuries.

The Valorous Tempest shapes his watery body into a towering humanoid form. Ben-hadar's palace lurks in a hidden recess in the Coral Reef of Ssegurgass. Water elementals and other servant creatures safeguard the labyrinthine tunnels leading to the sumptuous chambers within, deny entry to all petitioners. The archomental has no time for mortals or their plight and has instructed his servants to turn away anyone seeking an audience.

Chan

Chan is the patron of calm breezes, gentle sounds, and those elementals that reject the Abyss's corrupting influence. Although she is described in peaceful terms, the Silent One can become the harshest wind, the howling tornado, or the unrelenting tempest if she is angered, as Ben-hadar knows all too well.

Unlike the other archomentals, Chan has not made a prison for herself in her realm and frequently travels the Elemental Chaos with a legion of djinns, aerial servants, and mephits in tow, always watching for signs of her nemesis, Yan-C-Bin—she has made it her purpose to check the advances and efforts of the elemental prince at every turn. She does this with caution, for if she acts too aggressively and openly, she could invite the same attention from her foe.

When not flying through the plane's stormy skies, Chan breezes through the seemingly endless corridors of her Palace of Unseen Contemplation, a floating glass stronghold that drifts among the clouds. Since her realm is not fixed and instead moves across the plane, she employs numerous djinns and other creatures of elemental air to patrol the vicinity for miles around. In ages past, wars between her and other primordials have brought ruin to many of the delicate spires and minarets that adorn her palace—damage requiring great magic to repair. As much as she fears for her holdings, she believes it is her purpose to prevent the Elder Elemental Eye from gaining power and thus focuses her attention on battling the evil archomentals—in particular Yan-C-Bin, her evil counterpart in the province of elemental air. For this same reason, Chan has an ongoing feud with Ben-hadar, for she cannot understand his reluctance to lend aid to such a noble cause.

Chan does not have a physical, visible form. Her body, such as it is, consists of gently swirling breezes. When she needs to interact with another creature, she lets the winds carry her words or, rarely, she gathers and condenses moisture in the air until she resembles an undulating cloud.

Cryonax

For all the uproar they foment and represent, for all the shows of force that one visits upon another, most of the elemental princes cancel each other out. Although the threat that any one of them presents to the world is great, the archomentals check each other, the good containing the evil, the evil pushing back against the good, so even as one gains power and influence, the others rally to send the ambitious peer toppling once more.

This balance does not apply to the "fifth" prince of elemental evil. No directly opposing force exists to counteract his evil, and as a result he is ever so slowly succeeding in the fight to break free from his imprisonment. Cryonax, the Blizzard King, is a tentacled horror shackled to a glacier that flows down from the jagged mountains known as the Teeth of Lormoch. He claims dominion over elemental cold and all creatures associated with ice, snow, and freezing temperatures. The adamantine chains that hold him strain against his thrashing, and the hordes of elementals and ice archons that attend him constantly work to loosen the bindings so their master will be free once more.

Cryonax is an enormous, bestial monstrosity, a fur-covered thing similar in appearance to a yeti, but with muscular tentacles in place of arms. As the bindings on him have grown weaker, the terrain around his prison has fissured and cracked, releasing plumes of absolute cold that can freeze a mortal in an instant.

Murky, conflicting tales suggest many origins for the Blizzard King. Some claim he was the last horror whelped by the Elder Elemental Eye. Others say Cryonax was a demon lord who led an army out from the Abyss to conquer the Elemental Chaos. Some have even claimed he is none other than Khala, the one-time goddess of winter, not dead but cast down to the Plane Below to languish for her wickedness. Whatever the case, Cryonax is a renegade archomental who takes part in none of his peers' infighting and instead sets his sights higher, to become free and conquer not just the Elemental Chaos, but all of creation.

Imix

Several archomentals emerged in the ages following the Dawn War, only to be twisted toward darkness by the Elder Elemental Eye and the bubbling wickedness spilling out from the Abyss. Other princes of elemental evil had a hand in the world's creation, had lent power and will toward the great work. Imix is one such. He stands apart from the corrupted princes, for this ancient power was among the first to emerge from the chaos at time's beginning, a malevolent force for destruction and death whose hatred blazes like a star in the Plane Below.

Imix, called the Eternal Flame, arose before mankind was even a dream. Unlike the other primordials, evil intent darkened his spirit from the start. Considered father to the salamanders, prince of the efreets, and creator of many of the terrible, fiery creations at large in the Elemental Chaos, he needed no convincing to join forces with the Elder Elemental Eye and spread elemental influence into the Material Plane. Imix ultimately met defeat and imprisonment for his part in the war against the gods, and ever since the end of the Dawn War he has been trapped in a volcano's fiery heart, unable to escape the bubbling magma and noxious fumes confining him.

Imprisonment has not prevented the Eternal Flame from continuing his plots—it has in fact given him time to set in motion even more sinister efforts. Imix has made great strides in corrupting mortals and drawing them into his cults. His fire temples command power and respect from the other elemental cults. Furthermore, fire elementals still venerate and fear the Fire Lord, unwilling to break with him lest he destroy them as he has countless others.

In recent years, Imix's offspring Zaaman Rul, whom the Eternal Flame sired with the late Bristia Pel, princess of elemental fire, raised an army and laid siege against Imix's prison with the intent of destroying his father. Imix proved more powerful, his armies crushed the rebels, and those spared from the conflagration became slaves to Imix's dark will. Only Zaaman Rul escaped to lick his wounds.

Imix wears many forms. Normally, he appears an enormous column of flame, a great fiery pillar that twists and writhes as if a serpent. When interacting with mortals, he coalesces the flames into a humanoid shape and demands that petitioners bow before him. Those who do not must contend with the fiery sword he forms from his own essence. Imix despises the other elemental princes, and though his command over fire creatures seems complete, he is not content. He has turned his fiery eye toward Olhydra, and those closest to him whisper that he intends to capture her and use her essence to help free himself from his prison.

Ogrémoch

Long before the Dawn War broke out, Ogrémoch terrorized the Elemental Chaos. In the early days of creation, the Lord of the Black Earth erupted from his mountain lair and rumbled across the shifting landscape. He was one of the principal powers who formed the world, lending much of himself and his energy toward shaping the high mountains and binding the unformed substance into its present shape. Ogrémoch had no love for the world, but he saw it as his own. He would not allow the gods to steal what he was rightfully his. And so, when war broke out, the Stone Tyrant was one of the first to go to battle.

At some point during the Dawn War, Ogrémoch learned of a forgotten and ancient primordial known as the Elder Elemental Eye. It was said this being was the first and mightiest, and the entity had been sealed away in the deepest pits, a realm called Tartarus, to languish for eternity. Other primordials had sworn service to the exiled Eye and, though Ogrémoch did not trust these other self-styled elemental princes, he believed the Elder Elemental Eye was the best hope for turning the tide in the war. By pledging fealty to the power, the primordial saw his worst traits magnified, and whatever good might have been in him was scourged away until only hunger and wickedness remained.

In the Dawn War's final days, Ogrémoch became so unstable and dangerous that the other primordials shunned him. He had turned against his allies in rage-fueled outbursts, doing as much to thwart the elemental cause as the gods themselves. Ogrémoch, as mighty as he was, could not stand against the combined forces of the gods and the primordials that had turned against him. Moradin forged a set of unbreakable chains and used them to shackle Ogrémoch to a flat-topped mountain, never to trouble the world again. Still, Ogrémoch's confinement doesn't prevent him from affecting the mortal world. Cults dedicated to him toil to free both him and the Elder Elemental Eye, which holds the promise of absolute power.

The Lord of Black Earth appears as an enormous human-shaped aggregate of rock, crystal, sand, and earth. He strains against his chains, his rumbling voice almost drowning out the shrieking winds that whip around him ceaselessly. As much as he struggles, he cannot be free. His confinement, however, does not prevent the elemental prince from influencing his realm and attracting mortal followers in the natural world. Cultists sworn to earth temples work to loose the Elder Elemental Eye from its prison in the hope that their own master, the Stone Tyrant, will also become free and lead them to glory.

Olhydra

The Princess of Elemental Water, before her own imprisonment, attracted many followers in the mortal world and throughout the Elemental Chaos. A fickle, violent entity, she embodied terrible storms lashing the shores and tidal waves dashing ships onto the rocks. Water-dwelling creatures came to worship her out of fear, lest they invite her wrath. They raised idols and made sacrifices, all for the purpose of diverting her fell attention away from them.

As terrible a figure as she once was, her time has almost completely passed. Melora, having smote her, claimed her portfolio and now rules the seas in her stead.

Confined to her great coral castle, uprooted and discarded in a trench beneath one of the endless oceans spreading across the Elemental Chaos, Olhydra has only water elementals for company. She swims through the halls of her decaying fortress, searching for and never finding a way out. Melora sealed every exit with living coral so that the elemental princess would never escape.

As with other elemental princes, although her prison contains Olhydra's physical form, her essence still stretches up and out from the trench, twisting elemental creatures toward chaos and evil. Many mortal races still make sacrifices in her name, fearing her wrath if they fail to uphold the ancient traditions. As well, cultists dedicated to the Elder Elemental Eye often gravitate toward the princess, establishing temples in her honor to earn her protection in the event that the ancient primordial somehow becomes free. Those loyal to Olhydra plot and scheme against Imix's fire temples, and conflict between these factions has been ongoing for centuries.

Before her fall, Olhydra was the most comely of the primordial powers. Able to assume any form she wished, she would bend hearts and minds with a seductive appearance or shatter sanity with a horrible forms if she became angered. Her long confinement has left her much reduced, and now she manifests as a current or a large wave, a crashing, malevolent force with no purpose other than to destroy.

Sunnis

The archomental named Sunnis, often called the True Stone, rules an underground principality from within a great cavern called the Sandfall. The place takes its name from the constant streams of sand that spill down from cracks in the ceiling overhead.

Where Ben-hadar broods and Chan plots, Sunnis regards her role to be protector and champion of earth creatures, and thus she lends aid to any and all who pay her fealty. In the tangled corridors that define her realm, one can find elemental earth creatures of all shapes and sizes, living and working in the harmony fostered by the True Stone.

Sunnis maintains a humanoid form, appearing as a tall, muscular woman carved from stone. Her outgoing nature and widespread influence in the Elemental Chaos are the reasons why she is one of the few entities the gods respect. Many deities work with Sunnis to maintain the peace, and they enlist her aid to contend with the cosmic threats of which mortals remain unaware. Sunnis's influence extends beyond the Elemental Chaos as well. She respects the primal ban that bars her from taking a direct hand in mortal affairs, but she had many champions in the natural world, lending each elemental power in exchange for representing her interests. It should come to no surprise that some races include Sunnis in their prayers to the gods, a rite especially prevalent among some dwarves, galeb duhrs, and other earth-dwelling races.

The True Stone's efforts in the natural world and the Elemental Chaos serve a greater purpose. Like her archomental counterparts, Sunnis swore long ago to end the scourge embodied by Ogrémoch. Whispers abound that she has prepared some great prison for her rival, a pit so deep that the elemental prince will never escape. Eventually, Sunnis will hatch her plot to lure her foe to the site of his doom, and once that is accomplished, she plans to hurl the monster into the black depths and seal away her nemesis for all time.

Ogrémoch, being likewise a prince of elemental earth, has little to fear from these designs, yet he uses caution when dealing with his nemesis. Wars between his forces and those sworn to the True Stone erupt across the Elemental Chaos often, and the conflict has on occasion spilled into the natural realm, as evidenced by the many abandoned, blood-stained earth temples across the world.

Yan-C-Bin

Yan-C-Bin, the prince of elemental air, also known as the Storm Born and the Howling Hatred, was the first of the princes of elemental evil to learn of the Elder Elemental Eye. Yan-C-Bin has always valued secrets, and no one in the Elemental Chaos knows more about the plane and its inhabitants than he does. After learning of the Eye, Yan-C-Bin convinced other primordials, including Olhydra and Imix, to join forces and serve that power in the hope of breaking the gods, gaining the world for themselves, and crushing the other primordials that had gained ascendancy during and after the world's creation. Through it all, Yan-C-Bin remained a hidden, secret partner, whispers carried on gentle zephyrs to tempt others to wickedness and evil, until the other elemental princes became fully in the dark master's thrall.

Yan-C-Bin's subtle influence did not escape the gods when they settled accounts after the Dawn War, and the Poison Wind found himself sealed inside a palace made of solidified air. Because his prison is mobile, Yan-C-Bin can command the corrupted greater air elementals tethered to his stronghold to drag it across the skies so the elemental prince can observe as he always has.

His palace keeps him from running amok, but Yan-C-Bin remains an active and malevolent power. Rather than take a direct hand, he relies on air elementals, archons, and other creatures to act on his behalf. These agents spy on other elementals and bring their secrets to the great palace, feeding the prince a steady diet of rumor and fact, secrets and lies. Yan-C-Bin is so knowledgeable that many petition the elemental prince for lore, a commodity he is always willing to offer in exchange for service, aid, or information.

No one trusts Yan-C-Bin. Other primordials avoid him. The greatest direct threat to Yan-C-Bin comes from his archrival and chief foe, the good archomental Chan. The two have never met, never clashed in battle, yet they wage a secret war of information and sabotage. Chan, who is free to go wherever she wishes, cannot count her mobility as an asset, since Yan-C-Bin's servants are everywhere, always watching and ready to share their findings with their master. Nothing Chan does goes without Yan-C-Bin's knowledge, and his servants stand ready to thwart her every design.

Zaaman Rul

Elemental lore posits that Imix, the Fire Lord, sired Zaaman Rul in a tryst with the princess of everlasting flame, Bristia Pel, who was destroyed in the battle that led to the defeat and imprisonment of the Queen of Chaos. If the tales are true, Zaaman Rul inherited his mother's virtue and hatred for Imix and has long sought to avenge her death by ending the life of his itinerant father. He assembled a great host of azers, salamanders, and fire elementals, and prepared to lead his army to lay siege against Imix's fortress.

Youthful exuberance and no small amount of arrogance caused Zaaman Rul to underestimate his father's strength, and so he found his forces shattered, scattered, and driven away. The soldiers of Zaaman

Rul that were captured by Imix's forces were soon twisted toward darkness, and Zaaman Rul's grand vision turned to ashes. Since his disastrous attempt to overthrow Imix, Zaaman Rul has remained in hiding, biding his time until he can renew the war against his father.

Zaaman Rul was once a mere fire elemental, yet the primordial essence passed down from his father and his mother helped him become more than he began as. He stands over ten feet tall and has crimson skin and long black hair, giving him an infernal, almost devilish appearance. Like his father, he can conjure a fiery sword from his essence, the blade burning so hot that it can scorch even creatures made from elemental flame. As powerful as he is, his early defeat and his youth place him at the bottom of the hierarchy of the princes of elemental good, forcing him to rely on the benevolence of his peers and those deities that are friendly to his cause.

Bound Primordials

When most natives of the mortal world think about primordials, what comes to mind are entities that they believe to be sealed away, never again to ravage the natural realm.

Whether "sealed away" is accurate or not, the deities have certainly taken pains to imprison or neutralize each bound primordial in a unique and (they hope) effective fashion. Five of the more distinctive stories of these entities are provided here.

Balcoth, the Groaning King

At the end of the Dawn War, the gods showed no mercy. Any primordial that fought against them met a bitter end—sealed away, maimed, or shackled with chains that can never be sundered. Balcoth, called the Groaning King, is free to roam the Elemental Chaos. Yet he does so broken, his head locked away in a secure vault in the natural world while his body rages in a fruitless search to reunite with it. Balcoth earned this fate by plotting against the gods, lending aid to his allies from behind the scenes, and arming his servants with dread magic devised by his own wicked imagination.

Elemental power flows from the stump of Balcoth's neck—raw chaos and magic spilling out for anyone to claim. Balcoth's head plots revenge for the day when it reunites with his body. He thus allows mortals to draw power from his remains in the hope of increasing his presence in the world. Most cults dedicated to the Groaning King share his madness and evil, even as a few cunning souls exploit the primordial, stealing power to use as they wish. Cultists communicate with Balcoth by casting the severed heads of enemies into bonfires.

Bryakus, the Many-Headed One

One of the most monstrous primordials is Bryakus the Many-Headed, whose spilled blood spawned the first hydras. A vicious and terrible foe of the gods in the Dawn War, Bryakus was named the Great Maw, his appetite never slaked no matter how many angels he devoured. Kord defeated him in a mighty battle, delivering what should have been a killing blow. However, Bryakus thrashed about to spray his ichor down upon the world. The more the primordial fought, the more Kord was moved to strike, so that blow after blow rained down until only an unrecognizable mess remained.

Despite the appalling injuries he endured, Bryakus survived, each piece of sundered flesh and bone imbued with his hatred. Since his fall, his servants have roamed the planes for his remains, reconstructing their master in some deep place where none can interfere with their task. The degree to which Kord mutilated the Many-Headed One is a testament to how many centuries his cultists have sought in vain to reclaim him, with no end in sight. As long as Bryakus remains in this wretched state, he has no say in how the elemental power he offers is used.

Castanamir, the Shattered Khan

Castanamir, the Shattered Khan, was a brilliant general and tactician in the Dawn War, whose cunning for battle allowed the elemental hordes to gain ground in the Astral Sea. His success lured Io into

ELEMENTAL VIEWPOINT: DRUNDZHAR, DWARF CULTIST

You call me a madman? You have no idea what you are speaking of, you fools. Long ago the Lord of the Black Earth was betrayed and bound by godlings and faithless allies, but the day is coming when that ancient treachery will be punished—and I will be there to see it! Great will be the rewards for those who gave mighty Ogrémoch their allegiance in the years of his wrongful imprisonment. The Lord of the Black Earth will raise me up as a king over all this land! All of you who have mocked and despised me, turning away from the true power of the earth, I will see to it that you receive the justice you so richly deserve. I will throw down mountainsides and shatter cities in my master's name! And who will you call a madman then?

the war, for even that arrogant god could not sit on the sidelines as his fellow deities were slaughtered. The great dragon emerged from his dominion to end Castanamir's threat, snatching up the primordial in his great maw, flinging him down to the natural world, and watching as he fell to the ocean and moved no more.

The storm giants and titans still pay homage to Castanamir, though the primordial has been silent since his fall. Mortals seeking power over thunder and lightning can prove their worth to the primordial by petitioning the storm titan who resides on the island bearing Castanamir's name. This island is known as the center of fierce storms that have littered the surrounding seabed with ships. Some even claim that the island is Castanamir's still-living remains.

Heur-Ket, the Storm Unabated

The changes the gods made to the world and its people invited Heur-Ket's wrath, drawing the Storm Unabated from his great thunderhead castle. The mighty primordial launched himself against the gods and their armies, destroying and scattering many. Then Heur-Ket vanished during a misguided attempt to storm Hestavar alone, defeated by the gods Erathis, Ioun, and Pelor in a brutal offensive.

Since that day, whispers in the Bright City have suggested that the three gods chained the primordial in this astral dominion to neutralize his destructive might for eternity. Despite protestations to the contrary by the angelic minister who governs the city, such rumors persist.

Imprisoned by the combined might of three gods and their astral power, Heur-Ket is now little more than mindless rage—an impotent tempest raging on the outer bounds of Hestavar. The more he fights to break free, the tighter the gods' chains become. His cults have all but vanished in the world, and the storm titans who once worshiped him have turned their devotion to other powers instead. Still, cunning practitioners of elemental magic understand the power that remains to be coaxed from this primordial, and those seeking dominion over lightning and thunder favor him.

Sisanthak and Vorsheen

A mote of fire and ice drifts through the Astral Sea, a battleground for the twin primordials Sisanthak and Vorsheen. Lured here by the gods during the Dawn War, these two forces are caught in an eternal struggle for dominance over the mote, called Frostburn. Sisanthak the Endless Winter plots his rival's downfall, forging ice archons by the thousands as the tempestuous Vorsheen spawns fire archons to fight against them. The two forces are evenly matched, their battle raging for longer than memory and set to continue unabated for thousands of years more.

Despite their obvious hatred for each other, the conflict between Sisanthak and Vorsheen unites them in a curious way. Their presence creates a planar anomaly capable of generating intense elemental energy. Each primordial uses this energy to create archon armies whose destruction fuels the orb, and thus perpetuates it.

Neither primordial is aware of how long they have fought, or that the Dawn War is long over. So inextricably linked are Sisanthak and Vorsheen that their mortal followers honor them together as a duality—light and dark, fire and ice, perpetual conflict. The primordials know that they cannot risk giving ground by diverting attention from their struggle, so they depend on their archons to deal with mortal petitioners and servants.

Free Primordials

For one reason or another, a small number of primordials were not subjected to the revenge of the deities at the end of the Dawn War. The reasons why they remain unfettered are as varied as the entities themselves.

Alu Kahn Sang, the Wind of Destruction

Raging across the Elemental Chaos is a continent-sized dust storm known as the Wind of Destruction. A great and terrifying cloud of shrieking winds and flying grit, the storm is capable of stripping flesh from bone in seconds. But this is no mere environmental effect. The Wind of Destruction is Alu Kahn Sang, a primordial of incalculable power and madness who craves carnage and violence.

Alu Kahn Sang survived the Dawn War, though not through any effort or bravery on his part. In madness, he smashed down the gates of the heavens to flood the Astral Sea with his destructive vastness. Only the combined effort of Khala and her son Kord turned the storm, flinging it back to the Elemental Chaos. Before Alu Kahn Sang could recover, the gods won the war and the primordials were vanquished.

One of the rare primordials still free and at large in the Elemental Chaos, Alu Kahn Sang craves vengeance against the gods and lures elementals of all kinds to his cause. Such service is typically short-lived, since the Wind of Destruction destroys any who displease him.

This primordial has little interest in mortals or their troubles, though he will sometimes speak through shardstorm vortexes. Alu Kahn Sang masters the provinces of air and earth, and mortals hungry for elemental power are sometimes lured to serve him despite his fearsome aspect. Those drawing power from the Wind of Destruction are violent and unpredictable, given to ferocious outbursts with little provocation.

Unlike most primordials, Ty-h'kadi remains a force to be reckoned with in the world

Iktha-Lau, the Ever Empty

The primordials did more than simply create the world. They hung it in space and set it in motion alongside the other celestial bodies that track across the heavens. The darkness of the void and the endless night surrounding the world is the realm of Iktha-Lau the Ever Empty, primordial of nothingness. It fell to her to clear away the raw chaos that made room for creation, and she resides still in the emptiness that is her legacy. An impassive observer, she witnesses time's passage from afar, her frozen heart unconcerned with and unmoved by the struggles she observes.

Iktha-Lau is a remote power, and in her vastness of utter cold dwell the stars and the terrible creatures that take their shape. Mortals drawing on her power do so without attracting her notice, and she never sends messengers to deal with her servants. She cares nothing for her followers, leaving them to divine her intentions through their observations of the night sky.

Ty-h'kadi, Prince of Thunder and Lightning

The lord of the storm elementals is a violent and unpredictable primordial—a great, fickle monstrosity who swings between subtle rumbling and destructive outburst with little warning. If not for the efforts of Chan, who tempers Ty-h'kadi's anger, the Prince of Thunder and Lightning would have lost all control long ago. It was Chan who lured Ty-h'kadi from the Astral Sea in the Dawn War's waning days, thus sparing him from almost certain destruction.

Since Heur-Ket's defeat and disappearance, the Prince of Thunder and Lightning has grown stronger. His ascendancy has made him more aggressive concerning developments in the Elemental Chaos, and he resents the gods' influence in the natural world. From time to time, his anger gets the better of him, requiring Chan to engage him in battle to once more bring him under control.

Ty-h'kadi employs storm archons as soldiers and messengers, and mortals wishing to commune with his power speak through them. The primordial sometimes rails against the primal ban. At such times, violent storms erupt in the skies of the world, flashing green lightning and unleashing deafening thunder.

DAVE ALLSOP

Roster of Known Primordials

No one knows for certain how many primordials exist. Hundreds were spawned in the beginning of the cosmos, and many were slain in the Dawn War long before any tale of their names or deeds was recorded in the lore of mortals. Even the weakest primordials are monsters of terrible destructive power, capable of crushing all but the mightiest mortal heroes and laying waste to whole kingdoms. The greatest primordials are so strong that even the gods fear them.

The list presented here includes many primordials known primarily from their presence in the world of Abeir-Toril, and a couple found on the desert world of Athas. The Dawn War was a battle with many fronts, and Abeir-Toril and Athas suffered in the war of gods and primordials just as many other mortal worlds did. Whether these Abeiran (or Athasian) primordials are known in worlds beyond their home worlds is questionable; the existence of multiple primordials with similar natures and interests suggests that (unlike some gods) these beings are naturally concentrated or anchored to physical existence in one specific corner of the multiverse, and do not appear in multiple worlds.

Many primordials are categorized as archomentals—beings that rule vast elemental domains and command the allegiance of many lesser creatures. This group includes the elemental princes, detailed earlier in this section. Some primordials are revered as deities by mortals and are counted as members of pantheons. Even though these entities are not divine in nature, they bestow elemental powers on their priests and are venerated by hosts of mortal followers. Primordials that have been wholly transformed or consumed by the Abyss are not included in this list. Creatures such as Demogorgon, Orcus, and Baphomet are more properly described as demon lords, not primordials.

Elemental Power in Your Game

The themes, class options, and character options (including feats and paragon paths) introduced in the following chapters represent a significant expansion to the scope of your Dungeons & Dragons game. If you are a player, ask your Dungeon Master to give some thought to introducing these new options.

In many campaigns, players can re-create characters or introduce new ones that make use of the material in this book. However, the sudden prominence of a new power source can push a campaign in new and unexpected directions. Even with elemental power already established in the context of the traditional magical power sources, the tone of a campaign can change when the party's fighter suddenly exhibits the ability to control elemental fire through the firecrafter theme, or if a wizard character begins employing elemental spells. You and your DM might come up with a way to explain why the campaign world has changed. Alternatively, you can assume that the world was always this way, then find reasons why such abilities and paths have previously gone unseen and unused.

With that in mind, here are a few methods that can be used to introduce elemental power into the ongoing story of a campaign, at the same time that characters gain access to the new classes and options.

The Planar Wanderer

If you want to introduce a new character making use of the materials in this book, that individual could be a single exceptional wanderer from the elemental realms. Many Dungeons & Dragons characters hail from exotic lands or have unique origins, and the appearance of a githzerai monk with elemental powers or a human fire elementalist associated with the Ninth Bastion can be part of that. This option is the simplest way to integrate elemental power into your game.

The planar wanderer might be a character who combines an elemental theme such as moteborn or janissary (see chapter 2) with a more ordinary choice of race and class. Alternatively, he or she could be a member of a race native to the Elemental Chaos, such as a githzerai or a genasi. In either case, the character has left the Elemental Chaos behind to take up adventuring in the mortal world. A planar wanderer offers interesting roleplaying possibilities, since he or she will be unfamiliar with the most mundane aspects of the natural world, including commonly encountered monsters, weather that changes while the landscape stays the same, and races rarely found in the Elemental Chaos.

As a variant on this idea, an elemental-themed character might come from a distant land where elemental power is more widely known and studied than it is in the rest of the world. For example, a sha'ir might seem exotic in a setting where arcane magic is traditionally controlled by wizard orders or closely associated with eladrin traditions. The choice to play such a character is not that different from introducing a ninja, a drow, or any other character not normally found among the peoples and cultures of the campaign. The reception such a character might receive could include suspicion, puzzlement, open hostility, awe, or well-meaning ignorance.

Chosen Agents

Elemental entities are often limited in their ability to affect events in the world. When they discern the need to act in the mortal realms, such creatures choose agents to serve as their proxies. Many of these entities—whether mad primordials, princes of elemental evil, or demon lords seeking to meddle in worldly affairs—are less than friendly to the mortal races. Others are less malevolent. For example, a djinn lord might seek out a warlock to offer the power of an elemental pact, while a titan might abide by an ancient alliance and aid a dwarf hero of a particular clan or house. Not all characters in the party need to be approached to serve as agents at the same time, or by the same potential patron.

As a champion or agent of an elemental power, a character might be conscripted to perform specific tasks. However, as with any characters who serve a pact, an order, or an organization, such agents are free to use their talents for whatever purpose they wish. A warlock with an elemental pact might go on adventures that have nothing to do with his or her patron, whose elemental power is simply a tool to be used and improved on. However, it is likely that a hero singled out to serve as an elemental champion will always be engaged in advancing a patron's designs—even if the character doesn't fully understand what those designs might be.

Secret Lore

During the course of their adventures in the world, the heroes might stumble across secret lore as a means of opening up new options of elemental power. This knowledge could take many forms, from a great tome of elemental spells to a hidden monastery that teaches a style of martial arts not known anywhere else. A secretive cabal of magical knowledge might pass down its traditions only to a few chosen successors. A cleric or paladin order might have been created in the name of defending the world against elemental assault. All you (or, more likely, your DM) need to do is decide who or what holds the secret of elemental magic, why they keep this information secret, and what their ultimate goal or purpose is.

The adventurers might discover this store of long-hidden knowledge in the course of traveling through strange lands, or by recovering a tome or an artifact from a treasure hoard. Alternatively, they might be chosen by the initiates of a hidden group to serve as new recruits in a centuries-long struggle against elemental evil.

Not all secret lore lies in the hands of those with good intentions, and it is possible that the heroes could stumble onto these secrets when they confront those who wield elemental power for evil purposes. For example, a party challenging the fourfold sects of the Temple of Elemental Evil could easily discover how to master elemental power by studying the treatises and writings of their enemies.

Planar Conjunction

The planes are not locked to each other in the same unchanging relationship. Over time, variations in the weave of reality draw the natural world closer to or farther from the planes surrounding it, or cause different aspects of a planar relationship to surface or subside. Elemental rifts and portals wax and wane with the never-ending flux of the world's connections to the Elemental Chaos. In this model of planar relations, the world is now emerging from a period of elemental dormancy stretching back millennia. The planes are moving back into full alignment, and for the first time in ages, elemental creatures and phenomena threaten the world.

Just as the rising tide of elemental influence is reopening old portals and bringing more elemental creatures across the planar boundaries, so too are forgotten magical traditions and dormant elemental bloodlines returning to prominence. A sorcerer might find that arcane incantations and elaborate gestures are no longer needed to channel elemental power, with such energy able to be called by any sufficient exertion of will. Characters might discover that they suddenly have the wherewithal to command fire, wind, stone, or water, remembering a forgotten heritage or discovering new capabilities granted by the touch of the Plane Below.

Elemental Incursion

Not all planar conjunctions are accidental. In this scenario, the heroes' homeland becomes a battleground when some great elemental threat—a plague of slaads, an invading tribe of giants, a demon horde, or an army of archons—takes advantage of favorable connections between the planes and launches a major attack against the natural world. This scenario might easily combine several of the previous options for introducing elemental power to a campaign. The heroes might become allies of an old order of elemental knights or wizards whose members have been guarding against this evil day. Winning the battle might necessitate a desperate adventure into the heart of the Elemental Chaos to strike at the source of the trouble. The conditions that make the incursion possible might also awaken the potential for elemental power in the heroes fighting against it.

An elemental incursion can serve as the basis for a single adventure, a series of linked adventures, or an entire campaign. At the epic level, the heroes might have to confront a mighty elemental power such as a noble efreet, a titan, or a primordial on the verge of escaping from its ancient chains.

Elemental Adventures

You can introduce elemental power as a theme of your campaign by creating an adventure that sends the heroes into the Elemental Chaos. Heroes of the mortal world who are exposed to the magic and wonder of the elemental realms might naturally learn a new trick or two. Some of the character themes in this book (earthforger, firecrafter, ironwrought, watershaper, and windlord) directly bestow elemental abilities, representing natural talents and affinities possessed by such characters when they first venture into the Elemental Chaos.

Instead of setting up a single adventure in an elemental locale, the DM might instead anchor the campaign in the Elemental Chaos for an extended period. The Plane Below presents boundless opportunities for long-term campaigning. The heroes can build their careers around defending an elemental realm such as Zerthadlun or the Ninth Bastion. They can plunder the lost towers and hidden strongholds littering the plane, or they might explore fantastic sites such as the City of Brass. Naturally, the longer the characters remain in the Elemental Chaos and the more locales they visit, the greater their opportunities to find mentors or lore that can lead them to the mastery of elemental magic.

CHAPTER 2

Character Themes

THIS CHAPTER presents a selection of themes related to elemental magic and the Elemental Chaos. A theme is a calling, vocation, or archetype you can use to add further detail and options to your character. Your theme joins your class and race in helping you to realize your adventurer's identity. You might be a human slayer, but you could also be a windlord, an earthforger, or a moteborn. Most themes are available to members of any class or race, so you can choose the theme that best fits your imagination.

Each theme contains story elements you might adopt to flesh out your character's background and his or her place in the world. You can work with your Dungeon Master to integrate the character theme you choose into the backdrop of the campaign, whether you select a theme as part of character creation or you want to apply a theme to an existing character at a higher level.

This chapter includes the following sections.

- Choosing a Theme: How themes work and rules for what your character can gain from having one.
- New Themes: Ten character themes for any campaign setting, which are summarized on the following table. Each includes supporting mechanics you can adopt as you gain levels.

| Theme | Description |
|---|---|
| Demon Spawn | One who has demonic ancestry |
| Earthforger | Devotee of elemental earth |
| Elemental Initiate | Monastic student of the elements |
| Firecrafter | Devotee of elemental fire |
| Ironwrought | Devotee of elemental metal |
| Janissary | Servant of powerful genies |
| Moteborn | Native of an elemental realm |
| Primordial Adept | Priest of a primordial |
| Watershaper | Devotee of elemental water |
| Windlord | Devotee of elemental air |

Choosing a Theme

Your character can have only one theme, which you can choose when you create your character. The theme you select grants the benefits described in this section. You don't have to choose a theme, and you can defer your choice until you reach a higher level. However, themes describe unique backgrounds, origins, and occupations—adopting one at 1st level can help you define your character.

Starting Feature

Each theme includes a feature that you gain when you select the theme.

Additional Features

You gain a theme's additional features whenever you reach the appropriate level. Most themes offer additional features at levels 5 and 10.

Optional Powers

A theme grants access to a range of utility powers (and occasionally attack powers). Add the powers from the theme you choose to those available to you because of your class. Whenever you reach a level at which your class grants a power, you can choose a theme power instead. The theme power must be of the same or lower level than the class power you might have gained. For example, if you attain 6th level as a wizard who has the windlord theme, you can choose a 2nd-level or 6th-level wizard utility power or windlord utility power.

Using Themes to Create Characters

Themes are intended as tools in character creation. The theme you choose helps you to add detail to your character, push beyond the limits of class and race, and expand your customization options. For example, if you're playing a defender, you might choose earthforger to help you lock down more enemies. If you're playing a controller and want to boost your control options, primordial adept could be your best choice.

You can instead use a theme to take your character in a new direction, adopting a story or role your class otherwise doesn't provide. A theme's starting feature can let you contribute in different ways, perhaps letting you take on some defender responsibilities even though you're a striker. For example, as a knight you're a defender, but choosing firecrafter gives you some impressive ranged capabilities.

All of the above advice presumes that you consider theme after you choose a class. However, choosing your theme first might be the better way to realize your character concept. From this decision, you can go on to choose race, class, feats, and so on, reinforcing the idea that began with the theme that appealed to you most.

Regardless of when you choose your character theme, look for ways to incorporate it into your character's background. Your theme might reflect the event that propelled you into your adventuring career. Or it can suggest specialized training you underwent to prepare for the objectives you or someone else set. Perhaps the best way to think of a theme is this: What were you immediately before you became an adventurer? How would you describe yourself to someone else in the game world? A class name isn't necessarily an obvious part of a character's identity—if you see a skilled sword-wielder in leather armor, that person might be a fighter, a rogue, a ranger, or a paladin. A theme, on the other hand, can be something that is obvious to the character and to everyone else.

A few themes in this chapter involve differing ways a character might approach elemental magic. A few have a stronger connection to the Elemental Chaos than normal characters possess. Some even make your character an elemental creature, changing his or her basic nature.

Themes in the Party

Character themes in this book provide story elements that can be unique to your character. Maybe you know secrets that others do not. You might have a goal you keep hidden from your compatriots. Such character aspects are meant to inspire roleplaying, not to set your character against others in your party.

Think about how your character's theme might interact with the themes that the other players choose. Discuss this with them and the DM in the same way that you might talk about what class or role each person is playing in the party. Characters could come from similar backgrounds or the same elemental realm, or similar themes might indicate a like-minded worldview. As you roleplay your theme, make choices that enhance the fun at the table and the cooperative nature of the game.

Gaining Themes at Higher Levels

You can adopt a theme for an existing character at a higher level. Gaining a theme at a higher level might be the consequence of events in the campaign. Several themes included in this chapter are suitable for acquisition at any point in your career. Gaining a theme might be the result of completing a major quest, defeating a powerful elemental or demon, or being exposed to an environmental hazard related to the Elemental Chaos.

Before you choose a theme, consult your Dungeon Master to come up with an explanation and method for gaining your theme. The DM might make the theme a reward of some sort. You might have to travel to the Elemental Chaos or seek out a region where the plane threatens to breach the natural world. Then again, the DM might let you take the theme without any requirements.

Changing Themes

Although a theme can last throughout your character's career, circumstances might arise in which it makes sense for your theme to change. You could begin your career as a watershaper and later find yourself working for Zaaman Rul, a fiery primordial. You might then abandon the watershaper theme and adopt firecrafter, especially if Zaaman Rul replaces your previous patron.

When you can retrain, you can exchange your theme for another instead of using any other option for retraining. To retrain a theme, however, you must have none of the theme's optional powers, and you must have neither feats nor a paragon path for which the theme is a prerequisite. A paragon path that requires your current theme prevents you from retraining that theme, since paragon paths can't be retrained. But if you have only optional powers or feats that prevent you from retraining your current theme, you can retrain those powers or feats to others that don't require your current theme. Once you have retrained all character elements that require your current theme, you can then retrain your theme at your next retraining opportunity.

More Elemental Themes

The Dark Sun® Campaign Setting introduced character themes to the Dungeons & Dragons game with a selection that reflected certain occupations, callings, and backgrounds. Although those themes were designed for use in that setting, several are appropriate for characters who have strong ties to the Elemental Chaos. The elemental priest, primal guardian, and wasteland nomad themes can all work in other settings with little to no modification.

ELEMENTAL KEYWORD

Elemental energy is available to users of most power sources. Powers gain the elemental keyword only if they draw energy directly from the Plane Below. Since there are a number of different ways to access the Elemental Chaos, the elemental keyword is usually paired with another power source, such as arcane or primal. Characters of the elemental origin have a stronger connection to true elemental power. Many characters of this origin express their heritage through one of the themes in this book.

Demon Spawn

"Am I evil? It's in my blood. But let my actions, rather than my appearance, show you my true nature."

Encounters between demons and mortals end almost always in swift death for the mortals. Demons live to destroy everything they can until they are destroyed themselves. This violent behavior makes it rare for demons to consort with mortals, yet here and there across the planes, one can find mortals who have demonic blood flowing through their veins. Called demon spawn, most such creatures display wild, destructive evil similar to that of their demonic sires.

Unraveling the mystery of how demon spawn come to exist requires some background about how mortal races interact with the Abyss. Lolth instructed her chosen people in demonology ages ago, and her priestesses sometimes call forth demons to sire draegloths with willing initiates. Similar ceremonies might be found in other dark societies. Other kinds of demon spawn descend from incubi. Sages believe that incubi were devils that followed Graz'zt into the Abyss when he sought to conquer its first layer. Despite their new home, these incubi retain their basic nature, and they still trouble the natural world with nocturnal visitations that sometimes result in demon-blooded children. However, because the Abyss changes and corrupts all it touches, the most common way that demon spawn come into existence is through exposure to abyssal energy.

Few demon spawn show evidence of their demonic heritage as soon as they are born. In fact, most look like normal mortal children, visually unremarkable. The transformation might start gradually, first with small horns breaking the skin on the forehead and later vestigial bat wings emerging from the shoulder blades. Demon spawn who conceal or downplay these features can avoid attracting attention or, if they desire, pass as tieflings.

Creating a Demon Spawn

Some demon spawn are little more than ravening monsters that wreak havoc in the world until some hero puts them down. A rare few find ways to control the corrupting influence that consumes them and channel it in constructive ways. Demon spawn are apt warriors, favoring classes that let them engage in hand-to-hand combat. Their unholy heritage makes them unpredictable in battle and, as the fighting rages on, they can lose the ability to distinguish clearly between friend and foe. For this reason, they focus less on defense and more on offense. Few warriors can match the ferocity that a demon spawn barbarian, ranger, or fighter displays.

Starting Feature

Your demonic heritage reveals itself in your flesh and in your wild temper. Horns pierce your brow, and your expression takes on a sinister cast, your thoughts turning to anger and violence. Darkness rules your heart, and it goads you to indulge your evil impulses and to lash out at anyone you can reach.

Benefit: Your origin becomes elemental. For the purpose of effects that relate to creature origin, you are considered to be an elemental. You also gain the demon keyword and are considered to be a demon.

You also gain the demonic frenzy power.

DAVE ALLSOP

Demonic Frenzy Demon Spawn Attack

When your anger breaks free, your claws and teeth lengthen and you can't stop yourself from lashing out.

Encounter ✦ Elemental
No Action Melee 1
Trigger: You hit with a melee attack on your turn.
Target: One randomly determined creature adjacent to you
Effect: The target takes 1d6 damage.
Level 11: 2d6 damage.
Level 21: 3d6 damage.

Additional Features

Level 5 Feature

Your dark heritage becomes more and more pronounced, resulting in further changes to your physique. You might become stooped or grow long talons from your fingers. Your horns might extend even farther, or tiny wings could sprout from your back. Beyond the physical changes, you also discover you can give voice to dark thoughts in the foulest of languages.

Benefit: You gain a +2 power bonus to Intimidate checks. In addition, you add Abyssal to the languages you can read, write, and speak.

Level 10 Feature

You have struggled against the evil that stains your soul, battled against the corruption that threatens to topple you into eternal darkness, and still your heritage continues to reveal itself. Your demonic features are harder to conceal as they become even more exaggerated. Runes in the Abyssal language might appear under your skin, your eyes might glow, and scales could cover your body. In keeping with these changes, you gain a demon's supernatural ability to shrug off various damaging elements.

Benefit: The first time you are bloodied in each encounter, choose acid, cold, fire, lightning, or thunder. You gain resist 5 to that damage type until the end of the encounter. At 11th level, this resistance increases to 10, and at 21st level, this resistance increases to 15.

Also, until the end of your next turn, your allies provoke opportunity attacks from you. You must make every opportunity attack you can.

Optional Powers

You can resist your demonic nature or embrace it. Exploring your sinister heritage reveals new opportunities to channel its power, and new ways to call forth the darkness and bend it to your will. You might use these powers to help overcome your enemies by turning evil against itself, or you might surrender to the corruption.

Level 2 Utility Power

Your senses have become heightened until you can see in total darkness. Your eyes flash whenever you strike an opponent that is already at your mercy.

Abyssal Eyes Demon Spawn Utility 2

Your eyes give off a sinister gleam that enables you to see in the dark and unnerve your enemies.

Daily ✦ Elemental
Minor Action Personal
Effect: Until the end of the encounter, you have darkvision. In addition, whenever you make a melee attack against a bloodied enemy, you have combat advantage against that enemy.

Level 6 Utility Power

Your demonic ancestry manifests in a propensity for violent outbursts, an interest in committing evil acts, and a twisting of your physical appearance. Although your heritage pressures you, you can resist coming fully under its influence. Sometimes, however, it benefits you to relax your hold and let the monster within you free.

Demonic Ferocity Demon Spawn Utility 6

Surrendering to your demonic heritage fills you with dreadful viciousness.

Encounter ✦ Elemental
No Action Personal
Trigger: You make an attack roll and miss.
Effect: You reroll the attack roll and can use either result. Until the end of your next turn, your allies provoke opportunity attacks from you. You must make every opportunity attack you can.

Level 10 Utility Power

Like it or not, you have become the Abyss's herald, a messenger of doom. Killing, carnage, and battle can call forth the power within you. When you let this power loose, it infects everyone on the battlefield with an unholy need to kill.

Abyssal Doom Demon Spawn Utility 10

The brutality of your attack instills a similar lust for blood in every creature near you.

Encounter ✦ Elemental
Free Action Close burst 3
Trigger: You reduce a creature to 0 hit points on your turn.
Target: You and each creature in the burst
Effect: Until the end of your next turn, each target grants combat advantage and deals 1d8 extra damage with melee attacks.

Earthforger

"Elemental earth resonates in my soul."

Strong, durable, and implacable, earthforgers embody elemental earth. They can manifest its power in defense or as a weapon, drawing energy from the stones or releasing it outward to hold enemies back. Earthforgers wield great power, but such ability comes at an even greater price. When they grasp this elemental magic and take it in, earthforgers are reborn as elemental creatures.

Dwarves pioneered the techniques of earthforging long ago; many sages believe that the race's first steps toward mastering elemental power occurred when the dwarves were enslaved by the giants, and those efforts led to the birth of the galeb duhr race. While extracting precious metals and gemstones from deep under the mountains, dwarf miners in that long-ago time came across primordial shards, crystallized magic left from creation. Using these shards, the dwarves found they could shape stone more easily, while also being able to endure even greater punishment. An unknown number of dwarves succumbed to elemental power's temptations, losing themselves to its magic, but enough resisted and proved mighty allies in the uprising that led to the dwarves' exodus from cruel enslavement.

MARK BEHM

Other races have stumbled across earthforging under similar circumstances. Goliaths learned to use elemental earth from the stone spirits who watch over their mountain camps. Svirfneblin, gnomes who have long dwelt in the Underdark, use earthforging to evade drow slavers and destroy other hostile humanoids. Travelers report encounters with strange hermits, formerly mortal creatures that have been transformed into beings of living stone. Such individuals are rare, yet anyone who explores the wild places, those untamed lands where the primordials' fingerprints can still be seen, might very well come across an earthforger.

Creating an Earthforger

Not only can earthforgers increase their physical might by drawing power from the ground, they can use the same energy to shore up their defenses and resist injury. Some earthforgers pledge to protect others, taking up careers as battleminds or wardens to reflect their singular commitment to safeguarding their charges. In lands where mainstream religions have great sway, earthforgers might conceal their magical abilities, using them to supplement the fighting maneuvers learned from being a knight or a weapon-master. An earthforger does not often pursue a divine career, but when one does, he or she favors the paladin class and worships Melora, Moradin, or Kord.

Dwarves, goliaths, and other races with ties to mountains, hills, and subterranean environments have the oldest earthforging traditions, but a member of any race can learn the techniques. Earthforgers tend to have high Strength or Constitution scores and thus are more likely to emerge in races that have an advantage in these areas.

Starting Feature

Embracing the power of earth and stone transforms you into an earth elemental. You retain your general size, shape, and physical characteristics before the

THE URDUNNIR

Legends speak of clans of earthforger dwarves who dwell in the deepest quarters of the Underdark, exploring the deeps in search of hidden splendors. These reclusive folk are known as the Urdunnir, or the orecutter dwarves. Blessed by the elemental lord Dumathoin, the Urdunnir use their power over stone to mine veins of strange metals that no other mortals can reach. The Urdunnir are not great warriors, but they are masterful artisans, the finest metalworkers of all the dwarves. They have no love for the evil races of the Underdark and sometimes aid surface explorers by serving as guides and scouts.

transformation. Your connection to earth is apparent in your pebbly hide and glittering eyes. These physical changes herald the elemental power you now wield. Furthermore, the earth responds whenever you call on your reserves, making you nearly invulnerable to anything that would attack your body.

Benefit: Your origin becomes elemental. For the purpose of effects that relate to creature origin, you are considered to be an elemental. In addition, you add Primordial to the languages you can read, write, and speak. Whenever you use your second wind, you gain a +1 power bonus to all defenses until the start of your next turn.

You also gain the stone panoply power.

Stone Panoply — Earthforger Attack

By striking the ground, you bring forth a shower of rock and dirt that besets those near you and armors you in a stony shell.

Encounter ✦ Elemental, Weapon
Standard Action Close burst 1
Requirement: You must be on the ground.
Target: Each creature in the burst
Attack: Highest ability modifier vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + highest ability modifier damage.
Level 11: 2[W] + highest ability modifier damage.
Level 21: 3[W] + highest ability modifier damage.
Effect: Until the end of your next turn, you are slowed and you gain resistance to all damage equal to 1 + one-half your level.

Additional Features

Level 5 Feature

Earth energy flowing into you girds you against environmental hazards, disease, and similar dangers. So great is your command over this energy that the earth resounds when you invoke your wrath against your foes.

Benefit: You gain a +2 power bonus to Endurance checks. Further, whenever you use stone panoply, the burst creates a zone that lasts until the end of the encounter. The ground in the zone is difficult terrain for enemies that lack earth walk.

Level 10 Feature

Your connection to elemental earth is so strong that you can root yourself in place, as immovable as a mountain.

Benefit: Whenever an effect would pull, push, or slide you while you are on the ground, you can reduce the distance of that forced movement by 1 square.

Optional Powers

Elemental earth yields all its secrets only to a devoted few. Discipline, force of will, and focus are required to wrest earth magic from the Elemental Chaos and manifest it to serve your needs. You took an important step when you accepted the way of elemental earth and transformed into an elemental, but that step was merely the first one. To fully realize your opportunity, you must devote more of yourself to controlling the earth's true power.

Level 2 Utility Power

Echoes of elemental earth resonate from the stones beneath you. Earthforger's might calls elemental force from your environment and increases your physical strength for as long as you remain in contact with the ground. Using this power might also bring about some cosmetic change, causing your flesh to assume a stony appearance for as long as the effect lasts.

Earthforger's Might — Earthforger Utility 2

You draw power from the stones beneath you to increase your physical might.

Daily ✦ Elemental
Minor Action Personal
Requirement: You must be on the ground.
Effect: Until the end of the encounter, or until you are no longer on the ground, you gain a +2 power bonus to melee damage rolls and Strength checks.
Level 11: +4 power bonus.
Level 21: +6 power bonus.

Level 6 Utility Power

Elemental earth reveals more of its secrets to you. Now you move easily through rubble and debris, and you can even pass through solid stone.

Earthforger's Passage — Earthforger Utility 6

Whether dirt or stone, rubble or debris, earth moves to accommodate your passage.

Encounter ✦ Elemental
Move Action Personal
Effect: You move up to your speed. During this movement, you have earth walk, and you can move through earth or stone as if you had phasing.

Level 10 Utility Power

The elemental power you wield permeates your being. It is as much a part of you as your mind, your strength, and your durability. When you use tremor step, you release this power into the earth, and the resulting shock waves hinder your foes and fortify your allies.

Tremor Step — Earthforger Utility 10

The earth trembles around you, making footing treacherous for your foes and infusing allies with refreshing earth energy.

Daily ✦ Aura, Elemental
Minor Action Personal
Requirement: You must be on the ground.
Effect: You activate an aura 2 that lasts until the end of your next turn or until you are no longer on the ground. The ground in the aura is difficult terrain for enemies that lack earth walk.
Sustain Minor: The aura persists until the end of your next turn, and you or one ally in the aura gains temporary hit points equal to one-half your level.

Elemental Initiate

"Inner harmony is a balancing of elements."

Elemental initiates follow a philosophy grounded in the understanding of the four elements and their influence over mortal bodies, hearts, and minds. One who would become an initiate withdraws from ordinary life to seek wisdom in a setting free of distractions, such as a monastery, a remote temple, or the dojo of a famous teacher. In some societies, the philosophy of the elements is widely known and respected as a path all should seek to progress along during the course of their lives. Among other cultures, these teachings are regarded as exotic or are unheard of. No matter the viewpoint of others, the path of the initiate is one of truth seeking and self-knowledge above all, a lifelong search for meaning and understanding.

Before heading into the world, most elemental initiates lead ascetic lives. They own little more than the robes on their backs, and they eschew luxuries and intemperate behavior as distractions from the path to which they devote themselves. An initiate strives to curb passions rather than allowing those passions to rule. An elemental initiate might be a student who preserves ancient tomes, a martial arts disciple who studies the four elements, or an anchorite absorbed in the exploration of the mind in the wild and lonely places of the world. Philosophically minded initiates devote hours each day to study, discourse, and observation of the world around them, while others dedicate their time to meditation and exercise. In and around the daily discipline of the monastery or temple, common chores and tasks are shared among all members of the order.

Typical elemental initiates are content to remain in their hidden temples and remote monasteries all their lives, devoting themselves to the study of their philosophy. However, some believe that they must travel widely, to pass on their learning and to absorb new lessons from the world outside the monastery walls. Other initiates take up a life of humble service, using their unusual training and abilities to help others. Adventuring elemental initiates come from the latter two camps.

Creating an Elemental Initiate

Many kinds of characters might begin their training in monasteries, dojos, or isolated temples. Monks and battleminds are especially likely to do so. Characters as diverse as assassins, swordmages, and wizards can also flourish in cloistered environments where a student can focus on mastering a rare and difficult art. Some races and cultures, such as the githzerai, possess strong monastic traditions and make a point of training their most promising youths in secluded environments. Githzerai society is almost entirely organized around monasteries devoted to elemental study and in the Elemental Chaos. Any githzerai character could be an elemental initiate, regardless of class or background.

TYLER JACOBSON

Starting Feature

Self-knowledge, adaptability, and discipline are the hallmarks of an elemental initiate's study, and few exercises develop these qualities in the same way as mastering the basics of an unarmed fighting style. Some initiates eschew the use of weapons and do their best to avoid violence, but the world rarely rewards the pacifist with peace. Learning how to defend oneself with the minimum force necessary is the best available compromise. All elemental initiates perfect defensive techniques that emphasize counter-attacks and positioning rather than aggression. You can quickly exploit any mistake your enemy makes to strike back while the foe is off balance.

Benefit: You gain a +2 proficiency bonus with unarmed attacks, and your unarmed attack can deal 1d6 damage instead of 1d4. You also gain proficiency with ki focuses.

You also gain the disciplined counter power.

Disciplined Counter — Elemental Initiate Attack

An enemy's miss allows you to rebalance the flow of energy by making an instant counterattack.

Encounter ✦ Elemental, Psionic, Weapon
Immediate Reaction Melee 1
Trigger: An adjacent enemy misses you with a melee attack.
Target: The triggering enemy
Attack: Highest ability modifier vs. Reflex
Hit: 1[W] damage, and you slide the target up to 2 squares. The target grants combat advantage until the end of your next turn.
Level 11: 2[W] damage.
Level 21: 3[W] damage.

Additional Features

Level 5 Feature

Even martially focused monasteries and dojos hold learning in the highest regard. The initiate's life is one of never-ending inquiry and examination.

Benefit: You gain training in one skill from among Arcana, History, Nature, and Religion.

Level 10 Feature

Years of reflection and self-denial provide an elemental initiate with a deep reservoir of calm resolve. You resist temptation, overcome fear, and see through deceit more easily than others can.

Benefit: You gain a +1 power bonus to Will.

Optional Powers

Initiates place a high value on prowess in unarmed combat, studying techniques of self-defense, and improving concentration and focus with rigorous physical exercises. In an initiate's worldview, the elements describe aspects of mortal thought and behavior as much as they describe the physical matter of the world. People whose personalities are dominated by the element of fire are said to be mercurial or volatile, easily angered but also creative and passionate. People who have an affinity for elemental earth are considered to be stoic, stubborn, and inflexible, but absolutely reliable. Years of study combine this philosophy of the metaphysical nature of the elements with the sheer physical rigors of exercise, deprivation, and discipline. So trained, an elemental initiate can master impressive powers of movement, healing, and defense.

Level 2 Utility Power

Chief among the initiate's regimen are exercises of balance and movement. Mastering control of the body is an important first step in gaining control over one's full capabilities. Thanks to hours upon hours spent balancing and sparring in awkward positions, you can fight and maneuver with your full skill regardless of the surface you're standing on.

Balancing Step — Elemental Initiate Utility 2

The elemental balance within you allows you to move carefully and with perfect grace.

Encounter ✦ Elemental, Psionic
Move Action Personal
Effect: You shift up to 3 squares, ignoring difficult terrain. Until the end of your next turn, you gain a +2 power bonus to all defenses, and climbing or balancing doesn't cause you to grant combat advantage.

Level 6 Utility Power

Initiates who study the body's natural energy and currents understand that injuries are nothing more than temporary misalignments of elements that are normally in balance. With a little training and practice, elemental initiates can learn how to neutralize wounds and fatigue with a few well-placed taps or touches in crucial spots.

Restoring Touch — Elemental Initiate Utility 6

Your knowledge of the body's natural energy flow allows you to heal minor injuries with a few skillful touches.

Encounter ✦ Elemental, Healing, Psionic
Standard Action Melee 1
Target: One creature
Effect: The target can spend a healing surge and regain 1d6 additional hit points. The target can also end one poison, dazing, or stunning effect currently affecting it.

Level 10 Utility Power

Not all battles are won with an all-out assault or an unyielding defense. Sometimes the simplest path to victory is to allow your foe to defeat itself. When circumstances warrant, you can emulate the flickering flame, the gentle breeze, or the flowing tide and adopt a combat style emphasizing patience, movement, and misdirection. Not only can you have excellent mobility in the thickest fray, but you can also use feints, dodges, and distractions to protect allies near you.

Flowing Defense — Elemental Initiate Utility 10

You adopt a shifting stance that allows you to move easily while guarding yourself and nearby friends.

Daily ✦ Elemental, Psionic, Stance
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You assume the flowing defense stance. Until the stance ends, you can shift 1 square as a minor action. Further, you gain a +2 power bonus to all defenses. Your allies gain the same bonus while adjacent to you.

Firecrafter

"I feel the flames of a thousand suns burning in my heart."

Fire creates and destroys. With fire, one can transform raw iron into a useful blade, clear a field of crops to halt the spread of a disease, or lay waste to anything that stands in one's way. Fire is also the element of emotion, of passion and intensity, of new ideas and revelations. Firecrafters embrace elemental fire, using it to forge themselves into something new, something made from fire and yet bound in humanoid form.

Firecrafting finds its roots among the primitive cultures in the world. Legend holds that the primordial Imix gifted mortals with fire in order to destroy them, and it was Ioun's intervention and knowledge that gave mortals the wisdom to control it. Ioun enabled mortals not only to use fire for light and warmth, but to bend it to their will with magic.

Firecrafters come by their power through the same channels that other individuals learn to use elemental magic. Some might transform into elemental creatures after discovering a primordial shard. An imprisoned primordial might grant a boon to a particularly loyal follower, while mere exposure to the Elemental Chaos could be the catalyst that awakens a latent elemental quality in others. Regardless of his or her history, a firecrafter leads a lonely life. People fear firecrafters, and with good reason.

Creating a Firecrafter

Considered the most dangerous of the elemental arts, firecrafting lets an individual channel uncontrolled elemental fire into the world. Reckless usage often produces tragic results, with innocents burned or maimed for being too close when the fire slips free. This said, firecrafters learn to control their flames in time. Firecrafting intensifies an individual's emotions, leading most firecrafters to be rash and violent. Most seek occupations that provide an outlet for their aggression and thus become barbarians and slayers. Others find that elemental fire can boost magical ability, and many firecrafters have gone on to find great success as mages, psions, and warlocks. Divine firecrafters are almost unknown; they tend to follow Ioun.

Starting Feature

Elemental fire suffuses your being, burning away the last vestiges of your mortality and revealing your new form as an elemental creature. Your unusual nature is apparent to anyone who sees the pale nimbus of flames rising from your skull and the black, red, or orange color of your skin. Your eyes become brilliant pinpoints, seeming hotter than the coals in a blacksmith's forge.

The fire inside you shines forth, bringing light to darkness, while the fire powers you learn strike with terrible force. You can release your inner fire as a corona to scorch anyone who dares to face you.

Benefit: Your origin becomes elemental. For the purpose of effects that relate to creature origin, you are considered to be an elemental. Add Primordial to the languages you can read, write, and speak. Also, you can emit dim light out to 5 squares. As a minor action, you can suppress or resume this light.

You also gain the blazing corona power.

Blazing Corona — Firecrafter Attack

Fire erupts from your body, burning until you fling it away from you as a fiery bolt.

Encounter ✦ Aura, Elemental, Fire
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You activate an aura 1 that lasts until the end of your next turn. Any creature that starts its turn in the aura takes fire damage equal to your highest ability modifier. Using the secondary power ends the aura.
Secondary Power (Elemental, Fire)
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: One creature
Attack: Highest ability modifier + 2 vs. Reflex
Level 11: Highest ability modifier + 4
Level 21: Highest ability modifier + 6
Hit: 1d8 fire damage.
Level 11: 2d8 fire damage.
Level 21: 3d8 fire damage.

Additional Features

Level 5 Feature The energy in your soul helps you move like a flickering flame, dancing across the battlefield wherever you please. Calling on your inner reserves builds the flame's intensity so that your fiery attacks strike with greater accuracy.

Benefit: You gain a +2 power bonus to Acrobatics checks. Whenever you use your second wind, you gain a +1 power bonus to attack rolls with fire attacks until the end of your next turn.

Level 10 Feature Using elemental fire spurs you into action, whether it drives you forward to bring the swirling flames to your enemies or pulls you back to avoid injuring your companions.

Benefit: Whenever you use blazing corona, you can also shift up to 3 squares as a free action.

Optional Powers

Tapping into elemental fire sets in motion changes that awaken in you intense emotion and sometimes trigger violent outbursts in the form of uncontrollable flames. You must focus on controlling these fires lest they escape your control and burn everyone and everything around you. Further training rewards you with greater control and also reveals new ways to use elemental fire.

Level 3, 13, and 23 Attack Powers

Producing a bit of flame is a trick a first-year wizard's apprentice can perform, yet the simplicity of that trick belies your expanding control over elemental fire. The flames you manifest come from within you and shine with a steady light. Although the fire does not burn you, if you cast it away, it scorches whatever it touches.

Lesser Produce Flame — Firecrafter Attack 3

Snapping your fingers causes a fiery ball to appear in your hand to illuminate your surroundings.

Encounter ✦ Elemental, Fire
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You create a flame in your hand that emits bright light out to 10 squares. The flame lasts until the end of the encounter, until you dismiss it as a minor action, or until you use the secondary power.
Secondary Power (Elemental, Fire)
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: One creature
Attack: Highest ability modifier vs. Reflex. You gain a +2 bonus to the attack roll.
Hit: 2d8 + highest ability modifier fire damage.

Produce Flame — Firecrafter Attack 13

As lesser produce flame, with the following changes.
Attack: The bonus increases to +4.
Hit: The damage increases to 3d8 + highest ability modifier fire damage.

Greater Produce Flame — Firecrafter Attack 23

As lesser produce flame, with the following changes.
Attack: The bonus increases to +6.
Hit: The damage increases to 4d8 + highest ability modifier fire damage.

Level 6 Utility Power

Surrendering to the fire burning inside you causes lambent flames to fill the air. Although the flickering lights that burning bright creates do not burn, fires brought into their midst flare and become almost impossible to put out.

Burning Bright — Firecrafter Utility 6

Your presence causes fires to burn so hot that little hope exists of extinguishing them.

Daily ✦ Aura, Elemental, Fire
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You activate an aura 2 that lasts until the end of the encounter. Enemies in the aura have vulnerable 5 fire and take a -2 penalty to saving throws against ongoing fire damage. Nonmagical fires in the aura can be put out only if you allow them to be extinguished.

Level 7, 17, and 27 Attack Powers

No one can deny the destructive potential of elemental fire, but such demonstrations are crude and mask its subtler benefits. Fire can inflame the passions, build confidence, and awaken new possibilities to those touched by its energy.

MARK BEHM

When you use roaring flames, you put elemental fire's constructive aspects to use, aiding your companions in their efforts.

Lesser Roaring Flames — Firecrafter Attack 7

A bright and loud cascade of fire singes your foes while inspiring your allies.

Encounter ✦ Elemental, Fire
Standard Action Close burst 3
Target: Each enemy in the burst
Attack: Highest ability modifier vs. Reflex. You gain a +2 bonus to the attack roll.
Hit: 2d6 + highest ability modifier fire damage.
Effect: Each ally in the burst gains a +2 power bonus to one attack roll, saving throw, or skill or ability check made before the start of your next turn.

Roaring Flames — Firecrafter Attack 17

As lesser roaring flames, with the following changes.
Attack: The bonus increases to +4.
Hit: The damage increases to 3d6 + highest ability modifier fire damage.

Greater Roaring Flames — Firecrafter Attack 27

As lesser roaring flames, with the following changes.
Attack: The bonus increases to +6.
Hit: The damage increases to 4d6 + highest ability modifier fire damage.

Ironwrought

"The weapon is only as strong as the hand that wields it."

Air, earth, fire, and water eclipse the other expressions of elemental essence found in the Plane Below. They are, after all, the most dominant forms, and most elemental creatures incorporate one or two of these fundamental elements into their being. Less prominent elemental provinces include all manner of phenomena from magma to ice, and smoke to metal. Although devotees of these lesser forces might be rarer than others, they are no less capable than other users of elemental magic. The ironwroughts prove this fact time and time again.

The first ironwroughts appeared not long after human empires extended into the Elemental Chaos. Faced with teeming demons, mad slaads, and hostile elementals, as well as physical changes the settlers experienced after being exposed to the plane, the best warriors filled their time perfecting fighting techniques. The heavy armor, the metal weaponry, and their iron resolve all inclined them toward the lesser-known province of elemental metal. It took no time for these warriors to adopt metallic characteristics, becoming less human and more like the creatures they were sworn to fight. Calling themselves the ironwrought, they proved instrumental in throwing back the elemental hordes long enough for their people to establish colonies.

From these early warriors descend the ironwrought societies still found across the Elemental Chaos and in the natural world. Two of these, the Scions of Steel and the Iron Brotherhood, actively recruit novices to train in the mystic arts. These warriors hire themselves out as mercenaries across the planes, selling their swords to whoever can afford the fee. Their reputation for excellence keeps these battle groups in constant employ, and they can be found fighting for the efreets, guarding caravans, standing watch on the walls of githzerai fortresses, and elsewhere on the plane and beyond.

Creating an Ironwrought

Ironwrought adventurers come from the ranks of warriors, especially those who favor heavy armor and military weapons. Combat training establishes the proper mind-set for gaining and using elemental metal's power. Fighters, some paladins, and battleminds have the needed talents to merge elemental magic with their particular fighting art. Ironwroughts make strong battle leaders, and some of the greatest examples come from the ranks of warlords, runepriests, and ardents.

You might have stumbled onto your heritage by some stroke of fate (good or bad). Maybe you learned to use elemental metal by joining an ironwrought society that shepherded you into your new nature through a mystical ceremony, altering your course forever. Then again, you could be a native of the Elemental Chaos who acquired your talents naturally from the wild plane.

ADAM PAQUETTE

Although the ironwroughts originated in humanity, any humanoid who has the discipline and fighting skill can join ironwrought ranks. Ironwrought masters accept students who demonstrate physical prowess, toughness, and speed. Genasi, dwarves, half-orcs, and goliaths all fit the bill.

Starting Feature

The moment you recognized your affinity for elemental metal, you took the first step toward a greater destiny. Metal is the stuff of battle, and you display an unusual knack for wielding weaponry. You could also experience strange physical changes. Your skin might gleam as if it were made from polished metal. When you are caught in the rain, rust spots could appear on your flesh. You also grow heavier, if not bulkier, weighing more than you should.

When you embrace elemental metal, you become an elemental creature. After some time, you acquire metallic characteristics and find new strength and durability when you need it. Drawing on your reserves increases metal's influence on you and helps you perform incredible physical stunts. You can call on this magic to help some of your strikes land true.

Benefit: Your origin becomes elemental. For the purpose of effects that relate to creature origin, you are considered to be an elemental. Add Primordial to the languages you can read, write, and speak. You gain a +1 power bonus to Athletics checks and Endurance checks. Whenever you use your second wind, this power bonus increases to +4 until the end of your next turn.

You also gain the inevitable strike power.

Inevitable Strike — Ironwrought Attack

Elemental power flows through you, providing you with keen accuracy and sharper striking force.

Encounter ✦ Elemental, Weapon
No Action Personal
Trigger: You make a melee weapon attack roll.
Effect: Make the attack roll twice. If both attack rolls hit, the target takes 1d8 extra damage.
Level 11: 2d8 extra damage.
Level 21: 3d8 extra damage.

Additional Features

Level 5 Feature

Your elemental nature responds to injuries by hardening your skin so that small cuts and impacts have no effect.

Benefit: While you are bloodied, you have resist 2 to all damage. At 11th level, this resistance increases to 4. At 21st level, this resistance increases to 6.

Level 10 Feature

Each time you channel the essence of elemental metal, your ability to strike true improves.

Benefit: Whenever you use inevitable strike, you gain a +1 power bonus to melee weapon attack rolls until the end of your next turn.

Optional Powers

All ironwroughts draw the power they wield from a personal connection to elemental metal. For most, this power manifests in battle prowess and resilience that supplements formal combat training. The following powers represent advanced techniques you can adopt. Each offers a different way to manifest the essence of elemental metal.

Level 2 Utility Power

Your affinity with metal gives you access to incredible reserves, hardening you to keep fighting when others might fall.

Steely Resolve — Ironwrought Utility 2

You recover from a solid blow as if your enemy had struck metal rather than flesh.

Daily ✦ Elemental, Healing
No Action Personal
Trigger: You are bloodied by an attack.
Effect: You can spend a healing surge. Until the end of your next turn, you gain a +2 power bonus to AC and Fortitude.

Level 6 Utility Power

You use your inner strength to focus your attacks and steel yourself against injury. As your understanding increases, you learn to express your elemental nature by transforming your flesh into living iron.

Ironwrought Toughness — Ironwrought Utility 6

Embracing your elemental power gives your flesh the durability of iron.

Daily ✦ Elemental
Minor Action Personal
Effect: Until the end of the encounter, you have resistance to all damage equal to the amount that your ironwrought level 5 feature normally grants. While you are bloodied, this resistance increases by 2.

Level 10 Utility Power

You have perfected your fighting techniques, using elemental force to augment your maneuvers so they strike with greater effectiveness. The ultimate expression of your nature comes when you learn weapon unity. With this power, you merge your body with your weapon so that the latter becomes an extension of your will.

Weapon Unity — Ironwrought Utility 10

Your essence flows into your weapon so that you and it are one.

Daily ✦ Elemental, Stance
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You assume the weapon unity stance. Until the stance ends, your melee weapon attacks can score a critical hit on a roll of 19–20. You also gain a +2 power bonus to opportunity attack rolls.

ELEMENTARY VIEWPOINT: VOMAR VALSK, MERCENARY

My forefathers came to the elemental domains from a world called Oerth, long ago. They were wizards once, and they fashioned a refuge in the rocky islets of a planar sea. But humans aren't meant to live in the elemental realm, at least not without being changed. That onetime wizards' refuge grew into a keep and trade-town in time, and whatever gift for magic my family once had faded through the generations, replaced by the magic of the elements. I wonder what I would have been if my ancestors hadn't come to this realm . . . but I'm a sellsword, a wanderer of the Chaos. Iron is our magic now, and it suits me well enough.

Janissary

The races of geniekind have a reputation for carrying off mortals to serve as slaves in the cities and palaces of the Elemental Chaos. Few mortals realize, however, that being the slave of a genie is far from an unpleasant existence. These servants lead lives not much different from those of the common workers, servants, soldiers, and artisans found toiling in and around the castles and palaces of nobles in the world. Even the most ordinary genie—whether dao, djinn, efreet, or marid—fancies itself a great lord with a high and royal title. It regards the everyday business of administering its estates and overseeing its property to be a task utterly beneath its attention. Instead, these genie overlords leave most of their affairs in the hands of a select caste of trusted, loyal slaves known as janissaries.

Some janissaries are part of a genie's household staff and have little freedom to travel, but most large genie cities and realms are host to a whole class of janissaries who are considered slaves of the throne, rather than of a particular genie. Most such janissaries serve as elite soldiers, city officials, or highly valued artisans and engineers. They are allowed to own property, bear arms, travel, marry, and engage in whatever pursuits they like, although most are guards or bureaucrats in the ruler's service. Adventuring janissaries usually come from this group and are free to do as they please—until a high-ranking genie commands a service from them. It's not unusual for janissaries to venture into the mortal world on various errands, then stay on to seek their fortunes when their original mission is completed.

Although janissaries are often rich, comfortable, and entrusted with great authority, they are still subject to the whims of their genie masters. Good-natured genies, such as djinns and marids, treat their janissaries well and bestow honors and offices on servants who show cleverness, reliability, and efficiency. Daos and efreets, on the other hand, are cruel and overbearing, so they naturally value servants who use brutality and viciousness when attending to their duties. In most realms janissaries enjoy at least some legal protection against poor or capricious treatment, but in return they are expected to police themselves stringently and to comply with any order or request a genie gives them.

Creating a Janissary

A janissary might come to hold many different offices and perform a number of duties, but an adventuring janissary is, first and foremost, a warrior who helps make up the core of a genie's entourage or army. Therefore, most such janissaries are fighters, warlords, battleminds, or other characters who are expressly suited for military service. Genies have little patience for characters who show devotion to entities other than themselves, so it is unusual to find cleric or paladin janissaries. However, wizards, sorcerers, warlocks, and swordmages are almost as common as martial characters among the ranks of janissaries. Skilled spellcasters are highly prized as guards and advisors.

Starting Feature

A janissary is tattooed, branded, or otherwise marked to indicate the individual's special status. The mark is placed on the face, the scalp, or the hands, and is not meant to be concealed—genies aren't interested in whether janissaries can pass without notice in mortal lands, although most people in the natural world wouldn't recognize a janissary's mark as a sign of ownership or associate it with a genie. Not only does this mark identify the janissary's owner, it often serves as the focus for an elemental blessing that protects its bearer against the environmental dangers of the Elemental Chaos.

You and your fellow janissaries are noted for your iron discipline, selfless courage, and unmatched fighting spirit. Janissaries are proud of their traditions and highly motivated to live up to their masters' expectations. Leading the way into battle fills your heart with pride and zeal.

Benefit: You gain a +5 power bonus to Endurance checks against environmental dangers. Add Primordial to the languages you can read, write, and speak.

You also gain the janissary charge power.

Janissary Charge Janissary Attack

You hurl yourself into battle, threatening your enemy and preventing it from moving easily.

Encounter ✦ Elemental, Weapon
Standard Action Melee 1
Effect: You gain 5 temporary hit points, and then you charge an enemy. If your charge attack hits, the target is slowed until the end of your next turn.
Level 11: 10 temporary hit points.
Level 21: 15 temporary hit points.

Additional Features

Level 5 Feature

Genie society is fractious at best, since even the most even-tempered genies are inclined to harbor petty jealousies and grudges for centuries. Janissaries are recognized as parties who can be relied upon as go-betweens in genie relations. Even the most vicious efreet hesitates before attacking a janissary messenger, because an attack on the servant can be viewed as an attack on the janissary's master, who might be an important genie. Consequently, janissaries gain a great deal of experience in approaching genies and other elemental powers with proper courtesy.

Benefit: You gain a +2 bonus to Bluff, Diplomacy, and Insight checks made against creatures that have the elemental origin.

Level 10 Feature

Janissaries judge themselves by the quality of the service they render. Like members of any elite order or martial society, they strive to be worthy of their comrades' respect, regardless of the consequences to themselves. Although it is not quite true that they are without fear, this extraordinary sense of service provides a measure of protection against effects that might break or control lesser warriors.

Benefit: You gain a +2 power bonus to saving throws against charm effects and fear effects.

Optional Powers

Most janissaries regard themselves as soldiers, embracing military discipline and training tirelessly with their chosen weapons. Janissaries are not dedicated to the raw stuff of the elements in the same way that other elemental heroes are. Compared to elementalists or sha'irs (see Chapter 3), janissaries only scratch the surface of elemental power, but their elemental abilities provide them with potent defenses and supernatural vigor in times of need.

Level 2 Utility Power

Having trained as an elite guard in a genie palace, you are expected to defend your masters from the indignity of personal assault. Your elemental power gives you the ability to shield nearby allies for a short time.

Janissary's Shield — Janissary Utility 2

You call upon elemental force and shape it around you to protect nearby allies from attack.

Encounter ✦ Aura, Elemental
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You activate an aura 1 that lasts until the end of your next turn. Allies in the aura gain a +2 power bonus to all defenses. Choose acid, cold, fire, lightning, or thunder. While in the aura, you and your allies have resist 5 to that damage type.

Level 6 Utility Power

Any warriors who hope to fight amid the hazards of the Elemental Chaos must find ways to overcome all sorts of obstacles. Your mist form is a minor elemental transformation that allows you to turn your body into streaming smoke, sand, dust, or similar particles, then fly or swim in this insubstantial form for a moment.

MARK BEHM

Janissary's Mist Form — Janissary Utility 6

You briefly transform yourself into mist, dust, or ash, giving you the ability to pass over or through obstacles.

Encounter ✦ Elemental, Polymorph
Standard Action Personal
Effect: You assume mist form. While in this form, you are insubstantial, and you gain a fly speed or swim speed (choose one) equal to your speed. You cannot attack while in this form, but you can move at full speed while squeezing and do not grant combat advantage for squeezing. The form lasts until the end of your next turn or until you to end it as a minor action.

Level 10 Utility Power

Experienced janissaries can call upon the power of the elements to heal their wounds and lend power to their attacks.

Janissary Zeal — Janissary Utility 10

You invoke elemental power to renew your vigor and strength.

Encounter ✦ Elemental, Healing
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You can spend a healing surge, and you gain a +2 power bonus to attack rolls until the start of your next turn.

Moteborn

Thousands of otherwise ordinary mortals live among the wonders and perils of the elemental plane, inhabiting isolated citadels that loom atop drifting earthmotes or thronging trade-towns standing on the shores of exotic seas.

Mortal denizens of the Elemental Chaos, known as moteborn, often leave their homes behind and seek their fortunes elsewhere. A moteborn's reason for doing so might be anything: Catastrophe sometimes destroys an elemental realm, leaving its survivors scattered and homeless. A criminal, whether guilty or falsely accused, might flee to avoid punishment. Someone whose culture values personal honor might go into exile when dishonored, hoping to spare family and friends from disgrace. Other moteborn are people of status in their native domains, and such moteborn travel and adventure to prove their worth.

Depending on how and why a moteborn leaves his or her elemental home behind, he or she might wander the Elemental Chaos in search of wealth and power, or search for a new home in the natural world where he or she can win high station. Another moteborn might be an exile hiding from enemies back home, taking a false name and traveling to keep ahead of pursuers and assassins.

Creating a Moteborn

Because scores, perhaps hundreds, of separate mortal domains are scattered across the vastness of the Elemental Chaos, a moteborn might belong to any race or class. Any character who hails from an exotic homeland and demonstrates a knack for self-reliance and far traveling is suited for this theme.

Starting Feature

As a native of the Elemental Chaos, you learned the language of elementals in your youth. You are also exceptionally well versed in knowledge of elemental creatures and their works. Even if you are not a true student of arcane knowledge, you know a lot more about arcane matters than most worldbound adventurers do.

Your people have long-established pacts with the denizens of the Elemental Chaos, giving you the ability to summon and command minor elementals. A flame zephyr is a typical example. The creature is intelligent enough to follow specific directions, so you can use it for any task you can explain to it. In a fight, you can direct the zephyr to attack creatures near it with its scorching winds, or you can command it to batter and buffet any enemy you are engaged with.

Benefit: You gain a +2 power bonus to Arcana checks. Add Primordial to the languages you can read, write, and speak. If you already know Primordial, you instead learn Abyssal, Dwarven, or Giant.

You also gain the summon flame zephyr power.

Summon Flame Zephyr Moteborn Attack

From the smallest spark, cinder, or candle flame, you command a minor elemental of air and fire to come forth.

Daily ✦ Elemental, Summoning
Minor Action Ranged 10
Effect: You summon a flame zephyr in an unoccupied square in range. The creature is an ally to you and your allies.

The zephyr lacks actions of its own. Instead, you spend actions to command it mentally, choosing from the actions in its description. You don't need line of effect to the zephyr to command it. When you command the zephyr, the two of you share knowledge but not senses.

When the zephyr makes a check, you make the roll using your game statistics, not including temporary bonuses or penalties.

The flame zephyr lasts until it drops to 0 hit points, at which point you lose a healing surge (or hit points equal to your healing surge value if you have no surges left). Otherwise, it lasts until you dismiss it as a minor action or until the end of the encounter.

Flame Zephyr Summoned Creature
Small elemental magical beast (air, fire)

HP your bloodied value; Healing Surges none, but you can spend a healing surge for the zephyr if an effect allows it to spend one
Defenses your defenses, not including any temporary bonuses or penalties
Speed 6, fly 6
Resist fire 10

☼ Dust and Smoke ✦ Aura 1
Allies in the aura have partial concealment. You gain a +2 power bonus to damage rolls against enemies in the aura. At 11th level, this bonus increases to +3. It increases to +4 at 21st level.

Standard Action (fire) ✦ At-Will
Attack: Close burst 1 (creatures in the burst); your level + 5 vs. Reflex
Hit: 1d6 + your highest ability modifier fire damage, and you can slide the target 1 square.
Level 21: 2d6 + your highest ability modifier fire damage.

Minor Action ✦ At-Will (1/round)
Effect: The zephyr crawls, runs, stands up, shifts, squeezes, or walks.

Additional Features

Level 5 Feature You didn't walk from the Elemental Chaos to the natural world. Gates, portals, and elemental rifts provide the planar traveler with a thousand shortcuts to all points of the multiverse. You have learned how to find and use these devices and phenomena.

Benefit: You gain a +5 power bonus to checks to locate, activate, and control magical or elemental portals, gates, and similar objects. If a portal is trapped or dangerous, or leads to a hazardous destination, you can sense this danger with a successful Arcana check (moderate DC of your level).

Level 10 Feature
Your special affinity for the plane where you were born strengthens, so that the minor elemental you can summon is quicker to answer your call.

Benefit: You can use summon flame zephyr twice per day, but only once per encounter.

Optional Powers

Elemental-born heroes innately have access to a variety of powers and abilities that are rare or unheard of in the mortal world. If you choose to emphasize your planar heritage, you can learn several utility powers intended to help you survive the rigors of the Elemental Chaos.

Level 2 Utility Power
Any experienced traveler of the Elemental Chaos is familiar with a wide variety of hazards—blasts of fire, eruptions of earth, immersion in frigid seas. You have mastered a minor spell that adjusts your metabolism to resist almost any common elemental hazard.

Elemental Adaptation — Moteborn Utility 2

You use minor elemental warding to adapt yourself to almost any hazardous environment.

Daily ✦ Elemental
Minor Action Personal
Effect: Choose acid, cold, fire, lightning, or thunder. Until the end of the encounter, you gain resist 5 to that damage type and a +5 power bonus to Endurance checks.

SLAWOMIR MANIAK

Level 6 Utility Power
This handy trick allows you to imbue an aspect of your surroundings, such as a campfire, a small boulder, or a breeze, with elemental force, turning it into a minor elemental for a short time. You can use this servant for simple errands such as carrying a message or an item, retrieving a small object, or searching a small area for something you can describe precisely. Your creation isn't very bright, so you must be specific in your instructions.

Elemental Drudge — Moteborn Utility 6

You call forth a minor elemental and dispatch it on an errand.

Daily ✦ Conjuration, Elemental
Standard Action Ranged 5
Effect: You conjure a minor elemental spirit that animates a Small mass of whatever element is available in an unoccupied square in range. This drudge persists until you dismiss it as a minor action, until it completes its task, or until 1 hour has elapsed. The drudge has speed 10 and a +0 bonus to ability checks required to perform its errand. It can travel up to 1 mile from you in the performance of its task. You can command the drudge to do any of the following errands.

- ✦ Fetch: The drudge can retrieve an object of up to 50 pounds, as long as you can indicate or describe the object and its location. If the object is too heavy, stuck, or otherwise inaccessible, the drudge returns to you without the object.
- ✦ Carry: The drudge can carry an object of up to 50 pounds to a location, as long as you can indicate or describe the object and its location.
- ✦ Manipulate: The drudge can go to a location, which you must indicate or describe, and manipulate an object that you can indicate or describe. If the object is not where you specified or cannot be manipulated as you directed, the drudge returns to you.

Level 10 Utility Power
Your familiarity with the elements provides you with the ability to quickly manipulate the composition of a nearby patch of ground or mass of air, creating a simple but effective trap.

Elemental Mine — Moteborn Utility 10

You bottle raw chaos in a small area, creating a hazard that goes unseen until an enemy steps into it.

Encounter ✦ Elemental, Zone
Minor Action Ranged 10
Target: One square
Effect: The target square becomes a zone that lasts until the end of the encounter or until an enemy enters it. Without a Perception check (DC 10 + your level + your highest ability modifier), your enemies notice neither the zone nor your use of this power. When an enemy enters the zone, that enemy and each creature adjacent to the zone take 5 damage and fall prone.

Primordial Adept

Most mortals give their devotion to the gods, but other powers that crave worship dwell in the cosmos. A primordial adept is a cultist, a seeker after hidden knowledge, or a member of an esoteric order who turns away from the deities to worship one of the ancient primordials.

In some places, adepts are considered to be religious individuals and occupy the same role in society that divine priests do. Like priests, adepts are initiated into their powers; some establish their bond with their patron under the tutelage of a cult or a secret society, participating in ceremonies designed to mark their accession to the organization's inner circles. Other adepts forge their bond with their patrons by devising their own rituals of binding and command.

Some adepts think of themselves less as priests and more as scholars and delvers into the unknown. They seek out the writings of older primordial adepts in hopes of mastering a source of power that most other scholars wouldn't dare to unearth.

All primordial adepts have many of the same goals: the mastery of elemental power, the accumulation of knowledge and lore, and the continuing favor of their inscrutable patrons. An adept becomes an adventurer to explore places of ancient power, recover lost knowledge, and (more rarely) advance the causes and designs of his or her elemental patron.

DAVE ALLSOP

Creating a Primordial Adept

Primordial adepts are characters of unusual intelligence, zeal, or force of personality. Delving into secrets that mortals were not meant to know is not a calling for the fainthearted. Arcane characters such as sorcerers, warlocks, and wizards are drawn by the lure of hidden lore and make excellent primordial adepts. Divine and primal characters very rarely pursue this path, since taking a primordial for a patron is incompatible with wielding divine energy or serving the primal spirits. However, some gods have strong ties to the elements (for example, Melora, Moradin, and Tharizdun), and a cleric or an invoker devoted to the elemental aspects of a deity might fit this theme.

Starting Feature

Each primordial adept has a patron—a great elemental being to which the adept is bound. Whether an adept regards the patron as a source of power to be harnessed or as a being worthy of absolute devotion, the effects are the same. The patron lends a small amount of its power to the adept, enhancing the abilities already at the adept's command. Scores, perhaps hundreds, of primordials, titans, and other beings might serve as patrons. Two examples, elaborated upon here, are Vezzuvu, the Burning Mountain, and Solkara, the Crushing Wave.

Benefit: You have proficiency with rods. Add Primordial to the languages you can read, write, and speak. In addition, you gain either the Solkara's wave or the Vezzuvu's eruption power.

Solkara's Wave Primordial Adept Attack

You call forth an icy flood filled with the power of Solkara.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Cold, Elemental, Implement
Standard Action Close blast 3
Target: Each creature in the blast
Attack: Highest ability modifier vs. Fortitude
Hit: 1d8 + highest ability modifier cold damage, and you push the target up to 2 squares. The target is slowed and gains vulnerable 5 cold until the end of your next turn.
Level 11: 2d8 + highest ability modifier cold damage.
Level 21: 3d8 + highest ability modifier cold damage.

Vezzuvu's Eruption Primordial Adept Attack

A small eruption knocks creatures down with rumbling tremors and sears them with hot ash.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Elemental, Fire, Implement, Thunder, Zone
Standard Action Area burst 1 within 10 squares
Target: Each creature in the burst
Attack: Highest ability modifier vs. Reflex
Hit: 1d6 + highest ability modifier thunder damage, and the target falls prone.
Level 11: 2d6 + highest ability modifier thunder damage.
Level 21: 3d6 + highest ability modifier thunder damage.
Effect: The burst creates a zone of difficult terrain that lasts until the end of your next turn. Any creature that ends its turn in the zone takes 5 fire damage.

Additional Features

Level 5 Feature

Denizens of the Elemental Chaos know, respect, and possibly fear the primordial you serve. A mere mention of your patron's name and your status as one of its servants is enough to cause most elemental creatures to give your words extra heed.

Benefit: You gain a +2 bonus to Bluff, Diplomacy, Insight, and Intimidate checks against creatures that have the elemental origin.

Level 10 Feature

Your elemental patron places a portion of its essence at your command, drastically enhancing the effectiveness of your attacks when they align with its sphere of influence.

Benefit: If you chose Solkara's wave, you gain a +2 power bonus to damage rolls with cold powers and thunder powers. If you chose Vezzuvu's eruption, you gain a +2 power bonus to damage rolls with fire powers and thunder powers.

Optional Powers

Any adept can more strongly demonstrate adherence to a patron by utilizing other expressions of that primordial's influence.

Level 2 Utility Power

Devotion to Solkara grants you a spell that saturates your surroundings with your patron's influence, so that those near you feel as if they are being crushed in deep water.

Vezzuvu enables you to create a volcanic emanation around your feet. Scalding mud bogs down those nearby, the mud growing hotter as they try to escape.

Solkara's Grasp — Primordial Adept Utility 2

You surround yourself with an aura that emulates the crushing pressure of the deeps.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Aura, Elemental
Minor Action Personal

Effect: You activate an aura 2 that lasts until the end of your next turn. Each creature that starts its turn in the aura is slowed, gains vulnerable 5 cold, and takes a -2 penalty to attack rolls until the start of its next turn.

Sustain Minor: The aura persists until the end of your next turn.

Vezzuvu's Tread — Primordial Adept Utility 2

Ground by your feet grows soft and hot, like the boiling mud on a volcano's flanks.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Aura, Elemental, Fire
Minor Action Personal

Effect: You activate an aura 2 that lasts until the end of your next turn. The aura is difficult terrain for all creatures except you. Any enemy that ends its turn in the aura farther from you than where it started its turn, or that willingly leaves the aura, takes 5 fire damage.

Sustain Minor: The aura persists until the end of your next turn.

Level 6 Utility Power

Solkara allows you to cover a wide area in slick ice. Unnaturally cold icicles jut like frozen trees from the icy mass.

If you venerate Vezzuvu, you can shape stone from your surroundings into temporary armor made of heated rock.

Solkara's Forest — Primordial Adept Utility 6

You call forth frigid water that quickly solidifies into slippery terrain and tree-like icicles.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Cold, Elemental, Zone
Standard Action Close burst 2

Effect: The burst creates a zone of ice that lasts until the end of the encounter. The zone is difficult terrain for all creatures except you and creatures that have ice walk. Any creature that is pushed, pulled, or slid while in the zone can be moved 1 additional square by the forced movement.

You also create up to three icicles, each in an unoccupied square in the burst. These icicles are blocking terrain. Any creature other than you that enters a square adjacent to an icicle, or ends its turn there, takes 5 cold damage. A creature can take this damage only once per turn.

Vezzuvu's Armor — Primordial Adept Utility 6

You gird yourself with crude armor made of volcanic rock.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Elemental, Fire
Minor Action Personal

Effect: You gain resist 5 fire and a +2 power bonus to AC and Fortitude. Any enemy that hits you with a melee attack takes 5 fire damage. These effects last until the end of your next turn.

Sustain Minor: The effect persists until the end of your next turn.

Level 10 Utility Power

The raw elements always surround you, ready to be shaped as you need. You can conjure elemental spirits to animate earth, water, or other elements around you, shaping them into humanoid forms that resemble elemental archons. You can deliver opportunity attacks through your conjured archons by striking out from your position—the conjurations ape your motions, forming crude limbs and weapons as needed.

Guardian Archons — Primordial Adept Utility 10

You conjure minor elemental spirits to impede your foes.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Conjuration, Elemental
Standard Action Close burst 5

Effect: You conjure three elemental guardians, each in an unoccupied square in the burst. They remain until the end of your next turn. Enemies cannot enter the guardians' spaces, but you and your allies can move through them. You can make opportunity attacks through each guardian as if you occupied its square.

Move Action: You move each guardian up to 3 squares.

Sustain Minor: The guardians persist until the end of your next turn.

WATERSHAPER

"I am the still pool and the tempestuous sea."

The versatility of elemental water manifests in the talents of the watershapers. These elemental devotees can wield water as a weapon, sending waves crashing into their enemies. With experience, a watershaper can discover water's subtler aspects. Such a master can use water to touch other minds, ease suffering, and alter one's appearance to stave off age or conceal one's physical connection to the Elemental Chaos.

Of all the expressions of elemental power in the world, the art of watershaping was not an accidental discovery. Most who know of it see it as a blessing from the kindly primordial Ben-hadar to ease the suffering created by the Dawn War. Some skeptics suggest that the "gift" was nothing more than a way to help the primordials maintain a foothold in the natural world. Regardless of the motive behind its existence, watershaping has helped mortals travel around the world by enabling them to brave the ocean's surface and explore its depths. All waterfaring people count themselves lucky if they have a watershaper in their midst.

Watershapers operate as advisors, envoys, and arbitrators in the communities they live in or near. They keep the peace, urging calm in their fellows. As reasonable and diplomatic as watershapers can be, they have a stormy side. When one is roused to violence, he or she can be a dangerous adversary.

Creating a Watershaper

Halflings, not surprisingly given their association with rivers and lakes, produce more watershapers than any other race. But the riverfolk do not share their secrets with other peoples, and an outsider must find some other way to learn watershaping. A primordial shard, especially one found at the bottom of a still pond or lodged in the rocks below a waterfall, might offer its possessor a relatively easy way to become a watershaper.

Aside from halflings, humans and elves are next most likely to learn this craft. As great explorers, humans brave the seas, searching for new lands and peoples. Elves honor the wilderness and might discover the power of elemental water in a sacred stream or a pool in a remote part of a forest.

Anyone with an interest in commanding the waves—even someone who has no previous life in or on the water—can nurture that interest and develop into a watershaper. Although any watershaper can become a warrior, and many are vaunted combatants, others find the talents they have cultivated are best used to aid the injured and bolster companions, contributing toward completing a shared quest in ways other than swinging a sword. Watershapers who adopt this lifestyle are almost always bards, since they can help their comrades and learn spells that take advantage of their water manifestations. A watershaper might also be a shaman, a druid, or, rarely, a cleric of Melora.

Starting Feature

Mastering elemental water requires a sacrifice of identity and self as you merge with the endless ocean. As the power floods in, you experience a transformation. Your skin assumes a blue or green hue, while your eyes grow large to help navigate the deep waters. You might develop gills on the sides of your neck, or webbing between your fingers and toes.

Benefit: Your origin becomes elemental. For the purpose of effects that relate to creature origin, you are considered to be an elemental. Add Primordial the languages you can read, write, and speak. You also gain the aquatic trait, so you can breathe underwater. In aquatic combat, you gain a +2 bonus to attack rolls against nonaquatic creatures. Further, you gain a swim speed equal to half your speed.

You also gain the buffeting wave power.

Buffeting Wave Watershaper Attack

At your command, a wall of water appears and crashes down.

Encounter ✦ Elemental
Standard Action Close blast 3
Target: Each creature in the blast
Attack: Highest ability modifier vs. Fortitude. You gain a +2 bonus to the attack roll.
Level 11: The bonus increases to +4.
Level 21: The bonus increases to +6.
Hit: 1d6 + highest ability modifier damage, and the target falls prone.
Level 11: 2d6 + highest ability modifier damage.
Level 21: 3d6 + highest ability modifier damage.

ELEMENTARY VIEWPOINT: HASHRA, THE WATER WITCH

It is amusing that so many consider water to be the weakest element. Earth has strength and mass, fire is destruction, and air is quickness and freedom. Each has its place, yet water possesses all of these traits. Ice can be as unyielding as stone. A torrential downpour can wipe out a community as easily as a wildfire. A whitewater river, a waterfall, or a spring cloudburst—all are quick enough for me, thank you. You see, with elemental water at my command, I can do what any of my peers can do, and more.

Level 5 Feature

As you learn more of the secrets of elemental water, you find yourself growing empathic toward others, as if you can feel their thoughts and sense their hurts. Your developing instincts help you improve your prowess in the healing arts, while also protecting you from deception and misdirection. When your own need for healing is great, the elemental water that sustains you can also renew an ally.

Benefit: You gain a +2 power bonus to Insight checks and Heal checks. In addition, whenever you use your second wind, one ally within 5 squares of you gains temporary hit points equal to your highest ability modifier.

Level 10 Feature

Violent blasts of water that you create linger in a swirling vortex that grabs at your enemies' feet and interferes with their movements. This effect reflects your arrival at the pinnacle of the watershaper's art.

Benefit: Whenever you use buffeting wave, the blast creates a zone that is difficult terrain for enemies until the end of your next turn.

Optional Powers

Water transforms, bestows life, and facilitates communication. When you became a watershaper, you learned to bring forth elemental water from the Plane Below. Now, your further study and deeper focus makes available more of water's myriad possibilities.

Level 2 Utility Power

As part of their repertoire of healing, many watershapers learn to use elemental water to wash away sickness, cleanse wounds, and ease discomfort. Safe harbor draws on water's restorative properties to help a friend in need.

Safe Harbor — Watershaper Utility 2

Elemental water rinses away all hurts and provides shelter until your companion can recover.

Daily ✦ Elemental, Healing
Minor Action Melee 1
Target: You or one ally
Effect: The target can spend a healing surge. Until the end of your next turn, the target gains a +2 power bonus to all defenses, and squares adjacent to the target are difficult terrain for enemies.

Level 6 Utility Power

Water is unlike other elemental forces in that it is both malleable and controllable. A watershaper can manifest these properties in his or her appearance, needing but a moment of preparation to appear as anyone he or she wishes. Most watershapers use this ability to maintain a youthful appearance.

JIM NELSON

Flowing Features — Watershaper Utility 6

You cause the tissues in your body to reshape themselves into a form more to your liking.

Encounter ✦ Elemental, Polymorph
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You alter your physical form to take on the appearance of any humanoid of your size. You retain your statistics in your new form, and your clothing, armor, and possessions do not change. You remain in your new form until you change form again or until you dismiss the form as a minor action.

Any creature that attempts to see through your ruse makes an Insight check opposed by your Bluff check. You gain a +5 bonus to your check.

Level 10 Utility Power

The ocean extends as far as the eye can see, spreading out to all corners in the world. Though vast distances might separate the ports of the world, water connects them all. Using elemental power in a similar fashion, you merge your consciousness with those around you. All of you share your thoughts and combine your talents to function better together than you would if you were apart.

Sea of Unity — Watershaper Utility 10

You create a profound link among you and your companions.

Daily ✦ Aura, Elemental
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You activate an aura 5 that lasts until the end of the encounter. You and each ally in the aura grant combat advantage for being flanked only if you and every ally in the aura are flanked. When one enemy in the aura grants combat advantage to you or an ally in the aura, that enemy grants combat advantage to you and each ally in the aura.

Windlord

"I soar, carried on currents of elemental air."

The mantle of the windlord is taken up by those who devote themselves to mastering elemental air, able to manipulate any expression of it from the lightest breeze to the most terrible gale.

A windlord might be a mortal who has pledged fealty to a primordial such as Chan, Yan-C-Bin, or another figure associated with elemental air or storms. Other individuals come to master the talents of the windlord after discovering a primordial relic or being transformed during an extended foray into the Elemental Chaos.

In some histories, the earliest windlords were eladrin mages who discovered how they could use elemental air to supplement their magical training. Legends go on to say that once these mages mastered the higher mysteries, they lost their fey heritage and soared through the air as eagles. Some claim that they still watch over the eladrin cities today, always circling, always vigilant until the day when they are vitally needed.

Other accounts hypothesize that the djinn handed down the secrets of becoming a windlord to mortal allies who had earned their trust. Support for this claim is found in frescoes in the ruined city of Badalada, perched atop a floating earthmote in the Elemental Chaos, that show djinn carrying what are obviously humans, elves, and other races through the air and teaching them to fly. If there were such connections between these races, they are long dead now, since the djinn presently show little interest in forging bonds with the people of the natural world.

A windlord who strikes out in the world does not go long without attracting a potential employer. One who does not pursue the life of an adventurer might find work as a spy or a scout. Being able to manipulate elemental air helps such an individual pick out sounds another person might not perceive. A windlord can hide on a high perch and monitor enemy movements, or find a path through the wilderness from the advantage of an aerial position.

Creating a Windlord

Best known for their speed and mobility, windlords are agile combatants, darting through the air and supplementing their attacks with gusts that rush in from nowhere. Many windlords use hit-and-run tactics, similar to those that might be employed by monks, rangers, and assassins. Although elemental air does not increase an attack's potency, it does help a combatant get into a superior position from where he or she can attack.

RANDY GALLEGOS

Mages, psions, druids, and others can use power over elemental air to make up for any shortcoming they might have in weapon use. With the increased maneuverability and defensive properties elemental air can provide, such implement wielders can better reach places where they can use their magic to the greatest effect.

Starting Feature

You must embrace the untamed nature of the Elemental Chaos to wield its power. Whether you came by this ability through a primordial shard or a forbidden ritual, or by spending too much time on this dangerous plane, you undergo a transformation into an elemental creature. Your skin pales, your eyes brighten, and a wispy breeze always stirs your hair and clothing.

You can call elemental air to spirit you aloft and lend a surprising movement aspect to your attacks. With elemental air in your pocket, so to speak, you find that the wind helps you run, climb, and jump. Your sensitivity to air clarifies your senses so that you can pick out small details and hear faint noises.

Benefit: Your origin becomes elemental. For the purpose of effects that relate to creature origin, you are considered to be an elemental. Add Primordial to the languages you can read, write, and speak. You gain a +2 power bonus to Athletics checks and Perception checks.

You also gain the wind fury assault power.

Wind Fury Assault — Windlord Attack

The wind carries you aloft, helping you deliver a punishing strike against a distant foe.

Encounter ✦ Elemental, Weapon
Standard Action Melee or Ranged weapon
Effect: You can fly up to your speed. At any point during this movement, you can make the following attack.
Target: One creature
Attack: Highest ability modifier vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + highest ability modifier damage, and you can slide the target 1 square.
Level 11: 2[W] + highest ability modifier damage.
Level 21: 3[W] + highest ability modifier damage.

Additional Features

Level 5 Feature

Elemental air is always with you, helping you fly farther. When you call upon your reserves, the wind rushes forth to repel any creatures that threaten you.

Benefit: Whenever an effect enables you to fly, you can fly 1 additional square. Further, whenever you use your second wind, you can push each creature adjacent to you 1 square.

Level 10 Feature

You have reached the apex of your control over elemental air. When you use your signature attack, a howling wind sends your target spinning away.

Benefit: Whenever you hit with wind fury assault, you slide the target up to a number of squares equal to your highest ability modifier.

Optional Powers

Upon becoming an elemental creature, you found the winds answering your call, rising in strength and building in intensity around you until you could leap through the air. As your familiarity with elemental air strengthens, so does your connection with the manifestations you can produce. Air is more than a gust or a violent storm. In the right hands, it can deflect missiles and keep your enemies from advancing on you. You can even learn how to distort the air so that a creature you shield in this fashion disappears from sight. The ultimate expression of your ability is when you can soar over a hazard or obstacle almost as well as a flying creature.

Level 2 Utility Power

When you use protective gale, winds swirl around you, snatching missiles from the air and hurling them away. So strong are these winds that your enemies find it a struggle to close on you.

Protective Gale — Windlord Utility 2

The wind rises up in a shell around you, hindering your enemies and deflecting their projectiles.

Encounter ✦ Aura, Elemental
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You activate an aura 2 that lasts until the end of your next turn. The aura is difficult terrain for enemies. You and each ally in the aura gain a +2 power bonus to AC and Reflex against ranged attacks.

Level 6 Utility Power

With a subtle trick, you can manipulate the air around you or another creature, changing it so that no light can pass through it. The distorted light causes the target to be invisible for as long as you concentrate.

Bend Light — Windlord Utility 6

Light seems to veer away from your target, and the creature abruptly vanishes.

Daily ✦ Elemental, Illusion
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: You or one creature
Effect: The target is invisible until the end of your next turn. If the target makes an attack, the invisibility ends.
Sustain Minor: If the target is within 10 squares of you, the invisibility persists until the end of your next turn.

Level 10 Utility Power

The potential of elemental air resides fully within you. Now, even your least effort can lift you up and into the air. You can leap across obstacles and reach distant ledges as though they were a step away.

Wind Step — Windlord Utility 10

For a few moments, the wind carries and holds you and then places you safely down again.

Encounter ✦ Elemental
Minor Action Personal
Effect: Until the end of your next turn, you have a fly speed of 8 and can hover. When this flight ends, you descend to the ground, taking no falling damage.

THE ZE'ISHAAL HUNTERS

The wild wastelands of the Shaar are home to a tribe of elf windlords who call themselves the Ze'ishaal. Fierce and proud, these nomads sometimes raid the Border Kingdoms or skirmish with patrols from the few cities and towns along the eastern shore of the Shining Sea. The Ze'ishaal are closely allied with elemental wind spirits, and they gain their unusual powers from a sacred oath or promise each warrior swears before the tribe's wind shamans. Although the settlers and townsfolk of neighboring lands dislike the Ze'ishaal, the elves are far more dangerous to the marauding humanoids and monsters of the Shaar Desolation than they are to civilized folk.

Classes

FIRE THAT never extinguishes. The ever-roaring wind. The groaning earth shuddering underfoot. The tidal wave that smashes all in its path: elemental power awaits your command. Elemental power in all its forms awaits your command.

If you want to play a druid that combines feral attributes with lightning claws, or you favor freezing your enemies in place with cold drawn from Cryonax's slumbering form, incorporating elemental magic into your arsenal provides a potent boost to your capabilities.

This chapter explores new options for elemental heroes, providing a pair of new subclasses and new options for existing classes. You'll find these sections in the following pages.

- Druid: New elemental-themed powers and a new primal aspect allow you to build a druid who transforms into an elemental beast. Sentinel druids gain access to a new build, the druid of the wastes.
- Monk: Two new monastic traditions, Desert Wind and Eternal Tide, are presented here, along with elemental and non-elemental powers suitable for any monk.
- Sorcerer: The elementalist is a new sorcerer subclass. Elementalist characters focus on a particular element, learning a few potent ways to harness elemental might. This section also contains utility powers suitable for any sorcerer.
- Warlock: Warlocks gain access to the elemental pact by making deals with ancient primordials. Both the classic warlock and the hexblade can take up the elemental pact.
- Wizard: The sha'ir is a new wizard subclass. Sha'irs are mysterious wizards who bind elementals to their service to gain access to secret magical power. This section also offers new powers for all wizards.

ZOLTAN BOROS

Druid

Druids are the natural world's champions and protectors. Communing with the primal spirits gives druids access to potent evocations that enable them to turn the world against their foes, whether by causing roots and vines to choke the life from their opponents or calling down storms to wash them away.

Yet underlying primal magic are the elemental forces at the heart of its creation. Here and there, one can find the hallmarks of the primordials' handiwork, places steeped in ancient magic that warps and transforms the spirits bound to those sites. Although druids confer with elemental-touched spirits in the same way they interact with other primal entities, the magic wielded by such a druid bears a striking similarity to that used by those who master the magic from the Elemental Chaos.

New Primal Aspect

When you choose your Primal Aspect, you can choose Primal Wrath instead of another option, such as those in Player's Handbook 2.

Primal Wrath: While you are not wearing heavy armor, you gain a +1 bonus to the attack rolls of druid attack powers and druid paragon path attack powers that have the cold, fire, lightning, or thunder keywords.

New Acolyte Feature

If you are a sentinel druid (see Heroes of the Forgotten Kingdoms), you can choose Druid of the Wastes for your Acolyte of the Natural Cycle class feature. This choice determines your animal companion, and it replaces the features described for Druid of Spring or Druid of Summer.

Druid of the Wastes

You draw your strength from the world's majestic desolate places—the icy wastes of the north, the bleak shores, the great sandy deserts, or the barren rocky mountains. In these places the primal spirits embody the living elements and take on elemental-like forms.

Benefit: You gain the following benefits.

- ✦ Your animal companion is a living zephyr.
- ✦ When wielding a spear or a staff, you gain a +1 shield bonus to AC and Reflex.
- ✦ You gain a +2 bonus to Endurance checks.

Druid of the Wastes: Living Zephyr

The living zephyr is a minor elemental that takes its shape from the terrain around it—dust, sand, snow, ocean spray, or sometimes wind.

Living Zephyr
Medium elemental magical beast

HP your bloodied value — Initiative equal to yours
AC 14, Fortitude 13, Reflex 14, Will 13 (add your level to each defense) — Perception equal to yours + 2
Speed 0, fly 6 (hover; altitude limit 2)

Traits

☼ Debris Cloud ✦ Aura 2
The aura is lightly obscured to enemies.

Standard Actions

⊕ Animal Attack ✦ At-Will
Attack: Melee 1 (one creature); your level + 5 vs. AC
Hit: 1d10 + your Wisdom modifier damage, and the zephyr can slide the target 1 square.
Level 13: 1d10 + 3 + your Wisdom modifier damage.
Level 23: 2d10 + 5 + your Wisdom modifier damage.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Str 12 | Dex 20 | Wis 14 |
| Con 17 | Int 3 | Cha 7 |

Level 13: Paragon of the Wastes

When sorely pressed by your foes, you briefly adopt the form of the elusive elements, giving ground like dust, sand, snow, or spray driven before the wind.

Benefit: The first time each encounter that you or your living zephyr companion becomes bloodied, you can use an immediate reaction to become insubstantial and shift up to 5 squares. You are insubstantial until the start of your next turn.

Level 17: Animal Companion Power

Your living zephyr is now so forceful that creatures caught in it can be lifted aloft and carried away.

Benefit: You gain the zephyr carry power.

Zephyr Carry — Druid Utility

Your companion is a concentrated gust that you can direct to bring its target through the air and into your clutches.

Encounter ✦ Primal
Free Action — Special
Trigger: Your living zephyr animal companion hits an enemy within 5 squares of you with animal attack.
Effect: You slide the living zephyr up to 3 squares, and then slide the enemy up to 5 squares to a square adjacent to the zephyr.

Level 27: Blessing of the Wastes

With a moment's thought, you can surround an ally in a whirling cloud of dust, sand, snow, or mist.

Elemental power stanches your ally's wounds and hides your friend from view.

Benefit: Whenever you use your second wind, choose one ally within 10 squares of you. That ally ends one ongoing damage effect that he or she is currently suffering, and the ally gains partial concealment until the end of your next turn.

New Druid Powers

The druid powers in this section expand on those found in Player's Handbook 2, Primal Power, Heroes of the Feywild, and other sources. These powers are among your options when you choose druid powers of the given levels.

Level 1 Daily Power

Whirlwind of Sand

Your bestial form dissolves into a swirling cloud of sand that builds speed until you become a veritable storm of roaring wind and hard-driven sand that can carve rock or flay flesh, accompanied by thunder that shakes the ground.

Whirlwind of Sand — Druid Attack 1

Scourging sand rakes the air around you. The fierce wind and drifting dust hinder your enemies' movement.

Daily ✦ Beast Form, Elemental, Implement, Primal, Thunder
Standard Action Close burst 1
Target: Each enemy in the burst
Attack: Wisdom vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d8 + Wisdom modifier thunder damage, and the target is slowed (save ends).
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: Until the end of the encounter, squares adjacent to you are difficult terrain for enemies.

Level 2 Utility Power

Dust Eddy

The primal spirits loosen the primal ban on your behalf, helping you draw elemental power through your bestial form and manifest it around you. Ash, dust, sand, or snow forms across your body, falls free, and swirls around you in a blinding cloud.

Dust Eddy — Druid Utility 2

You surround yourself with a violent swirl of wind that fills the air with dust and debris.

Encounter ✦ Aura, Beast Form, Elemental, Primal
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You gain partial concealment and activate an aura 1 that last until the end of your next turn or until you leave beast form. Any enemy that ends its turn in the aura is blinded until the end of your next turn.

Level 5 Daily Power

Brutal Erosion

This evocation applies the natural forces of erosion to an enemy, so that pieces of its body fall away each time you or an ally strikes it.

Brutal Erosion — Druid Attack 5

Primal magic erodes the creature you hit, much as the winds smooth hills and the waves devour coastlines.

Daily ✦ Elemental, Primal, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Target: One creature
Attack: Wisdom vs. AC
Hit: 2[W] + Wisdom modifier damage, and the target is subjected to brutal erosion (save ends). Until this effect ends, the target takes a –1 penalty to attack rolls and all defenses. This penalty worsens by 1 each time the target is hit by an attack (maximum penalty of –5).
Miss: Half damage, and the target is subjected to brutal erosion as above, but with a maximum penalty of –2 (save ends).

Level 6 Utility Power

Raise the Stones

The druids of old created stone circles to commune with the primal spirits, to mark the burial sites of great warriors, or to help study the stars. Raise the stones can provide cover from attacks and create an obstacle to impede your foes.

Raise the Stones — Druid Utility 6

You call to the spirits of earth, and a group of monoliths emerge from the ground.

Daily ✦ Elemental, Primal
Standard Action Close burst 10
Effect: You create six stone pillars in unoccupied squares on solid ground in the burst. The pillars are blocking terrain. Each pillar stands 10 feet tall and has AC 5, Fortitude 15, Reflex 5, and 30 hit points. A creature can climb a pillar with a DC 15 Athletics check. If a pillar is reduced to 0 hit points, its square and each square adjacent to it becomes rubble-strewn difficult terrain.

Level 9 Daily Power

Wildfire Aura

One of the biggest risks in wielding elemental fire is its tendency to get out of control. You learn to command the primal spirits that help you assume a monstrous form and open conduits to elemental fire. Ravenous flames wreathe you, flowing out to wash over your foes. The longer you let the flames run wild, the farther they spread.

Wildfire Aura — Druid Attack 9

Vicious spirits respond to your evocation with hungry flames that leap and dance around you.

Daily ✦ Aura, Beast Form, Elemental, Fire, Implement, Primal
Standard Action Close burst 1
Target: Each enemy in the burst
Attack: Wisdom vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d8 + Wisdom modifier fire damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: You activate an aura 1 that lasts until the end of the encounter or until you dismiss it as a minor action. Any enemy that ends its turn in the aura takes fire damage equal to your Wisdom modifier. Once per round as a minor action while you are in beast form, you can increase the aura's size by 1 (up to aura 5).

Level 10 Utility Power

Spirited Wind The spirits of elemental air offer their aid when you use spirited wind. They rush about you, gathering in numbers enough to carry you and a companion wherever you wish to go.

Spirited Wind — Druid Utility 10

A powerful gust circles around you and lifts you and an ally into the air.

Encounter ✦ Elemental, Primal
Move Action Close burst 1
Target: You and one ally in the burst
Effect: Each target can fly up to 6 squares as a free action, and gains a +4 power bonus to all defenses against opportunity attacks provoked by this movement.

Level 15 Daily Power

Jaws of Ice The spirits of winter answer your call and help you transform into a shaggy beast of snow and ice. This evocation is useful for pinning down enemies with elemental cold until they freeze to death.

Jaws of Ice — Druid Attack 15

Spirits of cold and winter swirl around you and trap enemies in ice that promises a slow demise.

Daily ✦ Aura, Beast Form, Cold, Elemental, Implement, Primal
Standard Action Close burst 1
Target: Each enemy in the burst
Attack: Wisdom vs. Fortitude
Hit: 3d10 + Wisdom modifier cold damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: You activate an aura 1 that lasts until the end of the encounter or until you dismiss it as a minor action. Enemies are slowed and cannot shift while in the aura. In addition, any enemy that ends its turn in the aura takes 10 cold damage and is grabbed.

Level 16 Utility Power

Chariot of Sustarre Sustarre, a renowned druid, learned how to summon a flaming chariot that can convey a group of companions through the sky.

Chariot of Sustarre — Druid Utility 16

In a thunderous clap, two fiery steeds appear, pulling a flaming chariot to carry you into battle.

Daily ✦ Elemental, Primal, Summoning
Standard Action Ranged 10
Effect: You summon the chariot of Sustarre in an unoccupied space within range. The chariot and its two steeds are treated as a single creature; they share hit points and cannot be separated.

The chariot lacks actions of its own. Instead, you spend actions to command it mentally, choosing from the actions in its description.

The chariot can hold up to four Medium creatures in a Large space centered on one of its edges. Entering or leaving that space costs 1 extra square of movement.

The chariot lasts until it is reduced to 0 hit points, at which point you lose a healing surge (or hit points equal to your surge value if you have no surges left). Otherwise, it lasts until you dismiss it as a minor action or until the end of the encounter.

PRIMAL SPIRITS OF THE WASTES

Druids are usually called to serve as the guardians of places rich in life and beauty—verdant forests, lush grasslands, or bountiful marshes. Those who are drawn to the untamed wilderness of the world's wastelands are dedicated to a different task. Druids of the waste deal with uncaring, even cruel, primal spirits that resent the boundaries of landscape and season confining them. These spirits need little guarding; instead, they are to be paid homage and, from time to time, placated with gifts or sacrifices. Three of these entities are briefly described here.

Biter with a Thousand Fangs: A spirit that embodies the ravenous insects and other small, scuttling creatures of deserts or desolate areas, the Biter is a fearsome and feral being, scarcely aware of itself. It can drive swarms of insects to wreak terrible destruction, but few druids dare call upon its aid.

Bone Vulture: A spirit of scavengers and decay, the Bone Vulture embodies the creatures that feed on death. It is old and patient, and often shows itself to those who are soon to die. Though it is a menacing spirit, the Bone Vulture is not malevolent; scavengers play their part in the cycle of life, too.

Old Tortoise: The Old Tortoise is a spirit of endurance and survival. It is associated with life's slow, steady growth in desolate places. When the desert blooms for a short time after a rain, nomad tribes honor the Old Tortoise for keeping its promise that life will find a way to flourish in any setting.

| Chariot of Sustarre | Level 16 Summoned Creature |
|---|---|
| Gargantuan elemental magical beast (fire) | |
| HP your bloodied value; Healing Surges none, but you can expend a healing surge for the chariot if an effect allows it to spend one | |
| Defenses your defenses, not including any temporary bonuses or penalties | |
| Speed 8, fly 8 (hover) | |
| ☼ Formed from Fire (fire) ✦ Aura 1 | |
| The aura is lightly obscured, and any enemy that ends its turn in the aura takes 10 fire damage. | |
| Cover | |
| The chariot grants partial cover to its occupants. | |
| Minor Action ✦ At-Will (1/round) | |
| Effect: The chariot walks, shifts, runs, stands up, squeezes, or crawls. | |
| Instinctive Effect | |
| If you haven't given the chariot any commands by the end of your turn, the chariot moves half its speed if it can. If you are outside the chariot, it must end this movement closer to you than where it began the movement. | |

Level 19 Daily Power

Ravaging Lightning

You can use the primal power sustaining your beast form to attract elemental lightning to dance across your body. You leap forward, releasing crackling death against those in your path. The lingering energy intensifies with each hostile action your victims make.

| Ravaging Lightning | Druid Attack 19 |
|---|---|
| Lightning envelops your claws as your strike marks an opponent for the reprisals of the primal storm spirits. | |
| Daily ✦ Beast Form, Elemental, Implement, Lightning, Primal | |
| Standard Action | Melee 1 |
| Target: One or two creatures | |
| Attack: Wisdom vs. Reflex | |
| Hit: 4d8 + Wisdom modifier lightning damage. | |
| Miss: Half damage. | |
| Effect: The target is subjected to ravaging lightning (save ends). If the target makes an attack, it cannot make saving throws against this effect until the start of its next turn. When the target misses with an attack, it grants combat advantage until the start of its next turn and takes lightning damage equal to your Wisdom modifier. | |

SLAWOMIR MANIAK

A druid in animal form uses jaws of ice to rend and freeze an orc at the same time

Level 22 Utility Power

Elemental Passage

You realize a deeper understanding of the fundamental kinship between the natural world and the Elemental Chaos and can move freely between these realms. When you return from the Elemental Chaos, you bring back some of the energy of that dire plane.

Elemental Passage Druid Utility 22

You step sideways and disappear. Your return brings with it screaming winds and flickering flames, roaring waves and trembling earth.

Daily ✦ Elemental, Primal
Move Action Personal
Effect: You are removed from play until the start of your next turn. You then reappear in an unoccupied space within 10 squares of the space you last occupied. When you return to play, roll a d4 to determine the effect that occurs.

1. Air: You pull each creature within 3 squares of you up to 2 squares.
2. Earth: Each square within 2 squares of you becomes difficult terrain until the end of the encounter.
3. Fire: Each creature adjacent to you gains vulnerable 5 fire until the end of your next turn.
4. Water: You push each creature adjacent to you up to 2 squares.

Level 25 Daily Powers

Summon Elemental Warrior

In much the same way as the primordials manipulated raw chaos to make it assume a fixed state, you have learned to loosen the bonds that hold substance together and return it to the primordial state. In this form, you can direct it to obey your every command.

Summon Elemental Warrior Druid Attack 25

An elemental being forms at your command, its raw, violent nature only just constrained by your will.

Daily ✦ Elemental, Primal, Summoning
Minor Action Ranged 10
Effect: You summon an elemental warrior in an unoccupied space within range. The elemental is a type you choose: air, earth, fire, or water. The creature is an ally to you and your allies.

The elemental lacks actions of its own. Instead, you spend actions to command it mentally, choosing from the actions in the elemental's description. You must have line of effect to the elemental to command it. When you command the elemental, you and the elemental share knowledge but not senses.

When the elemental makes a check, you make the roll using your game statistics, not including any temporary bonuses or penalties.

The elemental lasts until it drops to 0 hit points, at which point you lose a healing surge (or hit points equal to your surge value if you have no surges left). Otherwise, it lasts until you dismiss it as a minor action or until the end of the encounter.

Elemental Warrior (Air) Summoned Creature
Large elemental humanoid (air)

HP your bloodied value; Healing Surges none, but you can expend a healing surge for the elemental if an effect allows it to spend one
Defenses your defenses, not including any temporary bonuses or penalties
Speed 0, fly 10 (hover)

ǂ Standard Action ✦ At-Will
Attack: Melee 2 (one creature); your level + 5 vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d8 + your Wisdom modifier damage, and the target is marked by the elemental until the end of your next turn. The target is also immobilized and takes ongoing 10 damage (save ends both). This effect ends if the target is ever more than 2 squares away from the elemental.

Minor Action ✦ At-Will (1/round)
Effect: The elemental either walks, shifts, runs, stands up, squeezes, or crawls.

Opportunity Action ✦ At-Will
Trigger: An enemy that is marked by the elemental moves without shifting or uses an attack power that does not include the elemental as a target.
Effect: The elemental uses its standard action attack against the triggering enemy.

Elemental Warrior (Earth) Summoned Creature
Large elemental humanoid (earth)

HP your bloodied value; Healing Surges none, but you can expend a healing surge for the elemental if an effect allows it to spend one
Defenses your defenses, not including any temporary bonuses or penalties
Speed 5, burrow 5

ǂ Standard Action ✦ At-Will
Attack: Melee 2 (one creature); your level + 5 vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d8 + your Wisdom modifier damage, and one enemy adjacent to the target takes damage equal to 10 + your Wisdom modifier. The target cannot shift and is marked by the elemental until the end of your next turn.

Minor Action ✦ At-Will (1/round)
Effect: The elemental either walks, shifts, runs, stands up, squeezes, or crawls.

Opportunity Action ✦ At-Will
Trigger: An enemy that is within 2 squares of the elemental and is marked by it moves without shifting or uses an attack power that does not include the elemental as a target.
Effect: The elemental uses its standard action attack against the triggering enemy.

Elemental Warrior (Fire) Summoned Creature

HP your bloodied value; Healing Surges none, but you can expend a healing surge for the elemental if an effect allows it to spend one
Defenses your defenses, not including any temporary bonuses or penalties
Speed 6, swim 6

Standard Action ✦ At-Will
Attack: Melee 2 (one creature); your level + 5 vs. Reflex
Hit: 3d8 + your Wisdom modifier damage, and the elemental pushes the target up to 2 squares and knocks it prone. The target is marked by the elemental until the end of your next turn.

Minor Action ✦ At-Will (1/round)
Effect: The elemental either walks, shifts, runs, stands up, squeezes, or crawls.

Opportunity Action ✦ At-Will
Trigger: An enemy that is within 2 squares of the elemental and is marked by it moves without shifting or uses an attack power that does not include the elemental as a target.
Effect: The elemental uses its standard action attack against the triggering enemy.

Wicker Man

Druids who hold congress with the more sinister primal spirits sometimes go to great lengths to appease their spiritual benefactors. The wicker man power holds a sacrifice in place while roaring fires cook it alive.

Wicker Man Druid Attack 25

You create a ghastly wicker man, a great looming monstrosity that entraps your enemies. The howls and screams of caught foes are almost drowned out by the roaring flames.

Daily ✦ Conjuration, Elemental, Fire, Implement, Primal
Standard Action Ranged 20

Effect: You conjure a Huge wicker man on the ground within range. The wicker man occupies its space. The wicker man can be attacked, has hit points equal to your bloodied value, and shares your defenses. The wicker man lasts until it drops to 0 hit points or until the end of your next turn. Any creature that enters a square adjacent to the wicker man or ends its turn there takes fire damage equal to your Wisdom modifier (a creature can take this damage only once per turn).

When the wicker man first appears, you make the following attack.

Target: Each creature in the wicker man's space
Attack: Wisdom vs. Reflex
Hit: The target is restrained (escape DC 33). Until this effect ends, the target takes ongoing 10 fire damage. In addition, the target has line of sight and line of effect only to things inside the wicker man, and no creature outside the wicker man has line of sight or line of effect to it. The effect ends if the target is entirely outside the wicker man.
Miss: You slide the target up to 2 squares to a square adjacent to the wicker man. The target then falls prone.

Sustain Minor: The wicker man persists until the end of your next turn. Each creature restrained inside the wicker man takes 2d10 + your Wisdom modifier fire damage.

Blizzard's Embrace

While in your monstrous form, you draw forth primal spirits infused with elemental cold, luring them to your side with promises of light and warmth. The spirits feast upon your enemies and prevent their escape with claws of elemental ice.

Blizzard's Embrace Druid Attack 29

Your strike sets the spirits of elemental cold against your enemies in a storm of snow, wind, and ice.

Daily ✦ Beast Form, Cold, Elemental, Implement, Primal, Zone
Standard Action Close burst 2
Target: Each enemy in the burst
Attack: Wisdom vs. Fortitude
Hit: 4d8 + Wisdom modifier damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: The burst creates a zone that lasts until the end of the encounter. For enemies, the zone is heavily obscured and difficult terrain. In addition, any enemy that ends its turn in the zone takes 10 cold damage and is restrained until the start of its next turn.

Monk

The ancient disciplines that monks practice require harmony of body and mind. Those who achieve this state can translate thought into action, pushing past what is possible for normal mortals.

An unconventional warrior, a monk has no need for weighty armor or military weaponry. Hands, feet, elbows, and head serve a monk just as well as a sword or an axe, while speed and agility help monks evade their enemies' attacks.

Neither introspective study nor physical training makes monks what they are. Their secret lies in a reservoir of mental power known as psionic energy. By practicing combat techniques and spending long periods in meditation, a monk learns to channel this energy, whether to empower an unarmed strike or to leap through the air as if he or she were flying. Psionic power magnifies a monk's strength and quickness until they reach superhuman levels. Monks think nothing of racing across a still pool or balancing on a sword's point. And they don't balk when confronted with a heavily armored foe, since they know their strikes are effective against even the stoutest armor.

Monks do not learn their fighting arts through trial and error. Each one must seek out a master to learn how to find the psionic energy within the mind and then harness it. Many masters are hermits, free from the distractions of the civilized world. Others are found in monasteries where potential students can learn techniques from a variety of instructors to develop a style that fits each one's tastes and talents.

Some of these monasteries stand on mist-shrouded mountaintops reachable only by a thousand-step climb up a staircase fraught with danger. Others rise from tiny islands rendered nearly imperceptible by an ever-present fog. A few schools operate within civilization, sometimes even inside a city, so anyone who aspires to become a monk has a good chance of finding a place to study.

Most initiates who enter a monastery find little reason to leave. For such individuals, training is a never-ending endeavor—there is always something to learn from the venerable masters. Many monks therefore content themselves with a simple life spent exploring the mind's power, perfecting their bodies, and studying the philosophy that underpins their disciplines.

Each discipline a monk learns originates from a philosophical understanding about the world and expresses that philosophy through a movement technique and an attack. Most students cleave to one philosophy or combat style to start, but some gradually incorporate disciplines from other philosophies as they widen their experience and hone their fighting abilities.

These more accomplished students, possessed of a broad range of disciplines, are capable of meeting the equally wide variety of challenges that the outside world presents. The monks in this latter group are the ones who decide to leave the monastery and find themselves well suited to the adventurer's life. Gold and glory are not motivations for most adventuring monks; they are driven by other goals that they share with heroes of all sorts: seeking out worthy opponents, finding new masters to learn from, and fighting the darkness that would ruin the world.

CREATING A MONK

Player's Handbook 3 contains the rules for creating monk player characters. Psionic Power contains additional rules for monk characters, including a new build, powers, paragon paths, and feats designed specifically for monks.

The Sublime Way

Some monks subscribe to an elemental-based philosophy that its adherents call the Sublime Way. These monks discern the world beyond perception by harnessing elemental magic with the power of their minds.

Students of the Sublime Way seek to attain enlightenment by unifying thought and action, just as all monks do, but these individuals strive to transcend their mortal existence and achieve a state in the world as it truly is—a universe of pure energy and endless possibility.

If the Sublime Way represents a destination, the monastic traditions within this philosophy are roads leading to it. Followers of the Sublime Way regard one's internal energy as the fundamental force in reality—an energy that is bound into discrete forms, yet at the same time unified. This energy is, of course, elemental power, the residual forces of chaos left behind from creation.

New Monastic Traditions

Each route to the Sublime Way is rooted in ancient mysticism, meditation, and spiritual awakening. A monastic tradition embodies a path to personal discovery, and following that path focuses your psionic reserves so you can sense the world beyond perception and harness the elemental energy coruscating all around you. A monastic tradition provides more than a philosophical understanding of the world—it shapes the way you engage the world, whether by opening doors to new possibilities or by offering you

A monk of the Eternal Tide tradition has no trouble staying ahead of her fiendish pursuer

the foundational techniques you can use to protect yourself.

This book introduces two monastic traditions that have ties to the Sublime Way. When you create a monk, Desert Wind and Eternal Tide are among your choices for the Monastic Tradition class feature.

Desert Wind

After the fall of Arkhosia, many dragonborn retreated to the deep deserts to contemplate their empire's collapse and find a way to overcome the loss. What began as refugee camps evolved into genuine communities, their members united by a common belief and hope for the future—and in some cases these ideas became something more. The Desert Wind tradition reflects these survivors' triumph over the harshness of a life spent under the desert sun. These warriors learned to ease their discomfort by using the elemental fire within themselves as a shield and a weapon.

Monks of the Desert Wind tradition emulate these predecessors as they rush into battle, spin away from threats, and scorch enemies with strikes bolstered by elemental fire. Like all monks, you need a high Dexterity score to perform your disciplines. Manifesting elemental fire requires a strong, confident outlook, so Charisma should be your second-highest ability score. Consider Constitution for your third-best score to increase your durability.

If you choose the Desert Wind monastic tradition, you gain the following class features.

Desert Wind Flurry of Blows

You are as a screaming blast of heat that blisters anything in your path. Your strikes release elemental flame that you can hurl against your enemies.

Desert Wind Flurry of Blows Monk Feature

A successful attack ignites your mind's power, causing lambent flames to dance across your body and sear your enemies.

At-Will ✦ Elemental, Fire, Psionic
No Action Melee 1
Trigger: You hit with an attack during your turn.
Target: One creature
Level 11: One or two creatures
Level 21: Each enemy adjacent to you
Effect: The target takes 2 + your Charisma modifier fire damage. If the target wasn't targeted by the triggering attack, it also takes a -2 penalty to attack rolls for any attack that includes you as a target until the end of your next turn. You can then shift 1 square.
Special: You can use this power only once per round.

Mental Crucible
Incorporating elemental fire into your fighting techniques gives you an edge when confronting fire-using creatures. The flames bend away from you, as if unwilling to touch you.

Benefit: You gain resist 5 fire. The resistance increases to 10 at 11th level and 15 at 21st level. If you already have fire resistance that is equal to or higher than this value, increase it by 2.

Eternal Tide

History tells how the githzerai fled from their corrupted cousins, the githyanki, and of their own struggles to come to terms with the conflict shaping their thoughts. They sought refuge in the Elemental Chaos, thinking their estranged kin would not follow, not realizing that the tumultuous landscape was like a mirror of their souls. As the githzerai became acclimated to their new environment, they discovered that by concentrating on their surroundings, they could control the swirling chaos. And then they realized that if they could control the chaos without, they could do the same for the chaos in their hearts.

Since the githzerai established the Eternal Tide tradition, its methods have spread beyond the Elemental Chaos, and its disciplines are now taught in some academies.

As with any monk, Dexterity should be your highest ability score. Many disciplines require you to respond to force with equal force, so Strength should be your next highest ability score. Wisdom is a good choice for your third-highest ability score, to improve your awareness and resist mental assaults.

If you choose the Eternal Tide monastic tradition, you gain the following class features.

Eternal Tide Flurry of Blows
When you strike a foe, you can compel another to face you. The stronger you become, the greater the number of enemies that find themselves drawn toward you.

Eternal Tide Flurry of Blows — Monk Feature

You unleash psionic energy in the wake of your initial attack to wrench another enemy into your reach.

At-Will ✦ Elemental, Psionic
No Action Melee 2
Trigger: You hit with an attack during your turn.
Target: One creature
Level 11: One or two creatures
Level 21: One, two, or three creatures
Effect: The target takes damage equal to your Strength modifier, and you can pull the target 1 square. If the target wasn't targeted by the triggering attack, it is slowed until the end of your next turn.
Special: You can use this power only once per round.

Mental Balance
You interact with the world differently from how others do. You see cosmic forces in all things, and you perceive elemental energy emanating from your environment, fighting to escape the hold of order. Your understanding of balance helps you to thwart your enemies' attacks and also to turn any motion used against you to your advantage.

Benefit: Whenever an enemy would pull, push, or slide you, you can reduce the forced movement by 1 square. After the forced movement is resolved, you can shift 1 square as a free action.

New Monk Powers

These powers are among your options when you choose monk powers of the given levels. The powers are particularly suitable for monks who choose Desert Wind or Eternal Tide for their monastic tradition.

Level 1 At-Will Powers

Blistering Flourish
When you perform blistering flourish, you fix in your mind the image of a candle flame and feed psionic energy into the image. Until it fades, elemental fire adds potency to your strikes and punishes enemies that would stop your progress.

Blistering Flourish — Monk Attack 1

Executing movements in a complex pattern brings forth elemental fire to aid the next attack you make.

At-Will ✦ Elemental, Fire, Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic
Attack Technique
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 1d8 + Dexterity modifier damage. Until the end of your next turn, your melee attacks deal extra fire damage equal to your Charisma modifier.
Level 21: 2d8 + Dexterity modifier damage.
Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You move up to your speed. Enemies that hit you with opportunity attacks provoked by this movement take fire damage equal to 2 + your Charisma modifier.

Crashing Wave
No barrier can stop a tidal wave; no obstacle can halt its progress. Crashing wave lets you push through your foes so you can focus on the target you want to strike.

Crashing Wave — Monk Attack 1

Surging forward through your enemies' ranks, you deliver a resounding strike to send an enemy reeling.

At-Will ✦ Elemental, Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic
Attack Technique
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Hit: 1d8 + Dexterity modifier damage, and you can slide the target 1 square.
Level 21: 2d8 + Dexterity modifier damage.
Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You shift up to a number of squares equal to half your Strength modifier. You can shift through enemies' spaces during this move.

Level 1 Encounter Powers

Balance Restored

Monks of the Eternal Tide adopt fighting styles that enable them to turn their enemies' strength against those foes.

Balance Restored — Monk Attack 1

Dropping into a wide stance helps you deliver the greatest impact, while also ensuring that you can deal with any counterattacks that follow.

Encounter ✦ Elemental, Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic
Attack Technique
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Hit: 1d10 + Dexterity modifier damage, and you push the target up to a number of squares equal to half your Strength modifier.
Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You shift 1 square. The next time an adjacent enemy hits you before the start of your next turn, you can knock that enemy prone after the attack is resolved.

Call up the Savage Wind

Your emotions stir up the air. The winds follow your movement, helping you across obstacles in your path.

Call up the Savage Wind — Monk Attack 1

A stiff gust rises up to scatter your enemies and speed you over treacherous terrain.

Encounter ✦ Elemental, Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic
Attack Technique
Standard Action Close blast 3
Target: Each creature in the blast
Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Hit: 1d8 + Dexterity modifier damage.
Effect: You can slide each target 1 square.
Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You move up to your speed, ignoring difficult terrain.

Light the Fire

Focusing your mind on elemental fire while you meditate makes it easier for you to use psionic energy and call it forth. Light the fire throws open your mental doors to scourge your opponents.

Light the Fire — Monk Attack 1

Bright flames dance across your body, scorching enemies you strike and swirling around you to immolate foes in your reach.

Encounter ✦ Aura, Elemental, Fire, Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic
Attack Technique
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d8 + Dexterity modifier fire damage.
Effect: You activate an aura 1 that lasts until the start of your next turn. Any enemy that starts its turn in the aura takes fire damage equal to 2 + your Charisma modifier.
Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You shift up to 2 squares.

Level 1 Daily Powers

Cyclone Scourge

Your thoughts whirl around you as you hurtle through the air. Winds gain strength and follow you as you crash down on your foe. Your attack produces a swirling vortex that spirals out of control, flinging away everything in its path.

Cyclone Scourge — Monk Attack 1

You leap into the air, gathering up winds to help you smash your enemy and trap it in a swirling column of destruction.

Daily ✦ Elemental, Implement, Psionic, Zone
Standard Action Close blast 3
Effect: Before the attack, you fly up to your speed to a square adjacent to an enemy.
Target: One creature in the blast
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d6 + Dexterity modifier damage, and the target is immobilized (save ends).
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: The blast creates a zone that lasts until the end of your next turn. You can move the zone up to 3 squares as a move action. Once per turn, when a creature other than you enters the zone or ends its turn there, you can slide that creature up to 2 squares as a free action.
Sustain Minor: The zone persists until the end of your next turn.

Reflection in Water
You can quickly size up an enemy and detect its weaknesses. When you use reflection in water, you concentrate your attention on imminent threats and undermine an enemy's attacks with your own superior positioning.

Reflection in Water — Monk Attack 1

Fixing your attention on a single opponent lets you mirror its movements with swift strikes and counterstrikes.

Daily ✦ Elemental, Implement, Psionic, Stance
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d6 + Dexterity modifier damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: You assume the reflection in water stance. Until the stance ends, you gain combat advantage against any enemy adjacent to at least one of your allies. Also, when an enemy adjacent to you misses you with an attack, you can use an immediate reaction to swap places with it (the enemy slides 1 square, and you shift 1 square).

Risen Sun
Your passion and fury ignite your psionic reservoir, causing your mental energy to manifest as flame. Before the fire gutters out, you can hurl it against your foes in a sheet of brilliant agony.

Risen Sun — Monk Attack 1

Your wrath ignites your thoughts and causes them to erupt into liquid flames that rush out and incinerate anything near you.

Daily ✦ Aura, Elemental, Fire, Implement, Psionic
Standard Action Close blast 3
Target: Each enemy in the blast
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d6 + Dexterity modifier damage, and ongoing 5 fire damage (save ends).
Each Failed Saving Throw: You can slide the target 1 square as a free action.
Effect: You activate an aura 1 that lasts until the end of your next turn. Any enemy that enters the aura or ends its turn there takes fire damage equal to your Dexterity modifier. A creature can take this damage only once per turn.

Level 2 Utility Powers

Cat and Mouse
Every enemy has a blind spot; you just have to find it. When you strike your foe, you can use cat and mouse to slip away and set up your next attack.

Cat and Mouse — Monk Utility 2

You step into your enemy's blind spot after a successful attack and leave it casting about to find you.

Encounter ✦ Psionic
Free Action Personal
Trigger: You hit an enemy with a melee attack.
Effect: You shift up to 3 squares to a square adjacent to the enemy. Until the start of your next turn or until you take damage from an attack, you have total concealment against that enemy.

Eye in the Sky
By emptying your mind of all distractions, you elevate your awareness and thereby perceive the battlefield from a different perspective. While in this state, you can anticipate your enemies' movements and react accordingly.

Eye in the Sky — Monk Utility 2

You attune your mind to the dangers at hand, and when an enemy closes, you step out of its reach.

Encounter ✦ Psionic, Stance
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You assume the eye in the sky stance. Until the stance ends, you gain a +5 power bonus to Perception checks, and you can use the secondary power at will.
Secondary Power (Psionic)
Immediate Interrupt Personal
Trigger: An enemy enters a square adjacent to you.
Effect: You can shift 1 square to a square adjacent to the triggering enemy. You gain a +2 power bonus to all defenses against that enemy's attacks until the end of this turn.

Reed in the Wind
You turn your enemy's momentum to your advantage. When a foe attacks, you roll with the strike and set up a vicious counter.

Reed in the Wind — Monk Utility 2

You spin away from the attack, only to snap back with a quick threat of your own.

Encounter ✦ Psionic
Immediate Reaction Personal
Trigger: An enemy attacks you.
Effect: You gain temporary hit points equal to your Dexterity modifier, and you gain combat advantage against the triggering enemy until the end of your next turn.

Level 3 Encounter Powers

Bonecrusher
Drawing from your psionic reservoir enables you to focus your thoughts and their strength into one brutal strike. An enemy hit by this attack finds itself stripped of its defenses.

Bonecrusher — Monk Attack 3

A sickening crunch sounds from your opponent when you land your strike. Its pain bolsters your confidence to keep fighting.

Encounter ✦ Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic
Attack Technique
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Hit: 2d8 + Dexterity modifier damage, and the target takes a -2 penalty to all defenses until the end of your next turn.
Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You shift 1 square. Until the end of your next turn, you gain a +2 power bonus to AC and Fortitude.

Burning Brand

One of the signature disciplines of the Desert Wind tradition, burning brand lodges a seed of flame in a creature—a seed that detonates with any impact.

Burning Brand Monk Attack 3

Your strike leaves behind a fiery imprint that explodes the next time the target is struck. Wielding fire in this way wreathes you in concealing smoke.

Encounter ✦ Elemental, Fire, Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic

Attack Technique
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d8 + Dexterity modifier damage. The first time the target takes damage from an attack before the start of your next turn, the target and each of your enemies adjacent to it take fire damage equal to 3 + your Charisma modifier.

Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You move up to your speed + 2. You have partial concealment during this movement.

Frozen Moment

The Eternal Tide teaches that reality is not unlike a vast ocean, and all things in it are part of a larger whole. Frozen moment uses elemental cold to intensify the connection between you and your opponent so neither of you can escape the other.

Frozen Moment Monk Attack 3

Your strike pins down your enemy, forcing it to face you.

Encounter ✦ Elemental, Cold, Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic

Attack Technique
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Hit: 2d6 + Dexterity modifier cold damage, and the target is immobilized until the end of your next turn.

Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: Until the start of your next turn, you are immobilized and gain resistance to all damage equal to 3 + your Strength modifier.

Level 5 Daily Powers

Calm Before the Storm

Clearing your mind of fear and doubt helps you achieve enough clarity to anticipate attacks and foil them. Most of the time your instincts are right, but misjudging your opponent might expose you to even greater danger.

Calm Before the Storm Monk Attack 5

You feel calm settle over you, and you see your situation with new eyes. Reading your enemies' thoughts helps you strike before their own attacks can land.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic, Stance
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Hit: 2d6 + Dexterity modifier damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: You enter the calm before the storm stance. Until the stance ends, you are slowed, and you can use the secondary power at will.

Secondary Power (Implement, Psionic)
Immediate Interrupt Melee 1
Trigger: An enemy adjacent to you makes an attack.
Target: The triggering enemy
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 1d8 + Dexterity modifier damage, and the target falls prone.
Miss: You grant combat advantage to the target until the start of your next turn.

Overwhelming Mountain Strike

After innumerable hours spent sharpening your fighting prowess, you know where to strike to cripple your opponent. The target of overwhelming mountain strike must devote all its effort to moving if it would withdraw.

Overwhelming Mountain Strike Monk Attack 5

Your strike against a pressure point robs your enemy of its ability to maneuver effectively. Until it recovers, you keep it pinned down.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Hit: 2d8 + Dexterity modifier damage, and the target is dazed (save ends).
Aftereffect: The target is slowed until the end of its next turn.
Miss: Half damage, and the target is slowed until the end of your next turn.

Salamander Charge

Students of the Desert Wind can call upon elemental fire with a simple gesture or maneuver. Salamander charge represents your growing control over flame and your ability to direct it where it can be most effective.

Salamander Charge — Monk Attack 5

Your motions gather elemental fire, and you leave a fiery trail behind you as you close in to destroy your opponent.

Daily ✦ Elemental, Fire, Implement, Psionic, Zone
Standard Action Melee touch
Effect: You move up to your speed. The squares you leave become a zone that lasts until the end of your next turn. Any creature that enters the zone or starts its turn there takes fire damage equal to your Dexterity modifier. A creature can take this damage only once per turn.
At the end of the move, make the following attack.
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 4d6 fire damage.
Miss: Half damage.

Level 6 Utility Powers

Break the Dam

When an enemy's attack finds its mark, this power enables you to act instinctively to prevent a second strike. Your subconscious mind speeds you away from the danger threatening you.

Break the Dam — Monk Utility 6

You use the pain of an enemy's blow to draw more deeply from your psionic reservoir and quit your position for a safer one.

Encounter ✦ Psionic
Immediate Reaction Personal
Trigger: An enemy hits you with an attack.
Effect: You shift up to half your speed.

Fresh Start

You know how to channel your mental prowess into giving yourself a surge of vitality and, at the same time, the uncanny ability to slip into a new position on the battlefield.

Fresh Start — Monk Utility 6

All in a whisper of time, you call upon your mental reserves to invigorate you while willing yourself to dart to a better location.

Daily ✦ Healing, Psionic
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You can spend a healing surge, and then shift up to 2 squares.

Roll the Boulder

This discipline enables you to bridge the gap between the mental and the physical. Enemies that you move forcibly are nearly helpless to resist your manipulation.

Roll the Boulder — Monk Utility 6

To your enemies, you seem to swell in size and stature, your body made more formidable by your mind's strength.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Stance
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You enter the roll the boulder stance. Until the stance ends, you gain a +2 power bonus to the distance of your pushes, pulls, and slides, and you gain a +4 power bonus to Strength checks and Strength-based skill checks.

Level 7 Encounter Powers

Deafening Howl

Monks who know how to manipulate elemental air can draw the substance from the Plane Below to aid them. Deafening howl is a useful discipline since it helps you reach foes beyond the battle lines.

Deafening Howl — Monk Attack 7

You vault into the air, soaring over your enemies to land in their midst and roar in defiance.

Encounter ✦ Elemental, Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic, Thunder
Attack Technique
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d10 + Dexterity modifier thunder damage.
Effect: Each creature adjacent to you becomes deafened until the end of your next turn.
Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You fly up to your speed.

Fiery Serpent

Monks who study the Desert Wind tradition wield elemental fire as a weapon. Fiery serpent extends your reach to harry enemies that manage to slip away from you.

Fiery Serpent — Monk Attack 7

A snaking flame extends from your hand and snaps through the air to strike a distant opponent. The flames you call forth linger, adding their power to your next fire attack.

Encounter ✦ Elemental, Fire, Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic
Attack Technique
Standard Action Ranged 5
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d8 + Dexterity modifier fire damage.
Miss: One enemy within 5 squares of you other than the target takes 1d8 fire damage.
Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You shift up to half your speed. Until the end of your next turn, you gain a +2 power bonus to fire damage rolls.

Giant's Grasp
This power enables you to ensnare an enemy and drag it with you in an almost unbreakable grip. You simply believe that the target cannot escape you, and that belief becomes fact.

Giant's Grasp — Monk Attack 7

You snap your hand out to grab your foe. As you tighten your grip, the enemy howls in pain.

Encounter ✦ Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic
Attack Technique
Standard Action Melee touch
Requirement: You must have at least one hand free.
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d6 + Dexterity modifier damage, and you grab the target. Until the end of your next turn, the target takes a penalty to escape attempts equal to your Strength modifier.
Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You move up to your speed. If you are grabbing a creature, the creature moves with you. This movement does not provoke opportunity attacks from creatures you have grabbed.

Level 9 Daily Powers

Lightning Leap
Freeing the energy that your mind creates can produce destructive and surprising results. When you use this discipline, this energy becomes slashing lightning that provides you with an escape from enemies that surround you.

Lightning Leap — Monk Attack 9

The lightning that scorches your enemies also speeds you away, and thunder offers a cacophonous accompaniment.

Daily ✦ Elemental, Implement, Lightning, Psionic, Thunder
Standard Action Close burst 1
Primary Target: Each creature in the burst
Primary Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 1d8 + Dexterity modifier lightning damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: You jump up to 5 squares without provoking opportunity attacks. Then make the secondary attack.
Close burst 1
Secondary Target: Each creature in the burst
Secondary Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Hit: 1d8 + Dexterity modifier thunder damage.
Miss: Half damage.

Stone Juggernaut
Some seekers of the Sublime Way can transform themselves by using their minds to harness the might of elemental earth. Stone juggernaut turns you into an unstoppable force on the battlefield.

ANNA CHRISTENSON

Using the wind as a springboard is a common tactic for a monk who can manipulate elemental air

A monk who uses break the stone becomes impervious and immovable, taking on those aspects of elemental earth

JIM NELSON

Stone Juggernaut — Monk Attack 9

Attuning your mind to elemental earth triggers your transformation into a stone juggernaut. Your every strike causes the earth to fracture and enemies to fall.

Daily ✦ Polymorph, Psionic
Minor Action — Personal
Effect: You assume the form of the stone juggernaut until the end of the encounter. While in this form, you have a +2 power bonus to all defenses and can make saving throws against slowing, immobilizing, or restraining effects at the start of your turn as well as the end of your turn. The form also enables you to ignore difficult terrain and use the secondary power at will.

Secondary Power (Implement, Psionic)
Standard Action — Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d6 + Dexterity modifier damage, and the target falls prone.

Tsunami Throw

Mastering the secrets of the Eternal Tide enables you to invert an enemy's aggression so that it becomes an asset you can exploit. When you use tsunami throw, an enemy's attack becomes the instrument of its downfall.

Tsunami Throw — Monk Attack 9

You catch one opponent and hurl it away from you with a wave of mental force, sending it crashing into your other enemies.

Daily ✦ Elemental, Implement, Psionic
Immediate Reaction — Melee 1
Trigger: An adjacent enemy hits you with an attack.
Primary Target: The triggering enemy
Primary Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Hit: 1d8 + Dexterity modifier damage.
Effect: You push the primary target up to 5 squares, knock it prone, and then make the secondary attack.
Close burst 1 centered on the primary target
Secondary Target: Each creature other than the primary target in the burst
Secondary Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Hit: 1d8 + Dexterity modifier damage, and the secondary target falls prone.

Level 10 Utility Powers

Elemental Resilience

You have trained your mind to act instantly when you are hit by an elemental attack. Whether you absorb the energy or repel it does not matter—the important thing is that it does not have its full effect on you.

Elemental Resilience — Monk Utility 10

Your reactions are faster than the energy being brought to bear against you. You instantly adjust your body to minimize the effect of all such attacks that target you.

Encounter ✦ Elemental, Psionic
Immediate Interrupt Personal
Trigger: You take acid, cold, fire, lightning, or thunder damage.
Effect: You gain resist 5 to the triggering damage type until the start of your next turn.
Aftereffect: You gain resist 3 to the triggering damage type until the end of the encounter.

Flame's Blessing

By achieving a certain state of mind, you can draw upon the quickness of flickering fire at the same time that you hone in on the enemies you are trying to burn.

Flame's Blessing — Monk Utility 10

The pale flames dancing across your body do not harm you, but instead turn you into a faster and more accurate attacker.

Daily ✦ Elemental, Psionic, Stance
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You assume the flame's blessing stance. Until the stance ends, you gain a +2 power bonus to speed and a +1 power bonus to fire attack rolls.

Mirrored Pursuit

Synchronizing your movements with an enemy's enables you to keep pace with your foe. There is nowhere it can go where you can't follow.

Mirrored Pursuit — Monk Utility 10

You match your enemy's movements as if you were a reflection in a still pool.

Daily ✦ Psionic
No Action Special
Trigger: You hit an enemy with a melee attack.
Effect: You mark the enemy until it drops to 0 hit points or until the end of the encounter. Until the mark ends, you can use the secondary power at will.
Secondary Power
Immediate Reaction Personal
Trigger: The marked enemy moves willingly on its turn.
Effect: You shift up to your speed, and you must end this shift adjacent to the enemy. You don't get your normal move action on your next turn.

Level 13 Encounter Powers

Break the Stone

Your ability to protect yourself reaches a new plateau when you learn break the stone. The same energy that makes you almost invulnerable helps you cripple an enemy's defenses.

Break the Stone — Monk Attack 13

The ground trembles as you step forward to smash your foe. So great is the concussion that your opponent finds itself disoriented and vulnerable.

Encounter ✦ Elemental, Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic
Attack Technique
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Hit: 2d10 + Dexterity modifier damage. Until the end of your next turn, the target is slowed and has vulnerability to all damage equal to your Strength modifier.
Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You shift up to 2 squares. Until the start of your next turn, you gain resistance to all damage equal to 3 + your Strength modifier, and you cannot be subjected to forced movement unless you choose to be.

Skirling Grasp

As your fury grows, the winds respond and bear down on your enemies to hurl them where you want them to go.

Skirling Grasp — Monk Attack 13

A mighty wind howls around you, punishing your foes and giving you incredible mobility.

Encounter ✦ Elemental, Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic
Attack Technique
Standard Action Close blast 3
Target: Each creature in the blast
Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Hit: 2d8 + Dexterity modifier damage and the target is immobilized until the end of your next turn.
Effect: You slide each target up to 2 squares.
Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You move up to your speed + 2, ignoring difficult terrain.

ELEMENTARY VIEWPOINT: ERZAHAN, DESERT WIND MASTER

You are more than mere flesh and blood, my young friend. You are one with the grains of sand beneath your feet and the currents of air that tease your hair, one with the warmth of the sun, one with all things living and unliving that surround you.

All that exists is energy, you see, energy born ages ago in the making of the world and frozen for a time in this shape or that. This is the metaphor of the elements, young one: There is no permanence, only change that has not yet happened. I will teach you how to shape your world with nothing more than a thought . . . if you are ready.

Stoke the Flames
You visibly manifest an impressive display of flames, which causes burns and raises blisters on anyone or anything that comes near you.

Stoke the Flames — Monk Attack 13

Calling on a great quantity of elemental fire to aid your attacks causes you to emanate hungry flames that scorch anything in their path.

Encounter ✦ Aura, Elemental, Fire, Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic
Attack Technique
Standard Action Close burst 1
Target: Each creature in the burst
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d8 + Dexterity modifier fire damage.
Effect: You activate an aura 1 that lasts until the end of your next turn. Any creature that enters the aura or ends its turn there takes fire damage equal to 5 + your Charisma modifier. A creature can take this damage only once per turn.
Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You shift up to 3 squares.

Level 15 Daily Powers

Breath of the Storm Lord
This discipline helps you strike with great effect, and also move more quickly than an ordinary mortal. This abrupt movement disturbs your environment, causing winds to pick up and batter the enemies you strike.

Breath of the Storm Lord — Monk Attack 15

You execute a series of kicks and thrusts that calls forth a column of storm clouds to hamper and brutalize your foe.

Daily ✦ Elemental, Implement, Psionic, Thunder, Zone
Standard Action Close blast 3
Target: Each enemy in the blast
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 3d8 + Dexterity modifier thunder damage, and the target is slowed (save ends).
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: You shift up to 4 squares to a square adjacent to the blast. The blast then creates a zone that lasts until the end of your next turn. The zone is difficult terrain for creatures other than you, and any creature other than you that ends its turn in the zone falls prone. You can move the zone up to 3 squares as a move action.
Sustain Minor: The zone persists until the end of your next turn.

Dragon's Flame
Your ability to call upon this discipline is further proof of your growing skill at manipulating fire. Not only does each of your attacks sear both body and mind, any enemy you hit remains subject to your will until it can shake off the effect.

Dragon's Flame — Monk Attack 15

You surge through your enemies' ranks with a flurry of blazing attacks, and as your strikes fall, fire radiates out from you.

Daily ✦ Aura, Elemental, Fire, Implement, Psionic, Psychic
Standard Action Close blast 5
Target: Each enemy in the blast
Attack: Dexterity vs. Will
Hit: 2d8 + Dexterity modifier fire and psychic damage, and ongoing 10 fire and psychic damage (save ends).
Each Failed Saving Throw: You can slide the target up to 2 squares as a free action.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: You activate an aura 1 that lasts until the end of your next turn. Any enemy that enters the aura or ends its turn there takes fire and psychic damage equal to your Dexterity modifier. An enemy can take this damage only once per turn.

Sundered Mountain
This discipline makes your enemy a slave to pain—every step it takes sends agony coursing through its body.

Sundered Mountain — Monk Attack 15

A cracking noise sounds when you strike your foe, and the creature's staggering, pain-wracked steps are evidence of the extent of its injuries.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Hit: 4d10 + Dexterity modifier damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: The target is subjected to sundering (save ends). Until this effect ends, the target takes 5 damage for each square it willingly enters. If the target moves more than half its speed willingly, it falls prone at the end of its movement. While you are adjacent to the target, it cannot make saving throws to end this effect.

Level 16 Utility Powers

Catch the Wind
Monks prefer hand-to-hand combat, and most have few options when faced with enemies at a distance. Catch the wind lets you respond to a ranged attacker by partially deflecting its missile, and speeding you to the foe's side so you can wreak your vengeance.

Catch the Wind — Monk Utility 16

Spinning away from an enemy's missile sends you on a giant leap through the air that brings you close to your attacker.

Daily ✦ Psionic
Immediate Interrupt Personal
Trigger: An enemy within 10 squares of you damages you with a ranged or an area attack.
Effect: You take only half damage from the attack. After the attack is resolved, you fly up to 10 squares to a square adjacent to the triggering enemy.

One Hundred Steps A subtle discipline of defense, often incredibly frustrating to your enemies, one hundred steps turns you into an ominous, blurry threat. You become a target that is both hard to see and difficult to keep up with.

One Hundred Steps Monk Utility 16

You attune your mind to concentrate on keeping yourself safe, and you can effortlessly flit away from any attack mounted against you.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Stance
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You assume the one hundred steps stance. Until the stance ends, you have partial concealment, and you can use the secondary power at will.
Secondary Power (Psionic, Teleportation)
Immediate Reaction Personal
Trigger: An enemy attacks you.
Effect: You teleport up to 2 squares.

Roots of the Mountain Your combat prowess ensures that your place in a fight is on the front lines. Roots of the mountain uses your mental energy to reinforce your body, enabling it to withstand the most punishing strikes.

Roots of the Mountain Monk Utility 16

Rooting yourself in place helps you deflect an enemy's attack and knock the foe out of your way.

Encounter ✦ Psionic
Immediate Interrupt Personal
Trigger: An adjacent enemy attacks your AC or Fortitude.
Effect: You gain a +4 power bonus to AC and Fortitude until the start of your next turn. If the triggering attack misses, you can push the triggering enemy up to 2 squares.

Level 17 Encounter Powers

Bitter Stasis Eternal Tide monks often draw force from the Elemental Chaos, deploying elemental cold to keep an enemy where you want it.

Bitter Stasis Monk Attack 17

The elemental cold released through your attack traps you and an enemy in ice. The cold is more than your enemy can bear, but it offers you protection from outside interference.

Encounter ✦ Cold, Elemental, Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic
Attack Technique
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Hit: 2d8 + Dexterity modifier cold damage, and the target is restrained until the end of your next turn.
Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: Until the end of your next turn, you are immobilized, you are immune to forced movement, and you gain resistance to all damage equal to 5 + your Strength modifier.

Fist of the Whirling Tempest The thunderstorm reflects the turmoil in your heart, and training your focus on this upheaval helps you use this destructive power to your advantage.

Fist of the Whirling Tempest Monk Attack 17

You reach out with your thoughts to the sky and call down a thunderbolt to destroy your enemies. Echoing thunder follows you as you maneuver into position.

Encounter ✦ Aura, Elemental, Full Discipline, Implement, Lightning, Psionic, Thunder
Attack Technique
Standard Action Ranged 5
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 3d6 + Dexterity modifier lightning damage, and the target is dazed until the end of your next turn.
Effect: You activate an aura 1 that lasts until the start of your next turn. Any creature that enters the aura or ends its turn there takes 1d6 thunder damage. A creature can take this damage only once per turn.
Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You shift up to your speed.

Living Torch The flames this discipline draws from the Elemental Chaos seem almost eager to feast on your enemies, building in intensity in answer to the violence they engender.

Living Torch Monk Attack 17

Black smoke roils around you, obscuring you from sight. When you strike a foe, heat shimmers appear and explode with renewed flames each time your target sustains further injury.

Encounter ✦ Elemental, Fire, Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic
Attack Technique
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Hit: 2d8 + Dexterity modifier damage.
Effect: Until the end of your next turn, whenever the target takes damage from an attack, each of your enemies adjacent to it takes 10 fire damage. An enemy can take this damage only once per turn.
Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You move up to your speed + 2. During this movement, you have total concealment.

A band of goblins is about to be consumed by the wildfire left behind as a monk moves out of harm's way

Level 19 Daily Powers

Duel of Fates

By issuing a challenge to a particular enemy, you prevent it from escaping you. While subject to your duel of fates, the foe you single out finds it has no choice but to take you on.

Duel of Fates Monk Attack 19

You zero in on an enemy and commit yourself to its defeat by creating a field to keep it close and hedge out interference.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic, Psychic, Zone
Standard Action Close burst 2
Target: One creature in the burst
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 4d8 + Dexterity modifier damage, and the target grants combat advantage (save ends).
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: The squares adjacent to the burst become a zone that lasts until the target drops to 0 hit points or until you leave the zone. Nothing can teleport into or out of the area enclosed by the zone. The target treats the zone as blocking terrain, and any creature other than you or the target that enters the zone or starts its turn there takes 10 psychic damage. A creature can take this damage only once per turn.

Fire-Snake Dance

This discipline reflects your growing mastery over elemental fire. As you channel it through your psionic pathways, you can shape it into fiery serpents that entwine your enemies and hold them in place.

Fire-Snake Dance Monk Attack 19

The fires erupting from your body burn so brightly that none dare stop you. As you move across the battlefield, you deliver strikes that constrict your enemies with coils of flame.

Daily ✦ Elemental, Fire, Implement, Psionic
Standard Action Melee 1
Effect: You shift up to your speed + 4. You make the following attack each time you first enter a square adjacent to an enemy during this movement. You can attack a given enemy only once with each use of this power.
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 3d6 + Dexterity modifier fire damage, and the target is immobilized until the end of your next turn.
Miss: Half damage, and the target is slowed until the end of your next turn.

RANDY GALLEGOS

Neutralizing Strike
Even a hydra, with all its snapping jaws, is left reeling when struck by this debilitating attack. It leaves your opponent struggling just to stay upright, let alone react with an offensive of its own.

Neutralizing Strike — Monk Attack 19

The disruptive force of your mentally enhanced strike renders your target virtually helpless and ready to be finished off.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Hit: 3d8 + Dexterity modifier damage, and the target is stunned until the end of your next turn.
Miss: Half damage, and the target is weakened until the end of your next turn.

Level 22 Utility Powers

Everywhere at Once
Distance and time are concoctions the mind creates to make sense of the world outside. You can free your consciousness from such limitations, so you can be in one place and all places at the same time.

Everywhere at Once — Monk Utility 22

Your enlightened mind collapses all points in an area to one, so you can be wherever you wish.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Teleportation, Zone
Minor Action Close burst 5
Effect: The burst creates a zone that lasts until the end of the encounter. Any enemy that starts its turn in the zone grants combat advantage to you until the start of its next turn. In addition, whenever an enemy misses you with an attack while you are in the zone, you can teleport to another square in the zone as an immediate reaction.

Hastened Effort
This discipline unlocks deeper reservoirs of power to help you push yourself farther than normal limits allow. You move too quickly to be able to line up an attack, but you can use the surge to move a greater distance or perform some other maneuver.

Hastened Effort — Monk Utility 22

Psionic energy rushes through you, helping you to do more than what should be possible.

Daily ✦ Psionic
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You shift up to 2 squares and take a standard action. You cannot use this action to make an attack.

Perfect Motion
With an instant's thought, you see routes once hidden to you. A turned back, a quick distraction, even simple positioning can grant opportunities for you to move without drawing attacks.

Perfect Motion — Monk Utility 22

Expanding your mind lets you see pathways across the battlefield that you can exploit to move with impunity.

Daily ✦ Psionic, Stance
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You assume the perfect motion stance. Until the stance ends, your movement does not provoke opportunity attacks.

Level 23 Encounter Powers

Blazing Scourge
The more you study and work with elemental fire, the more versatile your applications of it become. Now, the flares you send out can entrap multiple foes at the same time.

Blazing Scourge — Monk Attack 23

Hot tendrils unfurl from your outstretched hand to ensnare your foes. The fire you command makes enemies think twice about stopping you and adds intensity to your other fire attacks.

Encounter ✦ Elemental, Fire, Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic
Attack Technique
Standard Action Ranged 5
Target: One, two, or three creatures
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 3d8 + Dexterity modifier fire damage, and the target is immobilized until the end of your next turn.
Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You shift up to your speed. Until the end of your next turn, you gain a +4 power bonus to fire damage rolls.

Lightning in the Clouds
This power lets you channel the elemental fury found in storms, and infuses you with lightning and thunder to use against your enemies. Soaring above them, you rain destruction down upon their heads.

Lightning in the Clouds — Monk Attack 23

You leap into the air and hurl lightning and thunder against your foes.

Encounter ✦ Elemental, Full Discipline, Implement, Lightning, Psionic, Thunder
Attack Technique
Standard Action Ranged 5
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 3d6 + Dexterity modifier lightning damage, and the target is dazed until the end of your next turn.
Effect: Each creature adjacent to the target takes 10 thunder damage.
Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You fly up to your speed + 2. If you do not land at the end of this movement, you hover until the start of your next turn, when you descend without taking falling damage.

Order Unbound
The greatest disciplines taught by masters of the Eternal Tide help students soften or even shed the structure imposed on their bodies. Order unbound releases you from the bonds of physicality and lets you move with impunity to strike from a direction your enemies don't expect.

Order Unbound — Monk Attack 23

You shed order's hold on your body and become pure energy, if only for a few moments. Your rapid strikes wreak havoc on your foes.

Encounter ✦ Elemental, Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic, Teleportation

Attack Technique
Standard Action Close burst 2
Target: Each creature in the burst
Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Hit: 2d8 + Dexterity modifier damage, and you slide the target up to a number of squares equal to 1 + your Strength modifier.
Effect: The first time the target makes an attack before the start of your next turn, it falls prone after resolving the attack.

Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You become insubstantial until the start of your next turn and teleport up to a number of squares equal to your speed.

Level 25 Daily Powers

Crushing Anger
This discipline combines defense and offense in a brutally effective way, harming the enemy that provokes you and burying it under a mental oppression so great that it must either flee from you or crumple beneath your slightest touch.

Crushing Anger — Monk Attack 25

An enemy's strike awakens dreadful rage in you, which you turn into a mental onslaught that leaves the creature unable to continue facing you.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic
Immediate Reaction Melee 1
Trigger: An adjacent enemy hits you with an attack.
Target: The triggering enemy
Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Hit: 4d8 + Dexterity modifier damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: The target is subjected to crushing anger (save ends). While the target is within 2 squares of you, it takes a -2 penalty to saving throws to end this effect. Until the effect ends, you can use a minor action once during each of your turns to deal 10 damage to the target and knock it prone.

Enduring Boulder
When you use this discipline, you manifest all the might of elemental earth without sacrificing speed or agility. Your rocky hide protects you from attacks, but each time an attack lands, some of your exterior breaks away to reveal your true form underneath.

Enduring Boulder — Monk Attack 25

You become a creature not unlike stone, capable of bringing great physical force to bear and proving almost invulnerable to attacks for a time.

Daily ✦ Elemental, Implement, Polymorph, Psionic
Standard Action Melee touch
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 5d10 + Dexterity modifier damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: You assume the form of the enduring boulder. While in this form, you gain resist 30 to all damage and a +3 power bonus to melee damage rolls. Each time you are hit by an attack, reduce the resistance by 5. When the resistance drops to 0, the form ends.

Living Lightning
Many followers of the Sublime Way develop elemental characteristics in time. Living lightning is one way in which these traits might manifest. Using this power gives you the appearance and destructive nature of the worst tempests that rage across the Elemental Chaos.

Living Lightning — Monk Attack 25

Launching yourself at an enemy causes psionic energy to crackle around you so that when you land, you deliver a thunderbolt that can shatter your target's body and mind.

Daily ✦ Elemental, Implement, Lightning, Psionic, Thunder
Standard Action Melee touch
Effect: Before the attack, you can fly up to your speed. Any creature that hits you with an opportunity attack provoked by this movement takes 10 lightning damage.
Target: One creature
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d8 + Dexterity modifier lightning and thunder damage, and the target is stunned until the end of your next turn.
Miss: Half damage, and the target loses its standard action on its next turn.

Level 27 Encounter Powers

Get Away, Stay Away

When enemies have the audacity to close upon you in a group, you can wound them and scatter them at the same time. Foes that don't learn to keep their distance will get a second lesson.

Get Away, Stay Away — Monk Attack 27

By waiting until several enemies converge on you, you can drive home to all of them at once the folly of daring to confront you head-on.

Encounter ✦ Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic
Attack Technique
Standard Action Close burst 1
Target: Each enemy in the burst
Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Hit: 2d8 + Dexterity modifier damage, and you push the target up to a number of squares equal to your Strength modifier.
Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You shift up to 2 squares. Until the start of your next turn, when an adjacent enemy damages you with an attack, you can use an immediate reaction to push that enemy up to 3 squares and knock it prone.

Loose the Screaming Gale

The winds you call forth with loose the screaming gale originate from beyond the natural world, and they owe their strength and fury to elemental air. Your connection to that force empowers this discipline, which batters and buffets your enemies while it sets you free to soar upon the same winds.

Loose the Screaming Gale — Monk Attack 27

An unnatural wind comes to life, following on the heels of your swift attacks and hammering into your foes. The same gale lifts you into the air.

Encounter ✦ Elemental, Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic
Attack Technique
Standard Action Close blast 5
Target: Each creature in the blast
Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Hit: 3d8 + Dexterity modifier damage, you slide the target up to 3 squares, and it is immobilized until the end of your next turn.
Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You fly up to a number of squares equal to your speed + 4. If you do not land at the end of this movement, you land safely in the nearest unoccupied square at the start of your next turn.

Wildfire Unleashed

Your expertise with elemental fire culminates in wildfire unleashed. This power momentarily transforms you into a creature of flame, so that fire burns in the tracks you leave behind you and flows before you where you direct it. This power is useful for isolating a powerful foe while blasting its underlings.

Wildfire Unleashed — Monk Attack 27

Elemental fire crawls up your arms and spreads across your body. Wherever you go, fire follows, and at your command savage heat washes out ahead of you to incinerate your enemies.

Encounter ✦ Elemental, Fire, Full Discipline, Implement, Psionic, Zone
Attack Technique
Standard Action Close blast 3
Target: Each creature in the blast
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 3d8 + Dexterity modifier fire damage.
Effect: The blast creates a zone that lasts until the end of your next turn. Any creature that enters the zone or ends its turn there takes fire damage equal to 3 + your Charisma modifier. A creature can take damage from a zone created by this power only once per turn.
Movement Technique
Move Action Personal
Effect: You shift up to half your speed. The squares you leave become a zone that lasts until the end of your next turn. Any creature that enters the zone or ends its turn there takes fire damage equal to 3 + your Charisma modifier. A creature can take damage from a zone created by this power only once per turn.

Level 29 Daily Powers

Bones of the Mountain King

A potent attack when you need to lock down several enemies at once, bones of the mountain king causes your opponents' skeletons or other internal structures to calcify, causing barbs to push out from inside. Although you can affect several enemies at once, the fact that they are immobilized by this power ensures that they focus their attacks on you until freed from the power's effects.

Bones of the Mountain King — Monk Attack 29

Each foe exposed to your rapid assault finds its mobility suddenly curtailed. The longer you remain at hand to threaten an enemy, the more it suffers.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic
Standard Action Close burst 1
Target: Each enemy in the burst
Attack: Dexterity vs. Fortitude
Hit: 5d6 + Dexterity modifier damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: The target is immobilized and takes ongoing 10 damage (save ends both). While you are adjacent to the target, it takes a penalty to saving throws against this effect. The penalty equals half your Dexterity modifier.

Rising Phoenix Your emotions are wild, raging forces that reach their apex when you are on the brink of your demise. If an attack delivers a grievous injury, your emotions take over, rousing you as a creature of fiery devastation.

Rising Phoenix Monk Attack 29

Death's proximity awakens the fires within you, causing them to flow out from you in a blazing torrent to burn your enemies and lift you above the battlefield.

Daily ✦ Aura, Elemental, Fire, Healing, Implement, Psionic
Immediate Interrupt Close burst 3
Trigger: An attack bloodies you or drops you below 1 hit point.
Target: Each enemy in the burst
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d8 + Dexterity modifier fire damage, and the target is marked and takes ongoing 10 fire damage (save ends both).
Each Failed Saving Throw: The ongoing fire damage increases by 5.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: You can spend a healing surge. Until the end of the encounter, you have a fly speed of 6 (altitude limit 2). You also activate an aura 1 that lasts until the end of the encounter. Any enemy that enters the aura or ends its turn there takes fire damage equal to your Dexterity modifier. A creature can take this damage only once per turn.

Tormenting Mirage Attuning your senses to be especially sensitive to your enemies helps you to assail them with a withering attack, then distort their perceptions. You make yourself harder to hit, and any enemy that tries to hurt you pays.

Tormenting Mirage Monk Attack 29

Clouding your enemies' thoughts with doubt and fear, you use their failures to press your own attacks.

Daily ✦ Implement, Psionic, Psychic, Stance
Standard Action Close burst 1
Target: Each enemy in the burst
Attack: Dexterity vs. Reflex
Hit: 6d6 + Dexterity modifier psychic damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: You assume the tormenting mirage stance. Until the stance ends, you gain a +2 power bonus to all defenses against attacks made by enemies adjacent to you, you grant combat advantage to all other enemies, and you can use the secondary power at will.
Secondary Power (Fear, Psionic, Psychic)
Immediate Reaction Melee 1
Trigger: An enemy adjacent to you misses you with an attack.
Target: The triggering enemy
Effect: The target takes psychic damage equal to your Dexterity modifier. You and the target swap positions (it slides 1 square, and you shift 1 square), and you gain combat advantage against it until the end of your next turn.

HIDDEN TRADITIONS

Desert Wind and Eternal Tide are the monastic traditions most commonly practiced by adventuring monks, but not the only elemental traditions that monks study. Three others, much less prevalent in the world, are described here.

Cloud Tiger: A tradition inspired by the element of air, the Cloud Tiger style employs jumps, kicks, and sudden whirlwind attacks, buffeting foes with blasts of wind as well as strikes of foot and fist. The most accomplished Cloud Tiger masters are said to catch lightning in their hands and turn it against their enemies. This tradition eschews the contemplative life of a typical monastery; Cloud Tiger masters believe that, like the wind, they are meant to roam the wide world. They pass their philosophy along one student at a time, choosing young aspirants to share their travels and study at their side. As a consequence, Cloud Tiger practitioners are few in number and widely scattered.

Diamond Mind: This rare tradition arose among a mysterious race known as the xephs, who dwell in a remote region of the Elemental Chaos. This philosophy is based on the power of a living mind to impose order on the surrounding elements, and it regards all things as expressions of elemental energy. Masters of the Diamond Mind tradition are known for uncanny perception and awareness, combined with the ability to move and react in slivers of time that others can barely perceive. However, very few have ever fully mastered these powers.

Stone Dragon: An old and conservative monastic tradition, Stone Dragon emphasizes the strength and endurance of elemental earth. Stone Dragon masters can shrug off blows that would stun an ogre, and crumple iron plate with their fists. Various grapples and holds are also prominent in the Stone Dragon tradition. Stone Dragon monasteries are the most widespread after those of Desert Wind and Eternal Tide, but Stone Dragon practitioners rarely seek lives of adventure. They are patient and imperturbable to a fault, and see little reason to interfere in worldly affairs.

Sorcerer

Sorcerers are born to wield magic. While wizards study old spellbooks for years and warlocks seek out perilous entities to forge their pacts, sorcerers need no special training or patron to become powerful; they need only unlock the seething arcane potential hidden within themselves. They tend to be flamboyant, proud, wild, and untamed, shaping spells through emotion and intuition.

Although many sorcerers approach their magic through the medium of ancient bloodlines or by seeking to embody concepts such as chaos, storms, or cosmic motion, others are drawn to the raw power of the elements. These sorcerers are known as elementalists.

This section includes new powers for all sorcerers, as well as the elementalist subclass.

Elementalist

Arcane Striker: Elementalists who specialize in air or fire magic scour their foes with destructive energy, hurling blasts of flame or bolts of lightning. Those who specialize in earth or water magic hinder enemies, catching them in tides and quakes. Few can withstand an elementalist's wrath for long.

Key Abilities: Charisma, Constitution

Disdaining the framework of theories of magic and sympathetic principles, elementalists seize the raw stuff of creation with simple force of will, bending the elements to their whim. Elementalist sorcerers might fashion whips or darts out of fire, create shields and armor from living rock, or inundate their enemies beneath torrents of water.

Since elementalists arise from very different magic-using traditions, other users of arcane power shun them. These sorcerers practice their arts in isolated monasteries, secretive cabals, and occasionally elemental cults. Often accused of being more reckless and destructive than other kinds of sorcerers, elementalists in turn sneer at spellcasters who seek to create tools and systems for shaping magic at a safe distance. To elementalists, the only right way to wield magic is to dive in headlong and seize power with both hands. Some believe that elementalists are prone to evil or that they revel in reckless destruction, but neither assertion is necessarily true. Like more conventional arcane magic, the elementalist's magic is a tool—and like any tool, it can be turned to evil ends or to good.

TYLER JACOBSON

This half-elf fire elementalist has an affinity with flame that comes from his very core

Elementalist Traits

Hit Points: You start with hit points equal to 12 + your Constitution score. You gain 5 hit points each time you gain a level.

Bonus to Defenses: +2 Will

Healing Surges per Day: 6 + your Constitution modifier

Armor Proficiencies: Cloth

Weapon Proficiencies: Simple melee, simple ranged

Implement Proficiencies: Daggers, staffs

Class Skills: Arcana (Int), Athletics (Str), Bluff (Cha), Diplomacy (Cha), Dungeoneering (Wis), Endurance (Con), History (Int), Insight (Wis), Intimidate (Cha), Nature (Wis)

Trained Skills: Arcana, plus three more from the list of class skills

Creating an Elementalist

An elementalist is a type of sorcerer, a class introduced in Player's Handbook 2. To create an elementalist, use the character creation rules in the Rules Compendium or the Player's Handbook. The Character Advancement table (page 159) summarizes how many feats and utility powers your sorcerer should gain at each level, as well as when ability scores increase.

An elementalist has the Elemental Magic spell source as a class feature (which works like spell sources from Player's Handbook 2) and gains other class features related to an affinity for a particular element. Elementalists gain no encounter or daily attack powers from their class, but instead rely on at-will attack powers that have additional effects activated with the elemental escalation power.

Ability Scores

Your elementalist sorcerer requires a superior Charisma score, since all your attacks are based on that ability. Constitution is a very important secondary score, contributing to your ability to channel dangerous bursts of elemental energy.

Your other ability scores help to complete the portrait of your character and round out your talents. A good Dexterity or Intelligence makes sense as your third-best ability score, providing you with a solid Reflex defense. If you favor Dexterity, you might be a physically oriented elementalist who communes with the elements through rigorous physical exercises. If Intelligence is your choice, you could instead be an elemental sage, a student of the elemental planes and their denizens.

Class Features

An elementalist has the following class features, starting at level 1.

Elemental Bolt

You can call forth elemental energy, infuse it with the element closest to your soul, and launch the resulting projectile at an enemy.

Benefit: You gain the elemental bolt power.

Elemental Bolt — Sorcerer Attack

You hurl a spear of elemental energy at your foe.

At-Will ✦ Arcane, Elemental, Implement; Varies
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. Reflex
Hit: 1d12 + Charisma modifier damage.
Level 21: 2d12 + Charisma modifier damage.
Special: This power can be used as a ranged basic attack.

Elemental Magic

As you open yourself to the fury of the Plane Below, you learn that physical hardiness and mental versatility are essential for you to channel elemental power and avoid destruction.

Benefit: You gain the following benefits.

Elemental Power: You gain a bonus to the damage rolls of arcane powers equal to your Constitution modifier. This bonus increases to 2 + your Constitution modifier at 5th level, 5 + your Constitution modifier at 15th level, and 8 + your Constitution modifier at 25th level.

Elemental Resilience: While you are not wearing heavy armor, you can use your Constitution modifier in place of your Dexterity or Intelligence modifier to determine your AC.

Elemental Versatility: At 9th level and 19th level, you gain a sorcerer at-will attack power of your choice.

Elemental Specialty

The most important step in a novice elementalist's early days is realizing his or her favored element: air, earth, fire, or water. Your specialty shapes your identity as an elementalist, and it strongly influences other choices you make throughout your career.

Benefit: Choose an elemental specialty. You gain the benefits of that specialty.

Air Elementalist

You wield the howl of the storm. Wild gales and raging lightning are your weapons. With time and experience, you master powers of weather and flight. You dislike spending too much time with a roof over your head; you are most comfortable in wide-open spaces and in high places, where the winds are strong and free.

Air elementalists generally dislike wielding spells of elemental earth. Elemental air is the essence of movement and change. Earth feels too immobile and inflexible to an air elementalist.

Benefit: You gain the following features.

Attack Power: You gain either the howling zephyr or the static charge power (see page 90).

Enhanced Elemental Bolt: Your elemental bolt deals lightning damage. On a hit, its target gains vulnerable 3 to your elemental attacks until the end of your next turn.

Elemental Soul: At 5th level, you gain resist 10 lightning. At 15th level, you gain a +2 bonus to saving throws against ongoing lightning damage. At 25th level, choose either cold or thunder. You gain resist 10 to the chosen damage type and a +2 bonus to saving throws against ongoing damage of that type.

Fly: At 23rd level, you can fly up to half your speed as a move action.

Earth Elementalist

You are a master of the solid and unyielding powers of elemental earth. At your command, stone armors your body, and rock and earth erupt from the ground or materialize from thin air to batter or bury your enemies. As you gain experience, you develop the ability to shape the earth around you or even pass through solid rock.

Elemental air is the antithesis of earth, so you probably dislike learning spells of air. That element lacks solidity, substance, and permanence—the very qualities that lend you power over elemental earth.

Benefit: You gain the following features.

Attack Power: You gain either the erupting earth or the seismic shock power (see page 90).

Enhanced Elemental Bolt: Your elemental bolt deals acid damage. On a hit, its target is slowed until the end of your next turn.

Elemental Soul: At 5th level, you gain resist 10 acid. At 15th level, you gain a +2 bonus to saving throws against ongoing acid damage. At 25th level, choose either fire or thunder. You gain resist 10 to the chosen damage type and a +2 bonus to saving throws against ongoing damage of that type.

Burrow: At 23rd level, you can burrow up to half your speed as a move action. You have tremorsense 5 while burrowing.

ELEMENTALIST RACE CHOICES

The following races are excellent choices for elementalist sorcerers.

Human: Humans have the potential to excel in just about any class or career they set their minds to. However, it's not just a good match of native talent (as demonstrated by choosing a bonus to Charisma or Constitution) and racial features. The sheer diversity of human cultures scattered throughout the world means that there are many places where learning and philosophy view the world through the lens of the four classic elements. Monasteries, dojos, and mystic orders devoted to one or more of the elements are common in some human lands, providing the human elementalist with a grounding in the beliefs and traditions of his or her people.

As a human elementalist, you probably began your adventuring career by studying in a small, isolated place of learning. Unlike with mage academies or wizard apprenticeships, your lessons did not come from reading musty tomes and performing tedious chores. Instead, you learned through doing, slowly mastering the art of summoning your favored elements from the elemental plane and shaping them to suit your will. Common folk see you and those who follow similar paths as wandering ascetics, travelers who seek wisdom in life's simple truths.

Human elementalists are more devoted to their philosophy than to specific deities, but they sometimes follow gods of travel and striving. Avandra and Kord are good choices.

Genasi: As incarnations of elemental energy, genasi are naturally drawn to the elementalist's path. Though a number of genasi are highly intelligent and formally study the arcane arts as wizards or swordmages, many others eschew techniques and constructions such as spellbooks or pacts. They prefer to channel the raw, unfiltered energy of the Elemental Chaos; genasi who choose a bonus in Constitution possess an extra reserve of the fortitude and endurance needed to control these unpredictable powers. Many genasi elementalists have a specialty that matches their elemental manifestation, but this is far from universally true—after all, genasi often manifest different elements over the courses of their lives, or even two or more elements at once.

Most genasi elementalists are self-taught. Your magical talent most likely became apparent when you were only a child, and at first it seemed like an unusually strong capacity for the elemental manifestation that every genasi possesses. If you were raised among other genasi, they quickly recognized your innate gifts and encouraged you to exercise them, much as a champion athlete would be encouraged to exercise and compete. You never chose an elemental specialty as you mastered your powers—your elemental specialty is the form in which your gift for magic appeared when you first began to show promise as a sorcerer.

Like human elementalists, genasi elementalists rarely choose to follow patron deities. When they do, they usually prefer elemental deities such as Akadi, Grumbar, or Kossuth, or they venerate some of the more benevolent primordials, such as the archomentals Ben-hadar, Sunnis, or Zaaman Rul.

A water elementalist is at home among the denizens of the deep

Fire Elementalist You are a living conflagration, a master of the most spectacular and destructive of all the elements. Yours is the power of the raging forest fire, the burning sun, and incinerating heat. Subtlety is not your strong suit; in battle you seek to burn down all who oppose you.

Fire elementalists tend to disdain powers of elemental water, which is often calming and cooling.

Benefit: You gain the following features.

Attack Power: You gain either the blazing cloud or the ignition power (see page 90).

Enhanced Elemental Bolt: Your elemental bolt deals fire damage. On a hit, its damage increases by 1d6.

Elemental Soul: At 5th level, you gain resist 10 fire. At 15th level, you gain a +2 bonus to saving throws against ongoing fire damage. At 25th level, choose either lightning or thunder. You gain resist 10 to the chosen damage type and a +2 bonus to saving throws against ongoing damage of that type.

Teleport: At 23rd level, you can teleport up to half your speed as a move action.

Water Elementalist You command the most subtle and mutable of the four elements. Water transforms easily to ice, mist, and steam. In the form of a gentle rain it nourishes and sustains, but as a raging flood it can scour channels through solid rock and sweep away all before it. You are especially drawn to water in motion—the ocean with its pounding surf and seething tides, and rivers and streams as they wind their way across the land to the sea.

You likely prefer not to use fire powers. That element burns the moisture from all it touches.

Benefit: You gain the following features.

Attack Power: You gain either the deluge or the ice prison power (see page 90).

Enhanced Elemental Bolt: Your elemental bolt deals cold damage. On a hit, you can slide each creature adjacent to its target 1 square.

Elemental Soul: At 5th level, you gain resist 10 cold. At 15th level, you gain a +2 bonus to saving throws against ongoing cold damage. At 25th level, choose either acid or thunder. You gain resist 10 to the chosen damage type and a +2 bonus to saving throws against ongoing damage of that type.

Swim: At 23rd level, you gain a swim speed equal to your speed + 2. You also gain the aquatic trait; you can breathe underwater, and in aquatic combat, you gain a +2 bonus to attack rolls against nonaquatic creatures.

Escalating Elements

By reaching deep into your reserves of arcane strength, you can manifest spectacular bursts of elemental power. When you escalate one of your sorcerer powers, you might be able to expand the power's area, increase its intensity to deal more damage, or channel a more persistent expression of your element that affects your enemies for a longer time. At higher levels, your control over the elements improves. They respond more readily to your commands, giving you the ability to manifest exceptional bursts of elemental energy more frequently.

Benefit: You gain the elemental escalation power associated with your Elemental Specialty: air, earth, fire, or water.

At 3rd, 7th, and 13th level, you gain an additional use of the power each encounter, but you can still use the power only once per round.

Elemental Escalation (Air) Sorcerer Attack

The tempest's power surges through you, wrathfully striking your enemies and lifting you aloft.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Elemental; Varies
Free Action Personal
Trigger: You use a sorcerer at-will attack power.
Effect: You can make one additional creature a target of the triggering attack. If the attack's range is melee or ranged, the additional target must be within 5 squares of you. If the attack's range is area or close, the additional target must be adjacent to the burst or blast.

Each target hit by the attack takes 1d10 extra damage of the type dealt by the triggering attack In addition, you fly up to half your speed as a free action.

Level 17: 2d10 extra damage, and you also slide the target up to 2 squares.

Level 27: 3d10 extra damage, and the target is also blinded until the end of your next turn.

Special: You can use this power only once per round.

TONY FOTI

Elemental Escalation (Earth) Sorcerer Attack

Earth energy infuses you with resilience. It allows you to deliver mighty blows and great hindrances to your foes.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Elemental; Varies
Free Action Personal
Trigger: You use a sorcerer at-will attack power.
Effect: You can make one additional creature a target of the triggering attack. If the attack's range is melee or ranged, the additional target must be within 5 squares of you. If the attack's range is area or close, the additional target must be adjacent to the burst or blast.

Each target hit by the attack takes 1d10 extra damage of the type dealt by the triggering attack. In addition, you gain temporary hit points equal to your Charisma modifier.

Level 17: 2d10 extra damage, and the target is also immobilized until the end of your next turn.

Level 27: 3d10 extra damage, and you also gain resistance to all damage equal to one-half your level until the end of your next turn.

Special: You can use this power only once per round.

Elemental Escalation (Fire) Sorcerer Attack

As elemental energy flows through you, the rage of your internal inferno infuses it, and you move like a wildfire.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Elemental; Varies
Free Action Personal
Trigger: You use a sorcerer at-will attack power.
Effect: You can make one additional creature a target of the triggering attack. If the attack's range is melee or ranged, the additional target must be within 5 squares of you. If the attack's range is area or close, the additional target must be adjacent to the burst or blast.

Each target hit by the attack takes 1d10 extra damage of the type dealt by the triggering attack. In addition, you shift up to half your speed as a free action.

Level 17: 2d10 extra damage, and ongoing 10 fire damage (save ends).

Level 27: 3d10 extra damage, and the attack also deals half damage on a miss.

Special: You can use this power only once per round.

Elemental Escalation (Water) Sorcerer Attack

A whirlpool wells up within, deflecting harm from you and overwhelming your enemies.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Elemental; Varies
Free Action Personal
Trigger: You use a sorcerer at-will attack power.
Effect: You can make one additional creature a target of the triggering attack. If the attack's range is melee or ranged, the additional target must be within 5 squares of you. If the attack's range is area or close, the additional target must be adjacent to the burst or blast.

Each target hit by the attack takes 1d10 extra damage of the type dealt by the triggering attack. In addition, you gain a +2 power bonus to all defenses until the end of your next turn.

Level 17: 2d10 extra damage, and the target is also dazed until the end of your next turn.

Level 27: 3d10 extra damage, and the target also falls prone.

Special: You can use this power only once per round.

Powers

Your elementalist starts with elemental bolt, elemental escalation, and a power associated with his or her Elemental Specialty. See the Character Advancement table (page 159) for the utility powers you gain as you advance in level.

When you select powers at higher levels, consider the sorcerer powers introduced in this book, which are tailored for the elementalist. Player's Handbook 2, Arcane Power, and other sources present a variety of other sorcerer powers to choose from.

Skills

Sorcerers of any kind are people of extraordinary willfulness and force of personality. Few are content to allow anyone else to speak for them. If you see yourself as a leader in the adventuring party, you should choose one of the three interaction skills (Bluff, Diplomacy, or Intimidate). Intimidate is an obvious choice for an elementalist, since elementalists are not particularly subtle. However, you might prefer to use reason or guile in your dealings with others. After all, not all the beings you interact with are human; trickery or persuasion might be more useful than threats in breaking through the native stubbornness of an elder earth elemental.

The second theme represented in your skill list is rare and unusual lore. Arcana, Dungeoneering, History, and Nature all provide you with the ability to make knowledge checks when confronted with strange phenomena or creatures. All sorcerers have training in Arcana, but you should consider choosing a second knowledge skill in order to expand your learning. No one expects sorcerers to have the same devotion to scholarship that wizards do, but you are certainly more conversant about magical matters and distant planes than the typical fighter or rogue is.

Feats

Your primary role in battle is to contribute offense, not defense; it's important to get the most out of your attack powers. Since your sorcerer attack powers are all implement powers, Implement Focus and either Staff Expertise or Implement Expertise (dagger) are feats you should consider early in your career.

Feats that improve your reaction time by boosting your initiative or giving you an edge at the start of a battle are also useful for improving your offensive abilities. These are especially useful for elementalists who favor control powers, since it's always better to slow down or immobilize an enemy before it can close in on the party. Improved Initiative and Aggressive Advantage are good choices for getting the most out of your first strike.

Finally, feats that help you shrug off or resist crippling conditions are always useful. It's important for you to be able to open the range when enemies press you closely, and feats such as Defensive Mobility and Resilient Focus can help you preserve your ability to maneuver.

Equipment

The only type of armor you have proficiency with is cloth armor. You have proficiency with simple melee and simple ranged weapons. Magic is really your primary weapon and your chief defense, but you never know when you might be confronted by an enemy that is immune or resistant to your preferred element or caught up in a melee where using ranged spells would be too risky.

You start with 100 gp to buy your starting equipment. Choose a dagger or a staff as your implement, which can double as a melee weapon. Don't bother to purchase a ranged weapon unless you have a lot of money left over or you think it suits your character concept; your sorcerer attack powers are much more accurate and damaging than a stray shot from a crossbow or a sling.

Elementalist Powers

Elementalists have a collection of sorcerer at-will attack powers all their own. The source of their spells is the awesome power of the elements, untamed and unstoppable.

Blazing Cloud

By concentrating your blistering flames in a sphere around yourself, you can attack numerous close-up foes at once. Better yet, this spell's effects linger, creating a ring of fire that helps to turn away incoming attacks.

Blazing Cloud — Sorcerer Attack

You surround yourself in a nimbus of roaring flames.

At-Will ✦ Arcane, Elemental, Fire, Implement
Standard Action Close burst 1
Target: Each creature in the burst
Attack: Charisma vs. Reflex
Hit: 1d8 + Charisma modifier fire damage.
Level 21: 2d8 + Charisma modifier fire damage.
Effect: You gain a +2 power bonus to AC and Reflex until the start of your next turn.

Deluge

Water is the lifeblood of living creatures. It is a subtle element, one able to sustain life, dissolve solids, and scour worlds over thousands of years to create amazing terrain. It can also be used as a blunt attack when an area is suddenly flooded with it.

Deluge — Sorcerer Attack

You pull a mass of water from the elemental plane, hammering your enemies and sweeping them off their feet.

At-Will ✦ Arcane, Elemental, Implement
Standard Action Close blast 3
Target: Each creature in the blast
Attack: Charisma vs. Reflex
Hit: 1d8 + Charisma modifier damage, and you push the target 1 square.
Level 21: 2d8 + Charisma modifier damage.

Erupting Earth

Wherever you stand, you can call up stones, pebbles, and slabs of rock, and smash your enemies from below, and perhaps pin them beneath earthy debris.

Erupting Earth — Sorcerer Attack

You bring forth a mass of earth and rock from the elemental plane, battering your enemies and pinning them in place.

At-Will ✦ Arcane, Elemental, Implement
Standard Action Area burst 1 within 10 squares
Target: Each creature in the burst
Attack: Charisma vs. Fortitude
Hit: 1d6 + Charisma modifier damage.
Level 21: 2d6 + Charisma modifier damage.
Effect: The area becomes difficult terrain until the end of your next turn.

Howling Zephyr

A sorcerer of the air knows how to summon screaming winds from the Elemental Chaos and send them against foes. Creatures caught in the zephyr are moved every which way.

Howling Zephyr — Sorcerer Attack

You command the air to swirl violently, creating a short-lived zephyr of thunderous wind that sweeps away your enemy.

At-Will ✦ Arcane, Elemental, Implement, Thunder
Standard Action Close burst 1
Target: Each creature in the burst
Attack: Charisma vs. Fortitude
Hit: 1d8 + Charisma modifier thunder damage, and you can slide the target 1 square.
Level 21: 2d8 + Charisma modifier thunder damage.

Ice Prison

A lethal swirl of icicles forms out of the air when you cast this spell. The icicles partially encase creatures in the area for a short time, slowing their movements.

Ice Prison — Sorcerer Attack

You create a cloud of intense cold and swift-growing icicles that chills your foes for a time.

At-Will ✦ Arcane, Cold, Elemental, Implement
Standard Action Area burst 1 within 10 squares
Target: Each creature in the burst
Attack: Charisma vs. Fortitude
Hit: 1d8 + Charisma modifier cold damage, and the target is slowed until the end of your next turn.
Level 21: 2d8 + Charisma modifier cold damage.

A dwarf sorcerer uses erupting earth to throw an obstacle in the way of her foes

Ignition

The fires that burn in the Elemental Chaos are so hot that they can radiate even across dimensional walls when you stoke them. When an area begins to smolder, the roar of catching fire soon follows.

Ignition — Sorcerer Attack

You hurl a concussive blast, causing everything in the area to smoke, smolder, and then burst into flame.

At-Will ✦ Arcane, Elemental, Implement, Fire, Zone
Standard Action Area burst 1 within 10 squares
Target: Each creature in the burst
Attack: Charisma vs. Fortitude
Hit: 1d10 + Charisma modifier damage.
Level 21: 2d10 + Charisma modifier damage.
Effect: The burst creates a zone that lasts until the start of your next turn. Any creature that enters the zone or ends its turn there takes fire damage equal to your Constitution modifier. A creature can take this damage only once per turn.

Seismic Shock

This spell unleashes intense vibrations all around you, shaking the ground and disorienting your foes. Even if you aren't in contact with the ground, you can channel the seismic energy through almost any medium.

Seismic Shock — Sorcerer Attack

You strike the ground, creating an abrupt tremor of seismic activity. Enemies in the area are disoriented.

At-Will ✦ Arcane, Elemental, Implement, Thunder
Standard Action Close burst 1
Target: Each creature in the burst
Attack: Charisma vs. Fortitude
Hit: 1d8 + Charisma modifier thunder damage, and the target grants combat advantage until the end of your next turn.
Level 21: 2d8 + Charisma modifier thunder damage.

Static Charge

Lightning arcs from one conductor to another. You take advantage of that characteristic with this spell.

Static Charge — Sorcerer Attack

You create a shaped pulse of lightning that shocks foes standing near you, arcing to additional enemies near them.

At-Will ✦ Arcane, Elemental, Implement, Lightning
Standard Action Close blast 3
Target: Each enemy in the blast
Attack: Charisma vs. Reflex
Hit: 1d8 lightning damage, and one enemy adjacent to the target takes lightning damage equal to your Charisma modifier.
Level 21: 2d8 lightning damage.

MARK BEHM

New Sorcerer Powers

The powers in this section expand on those found in Player's Handbook 2 and other sources. These powers are among your options when you choose sorcerer powers of the given levels.

Level 2 Utility Powers

Rock Armor

The element of earth embodies endurance, solidity, and stability. This spell epitomizes those qualities. You cover yourself with loose-fitting armor made from stones, pebbles, and slabs of rock, held in place by your elemental magic.

Rock Armor — Sorcerer Utility 2

You shield yourself with armor shaped from the rock, pebbles, and earth around you.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Elemental, Stance
Minor Action — Personal
Effect: You assume the rock armor stance. Until the stance ends, you are slowed and gain resistance to all damage equal to your Charisma modifier.

Shield of Flames

This spell invokes elemental fire and wraps it around your body, deterring your enemies from attacking you or even remaining nearby. You look like you are standing in the heart of a conflagration, but the flames do not harm you in the least.

Shield of Flames — Sorcerer Utility 2

You conjure a sphere of blazing hot flames, obscuring your form and damaging enemies who tarry too close.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Aura, Elemental, Fire
Minor Action — Personal
Effect: You activate an aura 1 that lasts until the end of your next turn. You have partial concealment against enemies in the aura, and any creature that makes a melee attack against you or ends its turn in the aura takes fire damage equal to your Charisma modifier. A creature can take this damage only once per turn.

Wall of Water

You bring a volume of water from the elemental plane and shape it into a short-lived barrier. The wall is permeable, but it slows and deflects attacks and requires a substantial effort to push through. In addition, creatures passing through the wall are soaked to the skin.

Wall of Water — Sorcerer Utility 2

You shape water into a foot-thick vertical wall that interferes with attacks and movement for a short time.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Elemental
Minor Action — Area wall 5 within 10 squares
Effect: You create a wall of water that lasts until the end of your next turn. The wall provides superior cover against attacks made through it. A creature must swim to move through the wall (Athletics DC 10). In addition, a creature passing through the wall gains vulnerable 5 cold until the end of its next turn.
Sustain Minor: The wall persists until the end of your next turn.
Special: If any part of the wall meets an area of liquid water at least 5 squares in size, you can increase the area to a wall 10.

Whirling Wind

You summon a strong blast of wind, which blows away from you. Any creature in the area has a difficult time pushing itself upwind and is hampered by blowing dust and light debris in the air. Small, light objects—for example, paper, cloth, and baskets—are swept out of the area.

Whirling Wind — Sorcerer Utility 2

Whirling air surrounds you, protecting you and obscuring your position.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Elemental, Zone
Minor Action — Close burst 1
Effect: The burst creates a zone of lightly obscured squares that lasts until the end of your next turn. Creatures in the zone must spend 1 extra square for each square of movement toward you.

Level 6 Utility Powers

Raise Stone

This spell causes a 5-foot-wide column of stone to grow or subside beneath a nearby patch of ground, giving you the ability to change its elevation. Though it is difficult to employ as an attack, you could block a 5-foot-wide passageway, lift a square containing a helpless comrade out of the reach of enemies, sink a boulder out of your way, or provide yourself with an elevator to reach a high ledge.

Raise Stone — Sorcerer Utility 6

You raise or lower a column of rock from the ground.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Elemental
Minor Action — Ranged 5
Target: One square of stone, mud, or dirt
Effect: You cause the target square to rise up to 20 feet or sink up to 10 feet. If you raise the square, the area below it is filled with solid rock and becomes blocking terrain. Creatures in the target square can shift 1 square as a free action to avoid being raised or lowered. This power cannot be used to harm a creature, and any such use causes the power to fail. The target square remains at its new elevation until the end of the encounter.

Fire Stride This spell grants you the ability to move between two nearby fires with a single step. A clever fire elementalist can become extremely elusive in a place where numerous fires are burning in close proximity–for example, the hearth-fires of a town or village, the campfires of an army, or the burning trees of a forest fire.

Fire Stride — Sorcerer Utility 6

You step into a blazing fire and instantly teleport to another nearby fire without harm.

At-Will ✦ Arcane, Elemental, Teleportation
Move Action — Personal
Requirement: You must be adjacent to a fire of campfire size or larger.
Effect: You teleport up to 10 squares to a square adjacent to a fire of campfire size or larger.

Water to Ice The energy most often associated with elemental water is cold, which is useful in battle and also when defeating the right sort of obstacle or preparing a battleground. This spell instantly causes water in the area to freeze, becoming slick, hard ice. Large bodies of water freeze to a depth of only 6 inches, but that is more than enough to form an impromptu bridge or raft.

Water to Ice — Sorcerer Utility 6

Using cold to directly harm your enemies is one thing. You can also turn it to your advantage by using cold against water, freezing the area around you.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Elemental
Standard Action — Area burst 3 within 10 squares
Effect: You cause nonliving water in the burst to freeze to a depth of 6 inches. Mud or swamp freezes, becoming normal terrain. Wet floors change to slick ice, becoming difficult terrain. Ice covers bodies of water in the area, which can now be walked on (although the ice is difficult terrain). A creature that enters a square of this ice or starts its turn there must make a DC 11 Acrobatics check or fall prone. The transformed ice remains frozen until it melts naturally.

Wind Rider Many air elementalists naturally long to take wing, but other elementalists find the ability to fly useful as well. This spell grants you the ability to surf on powerful but unpredictable updrafts. Balancing on an unseen column of wind is strenuous, but you can remain airborne indefinitely.

Wind Rider — Sorcerer Utility 6

Powerful winds bear you aloft by pushing against the ground beneath you.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Elemental
Minor Action — Personal
Effect: Until the end of your next turn, you can fly up to your speed as a move action (altitude limit 4). You grant combat advantage while aloft.
Sustain Standard: The effect persists until the end of your next turn.

Level 10 Utility Powers

Control Flame At your command, fires die down or leap up and blaze with renewed fury. You can also cause a fire to leave its fuel source and burn in another spot altogether.

Control Flame — Sorcerer Utility 10

You command a fire to burn more fiercely, or move it to a new location.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Elemental
Standard Action — Close burst 3
Effect: You take control of each nonliving fire in the burst that is not controlled by a creature. Choose one of the following options for each fire.
Expand: The fire expands to a square adjacent to it.
Extinguish: The fire is extinguished.
Relocate: You move the fire up to 2 squares.
Expanded or relocated flames return to their normal size and location at the end of your next turn.
Sustain Minor: The effect persists until the end of your next turn, and you can expand, extinguish, or relocate the controlled flames again.

Earth Passage This spell allows you to pass through earth, rock, or worked stone as easily as you stride across a room. You can traverse a wall made of stone and rubble, stride through a cave-in, or escape a jail cell by walking through the floor.

Earth Passage — Sorcerer Utility 10

You stride through earth or stone as if it isn't there.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Elemental
Move Action — Personal
Effect: You move up to your speed. During this movement, you can pass through stone, rock, sand, or earth, and you have tremorsense 1. If you end this movement inside solid earth, you immediately move to an unoccupied square nearest your entry point.

Elemental Shield In natural manifestations or in the hands of your enemies, elemental power can be a deadly threat. This spell lets you counter an enemy that is attacking with acid, cold, fire, lightning, or thunder, shielding the party from the worst effects for a short time.

Elemental Shield — Sorcerer Utility 10

You block a dangerous manifestation of the elements with an immediate counterspell, protecting yourself and your allies.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Elemental
Immediate Interrupt — Close burst 2
Trigger: You or an ally within 2 squares of you takes acid, cold, fire, lightning, or thunder damage.
Target: You and each ally in the burst
Effect: Until the end of your next turn, each target gains resist 10 to the triggering damage type.

Elemental warding puts a barrier of lightning between a sorcerer and a displacer beast

Elemental Warding This spell creates a barrier of elemental energy in a small area. An ally that ventures into the area feels a coruscating bubble of your chosen element surrounding his or her position.

Elemental Warding — Sorcerer Utility 10

You ward an area with seething elemental power.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Elemental, Zone
Minor Action Close burst 10
Target: One, two, or three squares in the burst
Effect: Choose acid, cold, fire, lightning, or thunder. Each target square becomes a zone that lasts until the end of the encounter. You or an ally gains resist 10 to damage of the chosen type while in the zone.

Level 16 Utility Powers

Elemental Translation This spell opens a gate to the Elemental Chaos, shifting a large mass of raw elemental material from that plane to yours. The material comes into existence too slowly to be effective as an attack, but it provides you with many options for altering your environment. The material you bring forth is real and permanent, although air quickly disperses and fire burns out if it has no fuel.

ZOLTAN BOROS

Elemental Translation — Sorcerer Utility 16

You create a large volume of elemental material.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Elemental
Minor Action Close blast 3
Target: Each creature in the blast
Effect: You push each target to a square adjacent to the blast. If a target can't be pushed, its space is excluded from the blast. Choose air, earth, fire, or water to determine the blast's effect.

Air: Normal fires in the blast are extinguished, and gases or vapors are dispersed.

Earth: The blast is filled with firmly packed dirt and is blocking terrain.

Fire (Zone): Burning embers and flames create a zone that lasts until the end of the encounter. Any creature in the zone has vulnerable 10 fire.

Water: A mass of water appears in the blast and collapses into a pool 2 feet deep and 10 squares in diameter centered on the blast, becoming difficult terrain until the end of your next turn. It then becomes 6 inches deep and 20 squares in diameter, and has no effect on movement.

Icy Integument

This spell covers you in armor made of ice, which radiates intense cold all around you. Not only does the integument provide excellent protection, but long, jagged icicles growing from your icy armor also endanger any enemy who tries to strike you.

Icy Integument — Sorcerer Utility 16

You armor yourself with ice covered in sharp icicles. You radiate bitter cold, slowing your attackers.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Aura, Cold, Elemental
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You activate an aura 1 that lasts until the end of your next turn. Any creature in the aura that makes a melee attack against you takes cold damage equal to 10 + your Charisma modifier, and it is slowed until the end of its next turn. While the aura is active, you have partial cover.

Tornado Leap

Winds that would batter and scour any other creature are your servants. This spectacular spell flings you across the battlefield in a cyclone of air. As the cyclone slows, you retain the ability to fly at a more sedate pace for a short time.

Tornado Leap — Sorcerer Utility 16

You leap into the air in a violent cyclone.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Elemental
Move Action Personal
Effect: You fly up to your speed + 2. You also gain a fly speed equal to your speed and can hover until the end of your next turn.

Level 22 Utility Powers

Elemental Rift

This spell creates a swirling vortex leading to the Elemental Chaos. Any creature that enters the area is sucked toward the rift; if it fails to exit the area, it is banished to the Elemental Chaos for a time. Elemental rift is a powerful deterrent to most foes, and it can make a wide area virtually impassable.

Elemental Rift — Sorcerer Utility 22

You open a vortex leading to the elemental planes. Any creature that ventures too close is sucked inside it.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Elemental, Zone
Standard Action Area burst 2 within 10 squares
Effect: The burst creates a zone that lasts until the end of your next turn. When an enemy enters the zone or starts its turn there, it is slowed until the end of its next turn and pulled 1 square toward the center of the zone. If a creature ends its turn in the zone, it is removed from play (save ends).
Sustain Minor: The zone persists until the end of your next turn.

Suppress Element

With this spell, a powerful elementalist can suppress the strength of other elements in his or her vicinity. For example, a fire elementalist might choose to suppress elemental water, reducing cold damage and hindering water creatures that remain close by.

Suppress Element — Sorcerer Utility 22

You weaken the strength of effects and creatures affiliated with one of the elements.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Aura, Elemental
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You activate an aura 3 that lasts until the end of the encounter. Choose air, earth, fire, or water to determine the aura's effect.

Air: Lightning damage is halved against you and your allies in the aura. If an enemy that has the air subtype ends its turn in the aura, that enemy is dazed until the end of its next turn.

Earth: Thunder damage is halved against you and your allies in the aura. If an enemy that has the earth subtype ends its turn in the aura, that enemy is dazed until the end of its next turn.

Fire: Fire damage is halved against you and your allies in the aura. If an enemy that has the fire subtype ends its turn in the aura, that enemy is dazed until the end of its next turn.

Water: Cold damage is halved against you and your allies in the aura. If an enemy that has the water subtype ends its turn in the aura, that enemy is dazed until the end of its next turn.

Warlock

The warlock's world is one shaped by mysterious relationships—trafficking with dark powers from beyond mortal ken that offer secrets of magical knowledge in exchange for service, information, souls, or some other inscrutable end.

A warlock might forge a pact with a mercurial fey creature, a calculating devil, or a being from the darkness between the stars. There are warlocks bound to great magical kings, and those who draw power out of vestiges from beyond time. Perhaps the most feared of all, however, are those who risk the world's annihilation by consorting with the primordials that strain against their chains and rattle their cages in a desperate attempt to escape their ages-old exile.

Under most circumstances, primordials care nothing for mortals and barely acknowledge their existence. Elemental pact warlocks thus go about bargaining with these powers in different ways. They often absorb magic from different entities at different times, calling forth elemental fire from Imix at one moment and then borrowing from Ben-hadar the next. A primordial's moral predilections, if the entity has any, rarely play a part in the warlock's worldview, since an elemental pact warlock doesn't serve an individual primordial but rather serves them all.

Pacts with Primordials

Primordials are restless. They strain against the adamantine chains placed upon them. They fight to rouse themselves from the slumber to which they were consigned. They dream of vengeance, they hunger for freedom, and they pine for a day when they can reclaim what is theirs. Primordials are unmoved by mortal matters, unconcerned with other creatures' trivial triumphs and defeats.

As such, a warlock seeking a relationship with a primordial does not make a bargain in the traditional sense of the word. No negotiation occurs. An offering of one's fealty is all that is needed. This opening of oneself creates a connection, forged between an uncaring patron and an infinitesimal speck. The bond comes to shape the mortal's identity, warping his or her nature, until the warlock becomes a mighty extension of his or her unknowable benefactor.

As an elemental pact warlock, you have dared to open the floodgates to elemental power. Your prize

This warlock's elemental ability, known as Yan-C-Bin's breath, is a potent weapon against a carrion crawler

STEVE ELLIS

for approaching the providers of this power is the ability to incorporate their destructive and capricious energy into your spells. Regardless of the kind of warlock you are, a strong personality is crucial for shaping and controlling elemental foes, so be sure to make your Charisma your highest score. Elemental magic is taxing and demands much from your body. Constitution should be your next highest ability score.

The elemental pacts presented here are for warlocks created using the Player's Handbook or Heroes of the Forgotten Kingdoms.

New Eldritch Pact

When you choose the Eldritch Pact for your Player's Handbook warlock, the elemental pact is among your options.

Elemental Pact

The Elemental Chaos's power lured you into forging a pact with one of the inscrutable primordials. You reached into the roiling Plane Below and stole its power. Your magic is wild and random, changing to suit the powers you serve. The elemental power fueling your spells surprises your enemies with the seemingly random energy you can loose against them.

Elemental Affinity: After each rest, roll a d10 to determine your current elemental affinity. You can choose the damage type when you use your second wind, but the type changes again when you rest.

| d10 | Affinity |
|---|---|
| 1-2 | Acid |
| 3-4 | Cold |
| 5-6 | Fire |
| 7-8 | Lightning |
| 9-10 | Thunder |

On your turn, when you use an arcane attack power that deals force, necrotic, poison, or psychic damage, you can change the damage type to match that of your current elemental affinity. Your elemental affinity's damage type replaces each instance of force, necrotic, poison, and psychic damage that the power deals.

Chromatic Bolt: You gain the chromatic bolt power (page 102).

Accursed Affinity: You have the Accursed Affinity pact boon. When an enemy under your Warlock's Curse is reduced to 0 hit points or fewer, the next enemy you place your Warlock's Curse on gains vulnerable 5 to the damage type matching your current elemental affinity. This vulnerability is cumulative with the enemy's existing vulnerability to the same damage type, if any, and lasts until the curse ends. The vulnerability increases to 10 at 11th level and 15 at 21st level.

New Hexblade Pact

When you choose the pact for your hexblade warlock (see Heroes of the Forgotten Kingdoms), the elemental pact is among your options.

Elemental Pact

Your pact is an unusual one, since you might have made it with unwilling or unaware primordial partners. Inviting elemental power into your soul affects a subtle transformation that gives you access to elemental magic's raw, destructive potential. You venture into the wider world as a champion of destruction, a force for upheaval, armed with the power of chaos.

Level 1: Elemental Pact Reward

Your primordial connections keep you supplied with elemental power that you can release through your magical attacks.

Benefit: You gain proficiency with scale armor. In addition, you gain a bonus to the damage rolls of your warlock and warlock paragon path attack powers.

ELEMENTARY VIEWPOINT: BEY AD-AZAZIN, FLAME OF SHAHI

You name us tyrants? Despots? Cruel taskmasters who bend all to our will to feed our appetites? How little you mortals know. What did you think would happen when the primordials fell? Did you imagine the Abyss would be free to expand, to consume the entirety of the Elemental Chaos unchecked? I understand how the nature of my homeland might suggest that we elementals are of a single mind—wild and free, reckless, random in our violence, like untamed savages hungry to rend flesh and crack bones. Nothing could be further from the truth. I shall grant you a reprieve for holding to such beliefs. No need to thank me.

You see, mortal, we are the bulwark holding back chaos. We are order. We are law. We rule because it is proper and right. We rule because without us, the Abyss would consume everything—and then where would you be?

The noble efreets learned the lessons of this plane early. A firm hand is needed to ensure obedience and to repel the chaotic forces chipping away at our achievements. You might call the laws of this fair city harsh, perhaps draconian, and you would be right. But we have next to no crime, and all who live under our laws are safe and secure from the world without. Now tell me, worm, which of your mortal cities can say the same?

The bonus equals your Constitution modifier. The bonus increases to 2 + your Constitution modifier at 5th level, 4 + your Constitution modifier at 15th level, and 6 + your Constitution modifier at 25th level.

At 9th level, you also gain this bonus to the damage rolls of the creature you summon with summon warlock's ally.

Level 1: Elemental Pact Boon

Souls wriggling free from those slain on the battlefield excite the chaos flowing from your pact. Elemental energy rushes out and protects you from harm. The fading life force enables you to become a creature of chaos, if only for a few moments.

Benefit: You gain the warding chaos power.

Warding Chaos — Warlock Utility

Energy flares from a dying enemy, warding you against elemental damage.

At-Will ✦ Arcane, Elemental
Free Action Personal
Trigger: You reduce an enemy to 0 hit points, or an enemy adjacent to you drops to 0 hit points.
Effect: You gain resist 5 acid, cold, fire, lightning, and thunder until the end of your next turn. You can shift up to a number of squares equal to your Constitution modifier.
Special: You can use this power only once per round.

Level 1: Elemental Pact Weapon

The original blade of chaos was forged from a broken piece of panoply belonging to Miska the Wolf-Spider that was lost when the fabled Wind Dukes of Aqaa defeated him. A fouled bit of steel, nearly overlooked as mere debris, it contained a fragment of the primordial's essence. Other blades of this sort have been crafted over the years, each one channeling raw, chaotic force and enabling the wielder to turn it to advantage.

A curved chopping sword with a single serrated edge, a blade of chaos is a physical manifestation of a warlock's elemental pact. Although it appears heavy and unwieldy, the blade is easily wielded in one hand. One can feel elemental power roiling in the steel, as if the weapon were alive.

The blade's bearer can call forth its wrath with two powers born in chaos. Unraveling strike breaks down a creature's natural resistances to elemental magic, and elemental wrath releases a flood of destructive energy in whatever form the wielder chooses, to blast a foe and destroy anyone else who comes too close.

Blade of Chaos — Warlock Item

This large, curved blade has a single serrated edge.

Weapon Category: One-handed military melee weapon
Weapon Group: Heavy blade
Proficiency Bonus: +3
Damage: 2d4
Property: High crit

Unraveling Strike — Warlock Attack

Brilliant colors flare around your blade, rending your enemy's defenses to create an opening for your next attack.

At-Will ✦ Arcane, Elemental, Implement, Weapon
Standard Action Melee weapon
Requirement: You must use this power with your blade of chaos.
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. AC
Hit: 1[W] + Charisma modifier damage. Choose acid, cold, fire, lightning or thunder. The target gains vulnerable 3 to that damage type until the end of your next turn.
Level 21: 2[W] + Charisma modifier damage.
Special: You can use this power as a melee basic attack.

Elemental Wrath — Warlock Attack

Your serrated blade shreds an enemy's resistances to the elements while surrounding you with destructive energy.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Aura, Elemental, Implement, Weapon; Varies
Standard Action Melee weapon
Requirement: You must use this power with your blade of chaos.
Special: Each time you use this power, choose acid, cold, fire, lightning, or thunder. The power's damage is that type.
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. Reflex
Hit: 2[W] + Charisma modifier damage, and the target loses any resistance or immunity to this power's damage type until the end of your next turn.
Level 13: 3[W] + Charisma modifier damage.
Level 23: 4[W] + Charisma modifier damage.
Effect: You activate an aura 1 that lasts until the end of your next turn. Any creature that enters the aura or starts its turn there takes damage equal to your Constitution modifier. A creature can take this damage only once per turn.

Level 7: Elemental Pact Weapon Retribution

Enemies realize their error in attacking you when you instantly blast their thoughts with a psychic scream fueled by the chaos residing in your serrated blade.

Benefit: You gain the elemental roar power.

Elemental Roar Warlock Attack

A terrible howling tears into your enemy's mind in retribution for its attack.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Elemental, Psychic
Immediate Reaction Melee 1
Requirement: You must be holding your blade of chaos.
Trigger: An adjacent enemy attacks you.
Target: The triggering enemy
Effect: 5 + your Charisma modifier psychic damage, and the target grants combat advantage until the end of your next turn.
Level 17: 10 + your Charisma modifier psychic damage.
Level 27: 15 + your Charisma modifier psychic damage.

Level 9: Summon Warlock's Ally (Elemental)

The archons first appeared during the Dawn War as an answer to the angelic legions making up the gods' armies. Forged in vast numbers from elemental materials, the archons had keen intellects and an abiding hatred for their immortal foes. You can call upon an archon to aid you in battle. Although the archon has little reason to aid you, the blade you bear bends it to your will, and thus the archon fights at your side.

Benefit: You can use summon warlock's ally to summon an archon grunt. When you use this power, roll a d4 to determine the type of archon grunt you summon: 1, air; 2, earth; 3, fire; or 4, water.

Air Archon Grunt Level 9 Summoned Creature
Medium elemental humanoid (air)

HP your bloodied value; Healing Surges none, but you can spend a healing surge for the archon if an effect allows it to spend one
Defenses your defenses, not including any temporary bonuses or penalties
Speed 6, fly 6
☼ Gift of Wind ✦ Aura 2
You gain a +2 power bonus to Acrobatics checks while you are in the aura.
Fluttering Form
Whenever the archon takes damage from a melee attack, the attacker can slide the archon 1 square.
ǂ Standard Action ✦ At-Will
Attack: Melee 1 (one creature); your level + 7 vs. AC
Hit: 2d8 + your Charisma modifier damage, and the target is immobilized until the end of your next turn.
Minor Action ✦ At-Will (1/round)
Effect: The archon walks, shifts, runs, stands up, squeezes, or crawls.
Opportunity Action ✦ At-Will
Trigger: An enemy hits you with a melee attack while you are adjacent to the archon.
Effect: The archon pushes the triggering enemy up to 3 squares.

Earth Archon Grunt Level 9 Summoned Creature
Medium elemental humanoid (earth)

HP your bloodied value; Healing Surges none, but you can spend a healing surge for the archon if an effect allows it to spend one
Defenses your defenses (+2 to AC and Fortitude), not including any temporary bonuses or penalties
Speed 6 (earth walk)
☼ Gift of Stone ✦ Aura 2
You gain a +2 power bonus to Endurance checks while you are in the aura.
Shattering Tremors
Whenever the archon takes thunder damage, it is slowed until the end of its next turn.
ǂ Standard Action ✦ At-Will
Attack: Melee 1 (one creature); your level + 7 vs. AC
Hit: 2d10 + your Charisma modifier damage, and the archon pushes the target up to a number of squares equal to your Constitution modifier.
Minor Action ✦ At-Will (1/round)
Effect: The archon walks, shifts, runs, stands up, squeezes, or crawls.
Opportunity Action ✦ At-Will
Trigger: An enemy hits you with a melee attack while you are adjacent to the archon.
Effect: The triggering enemy falls prone.

Fire Archon Grunt Level 9 Summoned Creature
Medium elemental humanoid (fire)

HP your bloodied value; Healing Surges none, but you can spend a healing surge for the archon if an effect allows it to spend one
Defenses your defenses, not including any temporary bonuses or penalties
Speed 7
Resist 10 fire
☼ Gift of Fire ✦ Aura 2
You gain a +2 power bonus to Intimidate checks while you are in the aura.
Guttering Flames
Whenever the archon takes cold damage, it cannot shift until the end of its next turn.
ǂ Standard Action (fire) ✦ At-Will
Attack: Melee 1 (one creature); your level + 7 vs. AC
Hit: 2d8 + your Charisma modifier fire damage, and the target gains vulnerable 5 fire until the end of your next turn.
Minor Action ✦ At-Will (1/round)
Effect: The archon walks, shifts up to 3 squares, runs, stands up, squeezes, or crawls.
Opportunity Action (fire) ✦ At-Will
Trigger: An enemy hits you with a melee attack while it is within 7 squares of the archon.
Effect: The archon shifts up to 7 squares to a square adjacent to the triggering enemy. The enemy then takes 5 fire damage.

A tiefling hexblade prepares to turn and fight before an ogre can finish its onrushing assault

| Effect: The archon slides the triggering enemy up to 2 squares. | |

Level 25: Greater Summon Warlock's Ally (Elemental)

The primordials' firstborn, the titans witnessed and aided in the world's creation. Each titan is a vast being armed with elemental power reflecting its maker's nature and temperament. Hate drives these creatures, and they rule as petty tyrants over domains populated by giants and lesser creatures. Not even you, with all your magical power, can compel these creatures to serve you, so when you summon a titan, you are calling forth a mere fragment of its essence in whatever elemental substance is at hand.

Benefit: You can use summon warlock's ally to summon a titan warrior. When you use this power, roll a d4 to determine the type of titan warrior you summon: 1, air; 2, earth; 3, fire; or 4, water.

Earth Titan Warrior Level 25 Summoned Creature
Huge elemental humanoid (earth, giant)

HP your bloodied value; Healing Surges none, but you can spend a healing surge for the titan if an effect allows it to spend one
Defenses your defenses, not including any temporary bonuses or penalties
Speed 6 (earth walk)
Immune petrification

☼ Stone Body ✦ Aura 2
You gain a +4 power bonus to Endurance checks while you are in the aura.

ǂ Standard Action ✦ At-Will
Attack: Melee 3 (one creature); your level + 7 vs. AC
Hit: 4d10 + your Charisma modifier damage.

Minor Action ✦ At-Will (1/round)
Effect: The titan walks, shifts, runs, stands up, squeezes, or crawls.

Minor Action ✦ Encounter
Effect: Until the end of your next turn, each enemy that enters the titan's aura or starts its turn there falls prone.

ǂ Opportunity Action ✦ At-Will
Trigger: An enemy adjacent to you and within 3 squares of the titan willingly moves without shifting.
Attack: Melee 3 (triggering enemy); your level + 5 vs. Reflex
Hit: 5 damage, and the target is dazed (save ends).

Fire Titan Warrior Level 25 Summoned Creature
Huge elemental humanoid (fire, giant)

HP your bloodied value; Healing Surges none, but you can spend a healing surge for the titan if an effect allows it to spend one
Defenses your defenses, not including any temporary bonuses or penalties
Speed 8

☼ Agile Flames ✦ Aura 2
You gain a +4 power bonus to Acrobatics checks while you are in the aura.

ǂ Standard Action (fire) ✦ At-Will
Attack: Melee 3 (one creature); your level + 7 vs. AC
Hit: 4d10 + your Charisma modifier fire damage.

Minor Action ✦ At-Will (1/round)
Effect: The titan walks, shifts, runs, stands up, squeezes, or crawls.

Minor Action (fire) ✦ Encounter
Effect: Until the end of your next turn, each enemy that ends its turn in the titan's aura takes 10 fire damage.

↯ Opportunity Action (fire) ✦ At-Will
Trigger: An enemy ends its turn adjacent to you and within 5 squares of the titan.
Attack: Ranged 5 (triggering enemy); your level + 5 vs. Reflex
Hit: 10 damage, and ongoing 10 fire damage (save ends).

Frost Titan Warrior Level 25 Summoned Creature
Huge elemental humanoid (cold, giant)

HP your bloodied value; Healing Surges none, but you can spend a healing surge for the titan if an effect allows it to spend one
Defenses your defenses, not including any temporary bonuses or penalties
Speed 8 (ice walk)

☼ Icy Strength ✦ Aura 2
You gain a +4 power bonus to Athletics checks while you are in the aura.

ǂ Standard Action (cold) ✦ At-Will
Attack: Melee 3 (one creature); your level + 7 vs. AC
Hit: 4d10 + your Charisma modifier cold damage.

Minor Action ✦ At-Will (1/round)
Effect: The titan walks, shifts, runs, stands up, squeezes, or crawls.

Minor Action (cold) ✦ Encounter
Effect: Until the end of your next turn, the titan's aura is difficult terrain for enemies that lack ice walk, and each enemy that ends its turn in the aura takes 10 cold damage.

ǂ Opportunity Action ✦ At-Will
Trigger: An enemy adjacent to you and within 3 squares of the titan willingly moves without shifting.
Attack: Melee 3 (triggering enemy); your level + 5 vs. Fortitude
Hit: 5 damage, the titan pushes the target up to 3 squares, and the target is immobilized (save ends).

Storm Titan Warrior Level 25 Summoned Creature
Huge elemental humanoid (aquatic, giant)

HP your bloodied value; Healing Surges none, but you can spend a healing surge for the titan if an effect allows it to spend one
Defenses your defenses, not including any temporary bonuses or penalties
Speed 8, fly 4, swim 8

☼ Storm Sight ✦ Aura 2
You gain a +4 power bonus to Perception checks while you are in the aura.

Aquatic
The titan can breathe underwater. In aquatic combat, it gains a +2 bonus to attack rolls against nonaquatic creatures.

ǂ Standard Action (lightning, thunder) ✦ At-Will
Attack: Melee 3 (one creature); your level + 7 vs. AC
Hit: 4d10 + your Charisma modifier lightning and thunder damage.

Minor Action ✦ At-Will (1/round)
Effect: The titan walks, shifts, runs, stands up, squeezes, or crawls.

Minor Action (lightning, thunder) ✦ Encounter
Effect: Until the end of your next turn, each enemy that ends its turn in the titan's aura takes 10 lightning and thunder damage.

↯ Opportunity Action (lightning) ✦ At-Will
Trigger: An enemy ends its turn adjacent to you and within 5 squares of the titan.
Attack: Ranged 5 (triggering enemy); your level + 5 vs. Reflex
Hit: 5 lightning damage, and the target is dazed (save ends).

New Warlock Powers

The powers in this section expand on those found in the Player's Handbook and other sources. These powers are among your options when you choose warlock powers of the given levels. These powers are especially appropriate for a warlock who has an elemental pact.

Level 1 At-Will Power

Chromatic Bolt

Raw, unformed chaos wreaks havoc with the mind. Few creatures can comprehend the raw potential lurking within elemental energy. When you loose a chromatic bolt, you hurl an undulating missile created from unformed substance that can send agony lancing through your opponent's mind.

Chromatic Bolt — Warlock Attack 1

You loose a crackling bolt of raw chaos against your foes.

At-Will ✦ Arcane, Elemental, Implement, Psychic
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: One creature
Attack: Charisma vs. Reflex
Hit: 1d8 + Charisma modifier psychic damage, and one creature within 5 squares of the target takes psychic damage equal to your Constitution modifier.
Level 21: 2d8 + Charisma modifier psychic damage, and psychic damage equal to 3 + your Constitution modifier.

Level 1 Daily Power

Yan-C-Bin's Breath

The evil prince of elemental water stirs in his watery prison, plotting the downfall of the gods and extending the influence of the Elder Elemental Eye across the world. Calling to Yan-C-Bin is perilous, since the monstrous primordial uses any excuse to extend a sliver of himself out from his prison.

Yan-C-Bin's Breath — Warlock Attack 1

You exhale a cloud of roiling green vapor that melts anything it touches.

Daily ✦ Acid, Arcane, Elemental, Implement, Zone
Standard Action Close blast 3
Target: Each creature in the blast
Attack: Charisma vs. Fortitude
Hit: 2d6 + Charisma modifier acid damage, and ongoing 5 acid damage (save ends).
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: The blast creates a zone that lasts until the end of your next turn. The zone is difficult terrain for creatures other than you. Each creature other than you that ends its turn in the zone takes 5 acid damage.
Sustain Minor: Roll a d6. On an odd result, reduce the zone's size by 1 square. On an even result, increase the zone's size by 1 square. If the zone occupies 0 squares, it ends. Otherwise, the zone persists until the end of your next turn.

Level 2 Utility Power

Stony Roots

Arcane magic makes it possible for you to tie yourself to the earth, thus grounding you and preventing enemies from removing you from their path.

Stony Roots — Warlock Utility 2

You draw elemental earth through your body to ensure that nothing can dislodge you from your position.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Elemental
Minor Action Personal
Effect: Until the end of the encounter, you can ignore forced movement, and you can make a saving throw when an attack would knock you prone. On a save, you don't fall prone.

Level 5 Daily Power

Tentacles of Cryonax

The fallen primordial Cryonax is a monstrous power, his name whispered for fear of attracting his attention. This spell emulates his presence, causing tentacles to reach out from Cryonax's realm to crush anything they can.

Tentacles of Cryonax — Warlock Attack 5

The temperature plummets as two ghastly, white tentacles emerge from out of nowhere to grab your enemies.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Cold, Conjuration, Elemental
Standard Action Close burst 10
Effect: You conjure two icy tentacles, each in an unoccupied square in the burst. The tentacles persist until the end of your next turn. Each creature other than you that starts its turn adjacent to a tentacle takes 5 cold damage, and it is slowed until the end of its next turn. While a tentacle persists, you can use the secondary power through it.
Secondary Power (Arcane, Cold, Elemental, Implement)
Standard Action Melee 2
Target: One enemy
Attack: Charisma vs. Reflex
Hit: 3d6 + Charisma modifier cold damage, the tentacle pulls the target 1 square, and the target is grabbed (save ends).
Each Failed Saving Throw: 5 cold damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Sustain Minor: Roll a d6. On a 1, remove one tentacle. On a 6, add one tentacle to an unoccupied square within 10 squares of you. If you have one or more tentacles remaining, the effect persists until the end of your next turn. Otherwise, the effect ends.

Level 6 Utility Power

Chaos Armor

This spell draws energy from the Elemental Chaos and gathers it about you in a protective field. The field warps and crackles, and energy lashes out from you at opportune times.

Chaos Armor — Warlock Utility 6

Power flows around you, girding you against the elements and lashing your enemies.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Elemental; Varies
Minor Action Personal
Effect: Choose acid, cold, fire, lightning, or thunder. Until the end of the encounter, you gain resist 10 to the chosen damage type. In addition, whenever an enemy hits you with an attack during your turn, one enemy within 5 squares of you takes damage of the chosen type equal to your Constitution modifier.

Level 10 Utility Power

Murky Deep A defensive spell, murky deep calls forth elemental water on the battlefield. Your connection to the Elemental Chaos lets you move safely through the area with great speed while your enemies flounder and struggle to advance through the dark waters.

Murky Deep — Warlock Utility 10

A bead of moisture appears above your head and expands into great shimmering strands of befouled water.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Elemental, Zone
Minor Action Close burst 3
Effect: The burst creates a zone of lightly obscured squares that lasts until the end of your next turn. When you shift without leaving the zone, you can shift up to 2 additional squares in the zone. Any enemy that enters the zone or starts its turn there is slowed until the start of its next turn. A creature that has a swim speed ignores this effect.
Sustain Minor: The zone persists until the end of your next turn.

Level 15 Daily Power

Dream of Mual-Tar The primordial Mual-Tar, the Thunder Spirit, strains against its chains, demanding release from the divine bonds placed upon it. This spell draws forth a speck of its monstrous attention and invites its consciousness to join the struggle.

Dream of Mual-Tar — Warlock Attack 15

A horrific serpent of lightning and thunder uncoils before you.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Elemental, Implement, Lightning, Thunder, Zone
Standard Action Close blast 5
Target: Each creature in the blast
Attack: Charisma vs. Reflex
Hit: 3d6 + Charisma modifier lightning damage, and ongoing 5 thunder damage (save ends).
Each Failed Saving Throw: Each creature adjacent to the target takes thunder damage equal to your Charisma modifier.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: The blast creates a zone that lasts until the end of your next turn. While in the zone, creatures other than you have vulnerable 5 lightning and vulnerable 5 thunder.
Sustain Minor: The zone persists until the end of your next turn. Roll a d6. On a 1, each creature in the zone can shift 1 square as a free action. On a 6, each creature other than you in the zone is slowed until the end of your next turn.

Level 16 Utility Power

Heart of the Storm The storms raging across the Elemental Chaos are almost beyond description. Violet lightning dances amid boiling clouds, while deafening thunder wracks the landscape for miles. Carried by winds that screech and moan, these storms rush about the plane to vent their wrath. This spell opens a tiny passage to one of these storms, letting the wind clear a path for you to escape.

Heart of the Storm — Warlock Utility 16

A forceful wind shoves back the creatures around you to provide you an exit.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Elemental
Move Action Close burst 2
Target: Each creature in the burst
Effect: You push each target 1 square. You then fly up to 8 squares.

ELEMENTAL VIEWPOINT: SARSIENE, TIEFLING HEXBLADE

Do I dabble in dangerous powers? Of course I do. I do not deny it, although I must say that I "dabble" in nothing. I am quite deliberate and single-minded in my work, especially because my rites—if not performed perfectly—might anger beings that could burn me to ash with a flick of a finger or level a city, should I inadvertently provide a door through which they might escape.

Before you pass judgment on me, however, consider this: No lesser power could arm me so well against the nightmarish foes I battle in the service of those who scorn and distrust me. I and my comrades willingly stand between you and monstrous horrors you could hardly imagine. How much more at risk would your life be if I were not here to protect you? Remember, all power has inherent danger. The magic I wield is simply a little more obvious than most in its potential peril.

The Fire Lord approves as another group of victims falls to the baleful eye of Imix

Level 19 Daily Power

Baleful Eye of Imix

The infinitely ancient primordial Imix claims dominion over elemental fire. Believed to be chief among the Elder Elemental Eye's servants, Imix is favored for his malice and the great gains he provides cultists in their efforts to recruit followers in the natural world. This horrid spell bestirs the Flame Prince, so that Imix himself looks onto your struggles.

Baleful Eye of Imix Warlock Attack 19

A great fiery eye opens, and as the eye winks, it erupts in a burst of flames.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Conjuration, Elemental, Fire, Teleportation
Minor Action Ranged 10

Effect: You conjure a Large eye of Imix in an unoccupied space in range. The eye persists until the end of your next turn. Each creature other than you that starts its turn adjacent to the eye takes ongoing 10 fire damage (save ends). Any creature that enters the eye's space takes 10 fire damage and can then teleport up to 5 squares as a free action. Until the effect ends, you can use the secondary power.

Secondary Power (Arcane, Elemental, Fire, Implement)
Standard Action Close burst 3 centered on the eye
Target: Each creature in the burst
Attack: Charisma vs. Fortitude
Hit: 4d6 + Charisma modifier fire damage, and the eye pulls the target up to 2 squares.

Sustain Minor: The eye persists until the end of your next turn. Roll a d6. On a 1, you cannot use the secondary power on your next turn. On a 6, creatures within 3 squares of the eye take fire damage equal to your Charisma modifier.

Level 29 Daily Power

Fury of Ogrémoch

The Lord of the Black Earth has nursed a grudge against the natural world since the gods first ripped it from his grasp. He craves the world's annihilation, if only to deny his enemies what they stole from him. Calling on Ogrémoch brings forth his malign presence in a whirling storm that petrifies creatures in its presence.

Fury of Ogrémoch Warlock Attack 29

The ground trembles and dust chokes the air as Ogrémoch's wrath encases your enemies and then explodes each stony casing in a spray of jagged shards.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Elemental, Implement
Standard Action Close blast 5
Target: Each enemy in the blast

Effect: The target is immobilized (save ends).
First Failed Saving Throw: The target is instead restrained (save ends).
Second Failed Saving Throw: The target is instead petrified (save ends).

Aftereffect: As a free action, make the following attack, which is a close burst 2 centered on the target.
Target: Each creature in the burst
Attack: Charisma vs. Reflex
Hit: 3d6 + Charisma modifier damage. If the target was restrained by this power, this attack deals 1d6 extra damage to it. If the target was petrified by this power, this attack deals 2d6 extra damage to it.
Miss: Half damage.

Wizard

The roads to magical mastery are many and varied. Sorcerers call forth the power from within and bards channel arcane magic through story and song, but the wizard defines what magic is. For most wizards, magic is something learned and studied, a complex arrangement of formulas and mystical techniques buried in thick tomes, written in cramped hands using occult diagrams and strange symbols. After years spent in study and concentration, often under a stern master who guides his or her development, a wizard is free to use this scholarly training in pursuit of whatever objectives are important to the individual.

Scholarship is the most common path for the wizard—a dangerous route reserved for the brightest minds in the world—yet it is not the only one. The spells a wizard learns are things in the cosmos, complicated and often elusive, but they are things to be found, discovered, and used. Even though many wizards dredge up spells from old spellbooks, other sources provide this sort of magic. Great entities, mighty wizards in their own right, can lend magical knowledge to mortals in exchange for some inscrutable service. Other avenues might exist as well.

The following section presents new powers for wizards with a strong elemental theme, as well as a new wizard subclass, the sha'ir.

Sha'ir

Arcane Controller: Using magic granted by your gen servant, you take control of the battlefield with the raw forces of elemental energy.

Key Abilities: Intelligence, Constitution

Sha'irs cull magical energy from the Elemental Chaos to power their spells. Rather than pore over ancient formulas and techniques, these wizards bargain with elemental powers for the magical knowledge they need. Sha'irs do not deal directly with these powers; instead, they rely on proxies, elemental spirits called gen servants, to negotiate on their behalf. Dispatching these servants to the Elemental Chaos each day, a sha'ir replenishes the necessary power and information to wield the forces of creation.

Their unconventional methods, combined with their reputation for consorting with dangerous, often violent, powers, place sha'irs on the fringes of the magical world. Other wizards regard sha'irs with scorn and distrust, believing that they cheat by circumventing the arduous training and research wizards must typically undergo. This mistrust stems from ignorance, however, for even though a sha'ir draws magic from a gen servant, a foundation in arcane training is necessary to wield the power he or she gains.

Since sha'irs do not clutter their minds with mystical formulas and arcane utterances, they have wider access to spells than other wizards enjoy. They need only know a spell's basic structure to request it from their gen servants. The gen servant then vanishes into the Elemental Chaos, where it bargains with more powerful elemental lords and creatures to acquire the spell the sha'ir seeks and then returns without fail to provide its master with the energy and means to cast the spell. So even though sha'irs do not employ spellbooks, they have access to the full expanse of wizards' most powerful and versatile spells.

The elemental powers that lend magical knowledge and energy to sha'irs do not do so without an expectation of recompense. Sha'irs often take up the adventurer's life for this reason. They work in the world and beyond as representatives, agents, and servants of their elemental masters. Many times a sha'ir does not even realize that his or her actions are furthering some elemental being's designs, and what might seem to be a normal expedition into the unknown could have consequences not realized for years to come.

Creating a Sha'ir

A sha'ir is a type of wizard, a class introduced in the Player's Handbook. To create a sha'ir, use the character creation rules in the Rules Compendium or the Player's Handbook. The Character Advancement table (page 159) summarizes how many powers and feats your sha'ir should have at each level, as well as when ability scores increase.

A sha'ir lacks these wizard class features from the Player's Handbook: Arcane Implement Mastery, Ritual Casting, and Spellbook. A sha'ir instead gains the class features Gen Servant and Elemental Resistance.

Sha'ir Traits

Hit Points: You start with hit points equal to 10 + your Constitution score. You gain 4 hit points each time you gain a level.

Bonus to Defenses: +2 to Will

Healing Surges per Day: 6 + your Constitution modifier

Armor Proficiencies: Cloth

Weapon Proficiencies: Dagger, quarterstaff

Implement Proficiencies: Orbs, staffs, wands

Class Skills: Arcana (Int), Diplomacy (Cha), Dungeoneering (Wis), History (Int), Insight (Wis), Nature (Wis), Religion (Int)

Trained Skills: Arcana, plus three more from the list of class skills

Ability Scores

When you determine your ability scores, Intelligence should be your highest score, since a keen intellect is needed to master the intricacies of magic and also determines the accuracy and potency of your spells. Constitution should be your next highest score. Channeling the elemental energy that powers your spells is physically demanding, especially when you summon creatures to serve you.

Your other abilities can reveal a great deal about your character's history and personality. A high Strength or Dexterity hints at physical hardships, perhaps faced in a barren or otherwise dangerous homeland. A low Strength could mean you lived a pampered life and gained your training from a classroom or tutor. A high Charisma could mean you won over the genies with your words, while a low Charisma could suggest that you were an outcast and dabbled in forbidden lore on your own.

Class Features

A sha'ir has the following class features, starting at level 1.

Gen Servant Elemental magic bows to no mortal master. Only those steeped in elemental energy or who can broker with the elemental powers can coax forth its magic. You enlist the aid of a minor elemental spirit, a gen servant, to keep you supplied with the magical energy you need to cast your spells. Each day, you dispatch this servant to the Elemental Chaos to steal, beg, or borrow this energy from the greater powers residing there. When the servant returns, the energy it brings back floods into your mind.

A gen servant is an arcane familiar forged from your own essence and that of elemental substance until it adopts a fixed and permanent form. As with any familiar, the characteristics that your gen servant takes on depend on you. The familiar might just be an extension of your magical abilities, or it might develop a distinctive personality, aiding you with knowledge from the Plane Below. How large a part your servant plays in your adventures is up to you.

Benefit: You gain the Arcane Familiar feat (page 142) as a bonus feat. You can choose any familiar normally available to a wizard or one of the familiars available only to sha'irs, which are described below.

At the end of each extended rest, when your familiar returns from its venture into the Elemental Chaos, you can replace one of your wizard daily attack powers or wizard utility powers with another wizard power of the same type. The new power must have a level, and its level must be the same as the old power's level.

Daolanin Stoic to the point of rudeness, daolanin tend to be dour and ill-tempered companions. They prefer the truth, even when that truth cuts like a knife. Daolanin are squat creatures with brown or gray skin, dark hair, and brutish features. They are strong and fierce in battle and prove adept at keeping enemies at bay.

Daolanin Familiar

The crude and abrasive daolanin compensates for its unpleasant disposition through the command it displays over elemental earth.

Prerequisite: You must be a wizard (sha'ir).
Speed 6

Constant Benefits

Earth's Upheaval
The ground adjacent to you and the daolanin is difficult terrain for enemies that lack earth walk.

Active Benefits

Gift of Stone
When you use an arcane daily attack power, the daolanin pushes one enemy adjacent to it up to a number of squares equal to your Constitution modifier.

Elemental Conduit
Once per encounter, you can use your familiar's space as the origin for a close arcane attack power.

Djinnling The mercurial djinnlings often have unpredictable personalities. They are quick to anger, but quicker to forget, tending to drift through many moods with little warning or reason. Djinnlings are short, thin humanoids with blue skin and tousled white hair. They are swift servants, and they can use the winds as weapons to disperse your enemies.

Djinnling Familiar

The djinnling's changeable nature does little to interfere with its willingness and ability to aid your cause.

Prerequisite: You must be a wizard (sha'ir).
Speed 6, fly 4 (hover)

Constant Benefits

Forceful Gusts
You can slide one ally adjacent to you or to the djinnling 1 square as a minor action.

Active Benefits

Gift of Wind
When you use an arcane daily attack power, you slide one creature adjacent to the djinnling up to 2 squares, and the djinnling shifts up to 2 squares.

Elemental Conduit
Once per encounter, you can use your familiar's space as the origin for a close arcane attack power.

Efreetkin The aggressive and malicious efreetkin resemble their larger cousins in both appearance and temperament. With fiery hair, ruddy skin, and small horns sprouting from their brows, they look like little devils and often behave as such. They delight in causing mischief and are famous for causing trouble for their masters. Despite this tendency, efreetkin are potent allies in battle, and many sha'irs tolerate their wickedness because of the power they offer.

SHA'IR RACE CHOICES

The following races make good choices for a sha'ir character.

Genasi: The first sha'irs, according to most legends concerning these wizards, were genasi. Or, at least, they were the humans who eventually became the genasi when they ventured into the Elemental Chaos. As elemental creatures and sometime allies of the genie races, genasi excel at manipulating elemental power and easily weave chaos energy into their arcane spells to great effect. Furthermore, genasi can tap into their own elemental nature to manifest destructive energy or alter their forms to escape danger.

The genies look favorably upon the genasi, regarding them as distant cousins or perhaps children when they are condescending. For this reason, the genies readily aid genasi allies. They magnify the talent the genasi already possess. Sha'irs among genasi communities are highly respected and valued as leaders and envoys.

The gods have little place in the lives of genasi sha'irs. Even gods who oversee arcane magic, such as Corellon, are accorded little respect, since sha'irs circumvent the methods he taught to the mortal races. If a sha'ir showed any favor to a particular god, it would be either Ioun or Vecna.

Githzerai: The githzerai withdrew to the Elemental Chaos to escape the escalating war with the githyanki. Finding the Plane Below to be a suitable haven, its shifting, changing landscape covering their retreat, they established outposts and monasteries from which they could study their new home. Though many githzerai found that the chaos reflected the upheaval in their hearts and used the insights gained from their scrutiny to unlock their minds' power, a few found the energy itself tempting and bent their wills to mastering it as wizards and warlocks.

Settling in the Elemental Chaos brought the githzerai into conflict with demons and slaads almost at once. In answer, the githzerai made alliances with the more peaceful genies, and from those alliances the first sha'irs were created. Githzerai sha'irs most often operate as diplomats and envoys to djinns and efreets. Within their communities, they might act as community leaders and advisors. Most githzerai sha'irs quit their communities altogether to explore the planes and increase their understanding of elemental magic.

Githzerai do not deal with gods often, and their sha'irs are no different. These people meet their spiritual needs by seeking enlightenment and evolving their minds beyond the limitations imposed by their bodies.

| Efreetkin | Familiar |
|---|---|
| The fires glowing from within an efreetkin's blackened flesh hint at the malice these servants hold for natural creatures. | |
| Prerequisite: You must be a wizard (sha'ir). | |
| Speed 8 | |
| Constant Benefits | |
| Friend of Flames | |
| You gain resist 5 fire. | |
| Standard Actions | |
| Gift of Flame (fire) | |
| When you use an arcane daily attack power, one enemy adjacent to the efreetkin takes fire damage equal to 3 + your Constitution modifier. | |
| Elemental Conduit | |
| Once per encounter, you can use your familiar's space as the origin for a close arcane attack power. | |

Maridan The playful maridans are a good-natured servants, friendly and personable. They are creatures of elemental water, and their green skin and blue hair help them blend into the depths. Though their spirits are often high, maridans are easily dismayed and might become uncooperative or angry when threatened. Maridans are thought to be the most reliable of allies, and their influence on the battlefield can slow enemies and interfere with their attacks.

| Maridan | Familiar |
|---|---|
| The playful maridan brings levity to the most trying situations, yet its jocularity never interferes with the performance of its duty. | |
| Prerequisite: You must be a wizard (sha'ir). | |
| Speed 6, swim 6 | |
| Constant Benefit | |
| Aquatic | |
| You and the maridan can breathe underwater. In aquatic combat, you gain a +2 bonus to attack rolls against nonaquatic creatures. | |
| Active Benefit | |
| Gift of Water | |
| When you use an arcane daily attack power, each enemy adjacent to the maridan is slowed, and you (if you are adjacent to the maridan) and each ally adjacent to it gain partial concealment. These effects last until the end of your next turn. | |
| Elemental Conduit | |
| Once per encounter, you can use your familiar's space as the origin for a close arcane attack power. | |

Sha'ir Cantrips The magic provided by a shair's gen servant hints at the power to come, yet the sha'ir must first master the elementary, minor spells before attempting greater feats.

Benefit: You gain four cantrips of your choice. (This book includes cantrip options. See Heroes of the Fallen Lands or the Player's Handbook for others.)

Elemental Resistance As you and your familiar harvest magic from the Elemental Chaos, you learn to protect yourselves and your companions from elemental damage.

Benefit: At the end of each extended rest, choose acid, cold, fire, lightning, or thunder. Until the end of your next extended rest, you and your allies have resistance to that damage type while adjacent to the familiar when it is in active mode. The resistance equals your Constitution modifier. At level 21, the resistance increases to twice your Constitution modifier.

Powers

Your sha'ir starts with eight wizard powers of your choice:

- Two 1st-level wizard at-will attack powers
- One 1st-level wizard encounter attack power
- One 1st-level wizard daily attack power
- Four wizard cantrips granted by the feature Sha'ir Cantrips

When choosing your powers, consider the wizard powers introduced in this book, which include magical effects that have strong thematic ties to the Elemental Chaos. The Player's Handbook, Arcane Power, Heroes of the Fallen Lands, and other sources present a variety of other wizard powers to choose from.

Skills

Your skills can reveal much about your character's past and upbringing, hinting at the circumstances that led to your character's becoming an adventurer and also what your character hopes to achieve. Interaction skills such as Bluff, Diplomacy, and Insight all improve your ability to negotiate, forge alliances, and manipulate others. Training in Bluff could mean you deceived an elemental entity into helping you, and Diplomacy might suggest that you won over the entity and gained its help through honest means.

Arcana might be the foundation for your magical training, but other knowledge skills such as Dungeoneering, History, Nature, and Religion demonstrate a broader education. Training in Dungeoneering could reflect some previous contact with Far Realm forces,

DEFINING YOUR GEN

Your gen servant is your most distinctive class feature and the one that sets you apart from other wizards. Not only does it keep you supplied with magical energy and help you overcome enemies in battle, it is a constant companion. You might see your gen servant as nothing more than a mechanical asset, a class feature you can use to get the upper hand in battle. Your gen servant can be much more, however, than just a notation on your character sheet. A gen can be a friend, confidant, or advisor.

When you imagine your gen, consider how you recruited it to your service. How did you meet? Did you help the gen through a difficulty? Or did you negotiate service with it, offering something in return for its aid? If you negotiated, what did you offer?

Her maridan companion looks apprehensive as an eladrin sha'ir holds a tome aloft invisibly

perhaps driving you to seek out an unconventional source of power to combat them. History suggests an academic origin; perhaps you learned your techniques in a grand academy, a concept further supported by training in Religion. Training in Nature might mean that you encountered an elemental entity in the wilderness, perhaps at a place steeped in chaos magic or where the planar boundaries are thin.

Feats

Certain feats are more useful to you at the start. As an implement user, any feat designed to increase your accuracy while also enhancing your ability to control enemies can serve you well. Orb Expertise, or a similar feat from the implement training category, improves your chance to hit while also letting you exert greater influence over your enemies. If you prefer damage, you can't go wrong with the Implement Focus feat.

Although implement training feats can benefit you in battle, other feats can serve your needs as well. Quick reaction feats, such as Aggressive Advantage and Improved Initiative, help you take control of the battlefield before your enemies have a chance to react. Toughness, Durable, Resilient Focus, and other enduring stamina feats ensure that you keep your feet.

As tempting as it might be to choose your feat based on combat needs, you can also use your feat choice to reinforce your character's personality and background. Learning and lore feats such as Elemental Synergy and Jack of All Trades demonstrate increased applications for your knowledge skills. Elemental feats, Child of Wind for example, open up a wide range of possibilities to explore your unusual heritage.

Equipment

You have proficiency with cloth armor. Since you rely on magic to serve as your weapon, you have little need to arm yourself beyond a backup weapon for the rare occasion when you find yourself cornered.

Like all starting characters, you have 100 gp with which you can purchase your starting equipment. You should purchase an implement first. Orbs help wizards who favor strong control spells, while wands are good for expanding your spellcasting options and increasing your accuracy. Finally, a staff is a worthwhile choice if you favor defense over offense.

New Wizard Powers

The powers in this section expand on those found in the Player's Handbook, Heroes of the Fallen Lands, Arcane Power, and other sources. These powers are among your options when you choose wizard powers of the given levels.

Cantrips

Water Stride This cantrip emulates the Water Walking ritual, giving you the short-lived ability to pass across liquid obstacles such as streams or ponds.

Water Stride — Wizard Utility

You speed across a liquid surface as if it were solid ground.

Encounter ✦ Arcane
Minor Action Personal
Effect: Until the end of your next turn, you can treat liquid surfaces as if they were solid ground but difficult terrain.

Whispering Wind A perfect spell for transmitting messages over short distances, you can use whispering wind to warn allies of danger or to coordinate an attack.

Whispering Wind — Wizard Utility

You speak a message to the wind and let it carry your words to an audience you choose.

Encounter ✦ Arcane
Standard Action Personal
Effect: You cause a breeze to carry a message of up to 25 words or a sound up to 6 seconds long to a place you choose. The destination must be within a number of miles equal to your Intelligence modifier and must be familiar to you, and it must be a location that the wind can reach. Once you complete the message or the sound, the wind travels at speed 5 (or 1 mile per hour) until it reaches the destination, where it conveys the message or the sound regardless of whether anyone hears it.
Special: You can have one whispering wind active at a time.

Level 1 At-Will Powers

Flame Arrow The war wizard Melf, also called Prince Brightflame, created flame arrow to ignite missiles with elemental flame. Although the spell was intended for use with projectiles such as arrows or bolts, any ranged weapon will do.

SOCIETY OF SHIFTING SANDS

The Society of Shifting Sands is an organization of sha'irs devoted to discovering and claiming artifacts lost beneath the desert sands. The society believes there was an ancient race of planar travelers who dwelt in deserts, and relics of the race's ancient magic lie hidden within their lost cities.

The society endears itself to desert settlements by setting up secret outposts for a time, bringing in new coin while chasing across the desert in search of artifacts. However, many of these settlements also become embittered when the society picks up and leaves.

Desert rulers are not happy with the Society of Shifting Sands, because these wizards tend to go where they want and dig up ancient cities, possibly unleashing who knows what in the way of curses. This conflict has led to all manner of unpleasantness in the past and has forced some members of the group underground. The society is extremely leery of making its goals and intentions known, and members rarely approach anyone directly for admission. Instead, they spread rumors that they are in an area and wait to see who seeks them out. Protective rituals and reliable informants help to keep the Shifting Sands out of trouble. In large part because the group keeps its activities secret, the number of newcomers to the society is necessarily limited. Over the last few years, the roster of membership has steadily declined, and still, only a handful of new members are recruited each year.

A schism has formed within the group. Some of its members would like to bring the society out of the shadows and make peace with local rulers. This would give them a freer hand in operations and allow them to swell their numbers. Other members of the society are happy with the group's low profile. For the most part, the society runs smoothly and doesn't draw undue attention to itself. By operating in this way, it has managed to gain quite a few prized artifacts without making enemies. At the current time, the society is in a state of indecision as both sides wait to see how and when the power struggle will begin in earnest.

At the head of the Shifting Sands is the Triumvirate, a group made up of the society's three most esteemed sha'irs. Once a year, the Triumvirate brings together all the society's members and gives them assignments. Most members take the assignments they are given without complaint and devote as much time as is reasonable to finishing their tasks, and they are free to use whatever resources are at their disposal.

Though somewhat haphazard in their record keeping, the members of the Shifting Sands are dedicated to their cause, and they rally to the defense of one of their own should the need arise. This is not a group to be feared, precisely, but respect is definitely in order.

Flame Arrow — Wizard Attack 1

By pointing at a projectile or a ranged weapon, you cause it to be wreathed in flame.

At-Will ✦ Arcane, Evocation, Fire, Implement
Standard Action Close burst 1
Target: You and each ally in the burst
Effect: The next ranged weapon attack that each target makes before the end of your next turn deals 1d6 extra fire damage.
Level 21: 2d6 extra fire damage.

Howling Wall

Some wizards believe that wailing air elementals make the dreadful noise howling wall produces. Aside from the din, the spell is useful for spreading out your enemies since you can shape it in any way you wish.

Howling Wall — Wizard Attack 1

A screaming wind gusts across the battlefield, buffeting creatures in its path.

At-Will ✦ Arcane, Evocation, Implement
Standard Action Area wall 6 within 10 squares
Target: Each creature in the wall
Attack: Intelligence vs. Fortitude
Hit: You slide the target up to 2 squares, and it is slowed until the end of your next turn.

Level 1 Daily Powers

Watery Sphere

Calling forth elemental water and shaping it into a sphere helps protect you while also giving you a powerful weapon to ensnare your enemies.

Watery Sphere — Wizard Attack 1

A single water droplet expands to overtake your enemies, trapping them inside an enormous watery sphere.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Implement, Transmutation, Zone
Standard Action Area burst 1 within 10 squares
Target: Each creature in the burst
Attack: Intelligence vs. Reflex
Hit: The target is immobilized and grants combat advantage (save ends both).
Miss: You must slide the target up to 3 squares to a square adjacent to the burst.
Effect: The burst creates a zone that lasts until the end of your next turn. The zone is difficult terrain, and it grants partial cover to creatures on opposite sides of it. You can use a move action to move the zone up to 3 squares. If you do so, any creatures immobilized by this power and in the zone slide up to 3 squares, staying inside the zone. When a creature enters the zone or starts its turn there, you can use an immediate reaction to make the attack against that creature.
Sustain Minor: The zone persists until the end of your next turn.

A howling wall spell repels would-be assailants as well as any solid obstruction does

ZOLTAN BOROS

Wind Blade This spell gathers elemental air and compresses it into a razor-sharp blade. At your command, the blade flies through the air to slice your opponent to ribbons.

Wind Blade — Wizard Attack 1

The moaning wind becomes a shrill whistle as you turn it into a blade perfect for slashing through your foes.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Conjuration, Force, Implement, Transmutation
Standard Action Ranged 5

Effect: You conjure a blade of solid wind in an unoccupied square within range. The blade lasts until the end of your next turn. Enemies adjacent to the blade grant combat advantage. You can use a move action to move the blade to a square within range. When the blade appears, it makes the following attack, and while the blade persists, you can repeat the attack as a standard action.

Target: One creature adjacent to the blade
Attack: Intelligence vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d6 + Intelligence modifier force damage, and you can slide the target 1 square.

Sustain Minor: The blade persists until the end of your next turn.

Level 2 Utility Powers

Flare Flooding arcane energy into a small area can create a pyrotechnic display to impress and dazzle those who behold it.

Flare — Wizard Utility 2

Multicolored sparks, sizzles, and sparks erupt from the fire and provide a momentary distraction.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Zone
Minor Action Area burst 1 within 10 squares
Effect: The burst creates a zone of bright light that lasts until the end of your next turn. Creatures in the zone have partial concealment.

Protection from Missiles Most wizards prefer to fight from behind the front ranks. The biggest danger these wizards face is from ranged fire. Protection from missiles shields you and your nearby companions from arrows and bolts.

Protection from Missiles — Wizard Utility 2

A wave of your hand calls forth a protective wind to disperse arrows and other missiles headed your way.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Zone
Minor Action Close burst 2
Effect: The burst creates a zone that lasts until the end of the encounter. While in the zone, you and your allies gain a +4 power bonus to all defenses against ranged weapon attacks.

Level 5 Daily Powers

Fire Mantle The obvious and destructive uses for elemental fire exist in many spells—yet, with proper finesse, fire can do more than destroy. Fire mantle protects a person from attacks by exacting a price from an enemy that comes too close.

RENOWNED ELEMENTAL MAGES

Mages have studied the schools of magic for thousands of years, and many of the most well-known spells were worked out long ago by wizards who lived and died in ancient times. However, the schools of the elements—pyromancy and its as yet unnamed equivalents in cold magic, earth magic, wind magic, and water magic—are recent innovations in the arcane arts.

Some of the leading theorists and spell inventors in the schools of the elements continue to pursue their researches to this day, and can be found by those who seek their knowledge . . . although it is not always wise to press an archmage for his or her secrets.

The adventurer Maximilian is the inventor of many spells of earth manipulation, including the well-known earthen grasp. A brilliant, flamboyant human nobleman, Maximilian was a rakehell and iconoclast who upended several wizards' guilds with his elemental theories twenty years ago. He disappeared in the Underdark while experimenting with what he referred to as node magic, but his apprentice Gerard carries on his work and now serves as a royal advisor in Therund.

Alamaera, an eladrin sage, is widely regarded as the creator of the school of elemental air. A subtle and patient individual, her interest in defensive magic led her to devise spells such as howling wall and cloud form. She is now a powerful elemental anchorite who dwells in a castle on a drifting earthmote in the Elemental Chaos. She is rumored to command the allegiance of powerful djinns.

Perhaps the most notorious of these elemental mages is the despicable Abi Dalzim. A student of rare and unusual water magic, Abi Dalzim devised the watery double spell as well as the vile incantation known as horrid wilting. Abi Dalzim is a short, wizened human of advanced years, with a long, white beard and a bejeweled turban. Cruel, imperious, and hungry for ever greater magical power, Abi Dalzim makes his home in a half-buried necropolis lost in the sands of the great southern deserts. He pays close attention to other wizards, whom he views as potential rivals, and has been known to ambush heroes after they have recovered rare magical treasures, taking what he wants from their desiccated corpses.

Fire Mantle — Wizard Attack 5

You wreathe yourself or an ally in protective fire, which punishes nearby foes.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Aura, Evocation, Fire
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: You or one ally
Effect: You activate an aura 1 on the target that lasts until the end of the encounter or until the target dismisses it as a minor action. When any enemy enters the aura or ends its turn there, that enemy takes fire damage equal to your Intelligence modifier. An enemy can take this damage only once per turn.

In addition, until the aura ends, the target has partial concealment and resist 10 fire.

Ice Knife By freezing elemental water into ice, you create a weapon able to punch through armor or thick hide.

Ice Knife — Wizard Attack 5

Hurling a blade of ice against your foe causes the ice to explode into jagged shards that tear through anything they hit.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Cold, Evocation, Implement
Standard Action Ranged 20
Primary Target: One creature
Primary Attack: Intelligence vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d8 + Intelligence modifier cold damage, and the primary target is immobilized (save ends).
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: Make the secondary attack.
Secondary Attack
Area burst 2 centered on the primary target
Secondary Target: Each creature in the burst other than the primary target
Secondary Attack: Intelligence vs. Fortitude
Hit: 5 cold damage, and the secondary target takes a –2 penalty to AC (save ends).

Level 6 Utility Powers

Conjure Fortification This spell was created to provide a hasty defense against a charging enemy or shore up an existing defense. Cunning wizards have also used it to create bridges across chasms, rivers, and other impediments.

Conjure Fortification — Wizard Utility 6

A low stone wall rises from the ground, offering cover against attack or passage over an obstacle.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Conjuration
Standard Action Area wall 5 within 10 squares
Effect: You conjure a wall of stone. The wall can be up to 1 square high, and at least 2 squares of it must rest on a solid surface. The wall lasts until the end of the encounter. The wall is blocking terrain. A creature can climb the wall with a DC 15 Athletics check.

WILLIAM O'CONNOR

The ice knife spell is elemental water at its deadliest

Watery Double Calling forth elemental water and imbuing it with your essence gives you a temporary, though potent, advantage in combat. Whenever you cast a spell, you can choose to cast it yourself or have your double cast it for you.

Watery Double — Wizard Utility 6

Creating a duplicate of yourself from elemental water lets you cast spells from unexpected directions.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Conjuration
Minor Action Ranged 10
Effect: You conjure a watery double of yourself in an unoccupied square within range. The double occupies its space, and it lasts until the end of your next turn. Until the conjuration ends, you can use your space or the double's space as the origin for your wizard attack powers.

Level 9 Daily Powers

Death Smoke

Calling forth the Shadowfell's unhealthy atmosphere and lacing it with ribbons of elemental air lets you inundate an area with killing smoke. Your hold on the cloud is tenuous at best; it fights your control, trying to drift around the battlefield.

Death Smoke — Wizard Attack 9

Great, billowing clouds of noxious smoke spread death and decay to your enemies.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Implement, Necrotic, Necromancy, Poison, Shadow, Zone
Standard Action Area burst 2 within 10 squares
Target: Each creature in the burst
Attack: Intelligence vs. Fortitude
Hit: 2d8 + Intelligence modifier necrotic and poison damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: The burst creates a zone that lasts until the end of your next turn. Squares in the zone are lightly obscured. Any creature that enters the zone or ends its turn there takes 5 necrotic and poison damage. A creature can take this damage only once per turn. You can move the zone up to 3 squares as a move action.
Sustain Minor: The zone moves 1d4 squares in a random direction, and it persists until the end of your next turn.

Earthen Grasp

This spell forms a massive fist out of stone and animates it long enough to bludgeon any enemy it can reach.

Earthen Grasp — Wizard Attack 9

A great fist rises from the ground to smash your enemies flat.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Conjuration
Minor Action Ranged 20
Effect: You conjure a Large earthen fist on the ground in an unoccupied space within range. The fist lasts until the end of your next turn. The fist occupies its space, and you and your allies can flank with it. While the fist persists, you can use the secondary power at will.
Secondary Power (Arcane, Implement)
Standard Action Close blast 2 from the fist
Target: Each enemy in the blast
Attack: Intelligence vs. Reflex
Hit: 3d6 + Intelligence modifier damage, and the target falls prone.
Sustain Minor: The fist persists until the end of your next turn.

Melf's Minute Meteors

Among the many battle spells Melf created, Melf's minute meteors might be the most famous. The spell brings forth fiery spheres that you can launch with minimal effort or keep around you to protect you from attacks.

Melf's Minute Meteors — Wizard Attack 9

Tiny balls of fire wink into existence around your head, awaiting your command to streak toward a foe and detonate.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Evocation, Fire
Standard Action Personal
Effect: Five fiery globes appear in the air around your head and hover there until they are expended or until the end of the encounter. While at least one globe remains, you can use the secondary power once per round, and any adjacent enemy that hits you with an attack takes 3 fire damage for each globe remaining.
Secondary Power (Arcane, Evocation, Fire, Implement)
Minor Action Ranged 20
Target: One enemy
Attack: Intelligence vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d4 + Intelligence modifier fire damage, and ongoing 5 fire damage (save ends). If the target is already taking ongoing fire damage, that damage increases by 5. One globe is expended.

Level 10 Utility Powers

Dig

You can use this spell to excavate a pit, clear a rubble-strewn hallway, or burrow a slanting passage up or down to reach another dungeon level.

Dig — Wizard Utility 10

You cause earth and stone to pull apart, creating a deep pit or a shortcut to a different location.

Daily ✦ Arcane
Minor Action Ranged 10
Effect: You create a hole on an unoccupied horizontal or vertical surface within range. The hole's opening can be up to 2 squares on a side. The hole's depth is up to a number of squares equal to twice your Intelligence modifier. Unless the DM rules otherwise, the hole does not destabilize the material around it. A creature can climb the hole's walls with a DC 20 Athletics check.

Flowing Evasion

This spell works by flooding arcane magic into the water found in a target's body, thus letting the creature assume a liquid form. While in this form, the target can flow through and around enemies.

Flowing Evasion — Wizard Utility 10

Assuming a watery form lets your target slither through the enemy ranks to get into position to make a attack or to escape.

Encounter ✦ Arcane
Move Action Close burst 5
Target: You or one ally in the burst
Effect: The target can use a free action to shift up to a number of squares equal to your Intelligence modifier. The target can shift through enemy spaces.

Gale Wall

Unlike many spells that create walls, gale wall does not need to stand on a flat surface and can hover in the air to inhibit flying enemies.

Gale Wall — Wizard Utility 10

A wall of gusting wind slows movement and deflects missiles.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Conjuration
Minor Action Area wall 8 within 10 squares
Effect: You conjure a wall of wind that lasts until the end of your next turn. The wall can be up to 4 squares high. Any creature that starts its turn in the wall or adjacent to it is pushed 1d4 squares away from it. Moving through a square of the wall costs 2 extra squares of movement. In addition, a creature has superior cover against any ranged weapon attack that passes through the wall.
Sustain Minor: The wall persists until the end of your next turn.

Level 15 Daily Powers

Fiery Constrictor

Arcane magic animates elemental fire you call forth, fixing it into a serpentine shape that seems almost alive. The shape slithers between your allies to ensnare the enemies they face.

Fiery Constrictor — Wizard Attack 15

Elemental fire flows out from a single point to form into a slithering serpent that coils about your enemies and crushes them in its fiery embrace.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Evocation, Fire, Implement
Standard Action Area wall 8 within 10 squares
Target: Each creature in the wall
Attack: Intelligence vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d8 + Intelligence modifier fire damage, and the target is restrained and takes ongoing 10 fire damage (save ends both).
Miss: Half damage, and ongoing 5 fire damage (save ends).

WAYNE ENGLAND

Summon Invisible Stalker

Invisible stalkers are air elementals warped by ancient magic for the sole purpose of hunting and killing enemies. You can call forth one of these predators to fight for your cause.

Summon Invisible Stalker — Wizard Attack 15

A relentless killer emerges from the Elemental Chaos to stalk your foe and strangle it to death.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Summoning
Minor Action Ranged 5
Effect: You summon an invisible stalker in an unoccupied space within range. The creature is an ally to you and your allies.

The invisible stalker lacks actions of its own. Instead, you spend actions to command it mentally, choosing from the actions in the creature's description. You must have line of effect to the creature to command it. When you command the creature, you and the creature share knowledge but not senses.

When the creature makes a check, you make the roll using your game statistics, not including any temporary bonuses or penalties.

The creature lasts until it drops to 0 hit points, at which point you lose a healing surge (or hit points equal to your surge value if you have no surges left). Otherwise, it lasts until you dismiss it as a minor action or until the end of the encounter.

Invisible Stalker — Level 15 Summoned Creature
Large elemental humanoid (air)

HP your bloodied value; Healing Surges none, but you can expend a healing surge for the invisible stalker if an effect allows it to spend one
Defenses your defenses, not including any temporary bonuses or penalties
Speed 6, fly 6 (hover)

☼ Keen Senses ✦ Aura 5
You gain a +5 power bonus to Perception checks while in the aura.

Natural Invisibility
The invisible stalker is invisible to creatures more than 1 square away from it.

Standard Action ✦ At-Will
Requirement: The invisible stalker must not be grabbing a creature.
Attack: Melee 2 (one creature); your level + 5 vs. AC
Hit: 2d10 + your Intelligence modifier damage, and the target is grabbed (escape DC 24). Until the grab ends, the target takes ongoing 5 damage and grants combat advantage.

Minor Action ✦ At-Will (1/round)
Effect: The invisible stalker either walks, shifts, runs, stands up, squeezes, crawls, or flies.

Opportunity Action ✦ At-Will
Trigger: An adjacent enemy misses the invisible stalker with an attack.
Effect: The invisible stalker can shift 1 square.

A halfling wizard protected by living iron fears no spears

DAVE ALLSOP

Vitriolic Sphere The corrosive fluids created by vitriolic sphere burn so fiercely that your enemies cannot protect themselves from the attacks that follow.

Vitriolic Sphere Wizard Attack 15

The orb of acid you hurl against your opponent burns your target severely and splashes out to catch anyone nearby.

Daily ✦ Acid, Arcane, Evocation, Implement
Standard Action Ranged 20
Target: One creature
Attack: Intelligence vs. Reflex
Hit: 3d6 + Intelligence modifier acid damage, and the target grants combat advantage and takes ongoing 10 acid damage (save ends both).
Miss: Half damage, and the target grants combat advantage until the end of your next turn.
Effect: Each creature adjacent to the target grants combat advantage until the end of your next turn and takes acid damage equal to your Intelligence modifier.

Level 16 Utility Powers

Alter Self Many hydromancers maintain their youthful appearance by manipulating the water in their bodies. You can use these same techniques to appear as anyone you wish.

Alter Self Wizard Utility 16

You alter your features until you become a stranger to all who know you.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Polymorph
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You alter your physical form to take on the appearance of any humanoid of your size category. You retain your game statistics in your new form. Your clothing and other equipment are unchanged. To impersonate a specific individual, you must have seen that individual. Your new form lasts until you use this power again or until you end it as a minor action.

Any creature can discern that your form is a disguise by making an Insight check opposed by your Bluff check. You gain a +5 power bonus to your check.

Cloud Form When you need to scout an area or to slip away from a vicious enemy, this spell transforms you into mist so you can float through the air and drift through the tiniest cracks.

Cloud Form Wizard Utility 16

Your body and equipment dissolve into a misty cloud. While in this form, you can move through any opening.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Polymorph
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You assume a cloudy form until the end of the encounter or you use a minor action to dismiss it. While in this form, you are insubstantial, you have a fly speed of 6 (hover), and you gain a +5 power bonus to Stealth checks. In addition, you cannot attack and you cannot use any of your equipment. You can move through small holes or narrow openings large enough to permit smoke or air.

Level 19 Daily Powers

Horrid Wilting

The best hydromancers can not only create water but destroy it. Horrid wilting removes all the water from a creature's body until only a withered husk remains.

Horrid Wilting — Wizard Attack 19

Crimson droplets fly from the target as your spell pulls the moisture from its body. Flesh withers, bones creak, and a dry whistle escapes from your opponent as its pain mounts.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Implement, Transmutation
Standard Action Ranged 20
Target: One creature
Attack: Intelligence vs. Fortitude
Hit: 9d4 + Intelligence modifier damage, and the target is slowed and weakened (save ends both). If the target has the aquatic or the water keyword, it takes 10 extra damage.
Miss: Half damage, and the target is slowed (save ends).

Landslide

This spell tears up and flings forward the landscape, creating a wave of destruction that crashes into your enemies. The churning debris can stay in place or tumble away from you to drive your foes back.

Landslide — Wizard Attack 19

Stones, pebbles, and debris tumble away from you in a tremendous flood of earth that sweeps through everything in its path.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Evocation, Implement, Zone
Standard Action Close blast 5
Target: Each creature in the blast
Attack: Intelligence vs. Fortitude
Hit: 4d6 + Intelligence modifier damage, and the target falls prone.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: The blast creates a zone that lasts until the end of your next turn. The ground of the zone is difficult terrain. You can take a move action to push the zone and each creature in it up to 3 squares.
Sustain Minor: The zone persists until the end of your next turn, and each creature in the zone takes 5 damage.

Level 22 Utility Powers

Command Water

By stopping briefly near a body of water and casting this spell, you can manipulate that water in any way you like.

Command Water — Wizard Utility 22

The waters froth and tumble in response to your command, rising, falling, or parting to create a dry path.

Daily ✦ Arcane
Standard Action Ranged 10
Requirement: You must use this power during a short or an extended rest.
Target: A lake or a stretch of river that has a diameter in miles of your Intelligence modifier or less.
Effect: Choose one of the following effects. The effect lasts until your next extended rest or until you dismiss it as a standard action.
- ✦ You reduce or increase the water's depth by a number of feet up to your Intelligence modifier.
- ✦ You create a dry path through the water. The path is up to 30 feet wide and extends from one shore to the other shore by the shortest distance, from your side of the water to the opposite side.

Living Iron

This spell turns a creature's body to iron. Although slower and vulnerable to lightning, the affected creature can shrug off most damage, and its attacks strike with terrible force.

Living Iron — Wizard Utility 22

As the spell takes effect, the target's body screeches as its flesh darkens to polished black iron.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Polymorph
Minor Action Melee 1
Target: You or one ally
Effect: The target assumes the form of living iron. The form lasts until the target is affected by another polymorph effect, until you take a minor action to dismiss it, or until the end of the encounter. While in this form, the target gains vulnerable 20 lightning and is slowed. In addition, the target gains the following benefits.
- ✦ Resist 10 to all damage.
- ✦ Immunity to blindness, deafness, disease, and poison.
- ✦ No need to breathe, and thus cannot suffocate.
- ✦ +6 power bonus to melee damage rolls.

ELEMENTAL VIEWPOINT: JENDA-SHAN, GENASI SHA'IR

How do you find Threshold now? You have been here for two Portals and you've adapted well—well for a human, that is. When we last spoke, you explained you came to my city in search of magic. I can tell you have found something, though maybe not what you thought you would, eh?

Friend, be at ease. The Elemental Chaos does not give up its boons without a price. You will grow accustomed to your new nature in time. You are one of us now. Oh, you are not genasi. Make no mistake about that. But the elemental energies are in you now. They fill you with power you can use to shape the world around you. It was magic you sought and magic you have found. Be patient and let go of your fragile nature.

The air gen you bound is restless. I can see it in your eyes. The gen is fickle and willful now, but do not fear—the gen will settle. You and your gen are one now, and once you become accustomed to each other, you will both be greater than you were apart.

Level 25 Daily Powers

Reverse Gravity

This spell's name is thought by some to be misleading. You do not, in fact, reverse gravity, but the effect is the same—you cause elemental air to hurl your target skyward. Fortunate targets find something to grab to arrest their movement. The unlucky ones keep rising until the spell wears off, only to fall to their doom.

Reverse Gravity — Wizard Attack 25

A ferocious wind snatches your foes and wrenches them up into the air, carrying them so high that they almost vanish from view.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Evocation, Implement
Standard Action Area burst 2 within 20 squares
Target: Each enemy in the burst
Attack: Intelligence vs. Fortitude
Hit: The target rises 40 feet off the ground, and it hovers there immobilized (save ends). If the target cannot rise the full distance (due to a ceiling or some other blocking terrain), it takes 1d10 damage for every 10 feet it is prevented from rising.
Each Failed Saving Throw: The target rises 20 more feet, and it takes 1d10 damage for every 10 feet it is prevented from rising.
Miss: The target falls prone, and it cannot stand up (save ends).

Rime Beasts

Forming magical beasts from elemental cold bolsters your numbers with powerful allies. Their mere presence drains heat from the air, and when they sink their fangs into your foes, the beasts trap them in ice.

Rime Beasts — Wizard Attack 25

Elemental water bubbles up from the ground and freezes into monstrous shapes that obey your every command.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Cold, Conjuration, Implement
Minor Action Ranged 20
Effect: You conjure four Medium rime beasts in unoccupied squares within range. The rime beasts occupy their spaces and last until the end of your next turn. The rime beasts can be attacked. They share your defenses and have 20 hit points each. Any enemy that starts its turn in a square adjacent to a rime beast takes 10 cold damage and is slowed until the start of its next turn. In addition, while the rime beasts remain, you can take the following special actions.
Standard Action: Each rime beast makes the following attack. Melee 1 (one enemy); Intelligence vs. Fortitude; 2d6 + Intelligence modifier cold damage, and the target is restrained until the end of your next turn.
Move Action: You move each rime beast up to 4 squares.
Sustain Minor: The beasts persist until the end of your next turn.

Level 29 Daily Powers

Crack the World

What makes this spell so dangerous is that it not only creates a rift to the Elemental Chaos, it causes the earth to rip apart. Creatures that fall into the rift vanish in its black depths until they can find their way out.

Crack the World — Wizard Attack 29

The ground shudders and pulls apart to form a deep chasm into which your enemies fall.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Evocation, Implement
Standard Action Area wall 8 within 20 squares
Target: Each creature in the wall
Attack: Intelligence vs. Reflex
Hit: The target is removed from play and takes ongoing 30 damage (save ends both).
Aftereffect: The target returns to play prone in a square adjacent to the wall.
Miss: The target takes 15 damage, and you push it up to 3 squares away from the wall.
Effect: The wall's space on the ground becomes a chasm 80 feet deep. A creature can climb the chasm's walls with a DC 31 Athletics check.

Devastating Whirlwind

This destructive spell calls down a tornado to tear through your enemies and carry them away.

Devastating Whirlwind — Wizard Attack 29

A whirling column of wind rips across the landscape, hurling creatures into the air.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Implement, Zone
Standard Action Area burst 2 within 20 squares
Target: Each creature in the burst
Attack: Intelligence vs. Fortitude
Hit: 2d8 + Intelligence modifier damage, and the target is immobilized and takes ongoing 15 damage (save ends both).
Aftereffect: You push the target up to 6 squares away from the burst's origin, and the target falls prone.
Miss: You push the target up to 6 squares away from the burst's origin, and the target falls prone.
Effect: The burst creates a zone that lasts until the end of your next turn. Any creature that ends its turn in the zone takes 10 damage and falls prone. You can take a move action to move the zone up to 8 squares, and any immobilized or prone creature in it slides with it, remaining in position in the zone.
Sustain Standard: The zone persists until the end of your next turn, and you can repeat the attack against each creature in the zone, although this attack has no effect on a miss.

Crack the world sends a trio of drow to their doom

Flash Freeze This spell calls forth a wind from the coldest regions of the Elemental Chaos and releases it in a lethal blast capable of freezing creatures solid.

Flash Freeze Wizard Attack 29

An arcane wind blasts elemental cold at your foes and freezes them in their tracks.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Cold, Implement, Zone
Standard Action Close blast 5
Target: Each creature in the blast
Attack: Intelligence vs. Fortitude
Hit: 7d6 + Intelligence modifier cold damage, and the target is petrified until the end of your next turn.
Aftereffect: The target is slowed and takes ongoing 10 cold damage (save ends both).
Miss: Half damage, and the target is restrained until the end of your next turn.
Effect: The blast creates a zone that lasts until the end of your next turn. Squares in the zone are difficult terrain. Any creature knocked prone in the zone takes 10 extra cold damage.

Incendiary Cloud Perhaps the subtlest elemental fire spell, incendiary cloud appears to be a normal explosion of fire. Its nature reveals itself when you feed arcane energy into the cloud and cause it to expand until everyone catches fire.

Incendiary Cloud Wizard Attack 29

A fiery bead rapidly expands into a burning cloud that consumes everything it touches.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Fire, Implement, Zone
Standard Action Ranged 20
Target: One creature
Attack: Intelligence vs. Reflex
Hit: 3d8 + Intelligence modifier fire damage, and ongoing 20 fire damage (save ends).
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: The target's space and each square adjacent to it become a zone that lasts until the end of your next turn. The zone is lightly obscured, and any creature that ends its turn in the zone takes ongoing 10 fire damage (save ends).
Sustain Minor: The zone's size increases by 1, and the zone persists until the end of your next turn.

CHAPTER 4

Elemental Options

MANY ROADS lead to elemental mastery. A path might reveal itself through a chance encounter with a primordial shard, or exposure to a breach along one of the planar boundaries. Other heroes might spend their lives chasing after rumors, scouring the planes for any scrap of lore, to uncover the secrets needed to use even the most basic form of elemental magic. Then there are those who look inside themselves, peering into their souls for the elemental threads that exist in all mortal creatures, seeking to coax their ability to life with sheer willpower. There is no one true path to mastering such power; anyone has the potential to become an elemental hero.

This chapter highlights routes to elemental magic that involve aspects of a character other than theme or class. New paragon paths reinforce existing connections to the Elemental Chaos, or reflect new discoveries made on reaching the paragon tier. For those fully committed to mastering elemental power, two epic destinies describe possible futures. New feats explore ways characters can become more elemental in nature. A hero might form a bond with an elemental companion, or gain an elemental reward. All of these options add flavorful details to your character's story and help you realize his or her place in the DUNGEONS & DRAGONS world.

This chapter includes the following sections.

- Paragon Paths: Ten new paragon paths reveal new methods and expressions of elemental magic.
- Epic Destinies: Two epic destinies reward characters for harnessing power from the Elemental Chaos and explore their final fates.
- Feats: New feats offer ways to become a creature of the Elemental Chaos and ways to better harness its power.
- Elemental Companions: Any character can add some elemental abilities to his or her portfolio by learning how to summon an elemental companion.
- Elemental Rewards: Wreckage from the Dawn War litters the planes still. Finding these trinkets and earning these boons can put the power of creation in a hero's hands.

STEVE ELLIS

Paragon Paths

The following paragon paths are available to any character who meets the prerequisites.

Demon-Bound

Prerequisite: Demon spawn theme or any non-good alignment

The darkness of the Abyss is a deep wound in the center of the Elemental Chaos,a bleak vortex that births the planes' myriad evils. Corruption flows out from this darkening pit to infect the land and creatures and twist them to evil. During your adventures, you encountered abyssal energy—perhaps when you slew a demon or after you explored a tainted site. The corruption changed you, infected you, and exposed you to horrid evil. Now it is all you can do to hold that evil at bay.

Level 11: Abyssal Action

Demonic energy supplements your personal power when circumstances demand more from you.

Demon-bound

Benefit: When you spend an action point to make an extra attack, you gain temporary hit points equal to one-half your level. You also gain a +2 bonus to attack rolls until the end of your next turn.

Level 11: Abyssal Frenzy

The demonic influence that contaminates your soul responds instantly to violence and escalates the carnage you create.

Abyssal Frenzy — Demon-Bound Attack 11

Striking one enemy triggers a wild outburst that pushes everyone in reach away from you.

Encounter ✦ Elemental
Free Action — Close burst 1
Trigger: You hit with a melee attack.
Target: Each creature in the burst
Effect: Each target takes 10 damage, and you can push it 1 square.

Level 11: Demonic Bloodlust

A ferocious attack can shatter both an enemy's body and its ability to protect itself.

Benefit: When you bloody an enemy with a melee attack, that enemy grants combat advantage to you until the end of your next turn.

Level 12: Demonic Resilience

Your demonic presence wants you to live and intercedes on your behalf when you find yourself in peril.

Demonic Resilience — Demon-Bound Utility 12

Profane runes flare on your body to protect you and give you strength.

Encounter ✦ Elemental
Immediate Interrupt — Personal
Trigger: You are bloodied by an attack or are hit while bloodied.
Effect: Reduce the damage from the triggering attack by 10. Until the end of your next turn, your melee attacks deal 1d6 extra damage.

Level 16: Vile Possession

The consciousness of another lurks inside you, filling your head with evil thoughts. Most times, you control this corrupting pulse, but pain or stress can free the fiend within.

Benefit: While you are bloodied, you gain a +2 bonus to melee damage rolls, and your allies provoke opportunity attacks from you. When anyone provokes an opportunity attack from you while you are bloodied, you take 5 damage if you do not make the attack. This damage cannot be prevented in any way.

ANNA CHRISTENSON

Level 20: Demonic Stigmata

By surrendering to the demon within, you take on not only its killing power but its actual appearance.

Demonic Stigmata — Demon-Bound Attack 20

You become a horrid demon. Horns break through your brow, your skin turns red, and unholy runes form on your skin.

Daily ✦ Elemental, Polymorph
Minor Action Personal

Effect: You gain temporary hit points equal to one-half your level, and you assume the demonic stigmata form until the end of the encounter or until you end this effect as a minor action. While in this form, you gain the following benefits.

- ✦ Darkvision
- ✦ An additional use of demonic resilience during this encounter
- ✦ Use of the secondary power once per round

Secondary Power
Minor Action Melee 1
Requirement: You must have hit with a melee attack during this turn.
Target: One creature
Attack: Highest ability modifier + 5 vs. Fortitude
Hit: 1d12 + your highest ability modifier damage.

DOOMLORD

Prerequisite: Ironguard theme, or proficiency with scale armor and a military melee weapon

From brooding fortresses in the Elemental Chaos, the Doomguard watches the decay of the cosmos and its unstoppable slide into dissolution. These stoic warriors believe the universe's fate was sealed when the gods defeated the primordials, because imprisoning these entities kept them from sustaining the world and thus doomed it. The Doomlords are the Doomguard's champions, warriors aligned against those who espouse order and perpetuate corrupt and tyrannical regimes. As is true of their cousins, the Doomguard Marauders (Manual of the Planes), the ranks of the Doomlords include both valiant champions of freedom and murderous anarchists.

Level 11: Doomlord's Action

Channeling entropic forces causes reality to bend and groan around you until everything blackens and crumbles away around you.

Benefit: You can spend an action point to deal 1d10 + your highest ability modifier necrotic damage to each creature adjacent to you, instead of taking an extra action. Each creature damaged in this way then gains vulnerable 5 necrotic until the end of your next turn.

MARK BEHM

Doomlord

Level 11: Entropic Surge

Rather than fully restore your vigor, you can channel some of your innate healing energy and release it in the form of wrath. For a few moments, you attacks fall with incredible accuracy.

Benefit: Whenever you spend a healing surge to regain hit points, you can choose to reduce the hit points regained by half your surge value to instead gain a +2 bonus to attack rolls until the end of your next turn.

Level 11: Entropy Strike

Your weapon is a tool of entropy. With the aid of this power, your strikes undo the work of creation, one enemy at a time.

Entropy Strike — Doomlord Attack 11

A ruinous attack ravages an enemy and delays its ability to recover from its injuries.

Encounter ✦ Elemental, Necrotic
No Action Special
Trigger: You hit an enemy with a melee weapon attack.
Effect: The attack deals 1[W] extra necrotic damage, and the target cannot regain hit points or gain temporary hit points until the end of your next turn.

Level 12: Doomlord's Advance

Entropy can cause reality to splinter or break apart. You sense the cracks around you and leap through them to ambush your foes.

Doomlord's Advance — Doomlord Utility 12

Reality decays at your word, letting you slip through time and space in an instant.

Encounter ✦ Elemental, Teleportation, Zone
Move Action — Personal
Effect: You teleport up to 5 squares, and the space you leave becomes a zone that lasts until the end of your next turn. Creatures in the zone or adjacent to it take a –2 penalty to attack rolls and saving throws.

Level 16: Entropic Harbinger

The more creatures you defeat, the more the cosmos withers. Your destructive nature manifests as a field that prevents creatures from staving off death.

Entropic Harbinger — Doomlord Utility 16

Dispatching an enemy releases entropic forces to rend and ruin your foes.

At-Will ✦ Aura, Elemental
Free Action — Personal
Trigger: You reduce a nonminion enemy to 0 hit points.
Effect: You activate an aura 2 that lasts until the end of your next turn. Enemies in the aura cannot regain hit points or gain temporary hit points.

Level 20: Hasten the End

The ultimate expression of your power is the ability to dissolve the bonds that hold an enemy together. A successful strike causes your opponent to degenerate until nothing but dust remains.

Hasten the End — Doomlord Attack 20

Your weapon turns black when it strikes and causes your target to dissolve before your eyes.

Daily ✦ Elemental, Necrotic
No Action — Special
Trigger: You hit an enemy with a melee weapon attack.
Effect: The enemy takes 2[W] extra damage, and it takes ongoing 20 necrotic damage (save ends). If any of this damage reduces the enemy to 10 hit points or fewer, it dies.
Aftereffect: Ongoing 10 necrotic damage (save ends).

Elemental Anchorite

Prerequisite: Any elemental attack power

The most devoted students of the elements often withdraw from the society of fellow mortals to contemplate the deep truths of existence. You have chosen the lonely path of the elemental anchorite, dedicating yourself to a life of austerity and reflection. When your companions return to home, family, and high honors after their adventures, you instead seek solitude in places of great elemental power. The secrets of the universe are engraved in the stone of mighty mountains and whispered by the winds that sigh across lonely deserts.

Some elemental anchorites seek isolation in order to master ever more formidable abilities, using elemental essence to further whatever purposes they deem important. Others are more philosophical, and view themselves as servants of balance who act to check the excesses of forces, monsters, or villains that disturb the natural equilibrium of the world. The purpose to which you put your understanding of elemental forces is ultimately up to you.

Level 11: Anchorite's Action

Elemental forces do not exist only in rock, air, or water; they also infuse every being composed of

Elemental anchorite

matter. In desperate moments, you can call upon these internal forces for strength and endurance.

Benefit: When you spend an action point, you can end all immobilizing or restraining effects on yourself. In addition, you gain a +2 bonus to elemental attack rolls until the start of your next turn.

Level 11: Anchorite's Stability

You are keenly aware of your surroundings, and of the physical forces at play around you. It is difficult to move you when you don't want to be moved.

Benefit: Whenever you would be knocked prone or subjected to forced movement, you can make a saving throw to remain standing or to negate the forced movement.

Level 11: Force of Balance

You exploit the subtle potential of forces in your environment to lend extra effectiveness to your attack.

Force of Balance — Elemental Anchorite Attack 11

You strike with perfectly measured force, using elemental power to maximize the impact of your attack.

Encounter ✦ Elemental
No Action — Special
Trigger: You hit an enemy with an elemental attack power.
Effect: The triggering attack deals 1[W] extra damage if it is a weapon attack or 1d8 extra damage if it is not a weapon attack, and the target falls prone.

Level 12: Shielding Element

You can preserve some of the energy of your elemental attacks to protect yourself.

Shielding Element — Elemental Anchorite Utility 12

You retain the energy of an elemental attack, shaping it into a short-lived shield to protect yourself.

Encounter ✦ Elemental; Varies
Minor Action — Personal
Requirement: You must have hit an enemy with an acid, cold, fire, lightning, or thunder attack during this turn.
Effect: Until the end of your next turn, you gain resist 10 to one damage type of the attack (one of the types noted above). In addition, any enemy that hits you with a melee attack before the end of your next turn takes 10 damage of that type.

Level 16: Elemental Sustenance

The power of the elements sustains and fortifies you. The endless endurance of the earth or the burning vigor of fire help you to recover from fatigue and injury when you call upon your elemental powers.

Benefit: When you use a daily elemental power, you can spend a healing surge.

Level 20: Elemental Transcendence

Elemental energy sleeps in all things; with this power, you unlock it from pebble, air, plant, or creature. The destructive release of energy leaves a scorched area around you but fuels your elemental powers.

Elemental Transcendence — Elemental Anchorite Attack 20

You draw upon the matter surrounding you to increase the intensity of your elemental attacks.

Daily ✦ Elemental, Stance
Minor Action — Personal
Effect: You assume the elemental transcendence stance. Until the stance ends, your elemental weapon attacks deal 1[W] extra damage, and your elemental nonweapon attacks deal 1d8 extra damage. In addition, any enemy that ends its turn adjacent to you takes 10 damage.

Elemental Savant

Prerequisite: Sorcerer (elementalist)

You have grown confident in your ability to shape your chosen element to your will. Winds shift and swirl at your least gesture, and flames brighten and dance in your presence, eager to answer your call.

Having mastered the talent of manipulating your element in the world around you, you now seek to understand its secret essence and bind it to yourself.

Level 11: Elementalist Action

When supreme effort is called for, you can pour your all into your elemental spells to launch an attack of exceptional intensity. Even enemies that manage to elude your attack still feel some of its furious impact.

Benefit: When you spend an action point to take an extra action, the next sorcerer attack power you use before the end of your next turn deals extra damage to one target of the attack. The extra damage equals one-half your level.

Level 11: Savant Focus

Your intensive study of your chosen element reveals new insights. In combat you can wield your favored element with uncanny precision.

Benefit: You gain a +1 power bonus to attack rolls with powers granted by your Elemental Specialty class feature.

Elemental savant

Level 11: Savant Power

Already skilled in the control and manipulation of your favored element, you discover a new way to manifest your powers in battle.

Benefit: You gain an additional sorcerer at-will attack power of your choice.

Level 12: Elemental Form

After exhaustive study and practice, you gain the ability to transpose your body in the natural world with your chosen element. In this form you are a roughly human-sized copy of yourself, insubstantial and amorphous. Though you can't easily attack in this form, it provides you with excellent protection from attack and offers you other advantages.

Elemental Form — Elemental Savant Utility 12

With a thought, you force open your connection to the primordial forces. Enemies shrink back as your body disassociates, reforming as an expression of your elemental nature.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Elemental, Polymorph
Minor Action — Personal

Effect: You assume the form of a living mass of your chosen element: wind, flame, water, or loose earth and sand. This form lasts until the end of the encounter or until you end it as a minor action. While in this form, you are insubstantial, you do not need to breathe, and you can't take standard actions. You can squeeze through any opening at least 1 inch in diameter. In addition, you gain the following benefits based on your chosen element.

Air: You have partial concealment and a fly speed of 6.
Earth: You have tremorsense 5 and a burrow speed of 5.
Fire (Aura, Fire): You activate an aura 1. Any creature that ends its turn in the aura takes 10 fire damage.
Water (Healing): You have regeneration 5 while bloodied, and you have a swim speed of 6.

Level 16: Confer Protection

Your native resistance has made you virtually immune to all but the most powerful manifestations of your chosen element. You can provide your companions with similar resistances to energy you have mastered.

Benefit: While they are adjacent to you, allies share the resistances you gain from your Elemental Specialty class feature.

ELEMENTARY VIEWPOINT: ALHANDRA OF THE SOUTH WIND

It really just is controlled chaos when you get down to brass tacks. My colleagues, those mages and arcanists who claim to wield true magic, are in fact imposing their will, or perhaps the will of those authors who first devised the spells, on the forces of chaos and disorder. Magic disrupts the natural laws. It breaks the rules. With it, mortals can become as gods, altering their reality as they see fit. It sounds very impressive, I know.

Let me dismiss the romance, if you'll allow me. These spells culled from dusty tomes and manuals preserved and guarded by countless wizards over the ages are nothing more than imagination and will. Yes, there are specific formulas, complex gestures, and all the funny little incantations and noises required to produce those effects, but they are all just for show. Hand a spell to a fighter and what do you think will happen? Nothing, of course. The fighter lacks the training to bend his will and imagination to produce the desired effect.

I suppose what I'm driving at is that if all the hoops a wizard must leap through in order to cast even a simple cantrip are nothing but a ritualized system, a crutch if you will, that provides a language for producing a desired effect, then finding other ways to produce the same or similar effects is in no way invalidated by adopting a different system. In effect, even though I learn my spells from powers residing in the Elemental Chaos, I am no less a wizard than any other bespectacled, pointy-hat-wearing fool clutching a book to his chest.

TYLER JACOBSON

Level 20: Elemental Nature

You are slowly becoming an elemental creature. Your body is no longer mere flesh and blood; you might have a trace of fire in your blood or rock in your very bones. This demi-elemental nature makes you unusually resistant to effects that incapacitate other characters.

Benefit: You gain a +2 bonus to saving throws against ongoing damage and dazing or stunning effects. You also gain an additional use of elemental form each day, but you can use the power only once per encounter.

Favored Sha'ir

Prerequisite: Wizard (sha'ir)

Your rapport with the elemental powers has grown to such a degree that they regard you as one of their own. Throughout the heroic tier, you established yourself as an able partner, ally, and, perhaps, servant of the elemental powers and in doing so earned greater and greater elemental rewards, including advanced arcane knowledge and more powerful spells. So armed, you stand ready to face even greater threats and reap even greater rewards.

The elemental powers' favor grants you deeper insights into elemental magic. Not only can your gen servant fetch potent spells, but you can pierce the barriers between the planes to draw forth power to serve your needs. Such command over creation's fundamental forces translates into an improved gen servant that, at your command, can manifest the Elemental Chaos's unruly energies in effective and dangerous ways. Not only does your gen servant improve, but when you master all the elemental gifts, you can transform your servant into a powerful elemental monolith.

Level 11: Elemental Retreat

By proving your worth to the genies, you have earned their aid when the situation turns dire. You can manifest the elemental magic that they have bestowed on you to create a doorway through which you can step to gain succor. When you return moments later, you do so charged with the might of the Plane Below.

Elemental Retreat — Favored Sha'ir Utility

With a gesture, you create a magical passage to the Elemental Chaos. Stepping through it, you disappear for a few moments, When you return, crackling energy dances across your body.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Elemental, Healing
Standard Action Personal
Effect: You are removed from play until the start of your next turn. You reappear in an unoccupied space within 10 squares of the space you last occupied. Then choose one of the following effects.
- ✦ You can spend a healing surge.
- ✦ One ally adjacent to you can spend a healing surge.
- ✦ Each ally adjacent to you when you reappear gains a +2 power bonus to the attack rolls of powers that have the acid, cold, fire, lightning, or thunder keywords. This bonus lasts until the end of your next turn.

Level 11: Gen Action

The bond between you and your familiar strengthens. When you push past your normal limits, a surge of elemental magic transports you both.

Benefit: When you spend an action point to take an extra action, you and your familiar can each teleport up to 5 squares as a free action before or after you take the extra action.

Level 11: Wrath of the Genies

You have risen so far in the genies' esteem that they are ready to lend a hand if you need it. Wrath of the genies demonstrates how their interest can manifest in a sudden, destructive burst around your familiar.

Wrath of the Genies — Favored Sha'ir Attack 11

You call forth the genies' anger through your familiar and release a wave of chaotic magic to wash over your foes.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Elemental, Implement; Varies
Standard Action Area burst 3 centered on your familiar in active mode
Special: The damage type that you resist today with your Elemental Resistance class feature determines this power's damage type.
Target: Each creature in the burst
Attack: Intelligence vs. Fortitude
Hit: 2d6 + Intelligence modifier damage of the specified type. That type determines an additional effect.
Acid: The target takes a -2 penalty to all defenses until the end of your next turn.
Cold: The target is immobilized until the end of your next turn.
Fire: The target takes 1d6 extra fire damage.
Lightning: The target takes a -2 penalty to attack rolls until the end of your next turn.
Thunder: The target falls prone, and it is deafened until the end of your next turn.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: You gain a +2 power bonus to the attack rolls of powers that have the acid, cold, fire, lightning, or thunder keywords. This bonus lasts until the end of your next turn.

Favored sha'ir

Level 12: Chaos Tide

Chaos courses through all elemental power, and its influence is what gives elemental magic its unpredictable characteristics. Learning to draw more and more upon the Plane Below can twist reality and toss about the creatures in your presence.

Chaos Tide Favored Sha'ir Utility 12

Raw, untamed chaos explodes from you and your familiar, causing reality to bend and snap back into place. Creatures caught in the manifestation find themselves in unexpected locations.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Elemental, Teleportation
Free Action Close burst 1
Trigger: You hit at least one enemy with an arcane attack power while your familiar is in active mode.
Target: Each creature in the burst and each creature adjacent to your familiar
Effect: You teleport each target up to 1d4 squares (roll once for each target). You cannot teleport a target into hindering terrain. You and your familiar then teleport up to 1d4 squares apiece.

Level 16: Elemental Paragon

Elemental power suffuses your familiar. It is this power that lets you exert your will over the chaos welling up from the Plane Below. As you become more adept, so too does your familiar, which bestows an elemental boon on you.

Benefit: You gain a benefit based on the familiar you chose for the Gen Servant class feature.

Daolanin: While your familiar is in passive mode and you hit with an arcane at-will attack power, you can also push the target up to a number of squares equal to your Constitution modifier.

Djinnling: While your familiar is in passive mode and you hit with an arcane at-will attack power, you can also slide the target up to 2 squares.

Efreetkin: While your familiar is in passive mode and you hit with an arcane at-will attack power, the target takes extra fire damage equal to your Constitution modifier.

Maridan: While your familiar is in passive mode and you hit with an arcane at-will attack power, you and each ally adjacent to you can shift up to a number of squares equal to your Constitution modifier as a free action.

Other Familiar: While your familiar is in passive mode and you hit with an arcane at-will attack power, you can teleport a number of squares up to your Constitution modifier.

Level 20: Unleash Monolith

The genies' interest in you continues to increase, and with this attention comes even greater rewards. If you have need, you can call upon their favor to transform your familiar into an elemental monolith. The elemental breaks free from the familiar's form, its normal appearance melting away as the towering elemental comes into existence. The monolith obeys your every command and lurches forth to crush your enemies.

Unleash Monolith Favored Sha'ir Attack 20

You familiar swells and breaks apart, releasing an elemental monolith to fight on your behalf. This towering servant wades into battle, smashing and destroying as you command it.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Elemental, Summoning
Minor Action Ranged 5
Requirement: Your familiar must be in passive mode.
Effect: Your familiar is removed from play, and you summon an air, an earth, a fire, or a water monolith in an unoccupied space within range. The creature is an ally to you and your allies.

The monolith lacks actions of its own. Instead, you spend actions to command it mentally, choosing from the actions in the monolith's description. You must have line of effect to the creature to command it. When you command the creature, you and the creature share knowledge but not senses.

When the creature makes a check, you make the roll using your game statistics, not including any temporary bonuses or penalties.

The creature lasts until it drops to 0 hit points, at which point you lose a healing surge (or hit points equal to your surge value if you have no surges left). Otherwise, it lasts until you dismiss it as a minor action or until the end of the encounter. When the monolith vanishes, your familiar returns to play in passive mode.

Air Monolith Level 20 Summoned Creature
Large elemental magical beast (air)

HP your bloodied value; Healing Surges none, but you can expend a healing surge for the monolith if an effect allows it to spend one
Defenses your defenses + 2, not including any temporary bonuses or penalties
Speed 0, fly 8 (hover)
Vulnerable 5 fire

Phantom on the Wind
The monolith becomes invisible whenever it starts your turn without an enemy adjacent to it. The invisibility lasts until the end of your next turn or until it hits or misses with an attack.

┼ Standard Action ✦ At-Will
Attack: Melee 2 (one creature); your level + 5 vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d8 + your Intelligence modifier damage, and the monolith can slide the target 1 square.

┼ Standard Action ✦ Encounter
Attack: Melee 1 (one creature that can't see the monolith); your level + 5 vs. Reflex
Hit: 4d8 + your Intelligence modifier damage, and the monolith grabs the target (escape DC 29) if it does not have a creature grabbed. Until the grab ends, the target takes ongoing 10 damage, and any ranged or melee attacks that hit the monolith deal only half damage to it and the other half to the grabbed target.

Minor Action ✦ At-Will (1/round)
Effect: The monolith either walks, shifts, runs, stands up, squeezes, or crawls.

ELEMENTARY VIEWPOINT: RUAN, FIRST MAGE OF CANTICLE

Elemental magic is dangerous, and for the life of me I cannot fathom why anyone would seek it out. There is a good reason why we wizards use elemental energy through arcane methods. The school of evocation was founded for the express purpose of doing just this. And you know, the school's founders did so because they understood what so-called elemental power was. It's not like the power from the gods, or even that granted by the spirits those savages claim are in every rock and tree and filthy mud pile. Most forms of magic exist outside the user, who must master the tradition, method, or some other process that allows an individual to create an effect that defies nature's laws.

For example, when I cast a spell, I do so through a known formula that combines vocalization and gesture to produce the desired outcome. Though I have little practical experience with primal magic or its practitioners, I do know that those witch doctors evoke their spirits—demons, if you ask me—to accomplish something that their simple, uncivilized minds can imagine. Method is crucial, since expertise in this area requires talent, training, and patience—qualities that most simple folk lack. Elemental magic, by contrast, requires no methodology to employ, and thus is available to any wretch that covets the dangerous power it promises.

I'm sure you think me a reprehensible person for my prejudices, but you must understand that I did not receive the title of First Mage by accident. No. I won my position through hard work, discipline, and, of course, exhibiting talents that set me apart from my fellows. Yet if anyone could access the power in my tomes, then where would I be? And what would happen if some miscreant could call down fire to incinerate a villain in an instant, or wipe out a coastline with a tidal wave born from something as innocent as a sneeze. It's madness! These elementalists must be stopped, and any doors to the secrets of elemental chaos must be sealed shut. To do otherwise is to invite doom upon our heads.

Earth Monolith Level 20 Summoned Creature
Large elemental magical beast (earth)

HP your bloodied value; Healing Surges none, but you can expend a healing surge for the monolith if an effect allows it to spend one
Defenses your defenses + 2, not including any temporary bonuses or penalties
Speed 5, burrow 5

Brittle Skin
Whenever the monolith takes thunder damage, it takes a -2 penalty to all defenses until the end of your next turn.

Standard Action ✦ At-Will
Attack: Melee 2 (one creature); your level + 7 vs. AC
Hit: 2d8 + your Intelligence modifier damage, and the target cannot shift until the end of your next turn.

Minor Action ✦ At-Will (1/round)
Effect: The monolith either walks, shifts, runs, stands up, squeezes, or crawls.

Immediate Reaction ✦ At-Will
Trigger: An enemy within 2 squares of the monolith attacks you.
Attack: Melee 2 (triggering enemy); your level + 7 vs. AC
Hit: 10 damage, and the target falls prone.

Fire Monolith Level 20 Summoned Creature
Large elemental magical beast (fire)

HP your bloodied value; Healing Surges none, but you can expend a healing surge for the monolith if an effect allows it to spend one
Defenses your defenses + 2, not including any temporary bonuses or penalties
Speed 8, fly 4 (clumsy)

Frozen in Place
Whenever the monolith takes cold damage, it cannot shift until the end of your next turn.

Heart of Flame (fire)
Whenever an enemy adjacent to the monolith misses you or it with an attack, that enemy takes 10 fire damage.

Standard Action (fire) ✦ At-Will
Attack: Melee 2 (one creature); your level + 5 vs. Reflex
Hit: Ongoing 15 fire damage (save ends).

Minor Action ✦ At-Will (1/round)
Effect: The monolith either walks, shifts, runs, stands up, squeezes, or crawls.

Water Monolith Level 20 Summoned Creature
Large elemental magical beast (water)

HP your bloodied value; Healing Surges none, but you can expend a healing surge for the monolith if an effect allows it to spend one
Defenses your defenses + 2, not including any temporary bonuses or penalties
Speed 6, swim 6

Aquatic
The monolith can breathe underwater. In aquatic combat, it gains a +2 bonus to attack rolls against creatures that lack the aquatic keyword.

Sensitive to Cold
Whenever the monolith takes cold damage, it gains vulnerable 5 against the next attack that hits it before the end of your next turn.

Standard Action ✦ At-Will
Attack: Melee 2 (one creature); your level + 5 vs. Fortitude
Hit: 2d6 + your Intelligence modifier damage, and the monolith pushes the target up to 3 squares.

Standard Action ✦ Encounter
Attack: Close blast 3 (creatures in the blast); your level + 5 vs. Fortitude
Hit: 4d6 + your Intelligence modifier damage, and the monolith pushes the target up to 2 squares and knocks it prone.

Minor Action ✦ At-Will (1/round)
Effect: The monolith either walks, shifts, runs, stands up, squeezes, or crawls.

Earth monolith

SAM WOOD

God Warder

Prerequisite: Training in Religion

The gods decreed that the primordials would trouble the planes no more. To make good on this proclamation, they directed their servants to maintain prisons and preserve chains to ensure that these beings never escaped. You have made this cause your own and pledged your implement or weapon to the holy purpose of containing the primordials forever.

Level 11: Exacting Action

The holy cause to which you are pledged lets you call an ally to your side or drag an enemy forward to face you.

Benefit: When you spend an action point to take an extra action, choose one creature within 5 squares of you that you can see. You can pull that creature up to 5 squares.

Level 11: Heaven's Chains

The Astral Sea's enemies cannot escape your wrath. Your attacks bind them with weighty shackles.

Benefit: Immobilized enemies grant combat advantage to you. In addition, when you hit an enemy with a melee or ranged daily attack power and deal damage to it, you can reduce that damage by 10 (and no less than 10) to immobilize the target until the end of your next turn.

Level 11: Righteous Prohibition

You pass judgment on your foe, calling upon godly intervention to punish your enemy for its wicked intent.

Righteous Prohibition — God Warder Attack 11

The creature before you quavers at the brilliance of your strike and finds itself unable to respond in kind.

Encounter ✦ Divine, Implement, Radiant
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: One creature
Attack: Highest ability modifier vs. Will. You have combat advantage against an elemental creature for this attack.
Hit: 3d8 + your highest ability modifier radiant damage. Until the end of your next turn, the target is slowed, and the damage of its acid, cold, fire, lightning, or thunder attacks is halved.
Miss: Half damage, and the target is slowed until the end of your next turn.

God warder

Level 12: Warding Advance

The gods invest you with the holy power you need to protect allies from attack and punish your chosen foes in the same maneuver.

Warding Advance — God Warder Utility 12

You blunt an enemy's attack with a swift prayer. Your words build confidence to ensure the success of your next strike.

Encounter ✦ Divine
Immediate Interrupt Close burst 5
Trigger: An enemy damages an ally of yours with an attack while the ally is within 5 squares of you.
Target: The damaged ally in the burst
Effect: The damage against the target is reduced by 10. You can then shift 1 square, and you gain a +2 power bonus to attack rolls against the triggering attacker until the end of your next turn.

Level 16: Bind the Wicked

Your justifiable anger binds your foes as securely as if you had wrapped them in chains.

Benefit: Whenever you hit an immobilized enemy with a melee or ranged attack, you can cause the enemy to be restrained instead of immobilized.

DAVE ALLSOP

Level 20: Chains That Bind

The gods reveal the prayer you need to shackle an enemy as securely as the gods bound the primordials.

Chains That Bind — God Warder Attack 20

Brilliant chains erupt from the ground to coil about your enemy, the burning light causing it to shriek in pain and fear.

Daily ✦ Divine, Implement, Radiant
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: One creature
Attack: Highest ability modifier vs. Fortitude. You have combat advantage against an elemental creature for this attack.
Hit: 2d10 + your highest ability modifier radiant damage, and the target is removed from play (save ends).
Third Failed Saving Throw: The effect ends, but the target appears in a random location in the Elemental Chaos.
Miss: Half damage, and the target is restrained until the end of your next turn.

Herald of Vezzuvu

Prerequisite: Earthforger theme, firecrafter theme, primordial adept theme, or elemental pact warlock

Many primordials lie unconscious in their bonds, but Vezzuvu, the Queen of the Burning Mountain, still harbors both awareness and reason. Vezzuvu long ago determined that her road to freedom was to win the devotion (or fear) of mortal followers, and thereby become an elemental god. She can no longer stride the world or reign over an elemental domain, but she can still shake the mortal world by exerting her will on places of elemental power or bestowing on others the ability to call upon her essence.

As a herald of Vezzuvu, you have been gifted with a portion of the primordial's awesome abilities. You can wield this talent as you like, since Vezzuvu wants others who see your prowess to be drawn to her worship. The Queen of the Burning Mountain requires little from you most of the time, but her interests are erratic; you might walk the world for years without any messages from her, only to be sent suddenly to quell a volcanic rift, destroy the temple of an evil god, or seek out an artifact held by a frost titan.

Level 11: Volcanic Resistance

Your fervent adherence to Vezzuvu renders you extremely resistant to fire in all its incarnations.

Benefit: You gain resist 10 fire, or resist 5 to any damage that includes fire, whichever causes you to take less damage.

Level 11: Volcanic Action

At times of great need, you draw extraordinary strength from the Queen of the Burning Mountain.

Benefit: When you spend an action point to take an extra action, choose fire or thunder. You deal extra damage of that type with your next attack before the end of your next turn. This damage is equal to one-half your level.

Level 11: Lava Bomb

Vezzuvu is a patron who lends herself to acts of destruction, as you might expect. Lava bomb allows you to bring forth a boulder-sized mass of molten lava and hurl it at your enemies.

Lava Bomb — Herald of Vezzuvu Attack 11

You translate a heavy molten blob from the Elemental Chaos and drop it on a distant foe. Splatters of lava scorch nearby foes.

Encounter ✦ Elemental, Fire
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: One creature
Attack: Highest ability modifier + 4 vs. Reflex
Level 21: Highest ability modifier + 6 vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d8 + your highest ability modifier fire damage, and ongoing 10 fire damage (save ends).
Effect: Each creature adjacent to the target takes 10 fire damage.

Herald of Vezzuvu

ADAM PAQUETTE

Level 12: Vezzuvu's Balm

When molten rock slumbers in the marrow of your bones, fire can be a powerful restorative. This power allows you to heal yourself with an enemy's fire attack.

Vezzuvu's Balm — Herald of Vezzuvu Utility 12

You absorb the heat of a fire attack, converting it into healing and empowering your next attack.

Daily ✦ Elemental, Healing
Immediate Interrupt — Personal
Trigger: You take fire damage.
Effect: You don't take the fire damage. Instead, you regain a number of hit points equal to the fire damage you would have taken (don't apply your resistance), and you gain a +2 power bonus to attack rolls until the end of your next turn.

Level 16: Volcanic Walk

Vezzuvu's heralds have a supernatural affinity for volcanic phenomena and easily move in or around terrain that others would not dare to enter.

Benefit: You ignore difficult terrain caused by volcanic conditions (lava, ash, or quaking). You can move on lava as if it were solid ground.

Level 20: Volcanic Wrath

Those who anger Vezzuvu or her chosen servants face the most spectacular and destructive of all natural catastrophes: the searing heat and crushing power of a pyroclastic flow.

Volcanic Wrath — Herald of Vezzuvu Attack 20

You open a rift to a volcanic eruption in the Elemental Chaos, blasting nearby foes and producing a flood of lava.

Daily ✦ Elemental, Fire, Zone
Standard Action — Close blast 5
Target: Each creature in the blast
Attack: Highest ability modifier + 5 vs. Reflex
Hit: 3d8 + your highest ability modifier damage, and ongoing 10 fire damage (save ends). You push the target up to 3 squares.
Miss: Ongoing 10 fire damage (save ends).
Effect: The blast creates a zone that lasts until the end of the encounter. For creatures other than you the zone is difficult terrain and lightly obscured, and any creature that ends its turn there takes 10 fire damage.

Legendary Hexblade (Elemental)

Prerequisite: Warlock (hexblade), elemental pact

Your pact weapon has claimed many enemies, and with each victory your prowess and confidence grow. You focus your study and practice on your pact and on the primordials whose power you share, hoping to solve more mysteries and master more secrets of elemental magic. With knowledge comes power, and power you shall have—at any cost.

Level 11: Hexblade's Action (Elemental)

You can draw more sustenance from your pact when you need to push past your normal limits. When you do so, elemental essence alters your form to make it more resilient and flexible.

Benefit: When you spend an action point to take an extra action, you gain temporary hit points equal to one-half your level. Until the end of your next turn, your reach with melee weapon attacks increases by 1.

Level 11: Elemental Pact Aspect

Magic that originates in the Elemental Chaos can protect you from the plane's destructive energy and help you withstand the rigors of hostile environments.

Benefit: You gain a +2 bonus to Endurance checks. At the end of each extended rest, choose acid, cold, fire, lightning, or thunder. You gain resist 10 to the chosen damage type until the end of your next extended rest. At 21st level, the resistance increases to 15.

Level 11: Elemental Pact Curse

Although your primordial benefactors might not always be aware of your service, to ensure a steady supply of magical energy you must reinforce your pact with souls harvested from the enemies you defeat. The chaotic mind curse spell unhinges an enemy's mind to make the creature into an unwitting accomplice in creating carnage.

Legendary hexblade

Chaotic Mind Curse — Legendary Hexblade Attack 11

Swirling multicolored lights attack the mind of your enemy and warp the creature's perceptions.

Encounter ✦ Arcane, Charm, Elemental, Implement, Psychic
Standard Action Ranged 10
Target: One enemy
Attack: Charisma vs. Will
Hit: 3d10 + Charisma modifier psychic damage.
Effect: Until the end of your next turn, the target's allies provoke opportunity attacks from the target, and it must make every opportunity attack it can.

Level 12: Elemental Pact Invocation

Chaos surges into you when you call on your distant source for assistance. Unpredictable and potentially dangerous, the primordials' boon might either protect you from magical attacks or subject to you even greater injury.

Elemental Invocation — Legendary Hexblade Utility 12

Chaos power flows from your pact, and its uncontrollable energy might deflect or attract elemental attacks.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Elemental
Minor Action Personal
Effect: Until the end of the encounter, whenever you take acid, cold, fire, lightning, or thunder damage, you can roll a d20. On a 10 or higher, you reduce the damage by 15. On a 1 or a 2, you instead take 10 extra damage of that type.

Level 16: Improved Elemental Pact Boon

Each enemy slain feeds power to the primordials. In exchange, they take notice of you and reward your efforts with a surge of elemental energy.

Benefit: Whenever you use warding chaos, the next melee weapon attack you make before the end of your next turn deals extra damage of a type you choose equal to your Constitution modifier. Choose acid, cold, fire, lightning, or thunder damage when you make the attack.

Level 20: Elemental Transformation

The chaos flowing into you triggers a drastic transformation. You become an elemental monstrosity, a living storm of destructive energy that shifts and changes with each attack you make. Your form protects you from those same chaotic forces.

ANNA CHRISTENSON

Elemental Transformation Legendary Hexblade Attack 20

You draw upon primordial essence to complete your change into an elemental creature flaring with chaotic energy.

Daily ✦ Arcane, Elemental, Polymorph
Minor Action Personal
Effect: Until the end of the encounter, you gain resist 5 acid, cold, fire, lightning, and thunder. This resistance stacks with any other resistance you have. You also gain a +2 power bonus to AC and Fortitude, and you can use the secondary power once per round.
Secondary Power (Arcane, Elemental, Implement; Varies)
Minor Action Close burst 1
Effect: Before the attack, roll a d10 to determine the attack's damage type: 1-2, acid; 3-4, cold; 5-6, fire; 7-8, lightning; or 9-10, thunder.
Target: Each creature in the burst
Attack: Charisma vs. Fortitude
Hit: The effect is determined by the attack's damage type.
Acid: 10 acid damage, and the target takes a -2 penalty to attack rolls until the end of your next turn.
Cold: 10 cold damage, and the target is immobilized until the end of your next turn.
Fire: 10 fire damage, and ongoing 5 fire damage (save ends).
Lightning: 10 lightning damage, and the target grants combat advantage until the end of your next turn.
Thunder: 10 thunder damage, and you push the target up to 3 squares.

Prince of Genies

Prerequisite: Elemental origin or training in Diplomacy

Your life took a turn for the strange when you discovered a minor treasure containing an elemental spirit. The being trapped inside promised you much in exchange for its freedom, offering anything in its power to grant. Freeing the spirit is not so easy, since potent wards keep it imprisoned. So you came to an arrangement with it. You will search for a way to free it, and it will help you complete your quests.

Level 11: Genie in a Bottle

The spirit whispers advice and lends its aid as long as it has the power to do so.

Benefit: You gain a +1 power bonus to skill checks and saving throws.

Level 11: Wishful Action

Drawing on the genie's magic gives you a better chance of succeeding on your next effort.

Benefit: When you spend an action point to take an extra action, you gain a +2 bonus to the next attack roll, saving throw, or skill check you make before the end of your next turn.

Prince of genies

Level 11: Genie's Intercession

It is in your genie's interest to keep you alive. If an enemy manages to get in a successful blow against you, the genie whisks you away after you make a counterstrike.

Genie's Intercession Prince of Genies Attack 11

An elemental spirit rushes forth to punish your attacker and then propels you and a comrade to safer spots.

Encounter ✦ Elemental, Teleportation
Immediate Reaction Melee 1
Trigger: You are hit by an enemy adjacent to you.
Target: The triggering enemy
Attack: Highest ability modifier + 4 vs. Reflex
Level 21: Highest ability modifier + 6 vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d6 + your highest ability modifier damage, and you push the target up to 2 squares.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: You and one ally adjacent to you each teleport up to 5 squares.

RANDY GALLEGOS

Level 12: Limited Wish

Your genie can grant you whatever you wish, within reason, on a daily basis. It's also possible to use this boon to benefit one of your friends.

Limited Wish — Prince of Genies Utility 12

Name your desire, and the genie provides it.

Daily ✦ Elemental
Minor Action — Close burst 1
Target: You or one ally in the burst
Effect: Choose one of the following.
- ✦ The target regains the use of an expended encounter utility power.
- ✦ The target treats its next miss before the end of the encounter as a hit.
- ✦ The target gains a +2 power bonus to all defenses until the end of the encounter.
- ✦ The target gains training in one skill of his or her choice until the end of the encounter.

Level 16: Luck of the Genies

The genie blesses you with good fortune and protects you from the most disastrous failures.

Benefit: Whenever you roll a natural 1 on a saving throw or a skill check, you can reroll it.

Level 20: Genie's Gift

At the apex of the paragon tier, you finally learn how to coax your genie from its vessel. When it appears, it erupts with a flash and a bang that leaves your enemies befuddled. While the spirit is free, it grants a benefit to you or an ally you name.

Genie's Gift — Prince of Genies Attack 20

The genie's vessel pops open, releasing a powerful elemental spirit that catches your enemies by surprise.

Daily ✦ Charm, Elemental
Standard Action — Close burst 2
Target: Each enemy in the burst
Attack: Highest ability modifier + 5 vs. Will
Hit: The target is dazed (save ends).
Miss: The target is dazed until the end of your next turn.
Effect: You or one ally in the burst gains an action point that must be used before the end of your next turn or it is lost.

Reforged Soul

Prerequisite: Elemental origin or Born of the Elements feat

However you came by your elemental nature—by birth or through exposure to elemental magic—you are now an elemental creature. Exploring your heritage and testing its limits increases your personal power as well as your ability to command the magic flowing from the Elemental Chaos. The more you grow in power, the stronger the plane's hold on you becomes.

Level 11: Chaos-Touched

Your elemental nature grants you some control over and resistance to elemental energy.

Benefit: At the end of each extended rest, roll a d10 and consult the following table. You gain resist 10 to the damage type you rolled, and your reforged soul attack powers gain this damage type. The benefit lasts until the end of your next extended rest.

| d10 | Damage Type |
|---|---|
| 1-2 | Acid |
| 3-4 | Cold |
| 5-6 | Fire |
| 7-8 | Lightning |
| 9-10 | Thunder |

Level 11: Surging Action

When your need is greatest, you can manifest your elemental nature as a surge of chaotic energy.

Benefit: When you spend an action point to make an extra attack, that attack deals 1d6 extra damage if it is a close or area attack, or 1d10 extra damage if it is a melee or ranged attack. This extra damage has a damage type matching the type you rolled for your Chaos-Touched feature. The extra damage increases to 2d6 and 2d10 at 21st level.

Level 11: Elemental Cascade

Calling forth the chaos building inside you lets you release a gout of elemental energy to assail your foes.

Elemental Cascade — Reforged Soul Attack 11

You release the potential raging within you as a crackling cascade of untamed energy.

Encounter ✦ Elemental
Standard Action — Melee 1 or Ranged 10
Target: One creature
Attack: Highest ability modifier + 4 vs. Reflex
Level 21: Highest ability modifier + 6 vs. Reflex
Hit: 2d10 + your highest ability modifier damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: Roll a d20. On a 10 or higher, you can repeat this attack once against a different target within range.

Level 12: Flowing Chaos

More and more, you are becoming a conduit to the Elemental Chaos. Now you learn a way to release your inner energy to augment those around you.

Flowing Chaos — Reforged Soul Utility 12

You exude the power of the elements to aid your nearby allies by enhancing the lethality of their attacks.

Daily ✦ Aura, Elemental
Minor Action Personal
Effect: You activate an aura 1 that lasts until the end of the encounter. While in the aura, you and each ally gain a +3 power bonus to damage rolls that include acid, cold, fire, lightning, or thunder.

Level 16: Embraced by Chaos

The Elemental Chaos's influence on you grows, giving you an expanded command of your innate abilities.

Benefit: You roll twice and use both results when you use your Chaos-Touched feature. When you get a duplicate result, choose any other damage type instead.

You are also able to speak, read, and write Primordial fluently.

Level 20: Elemental Flood

You can loose the force raging inside you in an explosion of energy that selectively targets your foes.

Elemental Flood — Reforged Soul Attack 20

Energy pours out from you in a terrible flood, burning, freezing, and destroying anything in its path.

Daily ✦ Elemental, Zone; Varies
Standard Action Close burst 3
Target: Each enemy in the burst
Attack: Highest ability modifier + 5 vs. Reflex
Hit: 3d8 + your highest ability modifier damage.
Miss: Half damage.
Effect: The burst creates a zone that lasts until the end of your next turn. Any enemy that enters the zone or ends its turn there takes 10 damage of the types rolled for your Chaos-Touched feature (a creature can take this damage only once per turn).
Sustain Minor: The zone persists until the end of your next turn.

Speaker of Xaos

Prerequisite: Training in Arcana

The Speakers of Xaos are a society of sages, wizards, explorers, and priests who study the Elemental Chaos. You are a member in good standing of this fellowship. The Speakers maintain libraries, small colleges, and chapter houses in many elemental domains, including the City of Brass and Zerthadlun, and the organization has small chapters in various mortal worlds as well.

ZOLTAN BOROS

Reforged soul

The Speakers have no great purpose beyond a shared interest in the magic, secrets, and phenomena of the Elemental Chaos. Members report interesting discoveries to their fellows, consult with each other on difficult problems, and work together to collect and preserve unusual knowledge or resources pertaining to the Plane Below. Individual members are also free to follow their own desires regarding whether to share information or respond to calls for assistance from their fellows. The only rule is to treat your colleagues as you would have them treat you.

Level 11: Xaos Lore

You hold potent secrets of elemental spellcasting; your elemental spells and abilities are especially pernicious and long-lasting.

Benefit: You gain a +1 bonus to attack rolls against creatures that have the elemental origin, and such creatures take a –1 penalty to saving throws against effects you create.

Speaker of Xaos

Level 11: Xaos Action

You command elemental powers with surprising deftness and flexibility, especially when you are under duress.

Benefit: When you spend an action point to take an extra action, you can widen the effect of the next cold, fire, lightning, or thunder attack you make before the end of your next turn. Choose to either add one target within range to a melee or ranged attack or increase the size of a burst or a blast by 1.

Level 11: Elemental Durance

After calling upon a power that makes use of elemental energy, you can retain an echo or remnant of that energy. This power allows you to shape that remnant into a cage of blazing fire, bitter cold, or crackling lightning.

Elemental Durance — Speaker of Xaos Attack 11

You shape the elemental energy of an attack into a temporary prison.

Encounter ✦ Elemental; Varies
Free Action Special
Trigger: You hit an enemy with a cold, fire, lightning, or thunder attack.
Effect: You push the enemy 1 square. If it moves before the end of its next turn, it takes 3d10 damage of the type dealt by the triggering attack.

Level 12: Repel Elements

Your understanding of the essential nature of elemental creatures and energies provides you with the power to hold them at bay when you wish.

Repel Elements — Speaker of Xaos Utility 12

Your mastery of the elements allows you to inscribe a ward against energy of a particular type.

Encounter ✦ Elemental, Zone
Minor Action Close burst 1
Target: Each elemental enemy in the burst
Effect: You must push each target 1 square. The burst then creates a zone that lasts until the end of your next turn. Elemental enemies cannot willingly enter the zone, and you and each ally in the zone gain a +2 power bonus to all defenses against attacks that deal cold, fire, lightning, or thunder damage, as well as the attacks of elemental enemies.

Level 16: Power of Xaos

You are so skilled in wielding elemental force that your successful attacks always inflict a significant amount of harm.

Benefit: When you deal damage with a cold, fire, lightning, thunder, or elemental attack, reroll any damage die that results in 1 until you get a 2 or higher.

Level 20: Elemental Chains

You are a master at shaping elemental energy. With this power, you can transform your elemental magic into damaging bonds, pinning your enemies in place.

Elemental Chains — Speaker of Xaos Attack 20

The residue of your elemental attacks erupts in light and color, forming chains that wrap around your foe.

Daily ✦ Elemental; Varies
Free Action Special
Trigger: You hit one or more enemies with an attack dealing cold, fire, lightning, or thunder damage.
Effect: Each enemy you hit with the triggering attack is restrained and takes ongoing 15 damage of the type dealt by the triggering attack (save ends both). Each enemy you missed with the triggering attack is immobilized until the end of your next turn.

Epic Destinies

The following epic destinies are available to any character wishing to pursue a destiny influenced by the elemental powers.

Emergent Primordial

You carry the essence of an imprisoned primordial, a being so vast, so terrible, that the gods imprisoned it in the Elemental Chaos.

Prerequisite: 21st level; elemental origin, Born of the Elements feat, or any elemental power

There is no full accounting of the primordials sealed away in the Elemental Chaos and elsewhere in the planes. Their roster is endless, their exploits too terrible to dwell upon. They are too powerful to die, too dangerous to live. The gods sealed them in the deepest depths to ensure that they would trouble the planes no more. During their imprisonment, the primordials have never ceased their efforts to escape and to resume the struggle against the gods they hate.

In exploring elemental magic, you have been touched by a primordial's essence. Perhaps only a dream has settled in your mind, or maybe a shard of a fallen primordial became lodged inside you. When you attain the epic tier, the shard awakens and begins merging its identity with yours until one day you become like a primordial.

Living the Destiny

Although the primordial within you seeks to annihilate your identity, it has no choice but to bend to your will. At the same time, your growing power awakens the primordial in your thoughts, gradually drawing it out from its long slumber until its presence pervades your consciousness. By the time you complete your final quest, you might be ready to surrender your body and soul to the primordial—or descend into the Elemental Chaos to confront and destroy it for good.

Level 21: Primordial Rebirth

An elemental essence awakens inside you and lends you its power. The essence transforms you, turning you into a suitable vessel for its emerging presence.

Benefit: You increase one ability score of your choice by 2.

Your origin changes to elemental if it is not elemental already, and you can speak, read, and write Primordial.

JIM NELSON

Emergent Primordial

In addition, choose one of the following: acid, cold, fire, lightning, or thunder. You gain resist 15 to the chosen damage type, and you gain a +3 bonus to damage rolls that include that type.

Level 24: Primordial Rebirth

Death cannot claim you as long as the primordial shares your body. If you fall in battle, the primordial awakens to your enemies' detriment.

Benefit: Once per day when you start your turn at 0 hit points or fewer, you regain hit points equal to your bloodied value. When you do so, each ally within 5 squares of you can spend a healing surge. In addition, each ally within 10 squares of you who has this epic destiny gains 20 temporary hit points and can shift 1 square as a free action.

Level 26: Primordial Form

The primordial essence strains against your body's limitations, demanding release and battering your psyche. When you give in to the primordial's demands, you become a monstrous creature, an elemental nightmare towering over the battlefield.

Primordial Form Emergent Primordial Utility 26

You free the primordial within you and transform into a titanic elemental being, like the ancient and terrible forces unseen since the Dawn War.

Daily ✦ Elemental, Polymorph
Minor Action Personal

Effect: You assume the form of a Huge primordial-like creature until the end of your next turn. Creatures adjacent to you when you assume the form are pushed 1 square, or they fall prone if they cannot be pushed. While in this form, you gain the following benefits.

- ✦ Your reach increases by 2.
- ✦ You gain resist 5 to all damage.
- ✦ You gain a +4 power bonus to melee damage rolls and damage rolls that include acid, cold, fire, lightning, or thunder.

Sustain Minor: The form persists until the end of your next turn.

Level 30: Primordial Ascendance

You and the primordial merge. Now that your elemental nature is unfettered, it might seek to resume its war against the gods or turn its malign attention against other enemies. Your greatest successes renew and embolden your allies.

Benefit: Whenever you score a critical hit or reduce a nonminion enemy to 0 hit points, each ally within 5 squares of you gains 10 temporary hit points, and each one gains a +2 power bonus to attack rolls until the end of your next turn.

Lord of Chaos

You incarnate a creative force that can shape the Elemental Chaos into continent-sized wonders and sculpt kingdoms. The multiverse itself is your canvas.

Prerequisite: 21st level

Long ago, an ancient race of mighty sorcerers abandoned the material world for the Elemental Chaos, drawn by the plane's infinite mutability. These were the Reigar, a humanlike people who revered personal freedom, expression, and artistry above all other values. In time they mastered the secrets of immortality and became a race of godlings in mortal form—self-centered, capricious, driven only by the desire to experience new sensations and outdo each other in creative works. Foreseeing that their race would eventually dwindle and stagnate, the Reigar created one last masterwork of cooperative magic: a sentient, self-guiding force that would seek out the most brilliant and worthy souls among mortals and gift them with the powers of the Reigar, thus renewing the race across the ages.

In the course of your mortal adventures, you have developed into that one person in a million who embodies the exquisitely rare mix of brilliance, beauty, willfulness, and creativity that characterizes the immortal ranks of the Reigar. The ancient lore of the Reigar has revealed itself to you and given you the ability to shape the world to suit your whims.

Living the Destiny

Few of your kind remain anywhere in the multiverse. You and your kindred souls are not mortals, nor gods, nor elemental beings; you are something else. As a Lord of Chaos, you might commit yourself to shaping a vast swath of the elemental plane into a domain of your own. You or your descendants could rule over an extraplanar kingdom forged by your will and imagination. Or you might choose to roam the multiverse, immersing yourself in every interest and experience that catches your eye. Whatever path you take, you eventually leave your adventuring career behind, drawn by the challenge of shaping and ordering your own private universe.

Lord of Chaos

MARK BEHM

Level 21: Awakening

An intangible mantle of power begins to gather around you, and you awaken to the realization that you are more than the mortal you once were.

Benefit: You increase your Charisma by 2, and your origin becomes immortal.

In addition, you gain a shakti, an ancient tool of the Reigar that takes the form of a small statuette or token that is representative of you. As a minor action, you can transform it into a +5 magic weapon, magic implement, magic armor, or amulet of protection (+6 at 26th level). If the shakti leaves your person or is destroyed somehow, it turns to dust. You can create it again as a minor action, and it appears on your person in the desired form.

Level 24: Rapid Reincarnation

You can recover from mortal injury by making your body disincarnate, briefly relinquishing your physical form, and then re-creating it shortly afterward anywhere near where you fell.

Benefit: Once per day when you would make a death saving throw, you can instead choose to become disincarnate. Your body disappears in motes of golden light, and you can then reincarnate anywhere within 1 mile, between 1 minute and 1 hour later. You reincarnate with hit points equal to your bloodied value.

Level 26: Whim of Creation

With sufficient time and concentration, any sentient creature can effect minor changes to its surroundings in the Elemental Chaos. You can achieve much wider results with a moment's thought, regardless of where you happen to be.

Whim of Creation — Lord of Chaos Utility 26

You reshape your surroundings to suit your tastes.

Daily ✦ Elemental
Minor Action Close burst 5
Effect: Choose one of the following effects. The effect lasts as long as you wish.
Remove Difficult Terrain: You change up to 5 squares of nonmagical difficult terrain in the burst into normal terrain.
Create Difficult Terrain: You change up to 5 squares in the burst into difficult terrain.
Create Weather: You create fog, mist, rain, wind, harmless ball lightning, or other nondamaging weather conditions in the burst. The weather can change how heavily obscured the burst is.

Level 30: Master of Chaos

Unseen currents of power surge throughout the Elemental Chaos, and are preserved—frozen—in the matter of the mortal world too. You sense these currents and exploit them in combat by teleporting yourself or your foe along them.

Benefit: When you bloody an enemy or score a critical hit against an enemy, you can teleport yourself or the enemy up to 10 squares as a free action.

ELEMENTAL VIEWPOINT: SCAR, HALF-ORC FIRECRAFTER

The fire has been in me since I was old enough to stand. It is in my blood, a gift of my family that has been passed down through the generations. I am no priest or mage, but I can call fire from my hands to burn my foes or armor myself in living flame. Some say that we are cursed to burn the things we love and consume ourselves with this power, but I call it a blessing. The fire gives me strength, quickness, the power to destroy my foes . . . and, of course, pain. But that, too, makes me stronger.

I am of the Firedrake tribe of the Smoking Mountains, although I have wandered far since the years of my youth. There amid the steaming vents and the rumbling mountains I grew to manhood. These are hard lands, shaken by the restless earth and home to hungry monsters and cruel giants. My people have lived among these dangers since the time of my grandfather's grandfather. The mountains are our stronghold and refuge; no enemy has ever defeated us on our home ground. Not even the God-King himself could make us bend our knees to him!

My people are brave and strong warriors, as you might guess. But it is not with steel alone that the valley of the Firedrakes is defended. We learned long ago to live alongside the restless elementals of our homeland. Many among us are born with the power of elemental fire in our blood; we are fated to be the protectors and champions of our people. Some who are born to serve the fire are destroyed by the flame within before their time, but others such as I learn to leash the powers we are born with, to control our gifts before they consume us. When I am done with my wanderings in the wider world, I will go home and make myself a mighty chief among my people. And I will rule with fire in my fist.

Feats

The feats presented in this section largely deal with elemental magic and the Elemental Chaos. Several feats grant access to elemental energy, letting you draw upon its power in ways to aid or complement your other capabilities.

Arcane Familiar [Familiar] You have attracted a small creature into your service that will aid you in your adventures.

Prerequisite: Any arcane class

Benefit: You gain a familiar. For each familiar feat you have beyond this one, your familiar gains a +1 bonus to all defenses.

Born of the Elements Power flows up from the Elemental Chaos and through you, attuning your soul to its destructive energy. The influence of the Plane Below manifests itself in your sometimes harsh and jarring demeanor and your preternatural resilience to environmental dangers. Furthermore, you have an instinctive knowledge of the elemental tongue and can communicate with creatures hailing from that plane.

Prerequisite: Elemental origin or training in Arcana

Benefit: You gain a +2 feat bonus to Endurance checks and Intimidate checks.

In addition, you can speak, read, and write Primordial.

The Earthwalker feat makes a wall no barrier at all

JIM NELSON

Burning Vapors You have an uncanny ability to command elemental acid, to intensify its power or to manifest it in a stinging cloud.

Prerequisite: 11th level

Benefit: You gain a +3 feat bonus to acid damage rolls. This bonus increases to +4 at 21st level.

In addition, whenever you take acid damage from an attack, each enemy adjacent to you takes a -2 penalty to attack rolls until the end of its next turn.

Child of Fire Elemental fire burns in your breast. These flames are eager to escape. Should your control ever slip, they rush free to scorch your foe.

Prerequisite: Born of the Elements feat

Benefit: Whenever an attack bloodies you or knocks you unconscious, one enemy of your choice within 2 squares of you takes fire damage equal to your Constitution modifier.

Child of Stone You are a child of elemental earth; its power sustains and protects you. You can call forth earth's protective power to shield you when your need is greatest.

Prerequisite: Born of the Elements feat

Benefit: When you use your second wind while on an earthen or stone surface, you also gain resist 5 to all damage until the end of your next turn. At 21st level, the resistance increases to 10.

Child of Storm The eldritch storms boiling across the Elemental Chaos reflect the turmoil in your heart. Elemental energy invigorates you.

Prerequisite: Born of the Elements feat

Benefit: Whenever you take acid, cold, fire, lightning, or thunder damage from an enemy attack, you gain a +2 bonus to your next saving throw during this encounter.

Child of the Sea You are the most free when swimming. Your elemental heritage lets you maneuver through waters with ease as if you were born to it.

Prerequisite: Born of the Elements feat

Benefit: You have a swim speed equal to your walking speed. In addition, you count as having the aquatic keyword. In aquatic combat, you gain a +2 bonus to attack rolls against nonaquatic creatures.

FEATS

| Elemental | Prerequisites | Benefit |
|---|---|---|
| Born of the Elements | Elemental origin or training in Arcana | +2 to Endurance and Intimidate; gain Primordial language |
| Burning Vapors | Level 11 | +3 to acid damage rolls |
| Child of Fire | Born of the Elements | Flames damage foe when you are bloodied or unconscious |
| Child of Stone | Born of the Elements | Gain resist 5 all when you use second wind on stone surface |
| Child of Storm | Born of the Elements | +2 to next saving throw after taking elemental damage |
| Child of the Sea | Born of the Elements | Gain swim speed, other aquatic benefits |
| Child of Wind | Born of the Elements | Ignore difficult terrain when not wearing heavy armor |
| Earthwalker | Level 21, Born of the Elements | Gain earth walk; gain phasing after using second wind |
| Fiery Blood | Level 11 | +3 to fire damage rolls |
| Firedancer | Born of the Elements | Gain resist 5 fire; deal fire damage after using second wind |
| Icy Heart | Level 11 | +3 to cold damage rolls |
| Lightning Soul | Level 11 | +3 to lightning damage rolls |
| Rising Chaos | Born of the Elements | +2 to damage rolls after taking elemental damage |
| Seastrider | Level 21, Born of the Elements | Shift through enemies' spaces, move across liquid |
| Thunder's Rumble | Level 11 | +3 to thunder damage rolls |
| Windfoot | Level 21, Born of the Elements | Take half damage from falling; fly after using second wind |

| Elemental Companion | Prerequisites | Benefit |
|---|---|---|
| Elemental Companion | Born of the Elements, no Arcane Familiar feat | You gain an elemental companion |
| Elemental Conduit | Level 2, Elemental Companion | Swap a utility power for elemental conduit power |
| Elemental Invigoration | Elemental Companion | You and allies near your companion gain bonus to damage |
| Elemental Vengeance | Level 6, Elemental Companion | Swap a utility power for elemental vengeance power |

| Familiar | Prerequisites | Benefit |
|---|---|---|
| Arcane Familiar | Any arcane class | You gain a familiar |

| Implement Training | Prerequisites | Benefit |
|---|---|---|
| Ki Focus Expertise | — | +1 to attack rolls with ki focuses, +1 damage against bloodied enemies |
| Tome Expertise | — | +1 to attack rolls with tomes, enemies adjacent to your conjurations or summoned creatures grant combat advantage |
| Totem Expertise | — | +1 to attack rolls with totems, ignore partial cover and partial concealment on those attacks |

Child of Wind

Drawing on your heritage of elemental air gives lift to your steps and lets you take to the air whenever an attack would push you back.

Prerequisite: Born of the Elements feat

Benefit: Whenever you charge or run and are not wearing heavy armor, you ignore difficult terrain.

Earthwalker

Your elemental heritage manifests as an affinity for elemental earth. Neither rubble nor uneven stone hampers you, for you can call upon your heritage to let you move through solid rock.

Prerequisite: 21st level, Born of the Elements feat

Benefit: You gain earth walk, meaning that you ignore difficult terrain caused by rubble, uneven stone, or earthen construction.

In addition, whenever you use your second wind, you have phasing until the end of your next turn. Using this feat, you can phase only through earth and rock.

Elemental Companion [Elemental Companion]

You fashion a companion from raw elemental substance. The companion aids you in your endeavors when called. (See page 146 for a selection of elemental companions.)

Prerequisite: Born of the Elements feat, must not have the Arcane Familiar feat

Benefit: You gain an elemental companion.

For each elemental companion feat you have beyond this one, your elemental companion gains a +1 bonus to all defenses.

Elemental Conduit [Elemental Companion]

When danger looms, you can use the bond you share with your elemental companion to flee to safety.

Prerequisite: 2nd level, Elemental Companion feat

Benefit: You swap a utility power that is at least 2nd level for the elemental conduit power.

In addition, while your elemental companion is in passive mode, you gain a +2 power bonus to Insight checks and Perception checks.

Elemental Conduit Feat Utility

Chaos from your elemental companion twists space so that the two of you can swap positions.

Daily ✦ Elemental, Teleportation
Move Action Close burst 10
Target: Your active elemental companion in the burst
Effect: You teleport yourself and the target, swapping positions.

Elemental Invigoration [Elemental Companion]

Your recovery sends a surge of elemental power through your elemental companion, causing chaos energy to increase your allies' might.

Prerequisite: Elemental Companion feat

Benefit: When you spend a healing surge to regain hit points while your elemental companion is in active mode, you and each ally adjacent to the companion gain a +2 bonus to damage rolls until the start of your next turn.

Elemental Vengeance [Elemental Companion]

You cannot abide harm to befall your elemental companion, so when it does happen, you respond with terrible fury.

Prerequisite: 6th level, Elemental Companion feat

Benefit: You swap a utility power that is at least 6th level for the elemental vengeance power.

In addition, while your elemental companion is in active mode, you gain a +1 bonus to attack rolls against bloodied creatures that are adjacent to the companion.

Elemental Vengeance Feat Utility

A burst of scintillating colors erupts from your destroyed companion, distracting your enemies and calling the companion back to you.

Daily ✦ Elemental
Immediate Reaction Close burst 1 centered on the space your companion last occupied
Trigger: Your active elemental companion is destroyed.
Target: Each enemy in the burst
Effect: Each target grants combat advantage until the end of your next turn. In addition, your elemental companion returns to you in passive mode.

Fiery Blood

Liquid fire boils in your veins, increasing your control over elemental fire. Your fires burn hotter and fire that strikes you burns nearby enemies.

Prerequisite: 11th level

Benefit: You gain a +3 feat bonus to fire damage rolls. This bonus increases to +4 at 21st level.

In addition, whenever you take fire damage from an attack, each enemy adjacent to you takes 5 fire damage. This damage increases to 10 at 21st level.

Firedancer

You have a connection to elemental fire thanks to your elemental heritage. You do not fear flames since they do no longer burn you.

Prerequisite: Born of the Elements feat

Benefit: You gain resist 5 fire. This resistance increases to 10 at 11th level and 15 at 21st level. If you already have fire resistance, it instead increases by 5.

In addition, when you use your second wind, your melee and ranged attacks deal 1d6 extra fire damage until the end of your next turn.

Icy Heart

Your frozen heart increases your mastery over elemental cold. Your cold attacks are potent, fueled by the Elemental Chaos's frozen reached. Furthermore, cold attacks rebound off you as freezing cold that slows your foes.

Prerequisite: 11th level

Benefit: You gain a +3 feat bonus to cold damage rolls. This bonus increases to +4 at 21st level.

In addition, whenever you take cold damage from an attack, each enemy within 2 squares of you becomes slowed until the end of your next turn.

Ki Focus Expertise

You have dedicated yourself to becoming as attuned to your ki focus as possible, heightening your prowess in battle.

Benefit: You gain a +1 feat bonus to implement attack rolls and weapon attack rolls that you make with your ki focus.

In addition, you gain a +1 bonus to the damage rolls of attacks that you make with your ki focus against a bloodied enemy. Both of these bonuses increase to +2 at 11th level and +3 at 21st level.

Lightning Soul

The storm rages within you, demanding release through your lightning attacks. Should lightning strike you, it arcs toward another foe.

Prerequisite: 11th level

Benefit: You gain a +3 feat bonus to lightning damage rolls. This bonus increases to +4 at 21st level.

In addition, whenever you take lightning damage from an attack, one enemy within 5 squares of you takes 10 lightning damage. This damage increases to 15 at 21st level.

Rising Chaos

You feel new strength awaken within you whenever you must confront elemental energy. The power awakened bolsters your attacks.

Prerequisite: Born of the Elements feat

Benefit: Whenever you take acid, cold, fire, lightning, or thunder damage from an enemy attack, you gain a +2 bonus to damage rolls until the end of your next turn.

Seastrider Your elemental heritage manifests as an affinity for elemental water. You can use elemental water's power to flow through your enemies and across liquid surfaces.

Prerequisite: 21st level, Born of the Elements feat

Benefit: You can shift through enemies' spaces.

In addition, you can use a move action to move up to your speed across a liquid surface, treating it as solid ground. If you end the move on the liquid, you sink.

Thunder's Rumble You feel every thunderbolt, every rumble from the storms swirling through the Elemental Chaos. You can call upon its power to intensify your thunder attacks and knock aside enemies when you yourself take thunder damage.

Prerequisite: 11th level

Benefit: You gain a +3 feat bonus to thunder damage rolls. This bonus increases to +4 at 21st level.

In addition, whenever you take thunder damage from an attack, you can push each creature adjacent to you 1 square.

Tome Expertise The tomes you study reveal ancient and dangerous secrets. Your familiarity with these books lets you access their power more easily and make your conjurations and summoned monsters more fearsome.

Benefit: You gain a +1 feat bonus to implement attack rolls that you make with a tome. This bonus increases to +2 at 11th level and +3 at 21st level.

In addition, enemies adjacent to your conjurations or summoned creatures grant combat advantage. An enemy that is immune to fear is immune to this effect.

Totem Expertise A totem is a physical representation of one or more primal spirits. Your totem makes it easier to commune with the associated spirit and reveals your enemies to your allies.

Benefit: You gain a +1 feat bonus to implement attack rolls that you make with a totem. This bonus increases to +2 at 11th level and +3 at 21st level.

Also, you ignore partial cover and partial concealment on implement attacks you make with a totem.

Windfoot You have an affinity for elemental air thanks to your unusual heritage.

Prerequisite: 21st level, Born of the Elements feat

Benefit: You take only half damage from falling.

In addition, when you use your second wind, you can fly up to 2 squares as a free action.

Elemental Companions

Inconsistency is the only constant in the Elemental Chaos. Landscapes change, mountains rise, and oceans evaporate, while storms tumble across the roiling heavens. The Elemental Chaos's mutable nature means creatures that have strong personalities and force of will can shape reality in whatever way they please, creating stabilized areas amid the chaos or contributing to the plane's uncertainty. And because elemental material often spills out from the Plane Below, certain individuals can contain raw chaos and bring it with them as a companion.

Only individuals who are attuned to the chaotic forces and who happen upon elemental substance can shape it into a creature and fix its form. Elemental companions, then, are rarer than the people able to create them. Only a person who has the Elemental Companion feat has such a companion.

When the companion adopts a form, it resembles an actual creature, a physical being occupying space. Yet this form is in many ways an illusion, a projection of the maker's will onto unformed substance. Without its maker, the elemental companion has no identity, no objectives, not even a shape. It is only when the maker fixes the companion in his or her mind that it becomes an elemental creature.

Elemental companions and arcane familiars have much in common. As magical creations, elemental companions require a constant supply of energy to maintain their forms and lack the durability to withstand the sort of punishment another creature can endure. Both types of companions depend on their masters for existence, and thus it is in their interest to do as their masters command.

The connection between master and companion is somewhat different from that between master and familiar. Once a master fashions an elemental companion, the companion merges with its maker until they are one and the same. The creator can then, on command, manifest the elemental companion by compelling it to assume a physical form. The form often depends on the companion's elemental nature and does not often vary, which suggests that perhaps there is more to these companions than shaped elemental substance after all.

As helpful as elemental companions can be, they are not warriors. They lack the means to protect themselves or fight on your behalf. The power they offer is subtle but helpful. It expands your options for overcoming challenges both in combat and out. When your companion merges with you, it alters your nature, granting a persistent benefit. And when you manifest your elemental companion, it can take a direct hand in helping you overcome difficulties.

Modes

Like an arcane familiar, an elemental companion has two different modes: passive mode and active mode. The companion is always in one mode or the other. You can switch your companion between these modes as a minor action.

Passive Mode: When your elemental companion is in passive mode, it has merged with your body. So bound, it is usually undetectable, though it might manifest in subtle ways, such as a fiery ring around your irises or a stirring of your clothing when the air doesn't move. A creature can detect the presence of a passive elemental companion by succeeding on an Arcana check against a moderate DC of your level.

While in this mode, your elemental companion cannot be targeted or damaged by any effect, and you gain the passive benefit described in its stat block. If your companion is not in your space when you switch it to passive mode, it appears in your space.

Active Mode: Manifesting an elemental companion causes it to emerge from your body and assume a physical form in the nearest unoccupied square. While in this mode, your elemental companion is considered a creature that occupies its space, and you gain the active benefit described in its stat block.

Unless otherwise noted in the companion's description, it can't exist more than 20 squares away from you. At the end of your turn, if your companion is more than 20 squares away, it appears in your space and enters passive mode.

If the companion must make an ability or a skill check, it uses your relevant modifier to do so.

Characteristics

Each elemental companion has a stat block that specifies its game statistics. It also shares the following characteristics with other elemental companions.

Acting as a Combatant: Your elemental companion is considered an ally to you and your allies. While in active mode, it can be affected by game effects in the same way as any other creature can be, although it is immune to your attacks, unless you choose to ignore this benefit.

The only attacks that your companion can make are specified in its stat block. In addition, you and your allies cannot flank with your elemental companion, unless otherwise specified in its stat block.

Communication: Your elemental companion can speak, and it is fluent in every language you know. You can communicate telepathically with your elemental companion. You do not need line of sight or line of effect to do so. When you command the companion, you and the companion share knowledge but not senses.

Destruction of the Companion: If your elemental companion drops below 1 hit point, it

A pech, the elemental companion of a fighter, emerges at its master's side in time to keep slavering monsters at bay is temporarily destroyed. After your next short or extended rest, it returns to you in passive mode. If you drop below 1 hit point, the elemental companion appears in your space and enters passive mode. If you die, the companion is destroyed. If you are restored to life, it is also restored, and it returns in passive mode.

Actions

In active mode, your elemental companion can take actions, however it depends on you for guidance.

Standard Action: To take a standard action, your elemental companion needs you to take a standard action to command it to do so.

Move Action: Whenever you take a move action, your elemental companion can also take a move action. Alternatively, you can take a move action and not move to simply command your elemental companion to take a move action.

Minor Action: To take a minor action, your elemental companion needs you to take a minor action to command it to do so.

Free Actions: Your companion can take free actions without you taking an action to command it.

Triggered Actions: If one of your elemental companion's triggered actions is triggered, the companion can take that action only if you take the same kind of action to command it to do so.

Gaining a Companion

You gain an elemental companion when you take the Elemental Companion feat. Once you choose a companion, that choice remains for as long as you have the feat. You can use retraining to swap out your current elemental companion for a different one.

Arctine

Slight creatures with blue skin and white hair, arctines embody elemental cold. They have a cool demeanor and rarely show emotion. Ice crystals form in the air and frost crawls across the ground while this companion is active. When it is in passive mode, your breath steams, and your flesh cools.

| Arctine Elemental Companion |
|---|
| Small elemental humanoid (cold) |
| HP 1; a missed attack never damages the companion |
| Defenses your defenses, not including any temporary bonuses or penalties |
| Speed 6 (ice walk) |
| Passive Benefits |
| Frost Armor |
| You have ice walk while you shift, and you have resist 3 cold (6 at 11th level and 9 at 21st level). |
| Active Benefits |
| Minor Action (zone) ✦ Encounter |
| Effect: The arctine creates a zone of difficult terrain in a close burst 1. Creatures with ice walk are unaffected. The zone lasts until the end of the encounter or until the arctine leaves the zone, dies, or enters passive mode. |

Automaton

The automaton lumbers into combat, its gears whirring and valves piping steam into the air. Created from elemental metal, it has unusual durability, and its strange form can unnerve foes enough to give you and your allies a tactical advantage in combat. While in passive mode, you grow slightly heavier as your blood takes on the appearance of quicksilver.

Automaton Elemental Companion
Small elemental humanoid (construct)
HP 1; a missed attack never damages the companion
Defenses your defenses, not including any temporary bonuses or penalties
Speed 5
Passive Benefits
Self-Repair
You gain a +2 power bonus to saving throws against ongoing damage.
Active Benefits
Fearsome Presence
You and your allies can flank with the automaton.
Immediate Interrupt ✦ At-Will
Trigger: The automaton takes damage from an attack while you are within 2 squares of it.
Effect: The automaton takes no damage from the attack. You take the damage instead.

Chaos Phage

Slaads grow their numbers by implanting embryos—chaos phages—into their victims. You extract a phage from a victim before it has a chance to become a slaad tadpole and bind it to you as an elemental companion. Unpredictable and maddening, chaos phages prove dangerous companions, since they hide in your skull and are extremely painful to activate. An active phage slithers across the ground, driven to feast on your enemies' minds.

Chaos Phage Elemental Companion
Small elemental magical beast
HP 1; a missed attack never damages the companion
Defenses your defenses, not including any temporary bonuses or penalties
Speed 6 Darkvision
Passive Benefits
Mad Delusions (psychic)
You gain a +1 power bonus to Will. When the chaos phage enters active mode, you take psychic damage equal to 1 + one-half your level.
Active Benefits
Immediate Reaction ✦ At-Will
Trigger: An enemy adjacent to the chaos phage becomes bloodied.
Effect: The chaos phage enters passive mode, and the triggering enemy grants combat advantage (save ends). Until this effect ends, the chaos phage cannot enter active mode.

Crysmalite

Crysmals haunt the deep caverns under the Elemental Chaos, clinging to the crystalline shards sprouting from the walls, ceilings, and floors. These crystals resonate with elemental power and once harnessed can become smaller versions of the deadly predators, called crysmalites. A crysmalite's scuttling, arachnid form conceals cunning and a greedy streak. While the creature is in its passive state, tiny crystal shards sprout from your skin.

Crysmalite Elemental Companion
Small elemental magical beast (spider)
HP 1; a missed attack never damages the companion
Defenses your defenses, not including any temporary bonuses or penalties
Speed 6, climb 3 (spider climb)
Passive Benefits
Uncanny Senses and Grip
You gain a +2 power bonus to Perception checks, and you gain a +2 bonus to Athletics checks to climb.
Active Benefits
Free Action ✦ Encounter
Trigger: You make a blast or burst attack, and the crysmalite is in the area of effect.
Effect: Enemies adjacent to the crysmalite take a –2 penalty to attack rolls until the end of your next turn.

Flame Serpent

A snake formed from elemental fire, a flame serpent resembles a flame snake and a salamander, elemental creatures famous for their malice and cruelty, traits these elemental companions share. Manifesting the flame serpent causes it to appear coiled around your body, and then it slithers away. When you recall it, fire rings your irises.

Flame Serpent Elemental Companion
Small elemental magical beast (fire)
HP 1; a missed attack never damages the companion
Defenses your defenses, not including any temporary bonuses or penalties
Speed 6
Resist 10 fire
Passive Benefits
☼ Burning Inside ✦ Aura 2
The aura is brightly lit. You can activate or deactivate this aura as a minor action.
Fire Within
You have resist 3 fire (6 at 11th level and 9 at 21st level).
Active Benefits
☼ Flickering Flames ✦ Aura 1
Any enemy in the aura grants combat advantage to you when you use a fire power against it.
Move Action ✦ Encounter
Effect: The flame serpent shifts up to its speed.

Hordeling

Hordelings gather in great masses throughout the Abyss. Considered the least of demons—the seeds from which other, greater fiends spring—their numbers are without end. A hordeling companion is not a true hordeling, but is instead Abyssal substance shaped into a monstrous form. The evil pervading the plane reveals itself in the demon's demands to be free from you.

Hordeling Elemental Companion
Small elemental humanoid (demon)

HP 1; a missed attack never damages the companion
Defenses your defenses, not including any temporary bonuses or penalties
Speed 4 Darkvision

Passive Benefits

Vicious
You gain a +2 power bonus to opportunity attack rolls.

Rattle the Cage
Whenever you end the encounter with the hordeling in passive mode, you take damage equal to your level.

Active Benefits

Standard Action (fear) ✦ Encounter
Effect: The hordeling can push each creature adjacent to it 1 square.

Immediate Interrupt ✦ Encounter
Trigger: You or the hordeling takes acid, cold, fire, lightning, or thunder damage.
Effect: You and the hordeling each gain resist 5 to the triggering damage type, or types, until the end of your next turn (10 at 11th level and 15 at 21st level).

Magmin

The hulking magmin displays its elemental nature in the flaming fissures that appear across its blackened body. Slow and ponderous, it goes where directed, obeying your every command. The magmin ignites your temper to give you a fearsome demeanor. Fire stokes your anger, while cold dampens it.

Magmin Elemental Companion
Medium elemental humanoid (earth, fire)

HP 1; a missed attack never damages the companion
Defenses your defenses, not including any temporary bonuses or penalties
Speed 4
Resist 5 fire

Passive Benefits

Fiery Intensity
You gain a +2 power bonus to Intimidate checks.

Flowing Lava
When you take fire damage, you gain a +2 power bonus to speed until the end of your next turn. When you take cold damage, you are slowed until the end of your next turn.

Active Benefits

Immediate Reaction ✦ Encounter
Trigger: An enemy adjacent to the magmin becomes bloodied.
Effect: The triggering enemy is weakened until the end of your next turn.

Mud Wretch

Drawn from the bubbling mud pits in the Elemental Chaos or elsewhere, the mud wretch drips burning filth wherever it goes. Despite its hideous appearance, mud wretches show great affection to their masters and protect them even in their passive mode. An acrid odor surrounds characters merged with mud wretches.

Mud Wretch Elemental Companion
Small elemental magical beast (earth, water)

HP 1; a missed attack never damages the companion
Defenses your defenses, not including any temporary bonuses or penalties
Speed 4
Resist 5 acid

Passive Benefits

Corrosive Secretions
Any enemy that grabs you immediately takes 3 acid damage (6 at 11th level and 9 at 21st level).

Unnatural Flexibility
Squeezing doesn't cause you to move at half speed.

Active Benefits

☼ Noxious Vapors ✦ Aura 1
While you are bloodied, enemies in the aura take a -1 penalty to attack rolls.

Move Action ✦ At-Will
Effect: The mud wretch shifts up to 2 squares.

Nereid

The beautiful nereid could easily be confused for a nymph or some other enchanting fey creature, for they are alluring to anyone who looks on them. Although the elemental companion is not a true nereid, it shares many of their qualities, being an adept swimmer and so beautiful other creatures find it hard to pull away from them. When the nereid returns to passive mode, it collapses into a watery serpent that coils around you and soaks your clothing.

Nereid Elemental Companion
Small elemental humanoid (aquatic, water)

HP 1; a missed attack never damages the companion
Defenses your defenses, not including any temporary bonuses or penalties
Speed 6, swim 6

Passive Benefits

Aquatic
You can breathe underwater. In aquatic combat, you gain a +2 bonus to attack rolls against creatures that do not have the aquatic trait.

Active Benefits

Aquatic
The nereid can breathe underwater.

Free Action (healing) ✦ Encounter
Trigger: An ally adjacent to the nereid spends a healing surge.
Effect: The triggering ally regains 3 additional hit points (6 at 11th level and 9 at 21st level).

Pech

Some claim the Elemental Chaos's consummate miners, pechs, share a common ancestry with dwarves. Short, with bristly hair and wide eyes, they chip through rock to extract gemstones. Like other elemental companions, the pech is not a true representative of this race but a copy. Quiet, reserved, and slow to anger, the pech displays its affinity for elemental earth by the ease with which it moves across and through rock and the boons it bestows on you.

Pech Elemental Companion
Small elemental humanoid (earth)

HP 1; a missed attack never damages the companion
Defenses your defenses, not including any temporary bonuses or penalties
Speed 4 (earth walk) Tremorsense 5

Passive Benefits

Stone's Resilience
You have earth walk while you shift, and you gain a +2 power bonus to Endurance checks.

Active Benefits

Earth Glide
The pech can pass through earth and rock as if it were phasing.

Storm Talon

The storm talon soars through the skies on cloud wings. Lightning dances in its eyes, and each beat of its wings sends thunder booming all around. When in its passive state, you feel energized and lightweight. The storm talon is a gregarious companion, often breaking tension with a quip and a joke.

Storm Talon Elemental Companion
Small elemental magical beast

HP 1; a missed attack never damages the companion
Defenses your defenses, not including any temporary bonuses or penalties
Speed 2, fly 6
Resist 5 lightning, 5 thunder

Passive Benefits

Storm Dancer
You gain a +2 power bonus to Acrobatics checks. Whenever you are pulled, pushed, or slid, you can take a free action to shift 1 square at the end of the forced movement.

Traits

Soaring Talon
The storm talon has a range limit of 40 squares from you.

☼ Eye of the Storm ✦ Aura 1
You and your allies gain a +2 power bonus to lightning or thunder attack rolls against enemies in the aura.

Sylph

The ethereal sylphs inhabit the regions in the Elemental Chaos where air holds sway. Most serve the djinns as messengers and companions, though a few go their own way. The elemental companion closely resembles other sylphs, being humanoid with pale skin, flowing hair, and large insect wings. The air swirls around your companion or you when it is in its passive mode.

Sylph Elemental Companion
Medium elemental humanoid (air)

HP 1; a missed attack never damages the companion
Defenses your defenses, not including any temporary bonuses or penalties
Speed 6, fly 6 (hover)

Passive Benefits

Ephemeral Wings
You gain a +2 bonus to Athletics checks made to jump.

Ethereal Personality
You gain a +2 power bonus to Bluff checks.

Active Benefits

☼ Buffeting Winds ✦ Aura 1
Attackers take a -1 penalty to ranged attack rolls against creatures in the aura.

Move Action ✦ Encounter
Effect: One ally of yours adjacent to the sylph can fly up to 3 squares as a free action.

Roleplaying a Companion

Whether or not an elemental companion is a genuine creature, in time, it develops a personality, behaviors, and interests, as typical for the kind of creature involved. All sylphs, for example, are capricious, while all pechs are stoic and reserved. Companions do remember events and can learn from them. Each new experience triggers subtle changes that, in time, help the companion evolve a distinct personality.

When you choose your elemental companion, you should take your roleplaying cues from the companion's entry as a starting point. Also, your Dungeon Master might encourage certain behaviors and make suggestions about the companion. Be aware that the DM has the authority to portray the elemental companion whenever it disagrees with you, though such instances should be rare.

At the table, you might be tempted to focus on your elemental companion and bring it to life, either as comic relief or to explore its struggle with its growing identity. While this can be entertaining, your elemental companion is secondary to your character and should not detract from the enjoyment of everyone else around you. Be aware of how your fellow players perceive the companion and tailor your roleplaying to accommodate their patience.

CUSTOMIZING YOUR COMPANION'S APPEARANCE

The eight elemental companions described in this book all have a particular shape according to their type. You should not feel constrained by this description and can modify it to suit your interests. They are elementals shaped by your character's imagination after all. It's best to limit your creative impulses here and avoid making overly fantastical changes. No cosmetic alteration can change the elemental companions statistics block and so it wouldn't make sense to change a pech into a massive dragon, when you can't change the companion's size.

In addition to defining its appearance while in active mode, you should also consider what effect it has on you while in passive mode. A passive fire snake might replace your hair with a fiery corona. Be creative. Just remember that cosmetic changes do not alter the mechanics.

Elemental Rewards

Elemental energy emanates from the Plane Below, spreading into other planes, carried on eldritch winds to manifest in arcane spells, the thunder in the heavens, and in the races and creatures influenced by the plane's nature. This energy could lurk in a magic treasure wrested from a dragon's lair or might be bestowed after a person achieves a task important to a powerful elemental entity. This section provides a selection of magic rewards that adventurers might earn during their adventurers.

The magic of the Plane Below touches many items. The sword that erupts in flames must draw those flames from somewhere. The boots that lift a hero into the air might derive their power from elemental air. While many well-known items bear the plane's hallmarks, certain items display strong elemental ties, perhaps from being lost in the Plane Below for ages. Other items might have been forged on that plane by elemental hands, while some magic objects are relics from a forgotten age, perhaps used in the war for creation that marked the end of the primordials' influence.

Armor

Magic armor imbued with elemental power affords some protection against elemental energy or channels it in useful ways.

Brassburn Armor

Forged in the fabled City of Brass, brassburn armor protects mercenaries who fight for efreets and who lack the elemental resistance possessed by many of the efreets' warriors.

Brassburn Armor — Level 5+ Uncommon

Although the armor does not burn you, you feel heat radiating out from its brass links and plates.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 5 | +1 | 1,000 gp | Lvl 20 | +4 | 125,000 gp |
| Lvl 10 | +2 | 5,000 gp | Lvl 25 | +5 | 625,000 gp |
| Lvl 15 | +3 | 25,000 gp | Lvl 30 | +6 | 3,125,000 gp |

Armor: Chain, scale
Enhancement Bonus: AC

Property

You gain a +2 item bonus to saving throws against ongoing fire damage.

☼ Attack Power (Aura, Fire) ✦ Daily (Immediate Reaction)

Trigger: You take damage from an enemy attack.
Effect: You activate an aura 1 that lasts until the end of your next turn. Any creature that enters the aura or starts its turn there takes fire damage equal to 3 + the armor's enhancement bonus. A creature can take this damage only once per turn.

Chromatic Robe

Perfect apparel for battle wizards and their ilk, a chromatic robe captures residual energy from incoming attacks and channels it into the wearer's next attack.

Chromatic Robe — Level 5+ Rare

Fibers of elemental energy give this fine garment the ability to harvest dangerous forces and rebound them against aggressors.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 5 | +1 | 1,000 gp | Lvl 20 | +4 | 125,000 gp |

| Lvl 15 | +3 | 25,000 gp | Lvl 30 | +6 | 3,125,000 gp |

Armor: Cloth
Enhancement Bonus: AC

Property

You gain a +2 item bonus to saving throws against ongoing damage that has a type.

Utility Power ✦ Encounter (Immediate Reaction)

Trigger: You take damage that has a type.
Effect: Your next melee or ranged attack made before the end of your next turn deals 1d6 extra damage of the triggering damage type. If you do not make an attack before the end of your next turn, you take this damage, and the power is not expended.
Level 15 or 20: 2d6 extra damage.
Level 25 or 30: 3d6 extra damage.

Demonskin Armor

This armor is made from the hide of a demon that was flayed alive, thereby preserving its natural defensive abilities. Although few are willing to go through the process required to manufacture the armor, rare is the adventurer who would set such armor aside.

Demonskin Armor — Level 13+ Uncommon

This hideous suit is made from a demon's hide and retains enough of its nature to protect you from elemental energy.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Armor: Leather, hide
Enhancement Bonus: AC

Property

You gain an item bonus to Intimidate checks. The bonus equals the armor's enhancement bonus.

Utility Power ✦ Daily (Immediate Reaction)

Trigger: You take acid, cold, fire, lightning, or thunder damage.
Effect: You gain resist 10 to the triggering damage type until the end of the encounter.
Level 23 or 28: Resist 15.

Weapons

Forges far and wide across the Elemental Chaos produce powerful weapons used by the plane's mightiest champions. The following items are a selection of the more famous examples.

Earth-Splitter Weapon

The dwarf champions who hunted down their giant slavers favored the earth-splitter weapon. Each strike fueled their anger and gave them resolve to do the grisly work ahead.

Earth-Splitter Weapon Level 4+ Uncommon

This stone-headed axe bears Primordial runes, which shine with dread power as you grip its handle.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 4 | +1 | 840 gp | Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp |
| Lvl 9 | +2 | 4,200 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |

Weapon: Axe
Enhancement Bonus: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 damage per plus

Property

Whenever you hit one or more targets with an attack power using this weapon and that power has the acid, cold, fire, lightning, or thunder keyword, you gain temporary hit points equal to 1 + the weapon's enhancement bonus.

Utility Power (Zone) ✦ Daily (Free Action)

Trigger: You use your second wind on your turn.
Effect: You create a zone in a close burst 2. The zone is difficult terrain for your enemies, and it lasts until the end of your next turn.

Firewind Blade

Most firewind blades are scimitars, though longswords and broadswords are also common. Crafted in the Elemental Chaos, these weapons resist fire's effects, making them ideal for manifesting elemental flame.

Firewind Blade Level 4+ Uncommon

The air around the long blade shimmers as if it were emitting heat.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 4 | +1 | 840 gp | Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp |
| Lvl 9 | +2 | 4,200 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |

Weapon: Heavy blade
Enhancement Bonus: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 fire damage per plus, and you can slide the target 1 square per plus

Property

Whenever you hit one or more targets with a fire power using this weapon, one enemy adjacent to you takes fire damage equal to 1 + the weapon's enhancement bonus.

Utility Power (Fire) ✦ Daily (Free Action)

Trigger: You use your second wind on your turn.
Effect: Until the end of your next turn, your melee attacks using this weapon deal extra fire damage equal to the weapon's enhancement bonus.

Stormshard Weapon

The genasi claim that stormshard weapons are lightning bolts bound in steel. Made from a single length of metal, such a spear proves to be an exceptional conductor for most forms of energy.

ARMAMENTS OF THE ELEMENTAL PLANE

The raw energies and fantastic ores of the Elemental Chaos provide ambitious smiths and artisans with the materials for weapons and devices of great efficacy. Masterwork armors such as crysteel, elderhide, elderscale, and rimefire can be created only in the forges of elemental smiths, and magic weapons that harness elemental forces (for example, flaming, frost, lightning, and thundering weapons) are naturally easier to produce in places where these energies can be concentrated and distilled down to their most destructive essences.

Although magic arms and armor are almost commonplace in many parts of the Elemental Chaos, those who labor to create these powerful armaments can be difficult to deal with. Azers and salamanders are very talented metalworkers and devise many weapons that harness elemental fire, but most azers are enslaved by fire titans, and salamanders despise all other races. Efreets disdain anything that resembles common labor and do not sully their hands with forge work, but they have an eye for talent in their slaves; the armorers of the City of Brass are second only to those of Tymphalos in the Nine Hells and the legendary master smiths of Moradin's awesome halls in Mount Celestia. Unfortunately for those who would seek their services, efreets are all too likely to add visiting mortals to their roster of slaves rather than their list of customers.

The safest places to seek out elemental craftsmanship are in the various enclaves of mortal races within the Elemental Chaos, whether those are elemental races such as the genasi or moteborn expatriates such as humans or dwarves. Genasi smiths are nearly as skilled as azers and salamanders, and they experiment with a wider variety of alloys and combinations of forces. Dwarf smiths working in the Elemental Chaos are even more talented than the genasi or the slaves of the efreets, and are the creators of many legendary weapons and armors. Many aspiring master smiths of the mortal world venture into the Chaos to study at the forges of the moteborn dwarves.

The tidal hammer is this watersoul genasi's favorite weapon

Tidal Weapon

A tidal weapon has a hollow head filled with elemental water, which is imbued with magic able to harness tidal forces. Each swing from the weapon carries you deeper into battle, and when you recover from your injuries, the hammer drags another foe forward to face your fury.

Tidal Weapon Level 4+ Uncommon

With a head carved to resemble a watery fist, this potent weapon reveals its power each time you manifest elemental energy.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 4 | +1 | 840 gp | Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp |
| Lvl 9 | +2 | 4,200 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |

Weapon: Hammer
Enhancement Bonus: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d4 damage per plus, and the target falls prone

Property

Whenever you hit one or more targets with an attack power using this weapon and that power has the acid, cold, fire, lightning, or thunder keyword, you can shift a number of squares equal to half the weapon's enhancement bonus (minimum 1).

Utility Power ✦ Daily (Free Action)

Trigger: You use your second wind on your turn.
Effect: Choose one creature within 5 squares of you. You pull that creature up to 4 squares.

IMPLEMENTS

The elemental-themed implements here include tomes and ki focuses. Wizards automatically have proficiency with using tomes as implements.

Chronicle of the Dawn War

This tome recounts the cataclysmic event that freed the world from the primordials' influence. Though it is flawed by the presence of contradictory accounts, it is nonetheless a potent weapon against elemental creatures.

Chronicle of the Dawn War Level 4+ Uncommon

An exhaustive record of the Dawn War's triumphs and defeats await those who examine this tome's pages.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 4 | +1 | 840 gp | Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp |
| Lvl 9 | +2 | 4,200 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |

Implement: Tome
Enhancement Bonus: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 radiant damage per plus

Properties

- ✦ You gain an item bonus to Arcana checks and Religion checks. The bonus equals the tome's enhancement bonus.
- ✦ You gain a +2 item bonus to the tome's attack rolls against elemental creatures.
- ✦ When you bloody an elemental creature with an implement attack using this tome, the creature takes extra radiant damage equal to twice the tome's enhancement bonus.

Stormshard Weapon Level 9+ Rare

The wind moans and thunder rumbles each time you strike with this spear.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 9 | +2 | 4,200 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |
| Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp | | | |

Weapon: Spear
Enhancement Bonus: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: One enemy within 5 squares of the target takes 1d8 lightning and thunder damage per plus

Property

Whenever you hit one or more targets with an attack power using this weapon and that power has the lightning or thunder keyword, you can slide one creature adjacent to you up to a number of squares equal to half the weapon's enhancement bonus.

Utility Power ✦ Encounter (Free Action)

Trigger: You use your second wind on your turn.
Effect: You fly up to your speed. You gain a power bonus to all defenses against opportunity attacks provoked by this movement. The bonus equals the weapon's enhancement bonus.

Cold Fury Ki Focus

Cryonax gifted cold fury ki focuses to his archon captains during a war against Chan. The Silent One destroyed the archons, but the medallions remained, lost in the Elemental Chaos's unfathomable oceans.

Cold Fury Ki Focus Level 4+ Uncommon

The angrier you get, the colder this blue steel medallion becomes.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 4 | +1 | 840 gp | Lvl 19 | +4 | 105,000 gp |
| Lvl 9 | +2 | 4,200 gp | Lvl 24 | +5 | 525,000 gp |
| Lvl 14 | +3 | 21,000 gp | Lvl 29 | +6 | 2,625,000 gp |

Implement: Ki focus
Enhancement Bonus: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d6 cold damage per plus

Property

When you use your second wind, your attacks using this ki focus deal extra cold damage until the end of your next turn. The extra damage equals the ki focus's enhancement bonus.

Attack Power (Cold) ✦ Daily (Free Action)

Trigger: You hit an adjacent enemy with an attack using this ki focus.

Effect: The target is immobilized until it takes damage from an attack, until it uses a standard action to end this effect, or until the end of the encounter. If it is damaged before the end of your next turn, it takes extra cold damage equal to 3 + the ki focus's enhancement bonus.

Demonomicon

One of the most infamous tomes is the dreaded Demonomicon of Iggwilv. A compendium of all things demonic, it is a singular resource on demons, the Abyss, and exploiting power from both. The Demonomicon presented here is an imperfect and incomplete copy, though it still has power enough for anyone interested in demonology.

Demonomicon Level 13+ Rare

Foul Abyssal runes and dubious stains mar the tome's blackened cover, revealing the foul practices for which it has been used.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lvl 13 | +3 | 17,000 gp | Lvl 23 | +5 | 425,000 gp |
| Lvl 18 | +4 | 85,000 gp | Lvl 28 | +6 | 2,125,000 gp |

Implement: Tome
Enhancement Bonus: Attack rolls and damage rolls
Critical: +1d8 damage per plus

Properties

- ✦ You gain an item bonus to Intimidate checks equal to the tome's enhancement bonus.
- ✦ You gain a +5 item bonus to knowledge checks related to the Abyss and monster knowledge related to demons.
- ✦ When you reduce a nonminion creature to 0 hit points with this tome, you gain a +1 item bonus to attack rolls until the end of your next turn.

Utility Power ✦ Encounter (Free Action)

Trigger: You use an arcane summoning power.

Effect: The summoned creature's origin changes to elemental, and it gains the demon keyword. The summoned creature gains a +2 power bonus to attack rolls and a +4 power bonus to damage rolls. In addition, if the creature normally does nothing if you end your turn without giving it a command, it instead takes a free action to shift 1 square and make a basic attack against the creature nearest to it.

Level 23 or 28: +6 power bonus to damage rolls.

Enduring Hatred Ki Focus

Not all agree that the gods were right in their war against the primordials, and some would go so far as to say the elemental lords were justified in their aggression. These trinkets capture the primordials' wrath and bestow it onto their wielders.
